7:73 b - 8 : 2 Verse 73b is awkward. The final phrase (the Israelites had settled in their towns) is so similar to verse 73a (all Israel settled in their towns) that possibly a copyist mistakenly repeated the phrase. The seventh month (Tishri) was an important time in the Jewish calendar during which several events occurred. These events included the New Year, the Day of Atonement, and the Festival of Booths. Every seven years at the Festival of Booths the Law was to be read to the people (Dt 31:10-12). Those who are able to listen with understanding include children of a certain age (cp. 10:28; Ezr 10:1).

8:3 It is not stated why Ezra chose to have this assembly and reading of the Law at the Water Gate (see note at 3:26-27) rather than at the temple. Some speculate that tension between Nehemiah and the priests, some of whom were allied with Tobiah the Ammonite (6:17-19), may have encouraged Ezra and Nehemiah to have the meeting away from the temple complex. It is possible that the size of the crowd demanded a different location. Exactly what made up the book of the law has been the subject of intense discussion. Probably Ezra read the legal sections of a Pentateuch that was virtually identical to what we have today. It does not say that he read it in its entirety, but that he read out of it.

8:4 The term platform (Hb migdal) normally means "tower," but it is used to designate a platform here and in 2Ch 6:13. Little is known about the men who stood on his right and his left. Usually in Ezra-Nehemiah priests and Levites are distinguished from the "laity," so these people probably were prominent lay leaders, such as representatives from the elders or heads of families.

8:5 The phrase Ezra opened the book is a little anachronistic since the book (codex) did not appear until the Christian era. Literally the phrase is, "Ezra unrolled the scroll." The apostle Paul specifically instructed that "Until I come, give your attention to public reading, exhortation, and teaching" (1Tm 4:13). Standing for the reading of the Word is as appropriate now as it was in Ezra's time.

8:6 Worship for the people was not just a mental exercise, but it involved the whole worshiper, who stood, spoke, and kneeled in humility before God.

8:7 Many of the 13 Levites who assisted Ezra were involved in the covenant renewal described in the following chapters. Eight of the 13 took part in the public confession (9:3-5), and nine are listed as signers of the covenant (10:9-13).

8:8 The term translating is one of several possibilities in understanding the Hebrew term (parash). This verb's basic meaning is to separate or to distinguish, reflected in the practice of the Jewish Masoretes, who divided the text of the Hebrew Bible into sections called parashoth. Thus Williamson translates verse 8a as, "They read from the book of the law paragraph by paragraph." Another possible rendering is to translate the verb as "to explain, make clear," a usage of the term that is uncommon in Hebrew (Nm 15:34) but common in related Semitic languages (Aramaic, Syriac, Mandean, Nabatean). The HCSB translation, which understands the Levites as "translating," is supported by the ancient Jewish tradition that the Levites were reading the Hebrew text but then providing the people with an Aramaic translation of the passage. The Jewish Talmud (b. Megillah 3a) cites this passage (Neh 8:8) as the source of the Targums, the Aramaic paraphrases of the Hebrew texts that became increasingly important as fewer Jewish people could read Hebrew. Targums were prepared for most of the OT books, but not for Ezra-Nehemiah or Daniel.

8:9 This verse is important because it links the ministries of Nehemiah and Ezra. Many critical scholars regard the mention of these great leaders together as an anachronistic attempt to link together the ministries of two men who, according to these scholars, were not contemporaries. Yet there are no insurmountable problems, either textually or historically, that preclude the historicity of this event. Admittedly it seems odd that Nehemiah makes no mention of Ezra, a man of such prominence, until this point in the narrative. This does not necessarily mean that Ezra was not there. The prophets Haggai and Zechariah were contemporaries who both prophesied to the people of Jerusalem and Judah, yet neither mentions the other. Here the author clearly attests to a joint ministry of Ezra and Nehemiah, who participated together in the covenant renewal (chaps. 8-10) and took part together in the great procession and dedication of the walls of Jerusalem (12:27-43).

Nehemiah's command (or Ezra's?), Do not mourn or weep, seems baffling since the leaders would have been encouraged by the contrition and repentance of the people. However, this dedication of the wall occurred on the "first day of the seventh month" (v. 2) during the New Year celebration. The feast days were to be days of joy (Lv 23:24; Dt 12:12; 16:11), not mourning.

8:10 Rather than mourning, the people were commanded to go and eat what is rich, drink what is sweet. The term "rich" translates a Hebrew word (mashmannim) found in the OT only here in this verse but clearly related to the verb "to make fat, to be fat." It refers to choice foods appropriate for a celebration. The "sweet" drink (Hb mamtaqqim) mentioned here may have been wine mixed with honey, a popular drink long before the time of Christ. The people were to stop grieving because their strength came from the joy of the LORD. True security was found in Yahweh alone.

8:13 It is clear from the following context (v. 15) that most of the people returned to their homes after Ezra's reading of the law. It was harvest time, and there was much work to be done. However, many of the leaders remained in Jerusalem to study the words of the law and its implications.

8:14-15 The Festival of Booths is mentioned in four books of the law (Ex 23:16; Lv 23:39-43; Nm 29:12-38; Dt 16:13-15). Also called the Festival of Ingathering (Hb chag-haqqatsir), it was an eight-day agricultural festival that began on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, during the grain and grape harvest (Dt 16:13). The legislation in Lv 23:39-43 is unique in two respects: (1) only in this passage are the Israelites commanded to dwell in a booth for the seven days of the feast, and (2) only in this passage is their dwelling in booths given a theological connection, "so that your generations may know that I made the Israelites live in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt" (Lv 23:43).

Since the celebration of the Festival of Booths required preparation, the leaders studying the law with Ezra spread this news throughout their towns and in Jerusalem. No passage in the OT expressly states the requirement to gather branches from olive and myrtle trees for the construction of booths. This seems to be an explanation and application of the command of Lv 23:40 to gather from "majestic trees—palm fronds, boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook."

8:16 Those living in Jerusalem erected their booths (Hb sukkoth) on . . . their rooftops, because most homes had flat roofs. Those who came from outside Jerusalem used whatever space was available, such as the square by the Water Gate, where they had read the law two weeks before, or in the square by the Gate of Ephraim. The Gate of Ephraim is not mentioned in the detailed description of the wall in chapter 3. However, its description in 2Kg 14:13 suggests it was on the north side of the wall. Thus, both locations provided easy access to the temple complex.

8:17 The celebration of the Festival of Booths was even more significant because the people had not celebrated like this from the days of Joshua son of Nun until that day. The phrase "had not celebrated like this" is literally "had not done (so)." The literal translation suggests that the festival had not been observed at all since Joshua's time, but this statement is incorrect and would have been understood as incorrect in Nehemiah's time because many people who were present for the festival had in fact celebrated the Festival of Booths soon after arriving in Jerusalem with Ezra (Ezr 3:4). Thus most commentators and some translations (including the HCSB) regard the statement as describing the manner in which the festival was celebrated. What made the present celebration different was likely the spiritual and theological emphasis that pervaded it. While earlier celebrations may have focused on the harvest and thanksgiving aspects, this observance under Ezra returned to its theological underpinnings to recall God's provision and care during their forefathers' flight from Egypt, just as the people in Nehemiah's time rejoiced in God's care and provision for them in their flight from Babylon.

The author of Ezra-Nehemiah described well the experience of the people at the festival: there was tremendous joy. Critics have sometimes unfairly stigmatized Ezra-Nehemiah as banal, lifeless, or legalistic, but repeatedly this book emphasizes the joy that comes from living in covenant relationship with the God of Israel.

9:1-37 The penitential prayer of chapter 9 is a beautiful confession of God's faithfulness and mercy to His people as well as a confession by the people of their nation's persistent rebellion against God. Some argue that this chapter originally followed Ezra 10. They point out that while the people in Nehemiah 8 were commanded not to "mourn or weep" (8:9) during the Festival of Booths, the people in this chapter wept and confessed their sins. Yet it was not inappropriate to weep in contrition and repentance of sin; it was only inappropriate to do so during a festival where one was commanded to rejoice. With the completion of the Festival of Booths on the twenty-second day of the month, it was now permissible and appropriate to repent and confess on the twenty-fourth day of the month.

The prayer itself (vv. 9-37) is an example of the transformation of the lament, so commonly found in the Psalms, into a penitential prayer form common to the postexilic era. It shares many of the same characteristics and themes of the prayers of this era, such as Ezr 9:6-15; Neh 1:5-11; and Dn 9:4-19.

9:1 In the OT era there was a close connection between repentance and mourning. Just as mourners wore sackcloth (Gn 37:34) and put dust (Hb 'adamah) on their heads (2Sm 1:2) when someone died, so did those who mourned their sins and their spiritual condition.

9:2 Critical scholars who argue for the displacement of this chapter from its "original" location after Ezra 10 often point to the connection between the removal of foreign wives (Ezr 10) and this verse. However, in this verse the issue is not specifically foreign wives, but foreigners in general. God's chosen people, those of Israelite descent (lit "the seed of Israel"), were the ones who needed to confess, not the foreigners.

9:3 Presumably they who stood in their places were the Israelites who separated themselves from foreigners (v. 2), while they who read from the book of the law were those mentioned in the following verse (v. 4)—the Levites.

9:5 The prayer in verse 5 is probably a liturgical introduction distinct from the prayer itself that begins in verse 6. The call to praise Yahweh your God from everlasting to everlasting is close to King David's blessing in 1Ch 29:10 when he and the people generously gave for the building of the first temple.

9:6 The prayer begins with an acknowledgment of Yahweh's incomparability. Only Yahweh is the true God of creation who gives life to all and receives the worship of heavenly beings. While several biblical psalms allude to creation (Pss 8; 19; 95; 104), only in Psalm 136 does the theme of creation begin the psalm, as it does here.

9:7-8 Like Abram, many of those taking part in the penitential service had been brought out of Ur of the Chaldeans (Babylon). Abram, later renamed Abraham, received the mercy of God, who made a covenant (Hb berith) with him (Gn 15; 17). Just as Abraham was faithful, so God also had been faithful—He had kept His promise.

9:9-11 The description of the exodus from Egypt is recounted with quotes and allusions from Exodus 3; 10; and 14. The term arrogantly translates a Hebrew verb (ziyd) meaning "to act presumptuously, to be arrogant." It is used to describe people or "nations who presume to have authority or rights that are not legitimately theirs" (NIDOTTE). The Egyptians regarded the Israelites as their slaves; in reality the Israelites were Yahweh's covenant people, and their redemption from Egypt was remembered as the central redemptive act of the OT. In this mighty act, God made a name for Himself as their Savior that endured to the time of Nehemiah and beyond.

9:12-15 The description of the wilderness period (vv. 12-21) begins with a recital of God's care and provisions for His people. Specific mention is made of the law about the holy Sabbath, which during the exilic and postexilic era became one of the primary markers of Jewish identity (13:15-22). God had provided for Israel's every need, and at Kadesh-barnea He commanded them to go in and possess the land He had promised the patriarchs (Nm 13-14).

9:16-17 In verse 10 it was the Egyptians who arrogantly mistreated Israel, but now the same verb (Hb ziyd) is used to describe the arrogance of Israel's ancestors (lit "fathers") against God and His commands, in spite of His care and provision. Their rebellion against God (v. 17) was both deliberate (they refused to listen) and nonsensical in their appointment of a leader to take them back to their slavery in Egypt.

9:18-21 God's mercy was put to the test in the making of the golden calf (see Ex 32). Yet even this serious offense was met with mercy. God's presence remained with them in the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire, and His provision continued during their entire 40 years in the wilderness. God even sent His good Spirit (Hb ruachka hatovah) to instruct His people, probably a reference to the 70 elders chosen by Moses (Nm 11:16-17,23-30) who received some of the Spirit Moses had (Nm 11:25).

9:22-25 The final historical period, the giving of the land (vv. 22-31), is introduced with a synopsis primarily derived from Moses' review of the event in Deuteronomy. The defeat of Sihon and Og (see Nm 21; Dt 2-3) were crucial victories that secured Transjordan for Israel (Ps 135:11; 136:19-20). All that God had promised He faithfully brought about for His people, who delighted in His great goodness.

9:26-31 Just as God's faithfulness to His people in the wilderness (vv. 12-15) was rewarded with their rebellion (vv. 16-17), so God's faithfulness in the gift of the land was met with unbelief and unfaithfulness. In a poetic play on words not found elsewhere in the OT, the Israelites are described as those who were disobedient and rebelled (Hb wayyameru wayyimredu) against God (v. 26). Verses 27-30 recount the cycle of sin played out repeatedly in the book of Judges. Despite their persistent and repeated failure, God did not destroy them or abandon them.

9:32-37 After the long review of Israel's broken promises and rebellion against God, the prayer finally turns from confession to a petition addressed to our God, the God who (unlike Israel) keeps His gracious covenant. The only request in this long prayer is that God would take note of their hardships. The term hardships (Hb tela'ah) occurs only rarely in the OT, but it is used to refer to times of great distress or trials, such as the exodus (Ex 18:8) or Jerusalem after its destruction at the hands of the Babylonians (Lm 3:5). While some have explained the mention of the Assyrian kings as a reference to the Persians (cp. Ezr 6:22), more likely it marks the beginning of foreign domination over Israel with the fall of the northern kingdom in the eighth century B.C., a condition that persisted in Nehemiah's time under the Persians.

Yet the prayer makes it clear (vv. 33-34) that the blame for all their hardships was their own and not God's. God was just. Both the Levites leading the prayer and all who joined in with them confessed their solidarity in sin, because they had acted wickedly. The tragic irony was that the land was God's great gift to them—if they would only keep the covenant. Instead they would lament, Here we are—slaves in it! While God's people hoped for God's intervention, they ended their prayer by acknowledging the sad reality: We are in great distress.

9:38-10 : 39 In the Hebrew Bible, 9:38 is the first verse of chapter 10, since its subject matter clearly relates to the covenant renewal ceremony that follows. The opening phrase of this section, In view of all this, links the covenant renewal with the penitential prayer of chapter 9. Many critical scholars maintain that chapter 10 is displaced from its original position, yet there is no conclusive evidence that this is so. It is true that Ezra is not mentioned as a signatory of the covenant in chapter 10. It is also correct that some of the issues dealt with in 10:30-39 are issues that Nehemiah dealt with in chapter 13. Still, some of the issues dealt with in 10:30-39 are absent from chapter 13, while chapter 13 deals with issues not mentioned in 10:30-39. Moreover, one should not conclude that the pledges made in chapter 10 were fully kept from that time forward.

There are several possible explanations for why Ezra is not mentioned in the chapter. If he was the author of the covenant, there may have been no need for his signature. Also, since many of the names listed in the document (10:1-27), especially of the priests, are family names, it may be that Ezra was not mentioned since he was part of the Seraiah family of priests (Ezr 7:5). It is interesting that the high priest at this time, presumably still Eliashib (Neh 3:1), is not mentioned in the list of signatories. He too, like Ezra, was included under the Seraiah family signature. The discussion below will assume the events of chapter 10 follow logically and chronologically after the events of chapters 8-9.

9:38 After their corporate confession of sin, the leaders made a binding agreement in writing. The phrase "binding agreement" (Hb korethim 'amanah) is unique, combining the common Hebrew idiom for making (Hb carath; lit "cut") a covenant with the rare term "agreement" (Hb 'amanah), derived from the Hebrew verb ('aman) "to be faithful, to be trustworthy."

10:2-8 This list is similar to the listing of the priests who "went up with Zerubbabel" (12:1), although it contains some alternative spellings and minor textual corruption. None of the priests alive in Zerubbabel's time would have been present here, suggesting again that these are not the names of living people but the names of the founders of priestly divisions.

10:9-13 The names of Levites probably includes both family names (Jeshua, Binnui, and Kadmiel; 12:8; Ezr 3:9) and personal names (Neh 8:7; 9:4).

10:14-27 The list of the leaders of the people (Hb ra'she ha'am) likewise appears to list both family names and individual signers. The first half (vv. 14-19) generally matches the names of the returnees in the list of Ezra 2 and Nehemiah 7; the second half mentions people assigned to rebuild specific sections of the wall in Nehemiah 3.

10:28-29 Once the document was completed, the rest of the people had the opportunity to participate in the great event. This sworn oath first dealt broadly with obedience to God demonstrated in obedience to the law of God given through God's servant Moses. The particular areas of compliance to the law are then specified in verses 30-39.

10:30-39 These commands and prohibitions, prescribed in six crucial areas, are not just quotations from throughout the Pentateuch but an integration and application of the law to the present conditions. In some cases the OT laws are given greater specification or are broadened and applied to Israel's new circumstances. What is clear is the presupposition of the absolute authority of law as God's revelation and the presupposition of its applicability to every generation.

10:30 In Ezra's earlier ministry (Ezr 9) the focus was on foreign wives. In this passage the issue is broadened to intermarriage with foreigners in general.

10:31aThe law forbade any type of work on the Sabbath, but in Nehemiah's time, living in a multicultural situation, the question about buying from non-Israelites on the Sabbath came up. Here the prohibition is extended to the new cultural situation.

10:31 b The pledge here is unique in that it brings together two ordinances not originally combined. The law commanding the land to remain fallow on the seventh year (Ex 23:10-11) is linked with the remission of all debts on the seventh year (Dt 15:1-6).

10:32 In Ex 30:11-16 Moses was commanded to collect a half shekel from every male 20 years old or over. The passage does not describe this as an annual taxation. However, in King Joash's time when the temple was being restored, the taxation of the people for the upkeep of the temple was assumed to be an annual occurrence (2Ch 24:4-6). It is not clear why in this passage the temple tax was only a third of a shekel rather than the normal half shekel. Since there was not uniformity between monetary systems, it may be that the shekel in Nehemiah's time was more valuable than in earlier times.

10:34 The OT law commanded that "fire must be kept burning on the altar continually; it must not go out" (Lv 6:13). This required a lot of wood in a country not known for its forests. Thus the priests, Levites, and lay people shared the responsibility for providing wood.

10:35-39 The sixth and final obligation to which the Jews pledged themselves was to give the first and the best to God. This included the firstfruits of every fruit tree, a specification not found in OT law but a logical extension of the idea of giving the "firstfruits of the land" (Ex 23:19). Just as they brought the firstfruits (Hb bikkurim) of the land, so they brought the firstborn (Hb bekoroth) of their sons and livestock. Their sons (and the unclean livestock) would be redeemed (Ex 13:13; Lv 27:27) by a monetary payment (or the substitution of a clean animal for an unclean one), while the firstborn of a clean animal was offered to the priests. A tenth of the agricultural produce was given to the Levites, who in turn gave a tenth of the tenth to the temple. To ensure the proper allocation of these gifts and tenths, a priest of Aaronic descent was required to accompany the Levites when they accepted these donations (v. 38), a stipulation not found elsewhere in the OT.

11:1-2 Here the author returns to the Nehemiah Memoir (see "Structure" in the Introduction to Ezra) and the narrative about the repopulation of Jerusalem first introduced in 7:4-5. Jerusalem was underpopulated and consisted largely of the leaders (Hb sarim) of the people. There may be some degree of overstatement in the passage since the towns and villages would have needed local leadership as well. The solution to the problem was to have a tenth of the population come to live in Jerusalem, chosen by the casting of lots, a practice common in the OT and even into NT times (Ac 1:26). While this was a burden for those selected, this would not have been the selection of individuals but of families. It is not clear if the men who volunteered were in addition to those chosen by lot.

11:3-21 This list offers many textual challenges—a common phenomenon with names and numbers. The LXX reflects a much shorter version of verses 12-21 than does the Hebrew text. This list is also challenging in that it is clearly related to the list in 1Ch 9:1-17. Both lists (1Ch 9; Neh 11) originated in the postexilic era (1Ch 9:2) and recorded the names of those living in Jerusalem. Both have the same order of presentation: Israelites, priests, Levites, temple servants. Both list many of the same individuals, albeit with slightly different spelling of their names. Yet they differ greatly, with each including material not found in the other, and the 1 Chronicles 9 list is longer. A comparison of this list (Neh 11) with 1 Chronicles 9, along with the census lists of Ezra 2 and Nehemiah 7, suggests that this list must be selective and representative. Its purpose was to demonstrate that a representative cross section of the nation was now living in the holy city.

Descendants of the musicians Asaph and Jeduthun are mentioned, but not of Heman (cp. 1Ch 25:1). This is probably a result of the few Levites who returned from Babylon (Ezr 2:40; 8:15-20).

11:22-24 It is likely that Uzzi son of Bani was a great-grandson of Mattaniah, who is listed first among the Levites (v. 17). The role of the Levites (v. 23) was regulated by the command of the king. While some regard this as a reference to the Persian king, this does not appear likely. The "command of the king" probably refers back to King David's ordering of temple worship (1Ch 23; 25), an identification supported by the reference to David and the Levites in Neh 12:45-46. Pethahiah son of Meshezabel, mentioned only here (v. 24) in the Bible, served as the king's agent (Hb leyad hammelek; lit "at the hand of the king"), probably in Judah.

11:25-36 An enigmatic chapter concludes with a puzzling description of the regions of Judah (vv. 25-30) and Benjamin (vv. 31-36). This list of towns and villages is unusual in what it contains as well as in what it omits. Towns that were far beyond the borders of Yehud (Hb for Judah) are mentioned, yet towns referred to in Ezra-Nehemiah are not mentioned, including Bethlehem, Mizpah, Gibeon, and Jericho. In general, the towns listed for Judah were south of Jerusalem, extending all the way into the Negev, while the towns listed for Benjamin were northwest of Jerusalem extending into the Shephelah. While many proposed solutions have been offered for this passage, the most likely is that the list is of those towns that were not destroyed by the Babylonians in the sixth century B.C. and whose inhabitants remained in the land (Y. Aharoni, The Land of the Bible). This proposal accords well with the archaeological record that shows continuity of settlement in the region of Benjamin during this period.

12:1-26 This section of chapter 12 consists of temple personnel in supplementary lists appended to the repopulation list of chapter 11. These lists were representative of the situation a generation after Zerubbabel and Jeshua. Since they appear with little explanation or background, they bring about significant discussion in the scholarly community about their relationship to each other and in relation to the other lists of temple personnel mentioned in Ezra-Nehemiah (Ezr 2; Neh 7; 9; 10).

12:8-9 According to Ezr 2:40, there were only two Levitical families present in the return to the land under Zerubbabel (Jeshua and Kadmiel), numbering only 74 people. It is not clear why six families are listed here, especially since Mattaniah and Bakbukiah are mentioned as active in Nehemiah's time (v. 25; 11:17). The latter stood opposite the others either to offer support or to provide antiphonal music.

12:10-11 These verses list six high priests. The identity of the first and third are clear, with Jeshua serving with Zerubbabel in the return to the land (Ezr 2:2) and Eliashib serving as high priest during Nehemiah's tenure (3:1,20). However, since there is nearly an 80-year gap between the first and the third postexilic high priests, it is possible that the list is only representative and not complete, or, as suggested by Blenkinsopp (Ezra-Nehemiah), "there may have been times of political crisis . . . when the office was vacant."

The fourth priest, Joiada (also referred to by the longer form of his name, Jehoiada), is mentioned in 13:28 as the son of Eliashib the high priest, although Joiada himself did not yet bear that title. There is no other mention of Jonathan during this era. But verse 22 does identify an era by the listing of four priests: Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan, and Jaddua. The last named high priest, Jaddua, was mentioned by Josephus, who claimed that Alexander the Great met Jaddua (333 B.C.). However, since some of Josephus's work is considered legendary, it is probably unwise to date Jaddua that late. It is also possible that there were earlier and later high priests with the same name.

12:12-21 The second list of priestly names parallels the earlier one (vv. 1-7), although there is significant variation in the spelling of many names as well as an unexpected omission—Hattush (v. 2). Many of these names appear as signers of the pledge in chapter 10. The final six names are not on the earlier list (vv. 1-7) nor on the list of signatories in chapter 10. Of interest is the mention of Zechariah of Iddo, probably a reference to the prophet Zechariah (Ezr 5:1; 6:14;

12:22 The identification of Darius the Persian is not certain, and all three Persian kings named Darius have been suggested by scholars. Those who accept the veracity of Josephus's statement about Jaddua meeting Alexander the Great identify the Darius in this verse as Darius III Codomannus (336-331 B.C.). More likely Darius in this passage is a reference to Darius II Nothus (423-404 B.C.).

12:27-43 The grand finale of Nehemiah's ministry took place with the joyous dedication of the rebuilt wall around Jerusalem. While some scholars suggest that this dedication service took place immediately after the completion of the wall (6:15-16), it is more likely that the text is presenting an accurate chronology. Nehemiah's task, along with Ezra's, was to restore the people as well. Thus, the dedication celebrated the rebuilt wall as well as the revitalized people.

12:30 With the Levites and singers (vv. 28-29) present, the mandatory purification procedure could begin. For the priests and Levites (probably the "singers" as well, assuming they were included among the Levites at this point), this involved washing their clothes and abstaining from sexual intercourse (Ex 19:14-15), bringing special sacrifices (Nm 8:8-12), and being sprinkled with water (Nm 8:7).

12:31-37 The dedicatory procession began with Nehemiah (the text now resumes with the first-person account from the Nehemiah Memoir) bringing the leaders (Hb sarim) up on top of the wall, where they split into two groups. One group went to the right on the wall. The procession must have approached the city from the west, probably mounting the wall at the Valley Gate on the west side of the city. Here they "went to the right"—or south—toward the Dung Gate. Archaeological evidence suggests that the top of the wall was about nine feet wide, allowing people to walk two or three abreast.

The leader of the procession was Ezra the scribe, a statement that many regard as impossible. Since many scholars do not believe there was any overlap between the ministries of Ezra and Nehemiah, they consider this statement a pious but flawed attempt to link the ministry of these two great men. However, as D. J. Clines writes, "It cannot be proved that Ezra's participation is unhistorical; it is not impossible that Ezra should have been brought from retirement or from Babylonia specifically to engage in this ceremony."

12:38-39 The second procession left the Valley Gate and went to the left, or north, in a clockwise direction, passing the Fish Gate (northwest corner of the city) and leaving the wall at the Sheep Gate at the north end of the city. From there they traveled to the Gate of the Guard, an uncertain location that may be identical with the courtyard of the guard (3:25) or the Inspection Gate (3:31).

Presumably either location was near the temple.

12:40-43 The two processions met at the house of God, the temple. Nehemiah acknowledged the source of their great joy as God.

12:44-47 This section is linked to the dedication celebration by the phrase on that same day, although the issues mentioned prepare the way for the following chapter. Many critical scholars regard the claim that the worship was exactly as prescribed by David and his son Solomon as a historical retrojection of postexilic worship back into the time of David and Solomon (1Ch 23-36). However, such a position probably reflects more on a scholar's presuppositions about the history of Israel than on exegesis of the biblical text.

The tomb on the right is the tomb of Artaxerxes I. He died in 424 B.C. of natural causes. His wife is said to have died the same day.

13:1-3 At that time designates the era of reform under Nehemiah and not a specific date. During the now customary reading of the book of Moses, they read Dt 23:3-6 about the Ammonites and Moabites. The exclusion of the Moabites was because of their attempt to block the Israelites on their way to the promised land and their repeated attacks (Jdg 3:13; 10:9-17). All those of mixed descent (Hb 'eyrev) were separated from Israel, which probably did not mean deportation or breaking of marriages, but exclusion from the worshiping community.

13:4-5 While some identify Eliashib as the high priest (3:1,20-21), this is unlikely. The name Eliashib ("God repays" or "God leads back") was common in the postexilic era. Moreover, when Eliashib is identified he is called "the high priest" (3:1,20; 13:28) and never "the priest." Also, the Eliashib in verses 4-8 was the person responsible for the storerooms of the temple, which though a position of responsibility, was hardly a job for the high priest. That a large room in the temple complex was now empty of offerings and available for Tobiah's use points to the problem that Nehemiah dealt with later (vv. 10-13).

13:6-7 With this verse (v. 6) it becomes clear how such a shameful situation could have occurred in the Lord's temple: Nehemiah was in Babylon. In 5:14, Nehemiah's time in Jerusalem was described as from Artaxerxes' "twentieth year until his thirty-second year—12 years," probably 445-432 B.C. Nehemiah stated that it was only later that he asked Artaxerxes for a leave of absence to return to Jerusalem and deal with the problems that had arisen. The description of his activity suggests that he returned as governor of the province and not just a private citizen. According to the Elephantine Papyri, a governor named Bagohi was active in Jerusalem in 407 B.C., thus giving a suggested end date for Nehemiah's second governorship.

13:8-13 Tobiah the Ammonite's profaning of the rooms provided by Eliashib meant they had to be purified before they were restored to their original function. These rooms were empty because during Nehemiah's absence the people had failed to provide a tenth of their produce. While the priests were provided for by their share of the sacrifices, the people had vowed to give a tenth of their produce (10:35-39) for the support of the Levites, singers, and gatekeepers. But in Nehemiah's absence, and with heavy Persian taxes, they had failed to keep their promises, and the Levites had been forced to return to farming. Nehemiah recalled the Levites and their associates back to the temple and insisted that the people give a tenth. To make sure such a situation would not happen again, Nehemiah appointed four trustworthy men who represented the various temple personnel to make an equitable distribution of the tenths.

13:14 The first of four brief prayers to God by Nehemiah in this chapter occurs in this verse (see note at 4:4-5). He asked the Lord not to erase his deeds of faithful love (Hb chesed). The thought is that in the records of heaven (Ps 69:28; Dn 7:10; 12:1; Mal 3:16) his acts of faithful love would remain and be acknowledged by the Lord. Nehemiah's "deeds" were those acts of faithfulness to the commission laid upon him by God. The phrase is not an example of "works righteousness" but an expression of his faithfulness to his call by God to serve as governor.

13:15-16 In 10:31 the people had pledged that they would not buy any merchandise or any kind of grain on the Sabbath, but when Nehemiah returned for his second stint as governor, this is exactly what he found. Moreover, the people were working on the Sabbath as if it were just another day. The Tyrians were Phoenician traders whose homeland was the region of Tyre and Sidon.

13:17-18 The word rebuked is from a Hebrew term (riv) often used in a covenant lawsuit. Nehemiah contended with the nobles of Judah because of their violation of their covenant with God. Even if they were buying only from Gentile traders, their evil was clear; they were profaning the Sabbath day. During the postexilic era, Sabbath observance took on special significance and served as an important national marker that distinguished them from their Gentile neighbors. Nehemiah reminded the nobles of Judah of the terrible cost of their Sabbath violations in the past (Ezk 20:18-24) that had brought this disaster on us and on this city.

13:19-22 Nehemiah not only "rebuked" the leaders but took action. He closed the gates into Jerusalem during the Sabbath. Some merchants tried to get around his orders by setting up shop right outside the walls (v. 20), but he warned them that he would disperse them by force if it happened again. Posting his men to the city gates was only a temporary measure, so Nehemiah ordered the Levites to purify themselves and to guard the gates . . . to keep the Sabbath day holy. While this was an expansion of the Levites' duties, it was certainly in keeping with their overall purpose of maintaining the sanctity of the temple. The second of four brief prayers in this chapter (v. 22b) records Nehemiah's request that God honor his work in restoring the sanctity of the Sabbath and treat him in accordance with His faithful love (Hb chesed).

13:23-27 Ezra had dealt with the problem of intermarriage with Gentiles 30 years before (Ezr 10), but the people had reverted to their old ways—to the extent that half of their children spoke the language of Ashdod or one of the other peoples (lit "the tongue of a people and a people"). Some suggest this was a non-Semitic language related to the language of the Philistines. More likely it was either Aramaic or Phoenician, both of which were closely related to Hebrew and would be understandable to Hebrew speakers, but languages that were clearly distinct from Hebrew. Nehemiah's measures to secure the use of Hebrew appear to have had only temporary success. By the time of Jesus, Aramaic was the common language of the people. Nehemiah's response to this situation (v. 25) seems violent by modern standards, but even until recently the use of physical punishment was common and accepted in many Middle Eastern countries. Nehemiah reacted strongly because he realized that the sin of intermarriage with Gentiles had been a major cause of the destruction of their nation and their temple.

13:28 To illustrate how serious this problem was, Nehemiah recounted the sad case of a grandson of the high priest Eliashib who had married the daughter of Sanballat the Horonite (see note at 2:10), the enemy of Nehemiah and God's people. Once again, Nehemiah's response was swift and decisive. Probably the man left Judah and moved to Samaria where his father-in-law was governor.

13:29 In Nehemiah's third prayer in this chapter, he asked God again to remember. However, he did not ask God to remember and bless, but to remember and judge. He asked God to remember them, probably referring to Sanballat and those within the priesthood who had defiled the priesthood by intermarriage with foreigners.

13:30-31 These final verses of the book of Nehemiah give a brief summary of some of Nehemiah's reforms. The fourth and final prayer of the chapter is also the shortest (just four words in Hebrew): Remember me, my God, with favor (Hb tovah). While the conclusion to Ezra-Nehemiah may seem anti-climactic, the ministries of Ezra and Nehemiah were crucial to the survival of the Jewish people. The small community of exiles struggled to preserve their people and their faith in a devastated land. They found in Ezra and Nehemiah two leaders who were used by the Lord to help them endure in a hostile environment, living as subjects of the Persian kings. That empire, with all its pomp and glory, would fall to Alexander the Great, while the Jewish community would survive not only Alexander and his descendants but the Romans as well. Ezra's and Nehemiah's faithfulness to God helped the Jewish people continue, so they could one day produce a son of Abraham, a son of David (Mt 1:1), who would redeem the world.

The root indicates being hot. Jacob cooks stew (Gn 25:29). One lexicon, depending on Arabic, claims this idea represents a different root than other instances of ziyd, which describe acting arrogantly (Ex 18:11). Pharaoh and Egypt treated Israel arrogantly at the exodus (Neh 9:10). People act willfully by undertaking premeditated murder (Ex 21:14). They act defiantly (Dt 1:43) or arrogantly against God (Jr 50:29), daring to speak falsely for Him (Dt 18:20). The adjective (13x) describes willful or deliberate sins (Ps 19:13). The proud are accursed (Ps 119:21). Arrogant people will ultimately bring worldwide judgment (Is 13:11; Mal 4:1). With prepositions, the noun implies arrogantly ignoring God's messengers (Dt 17:12) or presumptuously proclaiming false prophecy (Dt 18:22). Presumptuous hearts are self-deceived, claiming invincibility against God (Jr 49:16).

Vashti Angers the King

1 These events took place during the days of Ahasuerus, [a, b] who ruled 127 provinces [c] from India [d] to •Cush . 2 In those days King Ahasuerus reigned from his royal throne [e] in the fortress at Susa. [f] 3 He held a feast [g] in the third year of his reign for all his officials and staff, the army of Persia and Media, [h] the nobles, [i] and the officials from the provinces. 4 He displayed the glorious wealth of his kingdom and the magnificent splendor of his greatness [j] for a total of 180 days.

5 At the end of this time, the king held a week-long banquet [k] in the garden courtyard [l] of the royal palace [m] for all the people, from the greatest to the least, [n] who were present in the fortress of Susa. [o] 6 White and violet linen hangings were fastened with fine white and purple linen cords to silver rods on marble [A] columns. Gold and silver couches [p] were arranged on a mosaic pavement of red feldspar, [B] marble, [C] mother-of-pearl, and precious stones.

7 Beverages were served in an array of gold goblets, [q] each with a different design. Royal wine flowed freely, according to the king's bounty [r] 8 and no restraint was placed on the drinking. The king had ordered every wine steward in his household to serve as much as each person wanted. 9 Queen Vashti also gave a feast for the women of King Ahasuerus's palace.

10 On the seventh day, when the king was feeling good from the wine, [s] Ahasuerus commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, [t] Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carkas, the seven eunuchs [u] who personally served him, 11 to bring Queen Vashti before him with her royal crown. He wanted to show off her beauty to the people and the officials, because she was very beautiful. [v] 12 But Queen Vashti refused to come at the king's command that was delivered by his eunuchs. The king became furious and his anger burned within him. [w]

The King's Decree

13 The king consulted the wise men [x] who understood the times, [D, y] for it was his normal procedure to confer with experts in law and justice. 14 The most trusted ones [E] were Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan. They were the seven officials [z] of Persia and Media [a] who had personal access to the king [b] and occupied the highest positions in the kingdom.
[c] 15 The king asked, "According to the law, what should be done with Queen Vashti, since she refused to obey King Ahasuerus's command that was delivered by the eunuchs? "

16 Memucan said in the presence of the king and his officials, "Queen Vashti has wronged not only the king, but all the officials and the peoples who are in every one of King Ahasuerus's provinces. [d] 17 For the queen's action will become public knowledge to all the women and cause them to despise their husbands and say, 'King Ahasuerus ordered Queen Vashti brought before him, but she did not come.' 18 Before this day is over, the noble women of Persia and Media who hear about the queen's act will say the same thing to all the king's officials, resulting in more contempt and fury.

19 "If it meets the king's approval, he should personally issue a royal decree. Let it be recorded in the laws of Persia and Media, so that it cannot be revoked: [e] Vashti is not to enter King Ahasuerus's presence, and her royal position is to be given to another woman who is more worthy than she. [f] 20 The decree the king issues will be heard throughout his vast kingdom, [g] so all women will honor their husbands, [h] from the least to the greatest." [i]

21 The king and his counselors approved the proposal, and he followed Memucan's advice. 22 He sent letters to all the royal provinces, to each province in its own script and to each ethnic group in its own language, [j] that every man should be master of his own house and speak in the language of his own people.

Search for a New Queen

2 Some time later, [a] when King Ahasuerus's rage [b] had cooled down, he remembered Vashti, what she had done, and what was decided against her. [c] 2 The king's personal attendants [A] suggested, "Let a search be made for beautiful young women for the king. [d] 3 Let the king appoint commissioners [e] in each province of his kingdom, so that they may assemble all the beautiful young women to the harem at the fortress of Susa. [f] Put them under the care of Hegai, the king's eunuch, [g] who is in charge of the women, [h] and give them the required beauty treatments. 4 Then the young woman who pleases the king [i] will become queen instead of Vashti." [j] This suggestion pleased the king, and he did accordingly.

5 In the fortress of Susa, there was a Jewish man named Mordecai [k] son of Jair, son of Shimei, [l] son of Kish, [m] a Benjaminite. 6 He had been taken into exile from Jerusalem with the other captives when King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon took King Jeconiah [n] of Judah into exile. [o] 7 Mordecai was the legal guardian of his cousin [B] Hadassah (that is, Esther), because she didn't have a father or mother. The young woman had a beautiful figure and was extremely good-looking. When her father and mother died, Mordecai had adopted her as his own daughter. [p]

8 When the king's command and edict became public knowledge, many young women gathered at the fortress of Susa under Hegai's care. Esther was also taken to the palace and placed under the care of Hegai, who was in charge of the women. 9 The young woman pleased him and gained his favor [C] so that he accelerated the process of the beauty treatments and the special diet that she received. He assigned seven hand-picked female servants to her from the palace and transferred her and her servants to the harem's best quarters.

10 Esther did not reveal her ethnic background or her birthplace, because Mordecai had ordered her not to. 11 Every day Mordecai took a walk in front of the harem's courtyard to learn how Esther was doing and to see what was happening to her.

12 During the year before each young woman's turn to go to King Ahasuerus, the harem regulation required her to receive beauty treatments with oil of myrrh for six months and then with perfumes and cosmetics for another six months.
13 When the young woman would go to the king, she was given whatever she requested to take with her from the harem to the palace. 14 She would go in the evening, and in the morning she would return to a second harem under the supervision of Shaashgaz, the king's eunuch in charge of the concubines. [q] She never went to the king again, unless he desired her and summoned her by name.

Esther Becomes Queen

15 Esther was the daughter of Abihail, [s] the uncle of Mordecai who had adopted her as his own daughter. When her turn came to go to the king, she did not ask for anything except what Hegai, the king's trusted official in charge of the harem, suggested. Esther won approval in the sight of everyone who saw her. [t]

16 She was taken to King Ahasuerus in the royal palace in the tenth month, the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. [u] 17 The king loved Esther more than all the other women. She won more favor and approval from him than did any of the other young women. He placed the royal crown on her head and made her queen in place of Vashti. [v] 18 The king held a great banquet for all his officials and staff. [w] It was Esther's banquet. He freed his provinces from tax payments and gave gifts worthy of the king's bounty. [x]

19 When the young women [y] were assembled together for a second time, Mordecai was sitting at the King's Gate. [z] 20 Esther still had not revealed her birthplace or her ethnic background, as Mordecai had directed. She obeyed Mordecai's orders, as she always had while he raised her.

Mordecai Saves the King 21 During those days while Mordecai was sitting at the King's Gate, Bigthan and Teresh, two eunuchs [a] who guarded the king's entrance, became infuriated and planned to assassinate [D] King Ahasuerus. 22 When Mordecai learned of the plot, he reported it to Queen Esther, and she told the king on Mordecai's behalf. [b] 23 When the report was investigated and verified, both men were hanged on the gallows. [c] This event was recorded in the Historical Record in the king's presence.

Haman’s Plan to Kill the Jews

3 After all this took place, King Ahasuerus honored Haman, son of Hammedatha the Agagite. [a] He promoted him in rank and gave him a higher position than all the other officials. [b] 2 The entire royal staff at the King's Gate [c] bowed down and paid homage to Haman, because the king had commanded this to be done for him. But Mordecai would not bow down or pay homage. [d] 3 The members of the royal staff at the King's Gate asked Mordecai, "Why are you disobeying the king's command? " 4 When they had warned him day after day [e] and he still would not listen to them, they told Haman to see if Mordecai's actions would be tolerated, since he had told them he was a Jew.

5 When Haman saw that Mordecai was not bowing down or paying him homage, he was filled with rage. [f] 6 And when he learned of Mordecai's ethnic identity, Haman decided not to do away with [A] Mordecai alone. He planned to destroy all of Mordecai's people, the Jews, [g] throughout Ahasuerus's kingdom. [h]

7 In the first month, the month of Nisan, [i] in King Ahasuerus's twelfth year, [j, k] Pur (that is, the lot) was cast before Haman for each day in each month, and it fell on the twelfth month, [l] the month Adar. [m, n] 8 Then Haman informed King Ahasuerus, "There is one ethnic group, scattered throughout the peoples in every province of your kingdom, [o] yet living in isolation. Their laws are different from everyone else's and they do not obey the king's laws. [p] It is not in the king's best interest to tolerate them. [q] 9 If the king approves, let an order be drawn up authorizing their destruction, and I will pay 375 tons of silver to [B] the accountants for deposit in the royal treasury." [r]

10 The king removed his signet ring [s] from his finger and gave it to Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of the Jewish people. [t] 11 Then the king told Haman, "The money and people are given to you to do with as you see fit."

12 The royal scribes were summoned [u] on the thirteenth day of the first month, and the order was written exactly as Haman commanded. It was intended for the royal satraps, [v] the governors of each of the provinces, and the officials of each ethnic group and written for each province in its own script and to each ethnic group in its own language. [w] It was written in the name of King Ahasuerus [x] and sealed with the royal signet ring. [y] 13 Letters were sent by couriers [z] to each of the royal provinces telling the officials to destroy, kill, and annihilate all the Jewish people — young and old, women and children — and plunder their possessions on a single day, [a] the thirteenth day of Adar, the twelfth month. [b]

14 A copy of the text, issued as law throughout every province, was distributed to all the peoples so that they might get ready for that day. 15 The couriers left, spurred on by royal command, and the law was issued in the fortress of Susa. [c]
The king and Haman sat down to drink, while the city of Susa was in confusion.

Mordecai Appeals to Esther

4 When Mordecai learned all that had occurred, [a] he tore his clothes, [b] put on •sackcloth and ashes, [c] went into the middle of the city, and cried loudly and bitterly. [d] 2 He only went as far as the King's Gate, [e] since the law prohibited anyone wearing sackcloth from entering the King's Gate. 3 There was great mourning among the Jewish people in every province where the king's command and edict [f] came. They fasted, wept, and lamented, and many lay on sackcloth and ashes. [g]

4 Esther's female servants and her eunuchs came and reported the news to her, and the queen was overcome with fear. [h] She sent clothes for Mordecai to wear so he could take off his sackcloth, but he did not accept them. 5 Esther summoned Hathach, one of the king's eunuchs assigned to her, and dispatched him to Mordecai to learn what he was doing and why. A 6 So Hathach went out to Mordecai in the city square in front of the King's Gate. 7 Mordecai told him everything that had happened as well as the exact amount of money Haman had promised to pay the royal treasury for the slaughter of the Jews. [i]

8 Mordecai also gave him a copy of the written decree issued in Susa ordering their destruction, so that Hathach might show it to Esther, explain it to her, and command her to approach the king, implore his favor, and plead with him personally for her people. [j] 9 Hathach came and repeated Mordecai's response to Esther.

10 Esther spoke to Hathach and commanded him to tell Mordecai, 11 "All the royal officials and the people of the royal provinces know that one law applies to every man or woman who approaches the king in the inner courtyard [k] and who has not been summoned — the death penalty. [l] Only if the king extends the gold scepter will that person live. [m] I have not been summoned to appear before the king [n] for the last B 30 days." 12 Esther's response was reported to Mordecai.

13 Mordecai told the messenger to reply to Esther, "Don't think that you will escape the fate of all the Jews because you are in the king's palace. 14 If you keep silent at this time, liberation and deliverance will come to the Jewish people from another place, [o] but you and your father's house will be destroyed. Who knows, perhaps you have come to your royal position for such a time as this." [p]

15 Esther sent this reply to Mordecai: 16 "Go and assemble all the Jews who can be found in Susa and fast for me. Don't eat or drink for three days, [q] day or night. I and my female servants will also fast [r] in the same way. After that, I will go to the king even if it is against the law. [s] If I perish, I perish." [t] 17 So Mordecai went and did everything Esther had ordered him.

Esther Approaches the King

5 On the third day, [a] Esther dressed up in her royal clothing and stood in the inner courtyard [b] of the palace facing it. The king was sitting on his royal throne in the royal courtroom, facing its entrance. 2 As soon as the king saw Queen Esther standing in the courtyard, she won his approval. [A] The king extended the gold scepter in his hand toward Esther, and she approached and touched the tip of the scepter. [c]

3 "What is it, Queen Esther? " the king asked her. "Whatever you want, even to half the kingdom, will be given to you." [d]

4 "If it pleases the king," Esther replied, "may the king and Haman come today to the banquet [e] I have prepared for them."

5 The king commanded, "Hurry, and get Haman so we can do as Esther has requested." So the king and Haman went to the banquet Esther had prepared.

6 While drinking the [B] wine, [f] the king asked Esther, "Whatever you ask will be given to you. Whatever you want, even to half the kingdom, will be done."

7 Esther answered, "This is my petition and my request: 8 If the king approves of me [C] and if it pleases the king to grant my petition and perform my request, [g] may the king and Haman come to the banquet I will prepare for them. [h] Tomorrow I will do what the king has asked."

9 That day Haman left full of joy and in good spirits. [D,] [i] But when Haman saw Mordecai at the King's Gate, and Mordecai didn't rise or tremble in fear at his presence, Haman was filled with rage toward Mordecai. [j] 10 Yet Haman controlled himself and went home. He sent for his friends and his wife Zeresh [k] to join him. 11 Then Haman described for them his glorious wealth and his many sons. He told them all how the king had honored him and promoted him in rank over the other officials and the royal staff. [l] 12 "What's more," Haman added, "Queen Esther invited no one but me to join the king at the banquet she had prepared. I am invited again tomorrow to join her with the king. 13 Still, none of this satisfies me since I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the King's Gate all the time."

14 His wife Zeresh and all his friends told him, "Have them build a gallows 75 feet [E] high. [m] Ask the king in the morning to hang Mordecai on it. Then go to the banquet with the king and enjoy yourself." The advice pleased Haman, so he had the gallows constructed. [n]

Mordecai Honored by the King

6 That night sleep escaped [a] the king, so he ordered the book recording daily events to be brought and read to the king. 2 They found the written report of how Mordecai had informed on Bigthana and Teresh, two eunuchs who guarded the king's entrance, when they planned to assassinate King Ahasuerus. [b] 3 The king inquired, "What honor and special recognition have been given to Mordecai for this act?" [c]

The king's personal attendants replied, "Nothing has been done for him."

4 The king asked, "Who is in the court?" Now Haman was just entering the outer court of the palace to ask the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows he had prepared for him. [d]

5 The king's attendants answered him, "Haman is there, standing in the court."

"Have him enter," the king ordered.

6 Haman entered, and the king asked him, "What should be done for the man the king wants to honor?" [e]

Haman thought to himself, "Who is it the king would want to honor more than me?" 7 Haman told the king, "For the man the king wants to honor: 8 Have them bring a royal garment that the king himself has worn [f] and a horse the king himself has ridden, [g] which has a royal diadem on its head. 9 Put the garment and the horse under the charge of one of the king's most noble officials. [h] Have them clothe the man the king wants to honor, parade him on the horse through the city square, and proclaim before him, 'This is what is done for the man the king wants to honor.'"

10 The king told Haman, "Hurry, and do just as you proposed. Take a garment and a horse for Mordecai the Jew, [i] who is sitting at the King's Gate. Do not leave out anything you have suggested." 11 So Haman took the garment and the horse. He clothed Mordecai and paraded him through the city square, crying out before him, "This is what is done for the man the king wants to honor."

12 Then Mordecai returned to the King's Gate, [j] but Haman, overwhelmed, [A] hurried off for home with his head covered. [k] 13 Haman told his wife Zeresh and all his friends [l] everything that had happened. His advisers and his wife Zeresh said to him, "Since Mordecai is Jewish, and you have begun to fall before him, you won't overcome him, because your downfall is certain." [m] 14 While they were still speaking with him, the eunuchs of the king [n] arrived and rushed Haman to the banquet Esther had prepared. [o]

Haman Is Executed

7 The king and Haman came to feast [A, a] with Esther the queen. 2 Once again, on the second day while drinking wine, [b] the king asked Esther, “Queen Esther, whatever you ask will be given to you. Whatever you seek, even to half the kingdom, will be done.” [c]

3 Queen Esther answered, “If I have obtained your approval, [B] my king, and if the king is pleased, [d] spare my life — this is my request; and spare my people — this is my desire. [e] 4 For my people and I have been sold out [f] to destruction, death, and extermination. [g] If we had merely been sold as male and female slaves, [h] I would have kept silent. Indeed, the trouble wouldn’t be worth burdening the king.”

5 King Ahasuerus spoke up and asked Queen Esther, “Who is this, and where is the one who would devise such a scheme? ” [C, i]

6 Esther answered, “The adversary and enemy [j] is this evil Haman.”

Haman stood terrified [k] before the king and queen. 7 Angered [l] by this, the king arose from where they were drinking wine and went to the palace garden. [m] Haman remained to beg Queen Esther for his life because he realized the king was planning something terrible for him. [n] 8 Just as the king returned from the palace garden to the house of wine drinking, Haman was falling on the couch [o] where Esther was reclining. The king exclaimed, “Would he actually violate the queen while I am in the palace? ” As soon as the statement left the king’s mouth, Haman’s face was covered. [p]

9 Harbona, one of the royal eunuchs, [q] said: “There is a gallows 75 feet [D] tall at Haman’s house that he made for Mordecai, [r] who gave the report that saved [E]
the king.” [s]

The king commanded, “Hang him on it.”

10 They hanged Haman on the gallows he had prepared for Mordecai. [t] Then the king’s anger subsided. [u]

Esther Intervenes for the Jews

8 That same day King Ahasuerus awarded Queen Esther the estate [a] of Haman, the enemy of the Jews. [b] Mordecai entered the king's presence because Esther had revealed her relationship to Mordecai. [c] 2 The king removed his signet ring he had recovered from Haman [d] and gave it to Mordecai, and Esther put him in charge of Haman's estate.

3 Then Esther addressed the king again. [e] She fell at his feet, wept, and begged [f] him to revoke the evil of Haman the Agagite, [g] and his plot he had devised against the Jews. [h] 4 The king extended the gold scepter [i] toward Esther, so she got up and stood before the king.

5 She said, "If it pleases the king, and I have found approval before him, if the matter seems right to the king and I am pleasing in his sight, [j] let a royal edict be written. Let it revoke the documents the scheming Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, wrote to destroy the Jews who are in all the king's provinces. [k] 6 For how could I bear to see the disaster that would come on my people? [l] How could I bear to see the destruction of my relatives? " [m]

7 King Ahasuerus said to Esther the Queen and to Mordecai the Jew, "Look, I have given Haman's estate to Esther, [n] and he was hanged on the gallows because he attacked [A] the Jews. [o] 8 You may write in the king's name whatever pleases you [p] concerning the Jews, and seal it with the royal signet ring. [q] A document written in the king's name and sealed with the royal signet ring cannot be revoked." [r]

9 On the twenty-third day of the third month [s] (that is, the month Sivan), [t] the royal scribes were summoned. Everything was written exactly as Mordecai [u] ordered for the Jews, to the satraps, [v] the governors, and the officials of the 127 provinces from India [w] to •Cush . [x] The edict was written for each province in its own script, for each ethnic group in its own language, [y] and to the Jews in their own script and language.

10 Mordecai wrote in King Ahasuerus's name and sealed the edicts with the royal signet ring. He sent the documents by mounted couriers, [z] who rode fast horses [a] bred from the royal racing mares.

11 The king's edict gave the Jews in each and every city the right to assemble and defend themselves, to destroy, kill, and annihilate every ethnic and provincial army hostile to them, including women and children, and to take their possessions as spoils of war. [b] 12 This would take place on a single day throughout all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, the month Adar. [c, d]

to all the peoples [e] so the Jews could be ready to avenge themselves against their enemies on that day. 14 The couriers rode out in haste on their royal horses at the king's urgent command. The law was also issued in the fortress of Susa. [f] 15 Mordecai went from the king's presence clothed in royal purple and white, with a great gold crown and a purple robe of fine linen. [g] The city of Susa shouted and rejoiced, [h] 16 and the Jews celebrated [B] with gladness, joy, and honor. [i] 17 In every province and every city, wherever the king's command and his law reached, joy and rejoicing took place among the Jews. There was a celebration and a holiday. [C,] [j] And many of the ethnic groups of the land professed themselves to be Jews because fear of the Jews [k] had overcome them.

Victories of the Jews

9 The king's command and law [a] went into effect on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, [b] the month Adar. [c] On the day when the Jews' enemies [d] had hoped to overpower them, just the opposite happened. The Jews overpowered those who hated them. [e] 2 In each of King Ahasuerus's provinces [f]
the Jews assembled in their cities to attack those who intended to harm them. [A]
Not a single person could withstand them; terror of them [g] fell on every nationality. [h]

3 All the officials of the provinces, the satraps, the governors, and the royal civil administrators [B, i] aided the Jews because they were afraid of Mordecai. [j] 4 For Mordecai exercised great power in the palace, [k] and his fame spread throughout the provinces as he became more and more powerful. [l]

5 The Jews put all their enemies to the sword, killing and destroying them. [m]
They did what they pleased to those who hated them. 6 In the fortress of Susa [n]
the Jews killed and destroyed 500 men, 7 including Parshandatha, Dalphon, Aspatha, 8 Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, 9 Parmashta, Arisai, Aridai, and Vaizatha.
10 They killed these 10 sons [o] of Haman son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews. [p] However, they did not seize [C] any plunder. [q]

11 On that day the number of people killed in the fortress of Susa was reported to the king. 12 The king said to Queen Esther, "In the fortress of Susa the Jews have killed and destroyed 500 men, including Haman's 10 sons. What have they done in the rest of the royal provinces? Whatever you ask will be given to you.
Whatever you seek will also be done." [r]

13 Esther answered, "If it pleases the king, may the Jews who are in Susa also have tomorrow [s] to carry out today's law, [t] and may the bodies of Haman's 10 sons [u] be hung on the gallows." [v] 14 The king gave the orders for this to be done, so a law was announced in Susa, and they hung the bodies of Haman's 10 sons.
15 The Jews in Susa assembled again on the fourteenth day of the month of Adar
[w] and killed 300 men in Susa, but they did not seize [D] any plunder. [x]

16 The rest of the Jews in the royal provinces assembled, defended themselves, and got rid of [E] their enemies. They killed 75,000 [y] of those who hated them, [z] but they did not seize [F] any plunder. 17 They fought on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar and rested on the fourteenth, and it became a day of feasting and rejoicing.

18 But the Jews in Susa had assembled on the thirteenth and the fourteenth days of the month. They rested on the fifteenth day of the month, and it became a day of feasting and rejoicing. [a] 19 This explains why the rural Jews who live in villages observe the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a time of rejoicing and feasting. It is a holiday when they send gifts to one another. [b]

20 Mordecai [c] recorded these events and sent letters to all the Jews in all of King Ahasuerus's provinces, both near and far. 21 He ordered [d] them to celebrate the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month Adar every year 22 because during those days the Jews got rid of [G, e] their enemies. That was the month when their sorrow was turned into rejoicing and their mourning into a holiday. [f] They were to be days of feasting, [g] rejoicing, and of sending gifts to one another and the poor.

23 So the Jews agreed to continue the practice they had begun, as Mordecai had written them to do. 24 For Haman son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, [h] had plotted against the Jews to destroy them. He cast the Pur (that is, the lot) to crush and destroy them. [i] 25 But when the matter was brought before the king, [j] he commanded by letter that the evil plan Haman had devised against the Jews return on his own head [k] and that he should be hanged with his sons on the gallows. [l] 26 For this reason these days are called Purim, from the word Pur. [m]

Because of all the instructions in this letter as well as what they had witnessed and what had happened to them, 27 the Jews bound themselves, their descendants, and all who joined [n] with them to a commitment that they would not fail to celebrate these two days each and every year according to the written instructions and according to the time appointed. 28 These days are remembered and celebrated by every generation, family, province, and city, so that these days of Purim will not lose their significance in Jewish life [o] and their memory will not fade from their descendants. [p]

29 Queen Esther daughter of Abihail, [q] along with Mordecai the Jew, [r] wrote this second letter with full authority [s] to confirm the letter about Purim. 30 He sent letters with messages of peace and faithfulness to all the Jews who were in the 127 provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, 31 in order to confirm these days of Purim at their proper time just as Mordecai the Jew and Queen Esther had established them and just as they had committed themselves and their descendants to the practices of fasting [t] and lamentation. [u] 32 So Esther's command confirmed these customs of Purim, which were then written into the record.

Mordecai's Fame

10 King Ahasuerus imposed a tax throughout the land [a] even to the farthest shores. [A, b] 2 All of his powerful and magnificent accomplishments [c] and the detailed account of Mordecai's great rank to which the king had honored him, [d] have they not been written in the Historical Records of the Kings of Media and Persia? [e] 3 Mordecai the Jew was second only to King Ahasuerus, [f] famous among the Jews, and highly popular with many of his relatives. [g] He continued to seek good for his people and to speak for the welfare of all his descendants. [h]

ESTHER

Introduction | Outline | Timeline | Study Notes | Word Studies

Introduction

Persepolis was one of four capitals of the Persian Empire; the others were Susa, Babylon, and Ecbatana. Darius the Great, father of Ahasuerus (Xerxes), began construction on the palace complex in Persepolis that took over a century to finish. Esther and her husband, Ahasuerus, lived during that construction.

Esther is a unique book. It is the only book in the Bible that never mentions God, although His presence is implied due to Mordecai's allusion to divine providence (4:14). At times the book seems rather secular; historically this has contributed to questions regarding its place in the canon of the synagogue and the church. Esther is tightly connected with specific historical events, yet it is also a piece of literature, a narrative with all of the literary features necessary to make it a great story. It is a book in which its purposes are not always explicitly stated but are derived from the story as a whole.

Circumstances of Writing Author: Like most OT books, the author of the book is unknown. In the Jewish Talmud it is suggested that the members of the Great Synagogue wrote the book. However, it is hard to imagine this prestigious group of religious scholars writing a book that mentions the Persian king 190 times but never mentions God. Many early writers, both Jewish as well as Christian, suggested Mordecai as the author.

Background: The story of Esther is rooted in the historical situation of King

Xerxes (Ahasuerus), who ruled as king of Persia from 486-465 B.C.

Mid-twentieth century critical scholars tended to date the book late, even into the second century B.C. However, most now argue for an earlier date. The discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1947 showed that the Hebrew of Esther was very different from the Hebrew of the first century B.C. Also, there are no Greek words in the text of Esther, which would suggest that it was written before Alexander the Great's conquest (ca 333 B.C.) made Greek the language of the region. Most likely the book was written in the fourth century B.C.

The book gives every indication of being a historical narrative. For that reason the alleged historical anomalies in the text raise for many interpreters problems in accepting the historicity of the story. While it is regrettable not to have any extant extrabiblical confirmation of the main characters in the story (Esther, Haman, Mordecai), several points must be considered.

First, there are few extant Persian records for Xerxes' reign. Thus very few historical figures are known from this time. Moreover, the Greek writers, especially Herotodus, were writing their history particularly as it related to the Greeks—not as court historians for the Persians—thus, their material is selective and would leave unmentioned many significant figures. Second, the absence of extrabiblical evidence does not mean these people did not exist. Third, while there is no positive extrabiblical confirmation of these individuals, they appear in an account that even ardent critics acknowledge as being remarkably accurate in its description of the Persian era.

Message and Purpose The principle message of the book of Esther called all Jews to celebrate Purim. The purposes of Esther can be distinguished into two types: those purposes that pertain to the original audience of the book during the Persian period, and the broader, theological purposes that transcend the book's original readers.

Hope: For the Jewish people scattered around the Persian Empire, the book of Esther was a story that gave encouragement and hope. It provided a model of how Jewish people could not merely survive but also thrive in a Gentile environment. It showed how Jewish people could effectively serve in positions of high responsibility while maintaining their Jewish identity and their commitment to the God of Israel. It showed how Jewish leaders could be used to bring blessing to their Gentile rulers and neighbors. And for a people far from the land of their forefathers, it demonstrated that the God of Israel was still able to redeem His people in their oppression, whether they were in Egypt, Israel, or Persia.

Divine providence: It is unlikely the lack of any mention of God in the book is accidental. It leaves the reader to ponder the work of God, evident but unseen, in the unfolding story of deliverance and redemption. This is fitting since Jews in exile would be tempted to find lack of evidence for God's overt presence to be evidence for His actual absence. The book of Esther counters this notion, depicting God's providence as ruling even the events of foreign lands during exile.

God's unlikely instruments: Part of the mystery of God's providence in the book is how God can use such unlikely people to help accomplish His plans. Who would ever guess that a young Jewish woman named Hadassah (Esther), an orphan, would end up the queen of the greatest empire the world had ever known? Who but God could bring about such a powerful reversal through the "weakness" of a young woman?

Contribution to the Bible Without ever mentioning God directly, the book of Esther underscores the providence of God. God's promise to give the Jews an eternal ruler remained in place, even in the face of threatened annihilation. Esther shows us that many Jews remained faithful to their God even in exile. They kept their identity as God's people through the synagogues that developed as the centers of the Jewish community wherever Jews settled. The synagogues would later play a significant role as the gospel spread throughout the Roman Empire, for these served as natural starting places for the deliverance of the gospel in the towns visited by the apostles (e.g., Ac 9:20; 17:1-2; 18:19; 19:8).

Structure

The Hebrew of the Masoretic Text used as the basis for the Holman Christian Standard Bible is a fairly straightforward text. It is written in a form of late biblical Hebrew common to the postexilic era and found in other biblical books of that time, such as Chronicles, Ezra-Nehemiah, and Daniel. Like Ezra-Nehemiah, Esther shows the growing influence of Aramaic in its grammar and vocabulary, as well as the presence of many Persian words.

Study Notes 1:1-2 Ahasuerus is the Hebrew name for King Xerxes, who ruled from 486-465 B.C., and who is mentioned only two other times in the rest of the OT (Ezr 4:6; Dn 9:1). Critical scholars regard the statement that Ahasuerus ruled 127 provinces as an error, yet this is not an impossible figure (cp. Dn 6:1). The Persian records speak of satrapies, which according to various accounts, would number between 20 and 31, but the term used in this verse is "provinces" (Hb medinah), which would be subdivisions of a satrapy. An example of this from Ezra-Nehemiah (see note at Ezr 4:11) would be the division of the satrapy of "Beyond the River" into many provinces, such as Samaria and Yehud (Hb for Judah). The easternmost border of the vast Persian Empire was the Indus River, now in Pakistan but once part of India during the time of the British raj. The westernmost extent of the empire was to Cush, the region south of Egypt called Upper Nubia, which today is part of northern Sudan.

Chapter 1 of Esther is set in the fortress (Hb birah) at Susa, one of the three capital cities of the Persian Empire along with Ecbatana and Persepolis (some would argue that Babylon was also a capital city). It is located in what is today southwestern Iran and was the capital of the ancient empire of Elam during the second millennium B.C. During Xerxes' rule Susa was the usual location of his winter palace.

1:3-4 In the third year of Ahasuerus, probably 483 B.C., there occurred the first of 10 feasts recorded in Esther, which are important structural and thematic markers in the book. The word "feast" (Hb mishteh) is derived from the Hebrew verb shathah, meaning "to drink." The "feast" was more of a drinking bout than a meal. The ancient Greek writers mentioned that the Persians were famous (or infamous) for their prodigious drinking.

Many critical scholars assume the mention of 180 days to be a legendary exaggeration. However, it is not clear whether verse 4 suggests that the party itself went on for 180 days, or instead that for a half year after the party there was a royal celebration in which Ahasuerus displayed the glorious wealth of his kingdom. It is more likely the latter, since it is hard to imagine how the government could function during a six-month drunken celebration. Also, it seems unlikely that a 180-day party would continue into the brutal summer heat, a time when the royal family normally relocated to their summer palace in Ecbatana.

1:5-8 Unlike the first feast, the second banquet (or "feast," v. 3; Hb mishteh) was not for the nobility but for all the citizenry in the fortress of Susa. The event is described in great detail (v. 6) to highlight the opulence and wealth of the king. For the Persians, it must have been regarded as a fabulous party because the royal wine flowed freely, according to the king's bounty (lit "according to the hand of the king"). Moreover, by royal decree each guest could drink as much as he desired or was capable of drinking since no restraint was placed on the drinking (lit "as to the law [Hb dath] of the drinking, no restraint").

1:9 The third feast was given by Queen Vashti, who is first introduced in this verse, and it was only for the women. Both biblical and extrabiblical sources demonstrate that women were often present at the feasts, but their presence was not mentioned at the two earlier feasts (vv. 3,5). Neither Persian nor Greek records mention a queen named Vashti, but rather identify Amestris as queen during Xerxes' reign. Most critical scholars regard the reference to Vashti as a historical blunder on the part of the author of Esther. However, several prominent OT scholars suggest that Vashti may be not a proper name but a title, possibly related to the Avestan (ancient Indo-Iranian language) Vahishta, meaning "the best." Vashti disappears from the story when she is replaced by Esther (2:17).

1:10-12 Jewish readers who were well versed in the Scriptures would probably recognize the ominous mention of feeling good from the wine. King Belshazzar was also "under the influence of the wine" (Dn 5:2) when he literally saw the writing on the wall. Most of the references to eunuchs in the OT occur in the book of Esther. They held positions of power, such as serving as cupbearer, and could be trusted with the care of the royal wives and concubines. Three of the names listed for the eunuchs (Mehuman, Biztha . . . Carkas) have parallels with names found in the Elamite Persepolis texts (E. Yamauchi, Persia and the Bible). The king's call for seven eunuchs could suggest that Queen Vashti was carried to the banquet on a royal litter.

No one was as shocked as King Ahasuerus when Queen Vashti refused his royal command. Both of the Jewish Targums of Esther (Aram paraphrases of the Hb text) state that the king commanded Vashti to appear before his drunken friends wearing only her crown, but this is an unlikely reading of the text. Ahasuerus's intense fury was predictable. His own wife had publicly disobeyed the most powerful man in the Persian Empire. The chronology of this event may give additional insight into the king's anger. If this occurred in "the third year" of Ahasuerus's rule (483 B.C.), it might coincide with the preparations for war with the Greeks. As Karen Jobes writes, "Ahasuerus needed his men to obey his commands as they went to war, but in his own palace he could not even get his own wife to obey."

1:13-14 Some suggest the phrase who understood the times refers to astrologers and translate the phrase as "who understood propitious times." However, the answer from these wise men does not mention the stars or the zodiac. More likely the reference to those who "understood the times" is like the usage in 1Ch 12:32 in which the men of Issachar "understood the times," that is, they were simply wise men. The names of the seven wise men, also called officials (Hb sarim), are not identifiable with known Persian individuals, but for three of the men (Meres, Marsena, and Memucan), Elamite parallels have been found for their names (Yamauchi).

1:16 Memucan's recommendation (vv. 19-20) was based on his assertion that

Queen Vashti's action was not just a personal affront but also a universal affront against all (Hb kol) the officials and all (Hb kol) the peoples who lived in all (Hb kol) the provinces. Memucan's exaggeration served only to legitimize the poor advice he was about to give the king.

1:18 The syntax of the Hebrew text of verse 18 is difficult because there is no object for the verb "they will say" (Hb to'marna). One simple solution is to assume the loss of a definite article marker (Hb 'eth) before the phrase who hear. This would give a translation such as "the noble women of Persia and Media will say what they have heard about the queen's act."

1:19 The irrevocability of the laws of Persia and Media is not documented either in Persian or Greek literature, although it is mentioned several times in the OT (8:8; Dn 6:8,12). Some scholars regard this as an historical inaccuracy on the part of the author; M. Fox writes, "It would be impossible to run a government by such a principle." But as D. J. Clines very plausibly notes, "The meaning here is that the decision should be incorporated among official decisions so that it will be strictly carried out." The consort was always called "Queen Vashti" until this verse; now she is simply "Vashti."

1:20 This passage is replete with irony and satire. King Ahasuerus, who could not control his own wife, now issues a universal decree that all women would honor their husbands.

1:22 The final phrase of the decree is unusual and has engendered much debate: and speak in the language of his own people. Some scholars suggest changing the text, while others follow the LXX and simply delete it (NRSV, NLT). Another possibility is to understand the phrase "speak in the language of the people" as referring to the decree and not to the husband. The issuance of the decree to the entire empire is ironic because it ensured that everyone in the empire would know about the king's marital struggles, and not just the "noble women" of Susa (v. 18).

2:1 The vague description some time later is of little help in determining the time frame in the story. It is clear from verse 16 that Esther did not meet King Ahasuerus until four years after the first events (479-478 B.C.). Some suggest that the search for a replacement queen only started when Ahasuerus returned from his fighting with the Greeks (479 B.C.).

2:2-3 The word translated young women (Hb betulah) does not necessarily mean "virgins," as the usage in verses 17-19 and Ezk 23:3-8 attests, but in this context it is clear that only young women without prior sexual experience would be acceptable to the king. Possible brides would be brought to the harem (lit "house of the women") at Susa.

2:5-7 In this important parenthetical flashback, two more main characters in the story are introduced—Mordecai and Esther. The name Mordecai was a common name, a Hebrew form of the Babylonian name Marduka, derived from Marduk, the principle god of Babylon.

Mordecai's genealogy is problematic if it is attempting to link him to Kish the father of King Saul (1Sm 9:1). This Kish could hardly have been Mordecai's great-grandfather, since the time gap between the two was over 500 years. Either a different Kish is in view, or it could be that the term "son of" means here "descendant of," a common usage in the OT that in this case would indicate that the author is choosing to identify only a handful of Mordecai's line of ancestors.

An additional difficulty is associated with verse 6—he had been taken into exile from Jerusalem during the time of Nebuchadnezzar. If "he" is Mordecai, this would make him almost 120 years old when Esther was chosen. It is possible to read verse 6 as identifying Kish as the "he" and not Mordecai, which would also lend credence to the theory that a different individual named Kish is intended here, not King Saul's father. Esther is introduced first with her Hebrew name, Hadassah, the name of the myrtle tree. Her "Gentile" name was Esther, derived from the name of the famous goddess Ishtar. Her physical beauty would give her an edge in replacing Vashti (1:9).

2:8-9 The statement that Esther was also taken to the palace does not necessarily suggest she was taken unwillingly, although one of the Jewish Targums of Esther suggests this. A later Midrash on the book of Esther states that Esther hid for four years before being captured and taken to the royal harem (Aggadath, Esther 2:8). Both the Targum and the Midrash can be commended for trying to protect Esther's virtue, but there is no biblical evidence that Esther resisted going to the harem, and clear evidence from this present passage shows she cooperated in the preparation for becoming the king's new queen. Esther's chances to become queen increased as she pleased Hegai, the eunuch in charge of the potential brides. He also gave her a special diet (Hb minoth). The Hebrew term used here usually means "portions," often in the sense of delicacies (Neh 8:10,12), which were probably not kosher.

2:10 It is not explicitly stated why Mordecai ordered Esther to hide her Jewish background. When Esther finally revealed her ethnicity to King Ahasuerus, he appeared untroubled by it (7:3). Yet clearly some people of that era, especially Haman (3:4-6), hated the Jews.

2:12-13 The mention of one-year beauty treatments for each young woman sounds excessive and indulgent. Probably it was intended to emphasize the grandeur and pomp of the king who deserved partners meticulously prepared for the privilege of being his consort. Each prospect could take with her whatever she requested when she went to the king, presumably perfumes, jewelry, and clothes.

2:16-18 Esther's turn to please the king came in what would have been the winter of 479-478 B.C. The story gives no hint of moral judgment about the actions of Esther, a young Jewish virgin who gave herself to a pagan, uncircumcised, Persian king. In the ethic of that era it was simply a given that kings had the right to collect a harem. More intriguing is the fact of God's working through another "divine coincidence." God's sovereignty was at work through the encounter of a pagan king and a Jewish virgin, for it would lead to the rescue of God's people.

The vacancy created by the deposing of Vashti was now filled by Esther, whose coronation was celebrated with a great banquet. This banquet contrasts with the fateful banquet where Queen Vashti refused to appear (1:12) and foreshadows the banquets yet to come, especially the crucial banquets with Haman (chaps. 5 and 7), and the banquets of rejoicing for the Jewish people in chapters 8 and 9.

The phrase freed . . . from tax payments translates a single Hebrew word (hanachah) that occurs only here in the OT. It has the connotation of "causing to rest," possibly indicating a rest from work in commemoration of the queen's coronation. This translation is supported by the mention of the giving of gifts worthy of the king's bounty and by the Latin translation as well.

2:19 It may be that the young women of the king's harem (vv. 12-14) were not allowed to be present at "Esther's Banquet" but got together at a different time to celebrate with their friend who was now queen. The mention of Mordecai at the King's Gate suggests that he was some kind of official in the Persian court. This would help explain why he was living in the fortress at Susa (1:2) and not in the city of Susa, and how he could be within earshot of conspirators who were plotting Ahasuerus's murder. The King's Gate in Susa was a massive monumental structure that measured 131 feet by 92 feet, with a column-like tower on each corner that was 40 feet high.

2:21-23 The story of Esther takes a new turn with Mordecai's discovery of a plot to assassinate King Ahasuerus. Mordecai informed the king through Queen Esther. Esther not only was Mordecai's best contact with the king, but her passing on of the news would have endeared her to the king. In terms of the narrative, this section of the story sets the stage for the delayed honoring of Mordecai at Haman's expense (chaps. 6-7). The seemingly mundane mention of the incident being recorded in the Historical Record serves as an important part of the plot, setting up Ahasuerus's later discovery of his failure to honor Mordecai (6:1-3).

3:1-6 This section is a critical part of the narrative that introduces the last protagonist in the story (Haman) and the conflict that now dominates the narrative (threat to the Jews). The initial incident that sparked the conflict was Mordecai's refusal to bow to Haman. A Jewish person was not forbidden by Scripture or cultural custom to bow down to a person in authority, but Mordecai, who presumably bowed down to the king and to other officials, repeatedly (vv. 2-4) refused to bow down to Haman. One of the most plausible explanations for Mordecai's refusal relates to Haman's name: Haman . . . the Agagite. While Mordecai was possibly from the line of King Saul (see 2:5-7 and note there), Haman was a descendant of Agag (1Sm 15:8-33), the leader of the Amalekites. King Saul's disobedience in sparing King Agag (1Sm 15:8-9) resulted in Samuel's announcement that the Lord had taken the kingdom away from him and by extension his descendants (1Sm 15:27). Possibly this ancient enmity explains Mordecai's refusal to bow to Haman the Agagite.

3:7 The Pur appears to derive from the Akkadian term puru meaning a "lot" or "fate." Presumably Haman wanted his astrologers or diviners to pick the most propitious date to launch his vengeance against Mordecai and his people. The month that was identified by lot was the month of Adar (normally March-April).

3:8-9 Haman cleverly began his presentation to Ahasuerus by starting with the truth (There is one ethnic group, scattered throughout the peoples) and ending with a lie (they do not obey the king's laws). His offer to give the crown 375 tons of silver to pay for an empire-wide extermination may have encouraged Ahasuerus, whose coffers had been depleted by the war with the Greeks. The magnitude of the gift is apparent if one uses Herotodus's estimation of the income of the Persian king; such a gift from Haman would represent over half of the annual income of the Persian Empire. Yet it appears that the king may have refused the offer (v. 11), although both Mordecai and Esther assumed the king accepted it (4:7; 7:4).

3:12-15 The instructions were clear: all young and old, women and children were to be destroyed, killed, and annihilated (v. 13). The terrible decree was to be executed 11 months later, on the thirteenth day of Adar. Critics charge that such a decree that would be implemented almost a year later is ludicrous, since people would have had ample time to flee. But the Jews were dispossessed exiles whose lives depended on the king's good pleasure. Had they picked up to flee, undoubtedly the genocide would have been triggered early, for their fleeing would have been seen as an attempt to evade the king's decree.

The picture of Haman and the king drinking and congratulating themselves on their solution to the problem of the Jews contrasts with the disposition of the city. The impression is that the people in Susa were not in favor of the decree nor did they share Haman's rabid anti-Semitism.

4:1-3 Mordecai's response to the king's edict was typical for his culture (see notes at Ezr 9:3; Neh 9:1). All who saw him recognized his grief, especially since he cried loudly and bitterly (lit "he cried out a great cry"). The term "to cry out" (Hb za'aq) is often used in the OT to describe a heartbroken howl over injustice (Gn 18:20), personal tragedy (2Sm 13:19), or national tragedy (Ezk 9:8). While Mordecai would not get the king's attention, he did get Esther's (Est 4:4), which was crucial. A law prohibiting a mourner to come into the palace is not attested in the ancient sources, but in a similar vein, Nehemiah stated that he had "never been sad" in King Artaxerxes' presence before, and when asked about it by Artaxerxes he "was overwhelmed by fear" (Neh 2:1-2). Mordecai was not alone in his grief. The Jewish people in every province wept and lamented and many lay on sackcloth and ashes. In many ways Mordecai epitomizes, or is representative of, the Jewish people.

4:4-7 The phrase was overcome with fear is from a Hebrew verb (chil) often translated as "writhe, tremble," occurring often in the context of childbirth. Here it is used to describe intense emotion, and it could be translated as "writhed in anguish" or "was agitated." The name Hathach possibly means "courier."

4:8-9 The courier was told to explain the decree. Either Esther was illiterate and the decree had to be read to her, or it was written in Persian and had to be translated into Aramaic. Mordecai was certainly aware of the danger he was putting Esther in by telling her to plead . . . personally with the king, but their situation was desperate. It is interesting how he emphasized that the Jews were "her people," the same people he had previously commanded her not to identify with (2:10).

4:10-11 Esther's response to Mordecai through Hathach was to remind him that to come to the king unbidden was certain death. Such a law was understandable in the Persian Empire with its long history of political assassinations (in fact Ahasuerus was murdered in his own bed less than ten years later). The one exception to this rule was if the king allowed an uninvited person to approach him, signified by his extending the gold scepter. Some assume that Esther's statement in verse 11 indicated that her absence from her husband was because she had fallen out of favor with him or that his passion for her had waned. Thus, the king might be less likely to respond to her unexpected presence and request. On the other hand, possibly her purpose was only to tell Mordecai that in the normal routine she did not see the king often, and this request would require her to make an unscheduled—and dangerous—visit.

4:13-14 Mordecai's reply to Esther was direct and to the point. Esther had no safe choices. Appearing unbidden before the king could mean death, but remaining silent, when so many servants and eunuchs knew of her connection to Mordecai the Jew, could likewise result in her death once the genocide was carried out.

Mordecai's statement that help would come from another place if Esther remained quiet is intriguing. The most obvious interpretation is to understand the phrase "another place" (Hb mimmaqom 'acher) as a veiled reference to God, an interpretation supported by the Greek additions to Esther (Alpha Text 5:9), both Aramaic Targums, and Josephus. Others find it more likely that "another place" refers to a human source of deliverance, possibly Mordecai himself or another well-placed Jewish official similar to Nehemiah, who served Ahasuerus's son (Artaxerxes) as cupbearer. Mordecai and Esther would regard liberation and deliverance, whatever the source, as attributable ultimately to God's providential care for His people. This conclusion is supported by Mordecai's famous suggestion that Esther had come to your royal position for such a time as this. As T. Laniak notes, this meant God had a "destiny for Esther. Haven't all of the serendipitous events in the last four years put her in this position for this very moment?" (NIBC).

4:16 Often in times of crisis God's people would fast and pray, seeking God's help and deliverance (Jdg 20:26; 1Kg 21:9; Jr 36:9). Fasting took on an even more prominent role in the postexilic community (Ezr 8:21-23; Neh 1:4; 9:1-2). But this fast was unusually long, highlighting the severity of the threat to the Jewish people. Esther's last comment to Mordecai in this chapter (If I perish, I perish) is not just resigned fatalism. As M. Fox writes, this statement "does not suggest a person seeking an escape route, but one facing and coming to grips with a danger. The statement recognizes the possibility of failure, yet also expresses the hope—though not certainty—of success" (Character, p. 64).

5:1-2 On the third day of the three-day fast, Esther prepared herself for her surprise appearance before the king. She wore not her fasting and mourning clothes, but her royal clothing, possibly as a reminder to her husband that she was indeed the queen of Persia. When she won his approval (Hb cheyn), what could have precipitated her death had instead become her opportunity.

5:3-4 Ahasuerus's offer to Esther, even to half the kingdom, was not to be taken literally; it was an exaggeration meant to emphasize the generosity of the king (cp. Mk 6:23). Considering the breadth of the offer, the answer must have been surprising: an invitation for the king and Haman to come to a banquet (Hb mishteh) that Esther had prepared. Just as the first banquet in the story ended with the downfall of a queen (chap. 1), so this series of banquets would end with the downfall of the king's second in command (chap. 7).

5:4 , 8 Interpreters have speculated endlessly on Esther's motives in inviting Haman. A common suggestion is that Esther was trying to get Ahasuerus jealous and thus create a rift between her husband and Haman (7:7-8). Whatever the motivation, these scenes add to the story and make Haman's catastrophic fall all the more dramatic.

5:9 Haman's rage only got worse when he saw that Mordecai not only did not rise in his presence, but did not even tremble (Hb zua', a verb used only five times in the OT) in his presence. Defying Haman did not even make Mordecai nervous.

5:14 Just as Jezebel once plotted with her husband to kill an innocent man (1Kg 21:7), so now Zeresh, along with Haman's friends, suggested a plan to publicly murder his enemy, Mordecai. Zeresh believed this plan would assuage her husband's murderous rage against his enemy. Haman was pleased with his wife's advice and he had the gallows constructed, believing the next day would be a triumphant moment in his life.

6:1-3 No reason is given for the king's insomnia. Some ancient Jewish writers suggested that Ahasuerus was worried about what Esther was going to ask for the next day at her second banquet. The LXX emphasizes the divine cause of his sleeplessness: "The Lord withdrew (Gk aphistemi) sleep (Gk hupnos) from the king." Apparently the king believed reading the tedious royal journal of daily events might lull him to sleep. Instead, it exposed a royal oversight as mention was made of Mordecai's unrewarded heroism.

6:8-9 Haman did not covet money or power, because he already had both. What he desired was the glory and splendor of royalty, including royal robes and a public parade.

6:10-11 For Haman, events began to spin out of control. The greatest honor Haman could imagine receiving was bestowed on Mordecai the Jew, his enemy whom he had planned to hang that day.

6:12-13 To cover one's head was a sign of mourning (Jr 14:4). While no one had died, Haman was mourning his humiliation. The previous advice of Haman's wife and friends (5:14), who were presumably his advisers (lit "his wise ones," Hb chakamim), had been given as they offered a solution to Haman's problem with Mordecai. But now their counsel was ominous: once a person stumbles before a Jew, there is no hope. Why so? The text does not say.

Some suggest that Haman's advisers were aware of Cyrus's decree (Ezr 1:1-11) that had allowed the exiles to return home and reestablish themselves in Jerusalem. Or maybe the Jews had told their Persian friends about Balaam's oracle that prophesied blessings on the Jews in place of the curses sought by their enemies (Nm 24:1-10) or about how God had intervened for his people against genocidal Egyptian oppressors (Nm 24:8-9). This is how the Aramaic Targums understood it. On "Targums," see note at 1:10-12.

6:14 Haman had no time to react to their counsel because he was rushed to the banquet Esther had prepared. It is significant that this is the fourth mention of Haman "rushing" or "hurrying" in the last two chapters (vv. 10,12,14; 5:5). Previously he was in charge; now he was caught up in the rapid events of the moment.

7:1-10 Up to this point two intertwined conflicts have remained unresolved: the primary conflict, the threat of extinction of the Jews because of Haman's royal edict; and the secondary conflict, the personal struggle between Mordecai and Haman. The national threat is not resolved until chapter 9. This short chapter concludes the confrontation between Haman and Mordecai with poetic justice.

7:2 King Ahasuerus did not literally expect Esther to ask for half the kingdom, but her delayed answer must have convinced him that she had a well-thought-out, significant request.

7:3-4 Esther's request was direct and to the point: spare her life and spare her people. Esther continued with a carefully nuanced assertion: For my people and I have been sold out. She could hardly charge her husband directly ("You sold me out"), but she couched it in an indefinite passive voice ("have been sold out"; Hb nimkarnu). Esther had not told the king she was Jewish, and she did not identify "her people." But as she continued her plea, the king was given a clue: they had been sold out to destruction, death, and extermination, a direct quote from the edict crafted by Haman and authorized by her husband (3:13).

7:5-6 Both Ahasuerus's questions and Esther's reply reflect the intensity of their emotions. The term terrified (Hb niv'at) is the same word used to describe King David's terror when he was confronted by the angel of the Lord with a sword in his hand at Araunah's threshing floor (1Ch 21:30), and to portray Daniel's intense fear when the angel Gabriel approached him (Dn 8:17).

7:7 For the first time in the book of Esther the king had to make crucial decisions without his counselors. Suddenly he was forced to choose between his prime minister and his wife. But if he deposed Haman for threatening his wife and her people, would not Haman counter by revealing that the king himself had approved of the plan? While the king struggled with his decisions in the garden, Haman stayed back with Esther to beg (Hb lebaqqesh) for his life. Before, it was

Esther (v. 3) who had sought ("desire," Hb baqqashah) to be spared, but now the tables were turned.

7:8 If the king was still undecided about Haman's fate as he returned from the garden, his decision was made certain as he caught Haman fawning over the queen. Court documents from the Assyrian period state that a man must not come closer than seven steps to one of the women in the palace (D. J. Clines). The Jewish Targums of Esther (Aram paraphrase of the Hb texts) state that Haman was falling on the couch because the angel Gabriel gave him a shove!

The author of the story skillfully used the concept of "falling" (Hb naphal). Haman was furious at Mordecai because he would not bow down to him (3:1-4). This resulted in the casting (Hb naphal) of the Pur to set the date for the extermination of the Jews (3:7). Then Haman's wife and friends warned him that "since Mordecai is Jewish, and you have begun to fall (Hb naphal) before him, you won't overcome him, because your downfall (Hb naphal) is certain" (6:13). Only hours later Haman was falling (Hb naphal) on Esther's couch. With this final fall his fate was sealed.

7:10 The irony demonstrated in this verse is stated proverbially in Pr 26:27 and Mt 26:52.

8:1-2 All in the same day Haman was forced to honor Mordecai (6:4-11), went to the second banquet and was charged with trying to kill the queen and her people (7:1-8), and was hanged. The theme of reversal continues into chapter 8, as Esther, once threatened by Haman, was awarded his estate, which elevated her uncle Mordecai.

8:3-4 Many commentators have maintained that verse 3 introduces a new scene into the story, but the phrase then Esther addressed the king again need not be understood this way. While Esther was certainly pleased with the king's honoring of Mordecai, the larger issue of the death sentence upon her people had not been addressed. Rather than being annoyed at Esther's breach of royal protocol by falling at his feet, the king extended the gold scepter toward Esther, allowing her to state her request.

8:5-6 Esther prefaced her request with an extended version of the normal deferential statement one would make to a king. The first two phrases were standard (1:19; 5:4; 7:3), but she continued in order to make the king's decision seem like a referendum on his love for her. Esther did not point out the injustice of the decree (which the king had approved), but focused on how it would impact her.

8:7-8 The king's response is ambiguous in the Hebrew Bible. While some commentators think he was positive toward her request, others suggest a tone of exasperation or even irritation. Possibly the Greek (LXX) translation suggests this, as the king reminded her about all he had done for her and added, "What do you yet seek?" (Gk ti eti epizeyteis). Nevertheless, the king gave Esther and Mordecai the opportunity to write a new decree that would counter but not rescind his original order.

8:9 Since the Jewish people were speaking Aramaic, as were many in the Persian Empire, the counter-edict that was written in their own script must have been written in Hebrew.

8:10 The edicts were sealed with the royal signet ring, once worn by Haman in order to destroy the Jews, but now worn by Mordecai to save the Jews.

8:11-12 Just as Haman's edict decreed the destruction of the Jews on the thirteenth of Adar (3:12), the Jews now had the legal right to defend themselves that same day.

8:15-17 Mordecai had once torn his clothes and gone around in "sackcloth and ashes" (4:1); now he wore the royal purple and white. Once the city of Susa was "in confusion" (3:15); now the people shouted and rejoiced. The Jews had once "fasted, wept, and lamented, and . . . lay on sackcloth and ashes" (4:3); now they celebrated with gladness, joy, and honor. While the Jews had once been in fear of the ethnic groups among whom they lived, now some of the ethnic groups were in fear of the Jews. The phrase professed themselves to be Jews is a single word in Hebrew (Hb mityahadim). Found only here in the OT, it is a reflexive verb derived from the proper noun "Jew" (Hb yehudi). Some understand the verb to mean "to become a Jew"—to convert to Judaism; this interpretation is supported by the Greek text (LXX). However, it is more likely that the term means that the people identified themselves with the Jewish people; this meaning may be supported by the Latin Vulgate.

9:6-10 Haman's anti-Semitism, and the resentment of those who lost positions of influence when Mordecai replaced Haman, may explain why the Jews in the fortress of Susa had to kill 500 men. Haman had taken pride in his 10 sons (5:11); now they shared his fate.

9:11-15 The king seemed unconcerned about the death of 500 of his subjects. After asking for a casualty report from the rest of the kingdom, he offered Esther any additional help she needed (v. 12). Apparently the struggle within the royal fortress was not finished because Esther requested an additional day for the Jews to battle their enemies (v. 13). Her request to hang the bodies of Haman's 10 sons seems vindictive, but this was a common practice in the Persian period, especially for those who were convicted of insurrection (Herodotus 3:125). Moreover, the display of Haman's sons on the gallows would serve as a powerful deterrent to any who might contemplate further attacks against the Jewish people. Again, as in verses 10 and 16, the text emphasizes that the Jews were not out to pillage and enrich themselves, but only to defend their lives.

9:16-17 The phrase got rid of is based on the Hebrew verb nuach, meaning, "to rest." The death of 75,000 of those who hated them seems unusually high, but the text itself is not certain. The Greek text (LXX) lists the number killed as 15,000, while the Alpha Text (Gk) has 10,107. Unlike the Jews in Susa, the fourteenth day of Adar was not a day of fighting for the Jews in the provinces. Instead they rested (Hb noach) and proclaimed a holiday.

9:21 Mordecai's letter appears to be commanding a two-day celebration for all Jews, an order that seems to conflict with verses 16-18,31, as well as later Jewish practice. However, he may have intended whatever day was appropriate for their location—the fourteenth in a walled city and the fifteenth in an open village—an interpretation probably supported by verse 27.

9:29-32 The meaning of verse 29 is uncertain. The sense is that both Esther and Mordecai confirmed the authority of the first letter (vv. 20-22), as well as placed their authority on the second letter (vv. 29-32), which, while odd, makes sense of the difficult syntax. Commentators come to differing conclusions about the practices of fasting and lamentation. Some maintain that this authorized certain fasts in the past (Zch 8:19) that were not commanded by the law but had become part of Jewish practice. But it is more likely that it stipulated a commemorative fast modeled on the time when the Jews mourned, fasted, and lamented (Est 4:3) after hearing of Haman's edict. That Esther's command was written into the record (Hb seypher) meant it became a permanent, official requirement for the Jewish people.

10:1-3 The mention of Ahasuerus imposing a tax (Hb mas) throughout the land seems out of place. Some interpreters suggest this may be another example of reversal, as the tax relief given to the empire when Ahasuerus married Esther (2:18) was now made up for with the new tax. More likely this is an echo of Joseph and his role as second in command in Egypt (Gn 41:40). Like Joseph before him, Mordecai the Jew helped a Gentile king bring prosperity to the crown.

The book of Esther ends with a picture of peace and tranquility, with Jewish people "living in harmony and mutual goodwill with the Gentile majority, under Jewish leaders who are respected and admired by the rulers, yet who are openly identified with the Jewish community and unashamed to advance its interests and to speak out in its defense" (J. Levenson, Esther, p. 234).

HCSB Translation young woman, virgin Uses in Esther 4
Uses in the OT 50
Focus Passage Esther 2:2-3,17,19

Betulah designated young woman, for betulah is paired with bachur, which implies choice young man (2Ch 36:17). A betulah was normally unmarried (Lv 21:14) and was expected to be a virgin because Israelite sexual law put a penalty on premarital sex (Dt 22:23-29). Betulah may not have had to entail virginity, for this fact is sometimes added after the word (Gn 24:16). Occasionally betulah must signify virgin (Est 2:2; Ezk 44:22). Tamar probably tore her dress, one worn by virgins, to mark her grief at losing this status (2Sm 13:18-19). Betulah can encompass an engaged woman (Jl 1:8). Harem virgins are still called betulah after spending a night with the king (Est 2:17), and a betulah can be ravished (Is 23:12). Whether betulah is virgin or young woman depends on what Scripture emphasizes. The stress can be on youth and stage in life (Ezk 9:6) or on virginity (Dt 22:19).

Chaphets implies being delighted (Gn 34:19), pleased (Nm 14:8), satisfied (Dt 21:14), or impressed (Ps 147:10). People want (Dt 25:7), like (1Sm 19:1), desire (Hs 6:6), or favor (2Sm 20:11) others or things. They choose (Pr 21:1), prefer (Jb 13:3), or intend (Jdg 13:23). Chaphets can take another verb (Is 53:10). Someone finds/takes pleasure (Ezk 18:23) or delights in something (2Sm 22:20). Actions are appropriate (Sg 2:7). Chephets (38x) indicates pleasure (Is 58:13b), will (Is 46:10), care (Jb 21:21), wish (Jb 31:16), want (1Kg 5:8), longing (Ps 107:30), desire (Pr 3:15), or delight (Ec 12:1). Stones are precious (Is 54:12). Chephets, like the root in Arabic, denotes activity or situation (Ec 3:1; 5:8). The name Hephzibah (2Kg 21:1) means “My Delight Is in Her” (Is 62:4). The adjective chaphets (13x), usually translated verbally, similarly involves desiring, wishing, wanting, willing, and delighting (Mc 7:18).

Focus Passage Esther 9:6,10-12,15-16

Harag generally means kill (Gn 4:8) or slay (Is 14:30). God does it (Am 4:10), as do criminals (Ps 10:8). Qatal is a synonym (3x; Ps 139:19). Like tavach (11x; Ex 22:1), harag describes butchering cattle (Is 22:13). Harag portrays slaughtering people (1Kg 18:13). Harag denotes murder (Ex 21:14), although ratsach is the word in the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:13). Harag implies violent killing with nachah "strike down" (2Sm 12:9). Harag connotes put to death (2Sm 4:10) or execute (2Ch 25:3) as causative forms of muth ("die") regularly do. Harag conveys destroying a nation (Gn 20:4). The participle signifies murderer (Jr 4:31) or executioner (Hs 9:13). The passive participle indicates the slain (Is 10:4) and, somewhat figuratively, victims of adulteresses (Pr 7:26).

JOB

Job and His Family

1 There was a man in the country of Uz [a] named Job. [b] He was a man of perfect integrity, [c] who •feared God and turned away from evil. [d] 2 He had seven sons and three daughters. 3 His estate included 7,000 sheep, 3,000 camels, 500 yoke of oxen, 500 female donkeys, and a very large number of servants. Job was the greatest man among all the people of the east.

4 His sons used to take turns having banquets at their homes. They would send an invitation to their three sisters to eat and drink with them. 5 Whenever a round of banqueting was over, Job would send for his children and purify them, rising early in the morning to offer burnt offerings for [A] all of them. For Job thought: Perhaps my children have sinned, having cursed God in their hearts.
This was Job's regular practice.

Satan's First Test of Job 6 One day the sons of God [e] came to present themselves before the LORD*, and Satan* [B] also came with them. 7 The LORD asked Satan, "Where have you come from? "

"From roaming through the earth," [f] Satan answered Him, "and walking around on it."

8 Then the LORD said to Satan, "Have you considered My servant Job? No one else on earth is like him, a man of perfect integrity, who fears God and turns away from evil."

9 Satan answered the LORD, "Does Job fear God for nothing? 10 Haven't You placed a hedge around [g] him, his household, and everything he owns? You have blessed the work of his hands, and his possessions have increased in the land.
11 But stretch out Your hand and strike [h] everything he owns, and he will surely curse You to Your face."

12 "Very well," the LORD told Satan, "everything he owns is in your power.
However, you must not lay a hand on Job himself." So Satan left the LORD's presence.

13 One day when Job's sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in their oldest brother's house, 14 a messenger came to Job and reported: "While the oxen were plowing and the donkeys grazing nearby, 15 the Sabeans [i] swooped down and took them away. They struck down the servants with the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you! "

16 He was still speaking when another messenger came and reported: "A lightning storm [C] struck from heaven. [j] It burned up the sheep and the servants and devoured them, and I alone have escaped to tell you! "

17 That messenger was still speaking when yet another came and reported:

“The Chaldeans formed three bands, made a raid on the camels, and took them away. They struck down the servants with the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you! ”

18 He was still speaking when another messenger came and reported: “Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in their oldest brother’s house. 19 Suddenly a powerful wind swept in from the desert and struck the four corners of the house. It collapsed on the young people so that they died, and I alone have escaped to tell you! ”

20 Then Job stood up, tore [k] his robe, and shaved [l] his head. [m] He fell to the ground and worshiped, 21 saying:

Naked I came from my mother’s womb, [n] and naked I will leave this life. D, [o]
The Lord gives, and the Lord takes away.
Praise the name of •Yahweh . [p]

22 Throughout all this Job did not sin or blame God for anything. E, [q]

Satan’s Second Test of Job

2 One day the sons of God [a] came again to present themselves before the LORD*,* and Satan also came with them to present himself before the LORD*.* [2] The LORD asked Satan, "Where have you come from? "

"From roaming through the earth," Satan answered Him, "and walking around on it."

[3] Then the LORD said to Satan, "Have you considered My servant Job? No one else on earth is like him, a man of perfect integrity, [b] who •fears God and turns away from evil. [c] He still retains his integrity, even though you incited Me against him, to destroy him without just cause."

[4] "Skin for skin! " Satan answered the LORD. "A man will give up everything he owns in exchange for his life. [5] But stretch out Your hand and strike [d] his flesh and bones, and he will surely curse You to Your face."

[6] "Very well," the LORD told Satan, "he is in your power; only spare his life."
[7] So Satan left the LORD's presence and infected Job with terrible boils from the sole of his foot to the top of his head. [e] [8] Then Job took a piece of broken pottery to scrape himself while he sat among the ashes. [f, g]

[9] His wife said to him, "Do you still retain your integrity? Curse God and die! "

[10] "You speak as a foolish woman speaks," he told her. "Should we accept only good from God and not adversity? " Throughout all this Job did not sin in what he said. [A]

Job's Three Friends

[11] Now when Job's three friends — Eliphaz the Temanite, [h] Bildad the Shuhite, [i] and Zophar the Naamathite — heard about all this adversity that had happened to him, each of them came from his home. They met together to go and sympathize with him and comfort [j] him. [12] When they looked from a distance, they could barely recognize him. They wept aloud, [k] and each man tore his robe and threw dust into the air and on his head. [l] [13] Then they sat on the ground with him seven days and nights, [m] but no one spoke a word to him because they saw that his suffering [n] was very intense.

Job's Opening Speech

3 After this, Job began to speak and cursed the day he was born. 2 He said:

3 May the day I was born perish,
and the night when they said,
“A boy is conceived.” [a]
4 If only that day had turned to darkness!
May God above not care about it,
or light shine on it.
5 May darkness and gloom [b] reclaim it,
and a cloud settle over it.
May an eclipse of the sun [A] terrify it.
6 If only darkness had taken that night away!
May it not appear [c] among the days of the year or be listed in the calendar. [B] 7 Yes, may that night be barren;
may no joyful shout [d] be heard in it.
8 Let those who curse certain days cast a spell [e] on it,
those who are skilled in rousing •Leviathan . [f]
9 May its morning stars grow dark.
May it wait for daylight but have none;
may it not see the breaking [C] of dawn.
10 For that night did not shut
the doors of my mother’s womb, and hide sorrow from my eyes.

11 Why was I not stillborn;
why didn’t I die as I came from the womb? [g] 12 Why did the knees receive me,
and why were there breasts for me to nurse? [h] 13 Now I would certainly be lying down in peace;
I would be asleep. [i]
Then I would be at rest [j]
14 with the kings and counselors [k] of the earth, who rebuilt ruined cities for themselves, 15 or with princes who had gold,
who filled their houses [l] with silver.

16 Or why was I not hidden like a miscarried child, [m] like infants who never see daylight?
17 There the wicked [n] cease to make trouble,
and there the weary find rest.
18 The captives are completely at ease; [o]
they do not hear the voice of their oppressor. [p] 19 Both small and great are there, and the slave is set free from his master. [q]

20 Why is light given to one burdened with grief, and life to those whose existence is bitter, [r] 21 who wait for death, [s] but it does not come,
and search for it more than for hidden treasure, 22 who are filled with much joy and are glad when they reach the grave? [t] 23 Why is life given to a man whose path is hidden, [u] whom God has hedged in?
24 I sigh when food [v] is put before me, D and my groans pour out like water. [w] 25 For the thing I feared has overtaken me, and what I dreaded has happened to me. [x] 26 I cannot relax or be still;
I have no rest, [y] for trouble comes.

FIRST SERIES OF SPEECHES

Eliphaz Speaks

4 Then Eliphaz the Temanite replied:

2 Should anyone try to speak with you when you are exhausted?
Yet who can keep from speaking?
3 Indeed, you have instructed many and have strengthened [a] weak hands.
4 Your words have steadied the one who was stumbling and braced the knees that were buckling. [b] 5 But now that this has happened to you,
you have become exhausted.
It strikes [c] you, and you are dismayed.
6 Isn't your piety your confidence, and the integrity of your life [A] your hope? [d]
7 Consider: who has perished when he was innocent?
Where have the honest been destroyed? [e]
8 In my experience, those who plow injustice and those who sow trouble [f] reap the same. [g] 9 They perish at a single blast [h] from God and come to an end by the breath of His nostrils. [i] 10 The lion may roar and the fierce lion [j] growl, but the fangs of young lions are broken. [k] 11 The strong lion dies if it catches no prey, and the cubs of the lioness are scattered. [l]

12 A word was brought to me in secret;
my ears caught a whisper of it. [m] 13 Among unsettling thoughts from visions in the night, [n] when deep sleep [o] descends on men, 14 fear and trembling came over me [p]
and made all my bones shake.
15 A wind [B] passed by me,
and I shuddered with fear. [C] 16 A figure stood there, but I could not recognize its appearance;
a form loomed before my eyes.
I heard a quiet voice:

17 “Can a person be more righteous than God, or a man more pure than his Maker? ” [q] 18 If God puts no trust in His servants and He charges His angels with foolishness, [D, r] 19 how much more those who dwell in clay houses, [s] whose foundation is in the dust, who are crushed like a moth!
20 They are smashed to pieces from dawn to dusk;
they perish forever while no one notices. [t]
21 Are their tent cords not pulled up?
They die without wisdom. [u]

5 Call out if you please. Will anyone answer you?
Which of the holy ones [a] will you turn to?
2 For anger kills a fool,
and jealousy slays the gullible. [b] 3 I have seen a fool taking root,
but I immediately pronounced a curse on his home.
4 His children are far from safety.
They are crushed at the city •gate , [c]
with no one to rescue them.
5 The hungry consume his harvest, even taking it out of the thorns. [A]
The thirsty [d] pant for his children's wealth.
6 For distress does not grow out of the soil,
and trouble does not sprout from the ground.
7 But mankind is born for trouble [e]
as surely as sparks fly upward.

8 However, if I were you, I would appeal to God and would present my case to Him. [f] 9 He does great [g] and unsearchable things, wonders without number. [h]
10 He gives rain to the earth and sends water to the fields. [i] 11 He sets the lowly on high,
and mourners are lifted to safety. [j] 12 He frustrates the schemes of the crafty
so that they [B] achieve no success.
13 He traps the wise in their craftiness
so that the plans of the deceptive are quickly brought to an end. [k] 14 They encounter darkness by day, and they grope at noon
as if it were night. [l]
15 He saves the needy from their sharp words [C, m] and from the clutches of the powerful.
16 So the poor have hope,

and injustice shuts its mouth. [n] 17 See how happy the man is God corrects;
so do not reject the discipline of the •Almighty .
18 For He crushes but also binds up;
He strikes, but His hands also heal. [o]
19 He will rescue you from six calamities;
no harm will touch you in seven.
20 In famine He will redeem you from death,
and in battle, from the power of the sword. [p]
21 You will be safe from slander [D] and not fear destruction when it comes. [q] 22 You will laugh at destruction and hunger and not fear the animals of the earth.
23 For you will have a covenant with the stones of the field, and the wild animals will be at peace with you. [r] 24 You will know that your tent is secure, [s] and nothing will be missing when you inspect your home.
25 You will also know that your offspring will be many and your descendants like the grass of the earth.
26 You will approach the grave [t] in full vigor, [u]
as a stack of sheaves is gathered in its season.

27 We have investigated this, and it is true!
Hear it and understand it for yourself.

Job's Reply to Eliphaz

6 Then Job answered:

2 If only my grief could be weighed and my devastation [a] placed with it in the scales. [b] 3 For then it would outweigh the sand of the seas!
That is why my words are rash.
4 Surely the arrows of the •Almighty have pierced [A] me;
my spirit drinks their poison.
God's terrors are arrayed against me. [c] 5 Does a wild donkey bray over fresh grass or an ox low over its fodder?
6 Is bland food eaten without salt?
Is there flavor in an egg white? [B]
7 I refuse to touch them;
they are like contaminated food. [d]

8 If only my request would be granted and God would provide what I hope for:
9 that He would decide to crush me,
to unleash His power and cut me off!
10 It would still bring me comfort, and I would leap for joy in unrelenting pain that I have not denied [C] the words of the Holy One. [e]

11 What strength do I have that I should continue to hope?
What is my future, that I should be patient?
12 Is my strength that of stone,
or my flesh made of bronze?
13 Since I cannot help myself,
the hope for success has been banished from me.

14 A despairing man should receive loyalty from his friends, [D, f]
even if he abandons the •fear of the Almighty.
15 My brothers are as treacherous as a •wadi ,
as seasonal streams that overflow 16 and become darkened [E] because of ice, and the snow melts into them.
17 The wadis evaporate in warm weather;
they disappear from their channels in hot weather.

18 Caravans turn away from their routes, go up into the desert, and perish.
19 The caravans of Tema look for these streams.
The traveling merchants of Sheba hope for them.
20 They are ashamed because they had been confident of finding water.
When they arrive there, they are frustrated. [g]
21 So this is what you have now become to me. [h]
When you see something dreadful, you are afraid.
22 Have I ever said: “Give me something” or “Pay a bribe for me from your wealth” 23 or “Deliver me from the enemy’s power” or “Redeem me from the grasp of the ruthless”?

24 Teach me, and I will be silent.
Help me understand what I did wrong.
25 How painful honest words can be!
But what does your rebuke prove?
26 Do you think that you can disprove my words or that a despairing man’s words are mere wind? [i] 27 No doubt you would cast lots for a fatherless child and negotiate a price to sell your friend. [j]

28 But now, please look at me;
would I lie to your face? [k]
29 Reconsider; don’t be unjust.
Reconsider; my righteousness [l] is still the issue.
30 Is there injustice on my tongue or can my palate not taste disaster? [m]

7 Isn’t mankind consigned to forced labor [a] on earth?
Are not his days like those of a hired hand?
2 Like a slave he longs for shade;
like a hired man he waits for his pay.
3 So I have been made to inherit months of futility, and troubled nights have been assigned to me. [b] 4 When I lie down I think:
When will I get up?
But the evening drags on endlessly,
and I toss and turn until dawn.
5 My flesh is clothed with maggots and encrusted with dirt. [A]
My skin forms scabs [B] and then oozes. [c]

6 My days pass more swiftly than a weaver’s shuttle;
they come to an end without hope. [d]
7 Remember that my life is but a breath.
My eye will never again see anything good. [e]
8 The eye of anyone who looks on me will no longer see me.
Your eyes will look for me, but I will be gone. [f] 9 As a cloud fades away and vanishes, so the one who goes down to •Sheol [g] will never rise again.
10 He will never return to his house;
his hometown will no longer remember [C] him. [h]

11 Therefore I will not restrain my mouth.
I will speak in the anguish of my spirit;
I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.
12 Am I the sea [D, i] or a sea monster, [j]
that You keep me under guard?
13 When I say: My bed will comfort me,
and my couch will ease my complaint, 14 then You frighten me with dreams,
and terrify me with visions, [k] 15 so that I prefer strangling [E] — death rather than life in this body. [F, l] 16 I give up! I will not live forever.

Leave me alone, [m] for my days are a breath. [G]

17 What is man, that You think so highly of him and pay so much attention to him? [n] 18 You inspect him every morning, and put him to the test every moment. [o] 19 Will You ever look away from me, or leave me alone long enough to swallow? [H] 20 If I have sinned, what have I done to You, Watcher of mankind?
Why have You made me Your target, [p]
so that I have become a burden to You? [q] 21 Why not forgive my sin and pardon my transgression? [r]
For soon I will lie down in the grave. [s]
You will eagerly seek me, but I will be gone. [t]

Bildad Speaks

8 Then Bildad the Shuhite replied:

2 How long will you go on saying these things?
Your words [a] are a blast of wind. [b]
3 Does God pervert justice? [c]
Does the •Almighty pervert what is right? [d]
4 Since your children sinned against Him,
He gave them over to their rebellion.
5 But if you earnestly seek [e] God and ask the Almighty for mercy, [f] 6 if you are pure and upright, then He will move even now on your behalf and restore the home where your righteousness dwells. [g] 7 Then, even if your beginnings were modest, your final days will be full of prosperity. [h]

8 For ask the previous generation, and pay attention to what their fathers discovered, [i] 9 since we were born only yesterday and know nothing.
Our days on earth are but a shadow. [j] 10 Will they not teach you and tell you and speak from their understanding?
11 Does papyrus grow where there is no marsh?
Do reeds flourish without water?
12 While still uncut shoots,
they would dry up quicker than any other plant.
13 Such is the destiny [A] of all who forget God;
the hope of the godless [k] will perish.
14 His source of confidence is fragile; [B]
what he trusts in is a spider's web. [l]
15 He leans on his web, but it doesn't stand firm.
He grabs it, but it does not hold up.
16 He is a well-watered plant in the sunshine;
his shoots spread out over his garden.
17 His roots are intertwined around a pile of rocks.
He looks for a home among the stones.
18 If he is uprooted [C] from his place,

it will deny knowing him, saying, “I never saw you.” [m] 19 Surely this is the joy of his way of life;
yet others will sprout from the dust.
20 Look, God does not reject a person of integrity, and He will not support evildoers. [n] 21 He will yet fill your mouth with laughter and your lips with a shout of joy. [o] 22 Your enemies will be clothed with shame; [p]
the tent [q] of the wicked will exist no longer.

Job’s Reply to Bildad

9 Then Job answered:

2 Yes, I know what you've said is true, but how can a person be justified before God? [a] 3 If one wanted to take [b] Him to court, he could not answer God [A] once in a thousand times. [c]
4 God is wise [d] and all-powerful.
Who has opposed Him and come out unharmed?
5 He removes mountains without their knowledge, overturning them in His anger. [e] 6 He shakes the earth from its place
so that its pillars tremble.
7 He commands the sun not to shine and seals off the stars. [f] 8 He alone stretches out the heavens [g]
and treads on the waves of the sea. [B] 9 He makes the stars: the Bear, [C] Orion, the Pleiades, [h] and the constellations [D] of the southern sky.
10 He does great and unsearchable things, wonders without number. [i] 11 If He passes by me, I wouldn't see Him; [j]
if He goes right by, I wouldn't recognize Him.
12 If He snatches something, who can stop [E] Him?
Who can ask Him, "What are You doing?" [k]
13 God does not hold back His anger;
•Rahab 's [l] assistants cringe in fear beneath Him!

14 How then can I answer Him or choose my arguments against Him?
15 Even if I were in the right, I could not answer.
I could only beg my Judge for mercy. [m]
16 If I summoned Him and He answered me,
I do not believe He would pay attention to what I said.
17 He batters me with a whirlwind [n]
and multiplies my wounds without cause.
18 He doesn't let me catch my breath
but soaks me with bitter experiences.

19 If it is a matter of strength, look, He is the Mighty One! [o]
If it is a matter of justice, who can summon [p] Him? [q]
20 Even if I were in the right, my own mouth would condemn me; [r] if I were blameless, my mouth would declare me •guilty .

21 Though I am blameless,
I no longer care about myself;
I renounce my life. [s]
22 It is all the same. Therefore I say,
"He destroys both the blameless and the wicked." [t]
23 When disaster brings sudden death,
He mocks the despair of the innocent.
24 The earth [F] is handed over to the wicked;
He blindfolds [G] its judges. [u]
If it isn't He, then who is it?

25 My days fly by faster than a runner; [v, w]
they flee without seeing any good. [x] 26 They sweep by like boats made of papyrus, like an eagle swooping down on its prey. [y] 27 If I said, "I will forget my complaint, change my expression, and smile," 28 I would still live in terror of all my pains. [z]
I know You will not acquit me. [a] 29 Since I will be found guilty, [b]
why should I labor in vain?
30 If I wash myself with snow,
and cleanse my hands with lye, 31 then You dip me in a pit of mud,
and my own clothes despise me!

32 For He is not a man like me, that I can answer Him, [c] that we can take each other to court.
33 There is no one to judge between us,
to lay his hand on both of us.
34 Let Him take His rod away from me so His terror will no longer frighten me. [d] 35 Then I would speak and not fear Him.

But that is not the case; I am on my own.

10 I am disgusted with my life. [a]
I will express my complaint and speak in the bitterness of my soul.
2 I will say to God:
“Do not declare me •guilty !
Let me know why You prosecute me.
3 Is it good for You to oppress, to reject the work of Your hands,
and favor [A] the plans of the wicked?
4 Do You have eyes of flesh, or do You see as a human sees?
5 Are Your days like those of a human,
or Your years like those of a man, [b] 6 that You look for my wrongdoing [c]
and search for my sin,
7 even though You know that I am not wicked and that there is no one who can deliver from Your hand?

8 “Your hands shaped me and formed me.
Will You now turn and destroy me?
9 Please remember that You formed me like clay.
Will You now return me to dust? [d] 10 Did You not pour me out like milk and curdle me like cheese?
11 You clothed me with skin and flesh,
and wove me together with bones and tendons.
12 You gave me life and faithful love,
and Your care has guarded my life.

13 “Yet You concealed these thoughts in Your heart;
I know that this was Your hidden plan: [B]
14 if I sin, You would notice, [C] and would not acquit me of my wrongdoing. [e] 15 If I am wicked, woe to me!
And even if I am righteous, I cannot lift up my head.
I am filled with shame and aware of my affliction. [f]

16 If I am proud, [D] You hunt me like a lion and again display Your miraculous power against me. [g] 17 You produce new witnesses [E] against me and multiply Your anger toward me.
Hardships assault me, wave after wave. [F]

18 "Why did You bring me out of the womb? [h]
I should have died and never been seen.
19 I wish [G] I had never existed but had been carried from the womb to the grave. [i] 20 Are my days not few? Stop it! [j]
Leave me alone, so that I can smile a little 21 before I go to a land of darkness and gloom, [k] never to return.
22 It is a land of blackness like the deepest darkness, gloomy and chaotic,
where even the light is like [H] the darkness."

Zophar Speaks

11 Then Zophar the Naamathite replied:

2 Should this stream of words [a] go unanswered and such a talker [A] be acquitted?
3 Should your babbling put others to silence,
so that you can keep on ridiculing with no one to humiliate you?
4 You have said, “My teaching [b] is sound, and I am pure in Your sight.”
5 But if only God would speak and declare His case [B] against you, 6 He would show you the secrets of wisdom, [c]
for true wisdom has two sides.
Know then that God has chosen to overlook some of your sin. [d]

7 Can you fathom the depths of God or discover the limits of the •Almighty ? [e]
8 They are higher than the heavens — what can you do?
They are deeper than •Sheol — what can you know? [f] 9 Their measure is longer than the earth and wider than the sea.

10 If He passes by and throws someone in prison or convenes a court, who can stop Him? [g] 11 Surely He knows which people are worthless.
If He sees iniquity, will He not take note of it? [h]
12 But a stupid man will gain understanding as soon as a wild donkey is born a man!

13 As for you, if you redirect your heart and lift up your hands to Him in prayer — 14 if there is iniquity in your hand, remove it, and don’t allow injustice to dwell in your tents —
15 then you will hold your head high, free from fault.
You will be firmly established and unafraid. [i] 16 For you will forget your suffering, recalling it only as waters that have flowed by.
17 Your life will be brighter than noonday;
its darkness [j] will be like the morning. [k]

18 You will be confident, because there is hope. [l]
You will look carefully about and lie down in safety. [m]

19 You will lie down without fear, and many will seek your favor. [n]
20 But the sight of the wicked [o] will fail.
Their way of escape will be cut off,
and their only hope is their last breath. [p]

Job’s Reply to Zophar

12 Then Job answered:

2 No doubt you are the people,
and wisdom will die with you!
3 But I also have a mind;
I am not inferior to you.
Who doesn’t know the things you are talking about? [A, a]

4 I am a laughingstock to my [B] friends, by calling on God, who answers me. [C]
The righteous and upright man is a laughingstock. [b]
5 The one who is at ease [c] holds calamity in contempt and thinks it is prepared for those whose feet are slipping.
6 The tents of robbers are safe, [d]
and those who provoke God are secure;
God’s power provides this. [D, e]

7 But ask the animals, and they will instruct you;
ask the birds of the sky, and they will tell you. [f]
8 Or speak to the earth, and it will instruct you;
let the fish of the sea inform you.
9 Which of all these does not know that the hand of the LORD has done this? [g] 10 The life of every living thing is in His hand, as well as the breath of all mankind. [h] 11 Doesn’t the ear test words
as the palate tastes food?
12 Wisdom is found with the elderly, and understanding comes with long life. [i]

13 Wisdom and strength belong to God; counsel and understanding are His. [j] 14 Whatever He tears down cannot be rebuilt;
whoever He imprisons cannot be released. [k] 15 When He withholds the waters, everything dries up, and when He releases them, they destroy the land. [l] 16 True wisdom and power belong to Him.
The deceived and the deceiver are His.
17 He leads counselors away barefoot and makes judges go mad. [m] 18 He releases the bonds [n] put on by kings [o]

and fastens a belt around their waists.
19 He leads priests away barefoot and overthrows established leaders. [p] 20 He deprives trusted advisers of speech and takes away the elders' good judgment.
21 He pours out contempt on nobles and disarms [E] the strong.
22 He reveals mysteries from the darkness and brings the deepest darkness into the light. [q]
23 He makes nations great, then destroys them;
He enlarges nations, [r] then leads them away.
24 He deprives the world's leaders of reason,
and makes them wander in a trackless wasteland. [s]
25 They grope around in darkness without light;
He makes them stagger like drunken men. [t]

13 Look, my eyes have seen all this;
my ears [a] have heard and understood it.
2 Everything you know, I also know;
I am not inferior to you. [b]
3 Yet I prefer to speak to the •Almighty and argue my case before God. [c] 4 But you coat the truth with lies;
you are all worthless doctors. [d] 5 If only you would shut up and let that be your wisdom!

6 Hear now my argument, and listen to my defense. [A] 7 Would you testify unjustly on God's behalf or speak deceitfully for Him?
8 Would you show partiality [e] to Him or argue the case in His defense?
9 Would it go well if He examined you?
Could you deceive Him as you would deceive a man? [f]
10 Surely He would rebuke you if you secretly showed partiality.
11 Would God's majesty not terrify you? [g]
Would His dread not fall on you?
12 Your memorable sayings are proverbs of ash; [h]
your defenses are made of clay.

13 Be quiet, [B] and I will speak.
Let whatever comes happen to me.
14 Why do I put myself at risk [C]
and take my life in my own hands?
15 Even if He kills me, I will hope in Him. [i]
I will still defend [j] my ways before Him.
16 Yes, this will result in my deliverance,
for no godless person [k] can appear before Him.
17 Pay close attention to my words;
let my declaration ring in your ears.
18 Now then, I have prepared my case; [l]

I know that I am right.
19 Can anyone indict me?
If so, I will be silent and die.

20 Only grant these two things to me, God,
so that I will not have to hide from Your presence:
21 remove Your hand from me,
and do not let Your terror frighten me. [m] 22 Then call, and I will answer, [n] or I will speak, and You can respond to me.
23 How many iniquities [o] and sins have I committed? D
Reveal to me my transgression and sin.
24 Why do You hide Your face and consider me Your enemy? [p] 25 Will You frighten a wind-driven leaf?
Will You chase after dry straw?
26 For You record bitter accusations against me
and make me inherit the iniquities of my youth.
27 You put my feet in the stocks and stand watch over all my paths, setting a limit for the soles [E] of my feet.

28 Man wears out like something rotten,
like a moth-eaten garment. [q]

14 Man born of woman is short of days and full of trouble. [a] 2 He blossoms like a flower, then withers; [b]
he flees like a shadow and does not last.
3 Do You really take notice of one like this?
Will You bring me into judgment against You? [c, d]
4 Who can produce something pure from what is impure?
No one!
5 Since man's days are determined and the number of his months depends on You, and since You have set [A] limits he cannot pass, [e] 6 look away from him and let him rest
so that he can enjoy his day like a hired hand. [f]

7 There is hope for a tree:
If it is cut down, it will sprout again,
and its shoots will not die.
8 If its roots grow old in the ground and its stump starts to die in the soil, 9 the smell of water makes it thrive and produce twigs like a sapling. [g] 10 But a man dies and fades away;
he breathes his last — where is he?
11 As water disappears from the sea and a river becomes parched and dry, 12 so man lies down never to rise again.
They will not wake up until the heavens are no more; [h]
they will not stir from their sleep.

13 If only You would hide me in •Sheol [i] and conceal me until Your anger [j] passes.
If only You would appoint a time for me
and then remember me.
14 When a man dies, will he come back to life?
If so, I would wait [k] all the days of my struggle [l]
until my relief comes.
15 You would call, and I would answer You.

You would long for the work of Your hands. [m] 16 For then You would count my steps [n]
but would not take note [o] of my sin.
17 My rebellion would be sealed up in a bag,
and You would cover over my iniquity.

18 But as a mountain collapses and crumbles and a rock is dislodged from its place, 19 as water wears away stones and torrents wash away the soil from the land, so You destroy a man’s hope. [p]
20 You completely overpower him, and he passes on;
You change his appearance and send him away.
21 If his sons receive honor, he does not know it;
if they become insignificant, he is unaware of it. [q]
22 He feels only the pain of his own body and mourns only for himself.

SECOND SERIES OF SPEECHES

Eliphaz Speaks

15 Then Eliphaz the Temanite replied:

2 Does a wise man answer with empty [A] counsel [a] or fill himself [B] with the hot east wind?
3 Should he argue [b] with useless talk or with words that serve no good purpose?
4 But you even undermine the •fear of God and hinder meditation before Him.
5 Your iniquity [c] teaches you what to say,
and you choose the language of the crafty.
6 Your own mouth condemns you, not I;
your own lips testify against you. [d]

7 Were you the first person ever born, or were you brought forth before the hills? [e] 8 Do you listen in on the council of God, or have a monopoly on wisdom? [f]
9 What do you know that we don't?
What do you understand that is not clear to us?
10 Both the gray-haired and the elderly are with us,
men older than your father.
11 Are God's consolations not enough for you,
even the words that deal gently with you?
12 Why has your heart misled you,
and why do your eyes flash 13 as you turn your anger [C] against God and allow such words to leave your mouth?

14 What is man, that he should be pure, [g] or one born of woman, that he should be righteous?
15 If God puts no trust in His holy ones [h] and the heavens are not pure in His sight, [i] 16 how much less one who is revolting and corrupt, [j] who drinks injustice [k] like water?

17 Listen to me and I will inform you.
I will describe what I have seen, 18 what was declared by wise men and was not suppressed by their ancestors, [l]

19 the land was given to them alone
when no foreigner passed among them.
20 A wicked man writhes in pain all his days;
only a few [D] years are reserved for the ruthless.
21 Dreadful sounds fill his ears;
when he is at peace, a robber attacks him.
22 He doesn't believe he will return from darkness;
he is destined for the sword. [m]
23 He wanders about for food, saying, "Where is it? "
He knows the day of darkness is at hand.
24 Trouble [n] and distress terrify him, overwhelming him like a king prepared for battle.
25 For he has stretched out his hand [o] against God and has arrogantly opposed the •Almighty .
26 He rushes headlong at Him with his thick, studded shields.
27 Though his face is covered with fat [E]
and his waistline bulges with it, 28 he will dwell in ruined cities,
in abandoned houses destined to become piles of rubble. [p]
29 He will no longer be rich; his wealth will not endure.
His possessions [q] will not increase in the land.
30 He will not escape from the darkness;
flames will wither his shoots,
and by the breath of God's mouth, he will depart. [r] 31 Let him not put trust in worthless things, being led astray, for what he gets in exchange will prove worthless.
32 It will be accomplished before his time,
and his branch will not flourish.
33 He will be like a vine that drops its unripe grapes [s] and like an olive tree that sheds its blossoms.
34 For the company of the godless [t] will have no children, and fire will consume the tents of those who offer bribes.
35 They conceive trouble [u] and give birth to evil;
their womb [v] prepares deception. [w]

Job's Reply to Eliphaz

16 Then Job answered:

2 I have heard many things like these.
You are all miserable comforters. [a]
3 Is there no end to your empty [A, b] words?
What provokes you that you continue testifying?
4 If you were in my place I could also talk like you.
I could string words together against you
and shake my head at you.
5 Instead, I would encourage you with my mouth,
and the consolation from my lips would bring relief. [c]

6 Even if I speak, my suffering is not relieved, and if I hold back, what have I lost?
7 Surely He [B] has now exhausted me.
You have devastated my entire family.
8 You have shriveled me up [C] — it has become a witness;
My frailty rises up against me and testifies to my face.
9 His anger tears at me, and He harasses [d] me.
He gnashes His teeth at me.
My enemy pierces me with His eyes.
10 They open their mouths against me
and strike my cheeks with contempt; [e]
they join themselves together against me.
11 God hands me over to unjust men; [f]
He throws me into the hands of the wicked.
12 I was at ease, but He shattered me;
He seized me by the scruff of the neck and smashed me to pieces.
He set me up as His target; [g]
13 His archers [D] surround me.
He pierces my kidneys without mercy and pours my bile on the ground.
14 He breaks through my defenses again and again; [E]
He charges at me like a warrior. [h]

15 I have sewn •sackcloth over my skin;
I have buried my strength [F] in the dust. [i] 16 My face has grown red with weeping, and darkness [j] covers my eyes, 17 although my hands are free from violence [k]

and my prayer is pure.

18 Earth, do not cover my blood;
may my cry for help find no resting place. [l] 19 Even now my witness is in heaven, and my advocate is in the heights! [m] 20 My friends scoff at me as I weep before God.
21 I wish that someone might arbitrate between a man and God [n]
just as a •man pleads for his friend.
22 For only a few years will pass before I go the way of no return.

17 My spirit is broken.
My days are extinguished.
A graveyard [a] awaits me.
2 Surely mockers surround [A] me and my eyes must gaze at their rebellion. [b]

3 Make arrangements! Put up security for me. [B, c]
Who else will be my sponsor? [C]
4 You have closed their minds to understanding, therefore You will not honor them.
5 If a man informs on his friends for a price,
the eyes of his children will fail.

6 He has made me an object of scorn to the people;
I have become a man people spit at. [D, d]
7 My eyes have grown dim from grief, and my whole body has become but a shadow.
8 The upright are appalled [e] at this,
and the innocent are roused against the godless.
9 Yet the righteous person will hold to his way,
and the one whose hands are •clean [f] will grow stronger.
10 But come back and try again, all of you. [g]
I will not find a wise man among you.

11 My days have slipped by;
my plans have been ruined,
even the things dear to my heart.
12 They turned night into day and made light seem near in the face of darkness. [h] 13 If I await •Sheol as my home, spread out my bed in darkness,
14 and say to corruption: You are my father, and to the maggot: My mother or my sister, [i] 15 where then is my hope? [j]
Who can see any hope for me?
16 Will it go down to the gates of Sheol, [k] or will we descend together to the dust?

Bildad Speaks

18 Then Bildad the Shuhite [a] replied:

2 How long until you stop talking?
Show some sense, and then we can talk.
3 Why are we regarded as cattle,
as stupid in your sight?
4 You who tear yourself in anger [A] — should the earth be abandoned on your account, or a rock be removed from its place?

5 Yes, the light [b] of the wicked [c] is extinguished;
the flame of his fire does not glow.
6 The light in his tent grows dark, [d]
and the lamp beside him is put out.
7 His powerful stride is shortened, and his own schemes trip him up. [e]
8 For his own feet lead him into a net, and he strays into its mesh.
9 A trap catches him by the heel;
a noose seizes him.
10 A rope lies hidden for him on the ground,
and a snare waits for him along the path.
11 Terrors frighten him on every side [f]
and harass him at every step.
12 His strength is depleted;
disaster lies ready for him to stumble. [B] 13 Parts of his skin are eaten away;
death's firstborn consumes his limbs.
14 He is ripped from the security of his tent and marched away to the king of terrors.
15 Nothing he owned remains in his tent.
Burning sulfur [g] is scattered over his home.
16 His roots below dry up,
and his branches above wither away. [h] 17 All memory [i] of him perishes from the earth;
he has no name anywhere. [C] 18 He is driven from light to darkness and chased from the inhabited world.

19 He has no children or descendants among his people, no survivor where he used to live. [j] 20 Those in the west are appalled [k] at his fate, while those in the east tremble in horror.
21 Indeed, such is the dwelling of the unjust man, and this is the place of the one who does not know God. [l]

Job’s Reply to Bildad

19 Then Job answered:

2 How long will you torment me
and crush me with words?
3 You have humiliated me ten times now,
and you mistreat [A] me without shame. [a] 4 Even if it is true that I have sinned, my mistake concerns only [B] me.
5 If you really want to appear superior [b] to me
and would use my disgrace as evidence against me, 6 then understand that it is God who has wronged me and caught me in His net. [c]

7 I cry out: “Violence!” but get no response; [d]
I call for help, but there is no justice.
8 He has blocked [e] my way so that I cannot pass through;
He has veiled my paths with darkness. [f]
9 He has stripped me of my honor and removed the crown from my head.
10 He tears me down on every side so that I am ruined. [C]
He uproots my hope like a tree. [g] 11 His anger [h] burns against me, and He regards me as one of His enemies. [i] 12 His troops advance together; they construct a ramp [D] against me
and camp [j] around my tent.

13 He has removed my brothers from me;
my acquaintances have abandoned me. [k] 14 My relatives stop coming by,
and my close friends have forgotten me.
15 My house guests [E] and female servants regard me as a stranger;
I am a foreigner in their sight. [l]
16 I call for my servant, but he does not answer, even if I beg him with my own mouth.
17 My breath is offensive to my wife, and my own family [F] finds me repulsive.
18 Even young boys scorn me.

When I stand up, they mock me. [m]
19 All of my best friends [G] despise me, [n]
and those I love have turned against me. [o]
20 My skin and my flesh cling to my bones;
I have escaped by the skin of my teeth.

21 Have mercy on me, my friends, [p] have mercy,
for God's hand [q] has struck me. [r]
22 Why do you persecute me as God does?
Will you never get enough of my flesh?

23 I wish that my words were written down,
that they were recorded on a scroll 24 or were inscribed in stone forever
by an iron stylus and lead!
25 But I know my living Redeemer, [H, s] and He will stand on the dust [I] at last. [J, t] 26 Even after my skin has been destroyed, [K]
yet I will see God in [L] my flesh. [u] 27 I will see Him myself;
my eyes will look at Him, and not as a stranger. [M]
My heart longs [N] within me. [v]

28 If you say, "How will we pursue him, since the root of the problem lies with him? " [w] 29 then be afraid of the sword, because wrath brings punishment by the sword, [x]
so that you may know there is a judgment.

Zophar Speaks

20 Then Zophar the Naamathite [a] replied:

2 This is why my unsettling thoughts compel me to answer, because I am upset! [A] 3 I have heard a rebuke that insults me, and my understanding [B] makes me reply. [b]

4 Don’t you know that ever since antiquity, from the time man was placed on earth,
5 the joy of the wicked has been brief and the happiness of the godless has lasted only a moment? [c] 6 Though his arrogance reaches heaven, and his head touches the clouds, [d]
7 he will vanish forever like his own dung.
Those who know [C] him will ask, “Where is he? ” [e]
8 He will fly away like a dream and never be found;
he will be chased away like a vision in the night. [f] 9 The eye that saw him will see him no more, [g]
and his household will no longer see him. [h] 10 His children will beg from [D] the poor, for his own hands must give back his wealth.
11 His bones may be full of youthful vigor,
but will lie down with him in the grave. [i]

12 Though evil tastes sweet in his mouth and he conceals it under his tongue, 13 though he cherishes it and will not let it go but keeps it in his mouth, [j] 14 yet the food in his stomach turns into cobras’ venom inside him.
15 He swallows wealth but must vomit it up;
God will force it from his stomach.
16 He will suck the poison of cobras;
a viper’s fangs [E] will kill him. [k] 17 He will not enjoy the streams, the rivers flowing with honey and cream. [l] 18 He must return the fruit of his labor without consuming it;
he doesn’t enjoy the profits from his trading.

19 For he oppressed and abandoned the poor;
he seized a house he did not build. [m]

20 Because his appetite is never satisfied, [F] he does not let anything he desires escape.
21 Nothing is left for him to consume; [n]
therefore, his prosperity will not last.
22 At the height of his success [G] distress will come to him; [o]
the full weight of misery [p] will crush him.
23 When he fills his stomach,
God will send His burning anger against him, raining [q] it down on him while he is eating. [r] 24 If he flees from an iron weapon, an arrow from a bronze bow will pierce him.
25 He pulls it out of his back,
the flashing tip out of his liver. [H]
Terrors come over him. [s]
26 Total darkness is reserved for his treasures.
A fire unfanned by human hands will consume [t] him;
it will feed on what is left in his tent.
27 The heavens will expose his iniquity, [u]
and the earth will rise up against him. [v] 28 The possessions in his house will be removed, flowing away on the day of God's anger.
29 This is the wicked man's lot [w] from God,
the inheritance God ordained for him.

Job’s Reply to Zophar

21 Then Job answered:

2 Pay close attention to my words;
let this be the consolation you offer.
3 Bear with me while I speak;
then after I have spoken, you may continue mocking.

4 As for me, is my complaint [a] against a man?
Then why shouldn't I be impatient?
5 Look at me and shudder; [b]
put your hand over your mouth. [c] 6 When I think about it, I am terrified and my body trembles [d] in horror.
7 Why do the wicked continue to live, growing old and becoming powerful?
8 Their children are established while they are still alive, [A]
and their descendants, before their eyes.
9 Their homes are secure and free of fear; [e]
no rod from God strikes them. [f] 10 Their bulls breed without fail;
their cows calve and do not miscarry.
11 They let their little ones run around like lambs;
their children skip about, 12 singing to the tambourine and lyre and rejoicing at the sound of the flute. [g] 13 They spend [h] their days in prosperity [i] and go down to •Sheol in peace.
14 Yet they say to God: "Leave us alone!
We don't want to know Your ways. [j]
15 Who is the •Almighty , that we should serve Him, and what will we gain by pleading with Him? " [k]
16 But their prosperity is not of their own doing.
The counsel of the wicked is far from me! [l]

17 How often is the lamp [m] of the wicked put out?
Does disaster [B] come on them?
Does He apportion destruction in His anger?
18 Are they like straw before the wind,

like chaff [n] a storm sweeps away?
19 God reserves a person's punishment for his children. [o]
Let God repay the person himself, so that he may know it.
20 Let his own eyes see his demise;
let him drink from the Almighty's wrath! [p] 21 For what does he care about his family once he is dead, [q]
when the number of his months has run out? [r]

22 Can anyone teach God knowledge, [s]
since He judges the exalted ones? [t] 23 One person dies in excellent health, [C] completely secure [u] and at ease.
24 His body is [D] well fed, [E] and his bones are full of marrow. [F] 25 Yet another person dies with a bitter [v] soul, having never tasted prosperity.
26 But they both lie in the dust,
and worms cover them. [w]

27 I know your thoughts very well,
the schemes you would wrong me with.
28 For you say, "Where now is the nobleman's house? " and "Where are the tents [x] the wicked lived in? "
29 Have you never consulted those who travel the roads?
Don't you accept their reports? [G]
30 Indeed, the evil man is spared from the day of disaster, rescued from the day of wrath.
31 Who would denounce his behavior to his face?
Who would repay [y] him for what he has done?
32 He is carried to the grave,
and someone keeps watch over his tomb.
33 The dirt on his grave is [H] sweet to him.
Everyone follows behind him,
and those who go before him are without number.

34 So how can you offer me such futile comfort?
Your answers are deceptive.

THIRD SERIES OF SPEECHES

Eliphaz Speaks

22 Then Eliphaz the Temanite replied:

2 Can a man be of any use to God?
Can even a wise man be of use to Him?
3 Does it delight the •Almighty if you are righteous?
Does He profit if you perfect your behavior? [a]

4 Does He correct you and take you to court because of your piety? [b] 5 Isn't your wickedness abundant and aren't your iniquities endless?
6 For you took collateral [c] from your brothers without cause, stripping off their clothes and leaving them naked.
7 You gave no water to the thirsty and withheld food from the famished, [d] 8 while the land belonged to a powerful man and an influential man lived on it.
9 You sent widows away empty-handed,
and the strength of the fatherless [e] was [f] crushed.
10 Therefore snares surround you,
and sudden dread terrifies [g] you, 11 or darkness, so you cannot see,
and a flood of water covers you. [h]

12 Isn't God as high as the heavens?
And look at the highest stars — how lofty they are!
13 Yet you say: "What does God know?
Can He judge through thick darkness? [i] 14 Clouds [j] veil Him so that He cannot see, as He walks on the circle of the sky."
15 Will you continue on the ancient path that wicked men have walked?
16 They were snatched away before their time,
and their foundations [k] were washed away by a river.
17 They were the ones who said to God, "Leave us alone! "
and "What can the Almighty do to us? " [l, m] 18 But it was He who filled their houses with good things.
The counsel of the wicked is far from me!

19 The righteous see this and rejoice;
the innocent mock them, saying, [n] 20 “Surely our opponents are destroyed, and fire has consumed what they left behind.” [o]

21 Come to terms with God and be at peace; [p] in this way [A] good will come to you.
22 Receive instruction from His mouth, [q]
and place His sayings [r] in your heart.
23 If you return [s] to the Almighty, you will be renewed.
If you banish injustice from your tent 24 and consign your gold to the dust, the gold of Ophir [t] to the stones in the •wadis , 25 the Almighty will be your gold and your finest silver.
26 Then you will delight [u] in the Almighty and lift up your face to God. [v] 27 You will pray to Him, and He will hear you, [w]
and you will fulfill your vows.
28 When you make a decision, it will be carried out, [B] and light will shine on your ways. [x]
29 When others are humiliated and you say, “Lift them up,”
God will save the humble. [C, y]
30 He will even rescue the •guilty one, who will be rescued by the purity of your hands. [z]

Job's Reply to Eliphaz

23 Then Job answered:

2 Today also my complaint is bitter. [a, b]
His [c] hand is heavy despite my groaning.
3 If only I knew how to find Him,
so that I could go to His throne.
4 I would plead my case before Him [d]
and fill my mouth with arguments.
5 I would learn how [A] He would answer me;
and understand what He would say to me.
6 Would He prosecute [e] me forcefully?
No, He will certainly pay attention to me.
7 Then an upright man could reason [f] with Him,
and I would escape from my Judge [g] forever.

8 If I go east, He is not there,
and if I go west, I cannot perceive Him. [h] 9 When He is at work to the north, I cannot see Him;
when He turns south, I cannot find Him.
10 Yet He knows the way I have taken; [B]
when He has tested me, [i] I will emerge as pure gold.
11 My feet have followed in His tracks;
I have kept to His way [j] and not turned aside.
12 I have not departed from the commands of His lips;
I have treasured [k] the words [l] of His mouth
more than my daily food.

13 But He is unchangeable; who can oppose Him?
He does what He desires. [m]
14 He will certainly accomplish what He has decreed for me, and He has many more things like these in mind. [C] 15 Therefore I am terrified [n] in His presence;
when I consider this, I am afraid of Him.
16 God has made my heart faint; [o]
the •Almighty has terrified me.
17 Yet I am not destroyed [D] by the darkness, [p]
by the thick darkness that covers my face.

24 Why does the •Almighty not reserve times for judgment? [a]
Why do those who know Him never see His days?
2 The wicked displace boundary markers.
They steal a flock and provide pasture for it.
3 They drive away the donkeys owned by the fatherless [b] and take the widow's ox as collateral.
4 They push the needy off the road;
the poor of the land are forced into hiding. [c] 5 Like wild donkeys in the desert, the poor go out to their task of foraging for food;
the wilderness provides nourishment for their children.
6 They gather their fodder in the field and glean the vineyards of the wicked.
7 Without clothing, they spend the night naked, having no covering against the cold. [d]
8 Drenched by mountain rains,
they huddle against [A] the rocks, shelterless.
9 The fatherless infant is snatched from the breast;
the nursing child of the poor is seized as collateral. [e]
10 Without clothing, they wander about naked.
They carry sheaves but go hungry. [f]
11 They crush olives in their presses; [B]
they tread the winepresses, but go thirsty.
12 From the city, men [g] groan;
the mortally wounded cry for help,
yet God pays no attention to this crime. [h]

13 The wicked are those who rebel against the light.
They do not recognize its ways or stay on its paths.
14 The murderer rises at dawn to kill the poor and needy,
and by night he becomes a thief.
15 The adulterer's eye watches for twilight, thinking: No eye will see me;
he covers his face.
16 In the dark they break [C] into houses;

by day they lock themselves in, [D] never experiencing the light.
17 For the morning is like darkness to them.
Surely they are familiar with the terrors of darkness!

18 They float [E] on the surface of the water.
Their section of the land is cursed,
so that they never go to their vineyards.
19 As dry ground and heat snatch away the melted snow,
so •Sheol [i] steals those who have sinned.
20 The womb forgets them;
worms feed on them;
they are remembered [j] no more.
So injustice is broken like a tree.
21 They prey on [k] the childless woman who is unable to conceive, and do not deal kindly with the widow.
22 Yet God drags away [F] the mighty by His power;
when He rises up, they have no assurance of life.
23 He gives them a sense of security, so they can rely on it, [l]
but His eyes [m] watch over their ways.
24 They are exalted for a moment, then they are gone;
they are brought low and shrivel up like everything else. [n]
They wither like heads of grain. [o]

25 If this is not true, then who can prove me a liar [p]
and show that my speech is worthless?

Bildad Speaks

25 Then Bildad the Shuhite replied:

2 Dominion and dread [a] belong to Him,
the One who establishes harmony in the heavens. [A] 3 Can His troops be numbered?
Does His light not shine on everyone?
4 How can a person be justified before God? [b]
How can one born of woman be pure? [c]
5 If even the moon does not shine and the stars are not pure in His sight, [d] 6 how much less man, who is a maggot, and the son of man, who is a worm! [e]

Job’s Reply to Bildad

26 Then Job answered:

2 How you have helped [a] the powerless and delivered the arm that is weak!
3 How you have counseled the unwise [b] and thoroughly explained the path to success!
4 Who did you speak these words to?
Whose breath came out of your mouth?

5 The departed spirits tremble beneath the waters and all that inhabit them. [c] 6 •Sheol [d] is naked before God, and •Abaddon [e] has no covering. [f]
7 He stretches the northern skies over empty space;
He hangs the earth on nothing.
8 He wraps up the waters in His clouds, yet the clouds do not burst beneath their weight. [g] 9 He obscures the view of His throne, spreading His cloud over it.
10 He laid out the horizon on the surface of the waters [h] at the boundary between light and darkness.
11 The pillars that hold up the sky tremble, astounded at His rebuke. [i] 12 By His power He stirred [j] the sea, and by His understanding He crushed •Rahab . [k]
13 By His breath the heavens gained their beauty;
His hand pierced the fleeing serpent. [l, m] 14 These are but the fringes of His ways;
how faint is the word we hear of Him!
Who can understand His mighty thunder?

27 Job continued his discourse, saying:

2 As God lives, who has deprived me of justice, [a]
and the •Almighty who has made me bitter, [b] 3 as long as my breath is still in me and the breath from God remains in my nostrils, [c] 4 my lips will not speak unjustly, and my tongue will not utter deceit.
5 I will never affirm that you are right.
I will maintain my integrity [A, d] until I die.
6 I will cling to my righteousness and never let it go.
My conscience [e] will not accuse me as long as I live!

7 May my enemy be like the wicked and my opponent like the unjust.
8 For what hope does the godless man [f] have when he is cut off, when God takes away his life? [g] 9 Will God hear his cry
when distress comes on him?
10 Will he delight [h] in the Almighty?
Will he call on God at all times?
11 I will teach you about God's power.
I will not conceal what the Almighty has planned. [B]
12 All of you have seen this for yourselves, why do you keep up this empty talk? [i]

13 This is a wicked man's lot [j] from God,
the inheritance the ruthless receive from the Almighty.
14 Even if his children increase, they are destined for the sword;
his descendants will never have enough food.
15 Those who survive him will be buried by the plague, yet their widows will not weep for them. [k] 16 Though he piles up silver like dust and heaps up a wardrobe like clay — 17 he may heap it up, but the righteous will wear it, and the innocent will divide up his silver. [l] 18 The house he built is like a moth's cocoon or a booth set up by a watchman. [m]

19 He lies down wealthy, but will do so no more;
when he opens his eyes, it is gone.
20 Terrors overtake him like a flood; [n]
a storm [o] wind sweeps him away at night.
21 An east wind picks him up, and he is gone;
it carries him away from his place.
22 It blasts at him without mercy,
while he flees desperately from its grasp.
23 It claps [p] its hands at him and scorns him from its place.

Job's Hymn to Wisdom

28 Surely there is a mine for silver and a place where gold is refined.
2 Iron is taken from the ground,
and copper is smelted from ore.
3 A miner puts an end to the darkness;
he probes [A] the deepest recesses for ore in the gloomy darkness.
4 He cuts a shaft far from human habitation,
in places unknown to those who walk above ground. [B] Suspended far away from people,
the miners swing back and forth.
5 Food may come from the earth,
but below the surface the earth is transformed as by fire.
6 Its rocks are a source of sapphire, [C, a] containing flecks of gold.
7 No bird of prey knows that path;
no falcon's eye has seen it.
8 Proud beasts have never walked on it;
no lion has ever prowled over it.
9 The miner strikes the flint and transforms the mountains at their foundations.
10 He cuts out channels in the rocks,
and his eyes spot every treasure.
11 He dams up the streams from flowing [b]
so that he may bring to light what is hidden.

12 But where can wisdom [c] be found,
and where is understanding located?
13 No man can know its value, [d]
since it cannot be found in the land of the living.
14 The ocean depths say, "It's not in me," while the sea declares, "I don't have it." [e] 15 Gold cannot be exchanged for it,
and silver cannot be weighed out for its price.
16 Wisdom cannot be valued in the gold of Ophir, [f] in precious onyx or sapphire. [D, g] 17 Gold and glass do not compare with it, and articles of fine gold cannot be exchanged for it. [h]

18 Coral and quartz are not worth mentioning.
The price of wisdom is beyond pearls.
19 Topaz from •Cush cannot compare with it,
and it cannot be valued in pure gold.

20 Where then does wisdom come from,
and where is understanding located?
21 It is hidden from the eyes of every living thing and concealed from the birds of the sky.
22 •Abaddon and Death [i] say,
"We have heard news of it with our ears."
23 But God understands the way to wisdom, and He knows its location.
24 For He looks to the ends of the earth and sees everything under the heavens.
25 When God fixed the weight of the wind and limited the water by measure, [j] 26 when He established a limit [E] for the rain [k]
and a path for the lightning, 27 He considered wisdom and evaluated it;
He established it and examined it.
28 He said to mankind,
"The •fear of the Lord is this: wisdom.
And to turn from evil is understanding." [l]

Job's Final Claim of Innocence

29 Job continued his discourse, saying:

2 If only I could be as in months gone by,
in the days when God watched over me,
3 when His lamp shone above my head, and I walked through darkness by His light! [a] 4 I would be as I was in the days of my youth when God's friendship [b] rested on my tent, 5 when the •Almighty was still with me and my children were around me, 6 when my feet were bathed in cream and the rock [c] poured out streams of oil for me!

7 When I went out to the city •gate and took my seat in the town square, 8 the young men saw me and withdrew,
while older men stood to their feet.
9 City officials stopped talking and covered their mouths with their hands. [d] 10 The noblemen's voices were hushed, and their tongues stuck to the roof of their mouths.
11 When they heard me, they blessed me,
and when they saw me, they spoke well of me. [A] 12 For I rescued the poor man who cried out for help, and the fatherless child who had no one to support him. [e] 13 The dying man blessed me, and I made the widow's heart rejoice.
14 I clothed myself in righteousness, [f]
and it enveloped me;
my just decisions were like a robe and a turban.
15 I was eyes to the blind and feet to the lame. [g] 16 I was a father to the needy, and I examined the case of the stranger.
17 I shattered the fangs of the unjust [h] and snatched the prey from his teeth.

18 So I thought: I will die in my own nest and multiply my days as the sand. [B] 19 My roots will have access to water, [i] and the dew will rest on my branches all night.

20 My strength will be refreshed within me,
and my bow will be renewed in my hand. [j]

21 Men listened to me with expectation, waiting silently for my advice.
22 After a word from me they did not speak again;
my speech settled on them like dew.
23 They waited for me as for the rain and opened their mouths as for spring showers.
24 If I smiled at them, they couldn’t believe it;
they were thrilled at [C] the light of my countenance.
25 I directed their course and presided as chief.
I lived as a king among his troops,
like one who comforts those who mourn.

30 But now they mock [a] me,
men younger than I am,
whose fathers I would have refused to put
with my sheep dogs.
2 What use to me was the strength of their hands?
Their vigor had left them.
3 Emaciated from poverty and hunger,
they gnawed the dry land,
the desolate wasteland by night.
4 They plucked mallow [A, b] among the shrubs,
and the roots of the broom tree were their food.
5 They were expelled from human society;
people shouted at them as if they were thieves.
6 They are living on the slopes of the •wadis ,
among the rocks and in holes in the ground.
7 They bray among the shrubs;
they huddle beneath the thistles.
8 Foolish [c] men, without even a name.
They were forced to leave the land.

9 Now I am mocked by their songs; [d]
I have become an object of scorn to them.
10 They despise me and keep their distance from me; [e]
they do not hesitate to spit [f] in my face.
11 Because God has loosened my [g] bowstring and oppressed me,
they have cast off restraint in my presence. [h] 12 The rabble [B] rise up at my right;
they trap [C] my feet and construct their siege ramp [D] against me. [i] 13 They tear up my path;
they contribute to my destruction, [j]
without anyone to help them.
14 They advance as through a gaping breach;
they keep rolling in through the ruins. [k] 15 Terrors [l] are turned loose against me;
they chase my dignity away like the wind,
and my prosperity has passed by like a cloud.

16 Now my life is poured out before my eyes,
and days of suffering [m] have seized me.
17 Night pierces my bones,
but my gnawing pains never rest. [n]
18 My clothing is distorted with great force;
He chokes me by the neck of my garment. [E]
19 He throws me into the mud, and I have become like dust and ashes. [o]

20 I cry out to You for help, but You do not answer me; [p] when I stand up, You merely look at me.
21 You have turned against me with cruelty;
You harass [q] me with Your strong hand.
22 You lift me up on the wind and make me ride it;
You scatter me in the storm. [r]
23 Yes, I know that You will lead me to death —
the place [s] appointed for all who live.

24 Yet no one would stretch out his hand against a ruined man [F]
when he cries out to him for help because of his distress. [t]
25 Have I not wept for those who have fallen on hard times?
Has my soul not grieved for the needy? [u] 26 But when I hoped for good, evil came;
when I looked for light, darkness [v] came.
27 I am churning within [G] and cannot rest;
days of suffering confront me.
28 I walk about blackened, but not by the sun. [H]
I stood in the assembly and cried out for help.
29 I have become a brother to jackals and a companion of ostriches.
30 My skin blackens and flakes off, [I] and my bones burn with fever. [w] 31 My lyre is used for mourning and my flute for the sound of weeping. [x]

31 I have made a covenant with my eyes. [a]
How then could I look at a young woman? [A, b]
2 For what portion [c] would I have from God above, or what inheritance from the •Almighty on high?
3 Doesn’t disaster come to the unjust and misfortune to evildoers?
4 Does He not see my ways and number all my steps? [d]

5 If I have walked in falsehood or my foot has rushed to deceit, 6 let God weigh me in accurate scales, [e]
and He will recognize my integrity. [f]

7 If my step has turned from the way,
my heart has followed my eyes,
or impurity has stained my hands, [g]
8 let someone else eat what I have sown, and let my crops be uprooted. [h]

9 If my heart has been seduced by my neighbor’s wife or I have lurked at his door, 10 let my own wife grind grain for another man,
and let other men sleep with [B] her.
11 For that would be a disgrace;
it would be a crime deserving punishment. [C, i] 12 For it is a fire that consumes down to •Abaddon ;
it would destroy my entire harvest. [j]

13 If I have dismissed the case of my male or female servants when they made a complaint against me, 14 what could I do when God stands up to judge?
How should I answer Him when He calls me to account?
15 Did not the One who made me in the womb also make them?
Did not the same God form us both in the womb? [k]

16 If I have refused the wishes of the poor or let the widow’s [l] eyes go blind, 17 if I have eaten my few crumbs alone without letting the fatherless eat any of it — 18 for from my youth, I raised him as his father, and since the day I was born [D] I guided the widow — 19 if I have seen anyone dying for lack of clothing or a needy person without a cloak, [m] 20 if he [E] did not bless me

while warming himself with the fleece from my sheep, 21 if I ever cast my vote [F] against a fatherless child when I saw that I had support in the city •gate , [n] 22 then let my shoulder blade fall from my back,
and my arm be pulled from its socket.
23 For disaster from God terrifies me, and because of His majesty I could not do these things. [o]

24 If I placed my confidence in gold or called fine gold my trust, [p] 25 if I have rejoiced because my wealth is great or because my own hand has acquired so much, 26 if I have gazed at the sun when it was shining or at the moon moving in splendor, [q] 27 so that my heart was secretly enticed and I threw them a kiss, [G] 28 this would also be a crime deserving punishment, for I would have denied God above.

29 Have I rejoiced over my enemy's distress, or become excited when trouble came his way?
30 I have not allowed my mouth to sin
by asking for his life with a curse.
31 Haven't the members of my household said,
"Who is there who has not had enough to eat at Job's table? "
32 No stranger had to spend the night on the street,
for I opened my door to the traveler.
33 Have I covered my transgressions [r] as others do [H]
by hiding my •guilt in my heart, [s] 34 because I greatly feared the crowds, and the contempt of the clans terrified me,
so I grew silent and would not go outside?

35 If only I had someone to hear my case! [t]
Here is my signature; let the Almighty answer me.
Let my Opponent compose His indictment.
36 I would surely carry it on my shoulder and wear it like a crown. [u]
37 I would give Him an account of all my steps;
I would approach Him like a prince.

38 If my land cries out against me
and its furrows join in weeping, 39 if I have consumed its produce without payment or shown contempt for its tenants, [I] 40 then let thorns [v] grow instead of wheat and stinkweed [w] instead of barley.

The words of Job are concluded.

Elihu's Angry Response

32 So these three men quit answering Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes. [a] 2 Then Elihu son of Barachel the Buzite [b] from the family of Ram became angry. He was angry at Job because he had justified [c] himself rather than God. 3 He was also angry at Job's three friends because they had failed to refute him and yet had condemned him. [d] 4 Now Elihu had waited to speak to Job because they were all older than he.
5 But when he saw that the three men could not answer Job, he became angry.
6 So Elihu son of Barachel the Buzite replied:
I am young in years,
while you are old;
therefore I was timid and afraid to tell [e] you what I know.
7 I thought that age should speak and maturity should teach wisdom.
8 But it is a spirit in man [A] and the breath [f] of the •Almighty that give him understanding.
9 It is not only the old who are wise or the elderly who understand how to judge.
10 Therefore I say, "Listen to me.
I too will declare what I know."
11 Look, I waited for your conclusions;
I listened to your insights
as you sought for words.
12 I paid close attention to you.
Yet no one proved Job wrong;
not one of you refuted his arguments.
13 So do not claim, "We have found wisdom;
let God deal with him, not man."
14 But Job has not directed his argument to me, and I will not respond to him with your arguments.

15 Job's friends are dismayed and can no longer answer;
words have left them.
16 Should I continue to wait now that they are silent,
now that they stand there and no longer answer?
17 I too will answer; [B]

yes, I will tell what I know.
18 For I am full of words,
and my spirit [C] compels me to speak. [g] 19 My heart [D] is like unvented wine;
it is about to burst like new wineskins. [h]
20 I must speak so that I can find relief;
I must open my lips and respond.
21 I will be partial to no one, [i]
and I will not give anyone an undeserved title.
22 For I do not know how to give such titles;
otherwise, my Maker would remove me in an instant.

Elihu Confronts Job

33 But now, Job, pay attention to my speech, and listen to all my words.
2 I am going to open my mouth;
my tongue will form words on my palate.
3 My words come from my upright [a] heart,
and my lips speak with sincerity what they know.
4 The Spirit of God has made me, and the breath of the •Almighty [b] gives me life. [c]
5 Refute me if you can.
Prepare [d] your case against me; take your stand. [e]
6 I am just like you before God;
I was also pinched off from a piece of clay. [f]
7 Fear [g] of me should not terrify you;
the pressure I exert [A] against you will be light.

8 Surely you have spoken in my hearing,
and I have heard these very [B] words:
9 "I am pure, without transgression;
I am •clean and have no •guilt . [h]
10 But He finds reasons to oppose me;
He regards me as His enemy. [i] 11 He puts my feet in the stocks;
He stands watch [j] over all my paths."

12 But I tell you that you are wrong in this matter, since God is greater than man. [k] 13 Why do you take [l] Him to court for not answering anything a person asks? [C] 14 For God speaks time and again, but a person may not notice it.
15 In a dream, a vision [m] in the night, when deep sleep falls on people [n]
as they slumber on their beds, 16 He uncovers their ears [o] at that time
and terrifies them [p] with warnings, 17 in order to turn a person from his actions and suppress his pride. [D]

18 God spares his soul from the •Pit , [q]
his life from crossing the river of death. [E] 19 A person may be disciplined on his bed [r] with pain and constant distress in his bones, [s] 20 so that he detests bread, and his soul despises his favorite food. [t] 21 His flesh wastes away to nothing, [F]
and his unseen bones stick out.
22 He draws near to the Pit,
and his life to the executioners.
23 If there is an angel [u] on his side,
one mediator out of a thousand,
to tell a person what is right for him [G] 24 and to be gracious to him and say, “Spare him from going down to the Pit;
I have found a ransom,” [v]
25 then his flesh will be healthier [H] than in his youth, and he will return to the days of his youthful vigor. [w] 26 He will pray to God, and God will delight in him.
That man will see His face [x] with a shout of joy,
and God will restore his righteousness to him. [y]
27 He will look at men and say,
“I have sinned and perverted what was right;
yet I did not get what I deserved. [I] 28 He redeemed my soul from going down to the Pit, and I will continue to see the light.”
29 God certainly does all these things
two or three times to a man 30 in order to turn him back from the Pit, so he may shine with the light of life. [z]
31 Pay attention, Job, and listen to me.
Be quiet, and I will speak.
32 But if you have something to say, [J] answer me;
speak, for I would like to justify you.
33 If not, then listen to me;
be quiet, and I will teach you wisdom.

34 Then Elihu continued, [A] saying:

2 Hear my words, you wise men,
and listen to me, you knowledgeable ones.
3 Doesn't the ear test words
as the palate tastes food?
4 Let us judge for ourselves what is right;
let us decide together what is good.
5 For Job has declared, "I am righteous, yet God has deprived me of justice. [a] 6 Would I lie about my case? [b]
My wound [B] is incurable, though I am without transgression."
7 What man is like Job?
He drinks derision [c] like water.
8 He keeps company with evildoers and walks with wicked men.
9 For he has said, "A man gains nothing
when he becomes God's friend." [d]

10 Therefore listen to me, you men of understanding.
It is impossible for God to do wrong,
and for the •Almighty to act unjustly. [e] 11 For He repays [f] a person according to his deeds, and He brings his ways on him.
12 Indeed, it is true that God does not act wickedly and the Almighty does not pervert justice. [g] 13 Who gave Him authority over the earth?
Who put Him in charge of the entire world? [h]
14 If He put His mind to it and withdrew the spirit [i] and breath He gave, 15 every living thing would perish together and mankind would return to the dust. [j]

16 If you have understanding, hear this;
listen to what I have to say.
17 Could one who hates justice govern the world?
Will you condemn the mighty Righteous One, [k]

18 who says to a king, “Worthless man! ” and to nobles, “Wicked men! ”? [l] 19 God is not partial [m] to princes and does not favor the rich over the poor, for they are all the work of His hands.
20 They die suddenly in the middle of the night;
people shudder, then pass away.
Even the mighty are removed without effort.

21 For His eyes watch over a man’s ways, and He observes all his steps. [n] 22 There is no darkness, no deep darkness, where evildoers can hide themselves. [o] 23 God does not need to examine a person further, that one should [p] approach Him in court.
24 He shatters the mighty without an investigation and sets others in their place. [q] 25 Therefore, He recognizes their deeds [r] and overthrows them by night, and they are crushed.
26 In full view of the public, [C]
He strikes them for their wickedness, 27 because they turned aside from following Him and did not understand any of His ways 28 but caused the poor to cry out to Him, and He heard the outcry of the afflicted. [s]
29 But when God is silent, who can declare Him •guilty ?
When He hides His face, who can see Him?
Yet He watches over both individuals and nations, 30 so that godless men should not rule or ensnare the people.

31 Suppose someone says to God,
“I have endured my punishment;
I will no longer act wickedly.
32 Teach me what I cannot see;
if I have done wrong, I won’t do it again.”
33 Should God repay you on your terms when you have rejected His?

You must choose, not I!
So declare what you know.
34 Reasonable men will say to me,
along with the wise men who hear me, 35 “Job speaks without knowledge; [t] his words are without insight.”
36 If only Job were tested to the limit, because his answers are like those of wicked men.
37 For he adds rebellion to his sin;
he scornfully claps [u] in our presence,
while multiplying [v] his words against God.

35 Then Elihu continued, saying:

2 Do you think it is just when you say,
“I am righteous before God”?
3 For you ask, “What does it profit You, [a]
and what benefit comes to me, if I do not sin? ” [b] 4 I will answer you and your friends with you.
5 Look at the heavens and see;
gaze at the clouds high above you.
6 If you sin, how does it affect God?
If you multiply your transgressions, what does it do to Him?
7 If you are righteous, what do you give Him,
or what does He receive from your hand? [c] 8 Your wickedness affects a person like yourself, and your righteousness another human being.
9 People cry out because of severe oppression;
they shout for help because of the arm of the mighty. [d] 10 But no one asks, “Where is God my Maker, [e] who provides us with songs in the night, [f] 11 who gives us more understanding than the animals of the earth and makes us wiser than the birds of the sky? ” [g] 12 There they cry out, but He does not answer, because of the pride of evil men. [h] 13 Indeed, God does not listen to empty cries, and the •Almighty does not take note of it — 14 how much less when [A] you complain [B] that you do not see Him,
that your case [i] is before Him
and you are waiting [j] for Him.
15 But now, because God’s anger does not punish and He does not pay attention to transgression, [k] 16 Job opens his mouth in vain and multiplies words without knowledge. [l]

36 Then Elihu continued, saying:

2 Be patient with me a little longer, and I will inform you,
for there is still more to be said on God's behalf.
3 I will get my knowledge from a distant place and ascribe justice to my Maker.
4 For my arguments are without flaw; [A] one who has perfect knowledge is with you.

5 Yes, God is mighty, but He despises no one;
He understands all things. [B, a] 6 He does not keep the wicked alive, [b]
but He gives justice to the afflicted.
7 He does not remove His gaze from the righteous,
but He seats them forever with enthroned kings,
and they are exalted.

8 If people are bound with chains and trapped by the cords of affliction, 9 God tells them what they have done and how arrogantly they have transgressed.
10 He opens their ears [c] to correction and insists they repent from iniquity.
11 If they serve Him obediently, they will end their days in prosperity and their years in happiness. [d] 12 But if they do not obey, they will cross the river of death [C]
and die without knowledge. [e]

13 Those who have a godless heart harbor anger;
even when God binds them, they do not cry for help.
14 They die in their youth;
their life ends among male cult prostitutes. [f]
15 God rescues the afflicted by their affliction;
He instructs them by their torment.

16 Indeed, He lured you from the jaws [D] of distress to a spacious and unconfined place.
Your table was spread with choice food.

17 Yet now you are obsessed with the judgment due the wicked;
judgment and justice have seized you.
18 Be careful that no one lures you with riches; [E] do not let a large ransom [F] lead you astray. [g] 19 Can your wealth [G] or all your physical exertion keep you from distress? [h] 20 Do not long for the night when nations will disappear from their places.
21 Be careful that you do not turn to iniquity, for that is why you have been tested by [H] affliction.

22 Look, God shows Himself exalted by His power.
Who is a teacher like Him?
23 Who has appointed His way for Him, and who has declared, “You have done wrong”? [i] 24 Remember that you should praise His work, which people have sung about. [j] 25 All mankind has seen it;
people have looked at it from a distance. [k] 26 Yes, God is exalted beyond our knowledge; [l]
the number of His years cannot be counted. [m] 27 For He makes waterdrops evaporate; [I] they distill the rain into its [J] mist, [n] 28 which the clouds pour out and shower abundantly on mankind.
29 Can anyone understand how the clouds spread out or how the thunder roars from God’s pavilion? [o] 30 See how He spreads His lightning [p] around Him and covers the depths of the sea.
31 For He judges the nations with these;
He gives food in abundance. [q]
32 He covers His hands with lightning and commands it to hit its mark.
33 The [K] thunder declares His presence; [L]
the cattle also, the approaching storm.

37 My heart [a] pounds at this and leaps from my chest. [A] 2 Just listen to His thunderous voice and the rumbling that comes from His mouth.
3 He lets it loose beneath the entire sky;
His lightning to the ends [b] of the earth.

4 Then there comes a roaring sound;
God thunders [c] with His majestic voice.
He does not restrain the lightning
when His rumbling voice is heard.
5 God thunders marvelously with His voice;
He does great things that we cannot comprehend.
6 For He says to the snow, [d] “Fall to the earth,”
and the torrential rains, His mighty torrential rains, 7 serve as His sign to all mankind,
so that all men may know His work.
8 The wild animals enter their lairs and stay in their dens. [e] 9 The windstorm comes from its chamber, and the cold from the driving north winds.
10 Ice is formed by the breath of God, [f]
and watery expanses are frozen.
11 He saturates clouds with moisture; [g]
He scatters His lightning through them.
12 They swirl about,
turning round and round at His direction, accomplishing everything He commands them over the surface of the inhabited world.
13 He causes this to happen for punishment,
for His land, or for His faithful love.

14 Listen to this, Job.
Stop and consider God’s wonders.
15 Do you know how God directs His clouds or makes their lightning flash?
16 Do you understand how the clouds float,
those wonderful works of Him who has perfect knowledge?

17 You whose clothes get hot when the south wind brings calm to the land, 18 can you help God spread out the skies
as hard as a cast metal mirror?
19 Teach us what we should say to Him; [h]
we cannot prepare our case because of our darkness.
20 Should He be told that I want to speak?
Can a man speak when he is confused?
21 Now men cannot even look at the sun
when it is in the skies,
after a wind has swept through and cleared them away.
22 Yet out of the north He comes, shrouded in a golden glow;
awesome [i] majesty surrounds Him.
23 The •Almighty — we cannot reach Him —
He is exalted in power!
He will not oppress justice and abundant righteousness,
24 Therefore, men •fear Him.
He does not look favorably on any who are wise [j] in heart.

The LORD Speaks

38 Then the LORD answered Job from the whirlwind. [a] He said:

2 Who is this who obscures My counsel with ignorant words? [b]
3 Get ready to answer Me like a man;
when I question [c] you, you will inform Me.
4 Where were you when I established [d] the earth?
Tell Me, if you have [A] understanding.
5 Who fixed its dimensions? Certainly you know!
Who stretched a measuring line across it?
6 What supports its foundations?
Or who laid its cornerstone 7 while the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God [e] shouted for joy?

8 Who enclosed the sea behind doors
when it burst from the womb, 9 when I made the clouds its garment and thick darkness its blanket, [B, f] 10 when I determined its boundaries [C]
and put its bars and doors in place, 11 when I declared: “You may come this far, but no farther;
your proud waves stop here”?

12 Have you ever in your life commanded the morning or assigned the dawn its place, 13 so it may seize the edges of the earth and shake the wicked out of it?
14 The earth is changed as clay is by a seal;
its hills stand out like the folds of a garment.
15 Light [D] is withheld from the wicked,
and the arm raised in violence is broken.

16 Have you traveled to the sources of the sea or walked in the depths of the oceans?
17 Have the gates [g] of death been revealed to you?
Have you seen the gates of deep darkness?
18 Have you comprehended the extent of the earth?

Tell Me, if you know all this.

19 Where is the road to the home of light?
Do you know where darkness lives,
20 so you can lead it back to its border?
Are you familiar with the paths to its home?
21 Don't you know? You were already born; [h]
you have lived so long! [E]
22 Have you entered the place where the snow is stored?
Or have you seen the storehouses of hail, [i] 23 which I hold in reserve for times of trouble, for the day of warfare and battle? [j]
24 What road leads to the place where light is dispersed? [F]
Where is the source of the east wind that spreads across the earth?

25 Who cuts a channel for the flooding rain or clears the way for lightning, 26 to bring rain on an uninhabited land,
on a desert with no human life, [G] 27 to satisfy the parched wasteland and cause the grass to sprout? [k]
28 Does the rain have a father?
Who fathered the drops of dew? [l]
29 Whose womb did the ice come from?
Who gave birth to the frost of heaven
30 when water becomes as hard as stone, [H] and the surface of the watery depths is frozen? [m]

31 Can you fasten the chains of the Pleiades or loosen the belt of Orion?
32 Can you bring out the constellations [I] in their season and lead the Bear [J] and her cubs? [n]
33 Do you know the laws [o] of heaven?
Can you impose its [K] authority on earth?
34 Can you command [L] the clouds
so that a flood of water covers you? [p]
35 Can you send out lightning [q] bolts, and they go?
Do they report to you: "Here we are."?

36 Who put wisdom [r] in the heart [M] or gave the mind understanding?
37 Who has the wisdom to number the clouds?
Or who can tilt the water jars of heaven 38 when the dust hardens like cast metal and the clods of dirt stick together?

39 Can you hunt prey for a lioness or satisfy the appetite of young lions [s] 40 when they crouch in their dens and lie in wait within their lairs?
41 Who provides the raven's food [t]
when its young cry out to God and wander about for lack of food?

39 Do you know when mountain goats give birth?
Have you watched the deer in labor?
2 Can you count the months they are pregnant [A]
so you can know the time they give birth?
3 They crouch down to give birth to their young;
they deliver their newborn. [B]
4 Their offspring are healthy and grow up in the open field.
They leave and do not return. [C]

5 Who set the wild donkey free?
Who released the swift donkey from its harness?
6 I made the wilderness [a] its home,
and the salty [b] wasteland its dwelling.
7 It scoffs at the noise of the village and never hears the shouts of a driver. [c] 8 It roams the mountains for its pastureland, searching for anything green.
9 Would the wild ox be willing to serve you?
Would it spend the night by your feeding trough?
10 Can you hold the wild ox [d] to a furrow by its harness?
Will it plow the valleys behind you?
11 Can you depend on it because its strength is great?
Would you leave it to do your hard work?
12 Can you trust the wild ox to harvest your grain and bring it to your threshing floor?

13 The wings of the ostrich flap joyfully, but are her feathers and plumage like the stork's? [D, e] 14 She abandons her eggs on the ground and lets them be warmed in the sand.
15 She forgets that a foot may crush them or that some wild animal may trample them.
16 She treats her young harshly, as if they were not her own,
with no fear that her labor may have been in vain.
17 For God has deprived her of wisdom;
He has not endowed her with understanding. [f]
18 When she proudly [E] spreads her wings,

she laughs at the horse and its rider.

19 Do you give strength to the horse?
Do you adorn his neck with a mane? F
20 Do you make him leap like a locust?
His proud snorting fills one with terror.
21 He paws g in the valley and rejoices in his strength;
He charges into battle. G
22 He laughs at fear, since he is afraid of nothing;
he does not run from the sword.
23 A quiver rattles at his side,
along with a flashing spear and a lance. H 24 He charges ahead I with trembling rage;
he cannot stand still at the trumpet's sound.
25 When the trumpet blasts, he snorts defiantly. J
He smells the battle from a distance;
he hears the officers' shouts and the battle cry.

26 Does the hawk take flight by your understanding and spread its wings to the south?
27 Does the eagle soar at your command and make its nest h on high?
28 It lives on a cliff where it spends the night;
its stronghold is on a rocky crag.
29 From there it searches for prey; i its eyes penetrate the distance.
30 Its brood gulps down blood, and where the slain are, it is there. j

40 The LORD answered Job:
2 Will the one who contends with the •Almighty correct Him?
Let him who argues with God give an answer. [A]
3 Then Job answered the LORD:
4 I am so insignificant. How can I answer You? [a]
I place my hand over my mouth.
5 I have spoken once, and I will not reply;
twice, but now I can add nothing. [b]
6 Then the LORD answered Job from the whirlwind: [c]

7 Get ready to answer Me like a man;
When I question [d] you, you will inform Me.
8 Would you really challenge My justice?
Would you declare Me •guilty [e] to justify yourself? [f]
9 Do you have an arm like God's?
Can you thunder with a voice like His?

10 Adorn yourself with majesty [g] and splendor, and clothe yourself with honor and glory.
11 Unleash your raging anger; [h]
look on every proud person and humiliate him. [i] 12 Look on every proud person and humble him; [j] trample the wicked where they stand. [B] 13 Hide them together in the dust;
imprison them in the grave. [C] 14 Then I will confess to you that your own right hand [k] can deliver you. [l]

15 Look at Behemoth, which I made along with you.
He eats grass like an ox.
16 Look at the strength of his loins and the power in the muscles of his belly.
17 He stiffens his tail like a cedar tree;
the tendons of his thighs are woven firmly together.
18 His bones are bronze tubes;
his limbs are like iron rods.
19 He is the foremost of God's works; [m]

only his Maker can draw the sword against him.
20 The hills yield food for him,
while all sorts of wild animals play there.
21 He lies under the lotus plants, hiding in the protection D of marshy reeds.
22 Lotus plants cover him with their shade;
the willows by the brook surround him.
23 Though the river rages, Behemoth is unafraid;
he remains confident, even if the Jordan surges up to his mouth.
24 Can anyone capture him while he looks on, E or pierce his nose with snares?

Chapter 41

[a] [1] Can you pull in •Leviathan [b] with a hook [c] or tie his tongue down with a rope?
[2] Can you put a cord [A] through his nose or pierce his jaw with a hook? [d] [3] Will he beg you for mercy or speak softly to you?
[4] Will he make a covenant with you so that you can take him as a slave forever? [e] [5] Can you play with him like a bird or put him on a leash [B] for your girls?
[6] Will traders bargain for him or divide him among the merchants?
[7] Can you fill his hide with harpoons or his head with fishing spears?
[8] Lay a [C] hand on him.
You will remember the battle and never repeat it!
[9] [f] Any hope of capturing him proves false.
Does a person not collapse at the very sight of him?
[10] No one is ferocious enough to rouse Leviathan; [g]
who then can stand against Me?
[11] Who confronted Me, that I should repay him?
Everything under heaven belongs to Me. [h]

[12] I cannot be silent about his limbs, his power, and his graceful proportions.
[13] Who can strip off his outer covering?
Who can penetrate his double layer of armor? [i, j]
[14] Who can open his jaws, [D] surrounded by those terrifying teeth?
[15] His pride is in his rows of scales, closely sealed together.
[16] One scale is so close to another [E]
that no air can pass between them.
[17] They are joined to one another,
so closely connected [F] they cannot be separated.
[18] His snorting [G] flashes with light,

while his eyes are like the rays [H] of dawn.
19 Flaming torches shoot from his mouth;
fiery sparks fly out!
20 Smoke billows from his nostrils [k]
as from a boiling pot or burning reeds.
21 His breath sets coals ablaze,
and flames pour out of his mouth.
22 Strength resides in his neck,
and dismay dances before him.
23 The folds of his flesh are joined together,
solid as metal [I] and immovable.
24 His heart is as hard as a rock,
as hard as a lower millstone!
25 When Leviathan rises, the mighty [J] are terrified;
they withdraw because of his thrashing.
26 The sword that reaches him will have no effect,
nor will a spear, dart, or arrow.
27 He regards iron as straw,
and bronze as rotten wood.
28 No arrow can make him flee;
slingstones become like stubble to him.
29 A club is regarded as stubble,
and he laughs [l] at the sound of a javelin.
30 His undersides are jagged potsherds, spreading the mud like a threshing sledge. [m] 31 He makes the depths seethe like a cauldron;
he makes the sea like an ointment jar.
32 He leaves a shining wake behind him; [K]
one would think the deep had gray hair!
33 He has no equal on earth —
a creature devoid of fear!
34 He surveys everything that is haughty;
he is king over all the proud beasts. [L]

Job Replies to the LORD

42 Then Job replied to the LORD:
2 I [a] know that You can do anything and no plan of Yours can be thwarted. [b] 3 You asked, “Who is this who conceals My counsel with ignorance? ” [c] Surely I spoke about things I did not understand, things too wonderful for me to [A] know. [d] 4 You said, “Listen now, and I will speak.
When I question [e] you, you will inform Me.”
5 I had heard rumors about You,
but now my eyes [f] have seen You.
6 Therefore I take back my words and repent in dust and ashes. [g]
7 After the LORD had finished speaking [B] to Job, He said to Eliphaz the Temanite: “I am angry with you and your two friends, for you have not spoken the truth about Me, as My servant Job has. 8 Now take seven bulls and seven rams, go to My servant Job, and offer a burnt offering for yourselves. Then My servant Job will pray for you. [h] I will surely accept his prayer and not deal with you as your folly deserves. For you have not spoken the truth about Me, as My servant Job has.” 9 Then Eliphaz the Temanite, Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite went and did as the LORD had told them, and the LORD accepted Job’s prayer.

God Restores Job

10 After Job had prayed for his friends, the LORD restored his prosperity and doubled his previous possessions. [i] 11 All his brothers, sisters, and former acquaintances [j] came to his house and dined with him in his house. They sympathized with him and comforted him concerning all the adversity the LORD had brought on him. Each one gave him a qesitah [k, l] and a gold earring. [m]

12 So the LORD blessed the last part of Job's life more than the first. He owned 14,000 sheep, 6,000 camels, 1,000 yoke of oxen, and 1,000 female donkeys. 13 He also had seven sons and three daughters. 14 He named his first daughter Jemimah, his second Keziah, and his third Keren-happuch. [n] 15 No women as beautiful as Job's daughters could be found in all the land, and their father granted them an inheritance with their brothers.

16 Job lived 140 years after this and saw his children and their children to the fourth generation. 17 Then Job died, old and full of days. [o]

JOB

Introduction | Outline | Timeline | Study Notes | Word Studies

Introduction

"See how He spreads His lightning around Him and covers the depths of the sea" (36:30).

The book of Job is named after the central character and speaker. The narrative deals with a man who lost everything and the subsequent discussions he had about the reason for his suffering. God alone had the final word and eventually restored all that Job had lost.

Circumstances of Writing Author: The author of Job is unknown. The author was a learned man whose knowledge embraced the heavens (22:12; 38:32-33) and earth (26:7-8; 28:9-11; 37:11,16). His knowledge touched on foreign lands (28:16,19), various products (6:19), and human professions (7:6; 9:26; 18:8-10; 28:1-11). He was familiar with plants (14:7-9) and animals (4:10-11; 38:39-39:30; 40:15-41:34). He was a wise man, familiar with traditional wisdom (6:5-6; 17:5; 28:12,28), but above all a man of spiritual sensitivity (1:1,5,8; 2:3; 14:14-15; 16:11-21; 19:23-27; 23:10; 34:26-28; 40:1-5; 42:1-6). He was doubtless an Israelite as confirmed by his frequent use of God's covenant name (Yahweh).

Background: The story of Job is set in the patriarchal period. In that era wealth consisted of the possession of cattle and servants. Like other OT patriarchal family heads, Job performed priestly duties, including offering sacrifices for his family. Like the patriarchs, Job lived to be more than 100 years old. Geographically, the action took place in the northern Arabian Peninsula, in the land of Uz (1:1), often associated with Edom. Job's three friends also had Edomite or southern associations, as did the young Elihu (see notes at 2:11; 32:2-3).

Although Job is set in the patriarchal period, its date of writing is unknown. Jewish tradition places the authorship of Job in the time of Moses.

Message and Purpose The book of Job demonstrates that a sovereign, righteous God is sufficient and trustworthy for every situation in life, even in the most difficult of circumstances. Along with this truth, Job also carries several messages.

Character: A major portion of the book's discussion revolves around conduct that reflects correct ethical values. Job is introduced as a man of character (1:1), and God testified to his consistently blameless character (1:8; 2:3). In discussing Job's situation, Eliphaz initially suggested that Job's blameless character could prove to be to his benefit (4:7). Bildad, however, was not so sure (8:6,20). Both men later stated that no one can be totally pure (15:14-15; 25:4-5). Job consistently maintained that his conduct was above reproach (27:5; see chap. 31), and he was willing to take his stand before God to prove it (23:7). As Job saw it, in God's dealings with man He does not appear always to reward a blameless and pure life (9:23; 10:14).

Righteousness: Job stated that his righteousness was the central issue in his situation (6:29), yet he wondered how he could convince God of this (9:2,15,20; 10:15). All three of Job's friends condemned Job's attitude as self-righteous (32:1). For Elihu, Job's fault was failing to see God's essential righteousness while maintaining his own (32:2; 34:5,17). In this Elihu anticipated God's own words to Job (40:8).

Justice: Job wanted to receive justice in his situation (19:7; 23:4). He renounced injustice (27:4) and modeled justice in his dealings with others (29:14; 31:13-15) but felt that God had not always dealt justly with him (14:3; 16:10-14; 23:10-16; 27:2-6; 34:5-6; 35:2). Job wanted to present his case before God (13:18), but he wondered whether he could get a hearing (9:32). Little is said about justice and injustice in the divine speeches, but the conclusion is evident. God's justice is seen in His administration of the physical universe and animal world as well as in human relationships. Only God has the wisdom and power to govern all of this with perfect harmony and justice. Rather than championing his own righteousness, Job should understand God's essential righteousness by which He justly administers the universe (40:7-14). When Job finally came to understand this (42:4-6), he experienced the justice he had sought and found his sufficiency in God.

Contribution to the Bible The book of Job teaches that suffering comes to everyone, the righteous and unrighteous alike. God does not always keep the righteous from danger or suffering. Ultimately God controls all of life's situations, including limiting the power of Satan. God's comfort and strength are always available to the trusting soul.

Although the book of Job does take note of the problem of suffering, it focuses more on the nature of human conduct before a sovereign and holy God. In harmony with the rest of Scripture, the book teaches that even a consistent practice of religion is insufficient without a genuine heart relationship with God (Dt 6:4-6; Ps 86:11-12; Mt 22:37). The answer to life's problems and goals lies in a proper reverence for Him who is perfect in all His being and actions. Man needs not just to confess God but to surrender everything to Him. By letting Him truly be God in every area of life, a person will find Him sufficient.

Structure The writer was a skilled storyteller, artistically characterizing the distinctions between the protagonist (Job), antagonist (Satan), and literary foils (the three friends and Elihu). The characterization demonstrates that God Himself is the ultimate protagonist (or "hero") of the story. Satan was as much challenging God as Job's piety. Although Job's three "comforters" applied traditional wisdom to Job's situation, each did it in a different way. Eliphaz, the rationalist, reasoned with Job (15:17-18); Bildad, the apologist, sought to defend God (25:1-6); and Zophar acted much like a prosecutor (11:1-6). The youthful Elihu served as a mediating influence in order to prepare for the divine speeches that follow (33:23-26). The writer constructed a well-developed plot built around dramatic dialogue. The fact that he related the account of Job's test in story form does not mean that Job was not a real person who underwent a real test.

Timeline

Study Notes 1:1 The English rendering of Job's name comes from the Septuagint (LXX), the Greek translation of the OT. The Hebrew form reflects a name that is common in the ancient Near East, meaning "where is the (heavenly) father." The name carries a double significance for the story. Not only will Job wonder whether God has abandoned him, but it suggests the deeper questions: Is God really sufficient for every aspect of life? Will He be there when I need Him? Uz could name a place east of the Jordan River anywhere from Aram to Edom (Gn 10:22-23; Lm 4:21). Job's devotion to God was wholehearted. He had perfect integrity (lit he was "blameless and upright") and walked wisely before the Lord (28:28). This indicates that Job had a consistent spiritual walk, not that he was sinless.

1:2-3 The numbers seven (seven sons and 7,000 sheep), three (three daughters and 3,000 camels), and 1,000 (500 yoke of oxen, where a yoke represents a pair; and 500 female donkeys) symbolized perfection and completeness. Job's impressive family, servants, livestock, and material wealth made him the greatest man in the east, where "east" could designate "virtually any place from Damascus to Arabia and as far east as Persia" (R. Alden, Job, 50).

1:5 To ensure his family's spiritual purity Job regularly acted as priest. The word cursed renders the Hebrew "blessed" (used as a euphemism in this case).

Job's wife later used the same word in the same way (2:9).

1:6 The heavenly setting indicates that the sons of God are angels (2:1; cp. Ps 29:1; 103:20). Satan (the Accuser; cp. Zch 3:1-2) also came to the heavenly council. He always opposes the work of the Lord (Mt 16:23; Rv 12:9) but is limited in his power (Jb 1:12; 2:6). LORD translates the Hebrew name of the covenant God of Israel (Yahweh).

1:7-8 The Lord's questions suggest that Satan came to the meeting uninvited but do not indicate that God was ignorant of Satan's activities. God's omniscience is attested throughout the Scriptures (Ps 139:7-12). Instances in which He asks questions are acts of accommodation that allow Him to relate to humans via dialogue.

1:9-11 Satan challenged Job's motives for fearing God. He suggested that Job's devotion to God depended on his life circumstances.

1:12 The limitation God imposed on Satan's testing demonstrated the Lord's desire that Job be a trophy of God's grace even in his suffering.

1:15 The Sabeans mentioned here were apparently nomads from northern Arabia, not the later wealthy kingdom of south Arabia whose fabled queen Sheba visited King Solomon (1Kg 10:1-13) and whose people Isaiah prophesied would submit to Israel (Is 45:14).

1:16 The lightning storm (lit "fire of God") is normally a divine weapon (2Kg 1:10-14). Ironically, Satan was given permission to use it against God's servants.

1:17 Like the Sabeans, the Chaldeans were nomadic raiders. King Nebuchadnezzar II of Babylon was a Chaldean (2Kg 24:1; Dn 1:1).

1:18-19 As after the Sabean raid (v. 15), a force of nature completed the attack against Job's family.

1:20 Tearing one's garments (Gn 37:34; 2Ch 34:19) and shaving one's head (Am 5:10) were symbolic acts of grief. Job's falling to the ground to worship God reflected a traditional method of showing reverence (Jos 5:14; Rv 1:17).

1:21-22 Job recognized that ultimately the LORD determines all things, so he submitted himself to God's sovereign will. The word praise occurs in verse 11 where it is translated "curse" (see note at v. 5). Rather than cursing God as Satan had predicted, Job blessed his name and did not blame God. The word "name" reflects the revealed character and reputation of God (Jl 2:26). The term name came to be a surrogate for God (Dn 9:18-19) and was later applied to Christ (Ac 5:41; 3Jn 7).

2:3 God denounced Satan's motives as pure hostility, first against God and then Job. Although Satan incited God to afflict Job, this does not mean that God can be manipulated against His will. Job was not a mere pawn in a superhuman struggle.

2:4-5 Satan's second test suggested that Job was callous and concerned only for himself. The proverbial saying skin for skin could indicate Job's willingness to give up all he had, including his family, in order to save his own life; or that if the Lord allowed Satan to afflict him bodily, Job would in turn deny the Lord.

2:6-7 Again (see note at 1:12) Satan's power to afflict Job was limited by the Lord. The severity of Job's condition would convince his friends that Job was being punished for sinning (Dt 28:35).

2:8 In scraping himself with broken pottery, Job may have been trying to get rid of the matter that oozed from his sores (so the LXX) and thus alleviate the itching. Job's sitting among the ashes symbolized his grief and despondency (2Sm 13:19; Est 4:3). Ash heaps were traditionally located at town dumps.

2:9 Job's wife avoided blasphemy by using a Hebrew euphemism, "bless," for her real intent: curse.

2:10 Job recognized that ultimately God is in control of every life, whether for good or for times of adversity.

2:11 Eliphaz came from Teman, a principle city in Edom (Ezk 25:13; Am 1:12-13). Bildad ("son of Hadad" the storm god) probably came from the tribe of Shuah, descended from Abraham through his second wife Keturah (Gn 25:1-2; 1Ch 1:32). Zophar may have been from northern Arabia.

2:12-13 Job's three friends responded to his gruesome appearance with actions symbolic of deep mourning: weeping (2Sm 18:33), tearing their robes (Jb 1:20), sitting on the ground (Lm 2:10; Nah 1:4), and throwing dust on their heads (Jos 7:6; 2Sm 13:19). A seven-day period was observed in times of mourning for the dead (Gn 50:10; 1Sm 31:13). With due propriety Job's friends remained silent, waiting for Job to speak first. It is often best in sympathizing with those who are hurting just to be there and to be ready to listen.

3:3 The Hebrew word translated boy is usually used of an adult male (4:17), often with an indication of strength (Jr 41:16) or prominence (2Sm 23:1). Job's power and position mattered little to him now.

3:4-7 In language reminiscent of Gn 1:2-5, Job wished that his day of birth could become "uncreated."

3:8-9 As a great dragon gobbled up the sun in ancient Near Eastern mythology, so Job asked that the sun should never have brought light to his day of birth. Leviathan is known from ancient Ugaritic mythology as a sea monster, which the god Baal defeated. Leviathan appears in the OT symbolically in connection with those forces that oppose God (26:12-14; Ps 74:12-14; 104:26; Is 27:1). The mythological allusions in Job (5:7; 7:12; 9:13; 18:13; 38:12) do not indicate scriptural endorsement of pagan theology or mythic zoology but serve as literary allusions. The morning stars were Venus and Mercury.

3:12 The knees probably refer to those of his mother either in childbirth (Gn 30:3) or in taking up her child for nursing.

3:13-19 Asleep is used frequently as a metaphor for death in the Bible, especially of the righteous (Jn 11:11-15; 1Co 15:20). Job's words should not be pressed to depict a common condition for all souls in the afterlife. Although the body may rest in the grave, the righteous have the sure hope of eternal life (Ps 16:9-17; 49:15; 73:25-26; Ac 2:25-28; 1Co 15:50-57; 2Co 5:1-8). The case of the wicked is far different (Ps 1:4-5; 49:14-15; Mt 8:12; 25:41,46).

3:23-25 The protective hedge that God had placed around Job (1:10) now hemmed him in to suffering.

4:1 Since Job had broken the silence (chap. 3), Eliphaz offered his concerned counsel, filled with various forms of traditional wisdom. Although Eliphaz's counsel contained truthful observations, they failed to address the reason for Job's condition.

4:4 Stumbling and knees . . . buckling relate as much to the psychological aspects of tragedy as to the physical (Ps 109:24; Ezk 21:7; Nah 2:10).

4:6-9 Eliphaz's advice was meant to be an encouragement and a gentle call for Job's self-reflection, yet it could have implied that Job's children deserved what they got.

4:10-11 This traditional wisdom from Eliphaz declared that individual strength could not deliver the wicked (Nah 2:11-12). The lion is at times symbolic of the wicked (Ps 7:2) or those who rely on self rather than God (Ps 34:10).

4:12-16 Eliphaz seems to have been awakened out of deep sleep to receive a supernatural message. Whether this was a theophany (appearance of God) or an angelic visitation (Dn 2:5) is uncertain. Eliphaz thought his experience had provided him with wisdom to understand one of life's mysteries.

4:17 The basic question was not whether man is more righteous than God, but could he be truly righteous and pure before his Maker (25:4). No one can make special claim to God based on his supposed total moral integrity.

4:18-21 Eliphaz's point here was that because people are not sinless before God, they may expect difficulties in this life, even tragedy and death. People need to acquire godly wisdom in order to live properly before God.

5:1 The call-answer motif often expresses intimacy of fellowship between God and the believer (14:15; Is 65:24; Jr 33:3) and God's availability in times of distress (Jb 13:20-22; Ps 86:5-7; 102:1-2). Eliphaz told Job not to expect help from the holy ones. The need for a mediator is an important theme in Job (9:33; 16:19-20; 19:25).

5:2-7 Rather than being angry or resentful, Job should realize that trouble is part of the cycle of human life. The Hebrew word for sparks (lit "sons of flame" or "sons of Resheph") may contain an allusion to Resheph, the Canaanite god of pestilence and plague, reinforcing the inevitability of natural disasters.

5:9-16 This is a hymn of praise, possibly used in an ancient worship ceremony.

5:17 The rendering here of the Almighty (Hb Shaddai) represents a derivation from a verbal root known both in Hebrew and Akkadian indicating overpowering force. Other lexicographers suggest a literal meaning "Destroyer" or "(God of) the Mountain."

5:18 Eliphaz suggested that Job was in need of divine discipline, so he should bear his condition happily (Pr 1:2,7; 3:11-12; 23:12). Then God would bless him again with peace, prosperity, and a large family (Jb 5:18-26). For Eliphaz, as for Job, the evidence of personal piety was seen in God's external blessings.

5:19 The parallel use of six and seven is an example of a Semitic literary device in which a number and the next higher number are used to indicate indefiniteness. Where a definite number is intended, it is always the second one and the details are spelled out (Pr 30:18-19,21-23,29-31; Am 1:3-2:8).

5:27 Eliphaz exhorted Job to apply the tested and true principles Eliphaz had just applied to Job's condition. In so doing Job would understand why God was disciplining him and be able to bear it profitably (v. 17).

6:3 The sand of the seas is often used as a metaphor for vastness (29:18; cp. Jos 11:4; 1Kg 4:20) or something beyond measure (Gn 22:17; Jdg 7:12; 1Kg 4:29; Hs 1:10).

6:4 God is often portrayed as the divine warrior whose arrows shatter the enemy (Dt 32:42; Ps 7:12-13; 18:14; Hab 3:11). God's mighty strength brings terror to the objects of His wrath (Ex 23:27; Is 2:10,19; Jr 49:5). Job felt he was the object of God's personal attack.

6:5 Animals, whether wild or compliant, do not complain when they are well tended. Job would not complain if he received just treatment in accordance with his righteousness.

6:6-7 The rhetorical question in verse 6 implied a negative answer. Rather than tasteful nourishment to Job's grieving soul, Eliphaz's words were like contaminated food.

6:8-10 Contrary to Eliphaz's advice, Job put his hope not in his piety (4:6-7) or God's disciplinary action (5:17), but in death (3:11-15; 10:21-22), God's final blow. God's granting of Job's wish to be crushed and cut . . . off would relieve his suffering and affirm his innocence.

6:14 Job complained about his treatment by his friends. As their suffering friend, he should receive loyalty (or lovingkindness) from them (Pr 14:21).

6:15 Wadi is an Arabian term for an intermittent desert stream—called an arroyo, gulch, gully, or wash in the American Southwest.

6:19 The oasis of Tema served as a trade center in northwestern Arabia.

6:21 Seeing Job's dreadful condition, his friends were afraid to get close to him lest they also incur God's judgment.

6:22-23 Job had never asked his friends for special favors. Surely they could at least be loyal.

Job described his friends as being treacherous as a wadi, a rocky watercourse that is dry except during rainy seasons. These creek beds can become raging torrents when especially heavy rains fall. Seen here is Wadi Qilt, a deep valley that drains much of the northern Judean wilderness.

6:24-26 The Hebrew word behind what I did wrong (shagah) speaks of unintentional sin. If his friends thought Job had erred, they should tell him honestly but gently, not in a painful manner. Job's friends had not yet disproven his claim to innocence, they had only dismissed it.

6:27 Job compared his friends to merciless creditors who would take an orphan or sell a friend into slavery in payment for a debt (Ex 22:22; 2Kg 4:1; Am 2:6; 8:6).

6:30 Job found Eliphaz's words tasteless (vv. 5-7), but his own words were not displeasing.

7:1-2 Job complained that God treated humans like a harsh master. The term forced labor could be used of military service, but here it involves the institution of service that was demanded of a man for a certain period (the corvée; cp. 1Kg 5:13-14). Hired hands usually worked for a day's pay (see Dt 24:14-15). To withhold a person's wages was a miscarriage of justice (Lv 19:13).

7:5 Job's boils (2:7) scabbed over only temporarily, then erupted, and the oozing pus became filled with maggots.

7:6 A play on words occurs here. The Hebrew word tiqwah can mean both "hope" and "thread." Like a weaver running out of thread, Job's life was moving swiftly toward its end, leaving him without hope.

7:9 In the OT Sheol is used both for the grave generally (1Kg 2:6; Ps 16:10; 49:15) and for the final state of the wicked specifically (Ps 49:13-14; Is 14:14-15). At times it reflects a commonly held ancient view of a dismal underworld into which all people passed after death.

7:12 In Canaanite mythology the sea god (Yam) and the sea monster (Tannin) were defeated by Baal. The allusion in verse 12 compares Job to some primordial adversary on which God is keeping watch. Such mythological allusions appear in the OT about God's victory over and control of the forces of nature in creation (9:13-14; 26:12-13), at the Red Sea (Ps 74:14-15), and the forces of evil at the end of history (Is 27:1).

7:16 Breath (Hb hevel) can also designate something worthless or futile (Ec 1:2).

7:17-19 Unlike the viewpoint of the psalmist (Ps 8:3-8), Job answered his own rhetorical question in despairing fashion to indicate God's constant oppression of him.

7:20 If Job had sinned against God unintentionally (1:5), let the ever-watchful God tell him. Job used the title Watcher sarcastically.

8:2 Bildad acted like God's "defense attorney." He charged Job with speaking like an empty windbag.

8:3-4 Bildad's rhetorical question (v. 3) expected a negative answer. God is always righteous in His actions (Dt 32:4). Bildad believed Job's sinning children got what they deserved.

8:5-7 By implication Bildad suggested that Job had sinned, hence his condition. Because God had spared Job's life, there was yet hope for a change in Job's fortunes. Home more strictly denotes pasturage and by extension a dwelling place (5:3,24; cp. Jr 6:2; Zph 2:6).

8:8-9 Bildad appealed to traditional wisdom. Life is as short as a vanishing shadow (14:1-2; Ps 102:11; 109:23; 144:4; Ec 6:12).

8:11-13 As papyrus dies without water to nourish it, so the godless will perish. To succeed, man needs God, the "water of life."

8:16-19 The godless are like a vine that appears firmly established among the rocks. Yet it is easily uprooted leaving no trace.

8:20-22 Bildad summed up his case: If Job was truly righteous, God would sustain him.

9:2-4 A judicial image occurs throughout chapter 9. Job would like to present his case for innocence before God in court (vv. 3,16,19,32). As a finite plaintiff his arguments were inadequate (vv. 3-4,14-15,20,32) before an omniscient and omnipotent judge (v. 15). Job needed a mediator to arbitrate his case (vv. 33-35; see note at 16:21).

9:5-10 Job called on a hymn extolling God's sovereignty as Creator. The imagery is metaphorical and is not to be taken as a cosmology.

9:5-6 Mountains are sometimes portrayed as pillars for the sky (26:11).

9:8 The heavens could be viewed as a great tent stretched out over the earth (Ps 104:2; Is 40:22). The image of God treading on the waves of the sea pictures God as controlling the forces of nature (Mc 1:3) much as a conqueror defeats his foes (Is 63:3; Hab 3:8,15).

9:9 Ancients often identified stars and constellations as gods and goddesses, used them as navigational guides, and noted their changing positions to mark the seasons.

9:11-12 God's mysterious and sovereign ways are often unnoticed or incomprehensible to man. Mere humans cannot fault God for what He does.

9:13-14 Job felt that if the forces of nature could not withstand God, how could he hope to win his case before Him? Rahab suggests an ancient mythological sea monster. The image is that of God subduing and controlling the forces of nature (26:12-13; Ps 89:10; Is 51:9-10), a reminder that Yahweh alone is truly God and sovereign over all forces that seem to oppose Him.

9:15-16 Job suggested that if God should respond to his summons to court, he would have no chance of winning his case.

9:17-20 Job felt that God was mercilessly battering him. Since God is omnipotent, how could Job expect justice? His lack of eloquence would frustrate his defense.

9:21-24 Job displayed his hopelessness. He was certain of his innocence, but in his despair he imagined God to be capricious and an overbearing tyrant. Job felt Eliphaz (5:17-26) and Bildad (8:20) were wrong: God did not distinguish between the blameless and the wicked. Since there is only one sovereign God, everything must ultimately trace back to Him.

9:25-26 Job's imagery heightened his lament for his life, which was fast ebbing away (7:6-8).

9:27-29 Job accused God of prejudging his case. Job felt that God was determined to hold him guilty.

9:30-31 Job suggested Bildad's views about repentance and self-purification were mistaken; Job feels these acts would be useless. Using lye rather than oil for cleansing indicates an extreme measure.

9:32-35 Job sensed the need for an arbitrator to adjudicate between himself and God (16:19-20; 19:25). Job had no angel or Mesopotamian personal god to aid him.

10:1-3 Since Job was convinced of his uprightness and innocence, he would like to know why God was oppressing him. For God had apparently rejected him, while looking on approvingly at the plans of the wicked. Job's rhetorical question implied a negative response.

10:4-7 Job's rhetorical question amounted to a charge that God was acting from a human perspective in His investigation of Job. God knew that Job was not wicked. Nevertheless, Job viewed God as bringing charges against him just because He could.

10:8-12 The image of dust is reminiscent of man's creation in the cycle of life (Gn 2:7; 3:19; Ps 104:14). Like a divine cheese maker or weaver, God created Job and nurtured him. Why did He now seek to destroy him?

10:13-17 Job accused God of being a relentless prosecutor and unjust judge. His predetermined plan was to convict Job whether he was wicked or righteous. Job had lost all sense of self-worth and did not dare to lift his head (Lm 2:10).

10:18-19 Job reiterated his opening lament, wishing never to have been born or wishing to have died at birth (3:11-16; Jr 20:18).

10:20-22 Job pleaded with God to be compassionate and to stop His incessant persecution so he might enjoy his few remaining years (7:6-10,21). Job piled up the images in describing the afterlife as a place of deepest darkness. His despairing words reflect a common Mesopotamian understanding about the afterlife but not the biblical view (1Co 15:51-57).

11:2-3 Zophar began by attacking Job's answers much as a prosecuting attorney would press his case against a defendant. Zophar's rhetorical questions implied negative answers. He called Job a talker (lit a "man of lips"). The image of the lip is used in many ways in the OT. The lips of the fool lack knowledge (Pr 14:7), but those of the wise preserve it (Pr 5:2; 10:13; 20:15) and pass it on to others (Pr 15:7). Some lips speak arrogantly (Ps 12:4; Pr 12:7), rashly (Ps 106:33), or even mockingly (Ps 22:7).

11:4 Zophar misrepresented Job's position like an adversary at law who attacks the implications of another's position rather than its essence. Job had not claimed that his teaching was flawless. Rather, he recognized that it lacked patience (6:11) and complete perspective (7:15,20). Job did not claim that he was sinless (i.e., pure), only blameless (9:21; 10:7) and upright (6:29).

11:5-6 Zophar pointed out that wisdom had two sides; this probably means the known and the unknown, the seen and the unseen. Only God understood the depths of true wisdom and could view things from all perspectives. If only Job could see both sides of his situation, he would realize that God's case against him was just. Zophar declared that God had only punished Job for part of his sin.

11:7-9 Zophar's rhetorical question indicated that Job was not in a position to understand fully all that was happening to him.

11:10-11 Because God was just and all-powerful, no one could stop or resist

Him. Zophar implied that Job had sinned and God certainly knew the facts in Job's case.

11:13-14 Only if Job had a pure heart and clean hands (Ps 24:4) could he expect God's forgiveness and blessing (Is 1:15-17). The image is that of welcoming injustice as though it were a guest. To dwell in your tents is used metaphorically of sharing in someone's blessings (Gn 9:27) or occupying another's land (Ps 78:55). The tent is also used in the Bible to signify man's earthly body (2Co 5:1).

11:15-16 Zophar believed that confessed sin and a change of lifestyle would restore Job's honor and his position before God and man. Although Job had gone through deep waters (see notes at Ps 69:1-2; Jnh 2:5), these would pass and be only a distant memory.

11:17-18 Zophar's encouraging words stood in stark contrast to Job's opening lament (3:4-7), to Eliphaz's observations about the fate of crafty schemers (5:12-14), and to Bildad's warning about evildoers (8:20).

11:19 Zophar assured Job that with restoration his fame and reputation would return. To be "sought out" functions at times idiomatically for the bringing of gifts (42:11; Ps 45:12).

11:20 Zophar concluded his speech with a dire warning. Unlike the blessings offered to a repentant sinner that he had just described, the unrepentant wicked could expect only suffering. Their prosperity would fail and their only hope of relief would be death itself.

12:2 Job lashed out sarcastically at all three friends, accusing them of being condescending. Although they claimed the wisdom of the ages, by their simplistic observations of his problem they had misapplied their learning. Acquired knowledge does not guarantee true wisdom.

12:3 Job reminded his friends that he had access to the same body of traditional wisdom that they described. By saying that he had a mind, Job implied that, unlike his friends, he weighed the evidence in order to make proper application.

12:5-6 Job could not reconcile his harsh condition with the ease the unrighteous seemed to enjoy. His words indicate that Zophar's closing remarks (11:13-19) simply did not fit the facts.

12:7-10 Job contended that all nature is tuned to understand that everything is in the hand of the LORD (see Is 64:8). The metaphor of God's hand usually conveys the image of strength or power (1Ch 29:12).

12:11-12 Job's rhetorical question suggested that mere knowledge was insufficient. A person needed to evaluate carefully what he heard. Job had expected to hear better advice from three supposedly wise men (v. 2).

12:13 In the ultimate sense, true wisdom and strength reside only in God. He alone is the omniscient and omnipotent One.

12:14-15 Job called attention to what he perceived to be negative features of God's actions. His destructive power was irreversible. His decisions could not be overturned. It seemed like it was either famine or flood.

12:16 Job's review of the scope of God's wisdom and power includes a stunning but true claim that even the deceived and the deceiver, both of whom are presumably bereft of true knowledge of God and do not willingly submit to Him, are His.

12:17-25 As Job cynically saw it, God arbitrarily directs social and political situations according to His inscrutable pleasure, with the result that counselors . . . judges . . . kings . . . priests, and all the world's leaders strive in vain to choose wise paths. In reality God's sovereignty is not arbitrary. He works all things "together for the good of those who love God" (Rm 8:28).

12:18 It is unclear what bonds and a belt are intended to convey with regard to kings. One possibility is that God easily strips kings of their robes and leads them away. Another is that God can release those whom kings have bound and bind the king instead. A third is that, if a king is defeated and bound, God can release him and gird him.

12:19 To be led away barefoot pictures defeat, captivity, and exile.

12:20 Under God's governance, trusted advisers can be deprived of the very things that made them advisers in the first place: their eloquence and good judgment.

12:22 Though Job is unable to make sense of his own sufferings, he recognizes God's power to reveal mysteries.

12:24-25 As Job viewed it, national leaders are caused by God to use poor judgment that leads to their disgrace (Ps 107:40).

13:1-2 Job made clear that Zophar's remarks about uninformed or stupid men (11:12) did not apply to him!

13:3 Job again (9:3,16,19,32) stated his desire to present his case before God. He'd had enough with making his case before finite, fallible men. He wanted a formal hearing before his divine adversary.

13:4-5 In Job's opinion, not only were his friends not as wise as they assumed themselves to be (12:1), but like unskilled physicians they had misdiagnosed his symptoms. Their best display of wisdom would be their silence (Pr 17:28).

13:6 Hear and listen are familiar calls to pay attention to what the teacher (Dt 6:4; Pr 4:1,10; 5:1; 7:24) or poet (Dt 32:1; Jdg 5:3) has to say.

13:7 Job's rhetorical questions implied that his friends, by taking God's side against Job, had twisted traditional wisdom and applied it deceitfully. Surely

God could not be helped by false and unjust testimony.

13:8 The Hebrew idiom "lift up the face" is elsewhere used of showing respect for someone (Gn 32:21), but in the negative sense it means to show partiality (Ps 82:2; Pr 18:5), which was forbidden in Levitical legislation (Lv 19:15).

13:9-10 The way Job's friends applied their misguided traditional wisdom to Job's case was indefensible and would turn against them if God examined them instead.

13:11 If God called Job's friends to account for their treatment of him, they would learn something of the majesty of God and it would terrify them. God's judgment against the wicked brings fear and dread (Ex 15:16; Jr 49:5; Rv 6:16).

13:12 A mixture of ash and water was sometimes used to write on a scroll, but the writing would soon disappear.

13:13 Job again asked for his friends' silence (vv. 5-6) so he might speak his mind regardless of the cost.

13:14 Job suggested that in speaking his mind plainly he was putting his life . . . at risk (lit "I take my flesh in my teeth"; i.e. "I expose myself to being consumed"). Yet he was so confident of his uprightness and integrity that he would take the chance and defend himself.

13:15 The Hebrew verb yachal can mean either "wait" (21:23) or "hope" (6:11). The HCSB has Job hoping in God (for vindication) even if God kills him. Alternatively, in the consonantal text (a Hb text that has no vowel points) the verb is preceded by a particle normally understood as a negative (see textual footnote), which would have Job observing that God might kill him, leaving him without hope (10:20-22). In either rendering, Job believed that his cause was just and that he must defend the uprightness of his ways. Job felt that he had nothing to lose by this risky move, because God seemed determined to find some charge against him in order to destroy him (9:20-21; 10:4-7).

13:16 If the Lord allowed Job to appear before Him, it would be proof of his uprightness.

13:20-21 Job contended that if he were not oppressed (hence the appeal, remove Your hand from me) or terrified (the typical reaction to being in God's presence; see Ex 20:18-19; Is 6:1ff), he might be able to state his case convincingly.

13:22 Job applied the call-answer motif, expressing a desire for help or communion (Ps 102:1-2) in his situation (Jb 9:16; 12:4; 14:15). He longed for renewed fellowship with God either at God's invitation or Job's petition.

13:23 Job remained confident that he was suffering innocently (9:21; 10:7).

13:24 Idioms involving God's face can indicate the Lord's approval or blessing (Nm 6:24-26; 2Ch 30:9) or His disapproval and judgment (Ps 143:7; Jr 21:10).

13:25 In striking similes Job reminded God of his frailty as a human being. Dry straw is often used metaphorically for that which is easily scattered (Ps 83:13; Is 40:23-24; Jr 13:24) or consumed in God's fiery judgment (Nah 1:10).

13:26 Job believed that he should not still be paying for the petty iniquities of his youth.

13:27 Job complained about God's constant scrutiny and mistreatment of him (7:19-20; 9:17-18; 10:4-5). Like an enemy prisoner, he was shackled and guarded, leaving him without freedom of movement.

13:28 Job again reminded God of the brevity of life (7:6; 9:25; 10:20). As rotting food, decaying wood, or a moth-eaten garment become useless and worthy only of being destroyed, so Job was wasting away toward his inevitable end. Although the similes are phrased with regard to man in general, Job clearly intended an application to his specific situation.

14:2 Job's similes emphasize that a person's life passes all too quickly, like a flower that is soon gone (Ps 103:15-16; Is 5:24; 40:6-8) or like a fleeting shadow (8:9; Ec 6:12).

14:3-4 Job wondered why God would spend so much time scrutinizing poor, powerless, short-lived mankind (7:17; 13:28-14:2). He could not understand why God seemed determined to bring him to judgment (7:19-20; 13:23-27). Actually, no one can be totally pure before God. Job never claimed to be sinless (7:21; 10:14-15); he merely insisted that he had done nothing to deserve his suffering (13:12-19).

14:5-6 Job reminded God that He had set the limits of human longevity. Job therefore urged the Lord to stop His constant surveillance (7:17-20) and fault-finding.

14:12 The sleep of death is as permanent as the heavens (cp. Dt 11:20-21; Ps 89:28-29). In other contexts this speaks to the fact that earthly life is irrevocably lost upon death, but here Job seemingly expresses that he has no hope of afterlife.

14:13 In his despair Job continues to shift his stance. He now entertains the possibility that death might not end it all. Perhaps in time God's anger against him would pass, then He would remember Job favorably—that is, act on Job's behalf. This implies Job will have an ongoing existence beyond the grave. By Sheol Job referred to the grave (see notes at 7:9 and 26:5-6).

14:14-15 Job felt that if there was hope of life after death, he could endure his present struggle (7:1-5). The Hebrew word translated relief is used elsewhere to denote a change (Jdg 14:12-13). Job's hoped-for change would be to that of a new life of fellowship and communion with God. This is indicated by his use of the call-answer motif (Jb 13:22; Ps 102:1-2; Is 65:24).

14:16-17 Under these new and better conditions, Job would no longer experience God's scrutiny to determine his faults (7:17-19; 10:6; 13:27). His sins would be sealed up, never to be brought up again.

14:20-21 In his depression Job saw only God's oppressive might and the prospect of a painful future calamity followed by a dismal state of death.

15:2-3 Eliphaz's rhetorical questions suggested a negative answer. Unlike a truly wise man, Job's defense was self-serving and empty. Job displayed his passion like a hot east wind (Hb khamsin, or sirocco; cp. 1:19), which had entered the depths of his belly.

15:4 Eliphaz suggested that Job's intemperate attitude had affected his proper reverence for God. How then could Job claim to be wise? Wisdom begins with the fear of God (see Pr 1:7).

15:5-6 Eliphaz believed that Job's stance against his friends' counsel was dictated by an underlying iniquity. In defending himself Job used cunning terms to cover his guilt. Yet Job's words condemned him (9:20).

15:7-10 Eliphaz wanted Job to realize that he had no claim to superior wisdom (12:1-3; 13:1-2). In words bordering on sarcasm, Eliphaz stated that Job had neither priority of birth nor privileged access to the heavenly council (1:6; 2:1). Job should understand that time-tested wisdom, which had been handed down long before Job's father, was on the side of his friends.

15:11-13 Eliphaz claimed that in his passion Job had thoughtlessly turned his anger against God with excessive language (7:1-2,11-20; 9:14-19; 10:3,17; 13:25-27).

15:14-16 If even angels were not trustworthy (4:18), how much less so mortal man. Man's basic nature is desperately corrupt.

15:17-19 Eliphaz appealed to his special grasp of traditional wisdom and wide experience (4:8-9,12-21; 5:3-7,27). His experience and understanding were in harmony with the wisdom that came from the early inhabitants of the land. That was a time of pure knowledge when no foreigner was present to bring corrupting influences to bear.

15:20 Job had maintained that God gave no special treatment to the blameless (9:22), but gave control of the earth to the wicked (9:24; 10:3). Eliphaz agreed with Zophar (11:20) that the wicked lived out their few years in pain. Neither of these polarized views corresponds with reality.

15:21 Dreadful sounds make the wicked person think someone is about to attack him. He is never truly at peace.

15:22 Unlike the righteous person (Ps 23:6; 27:13), the wicked person could look forward only to violent death and judgment (Ps 1:4-6).

15:23 The wicked person, asserts Eliphaz, fears he will become a vagrant.

15:26 The term headlong (lit "runs at Him with the neck") portrays of the wicked person as having reckless self-confidence.

15:27-29 Metaphorically, fat indicates a person possesses health and wealth (Gn 45:18). It can also carry a negative nuance associated with arrogance (Ps 73:3-7). Both ideas are expressed here.

15:30 As tender shoots wither before a scorching sun or a blasting desert wind, so the wicked will lose everything in God's judgment (4:8-9; Is 11:4). God's mouth can be used figuratively as the vehicle of His judgment. His breath represents the ease with which His mighty power accomplishes the deed and is a suitable figure for a desert wind.

15:32-33 Eliphaz used graphic descriptions of the sudden end of the wicked, whose potential will not be realized (22:15-16; Pr 10:27).

15:34 The unrighteous social practices of the godless wicked (Pr 17:8; Is 5:23; Mc 3:11; 7:3) will profit them nothing (Pr 15:27).

15:35 Rather than achieving their wicked goals, the godless metaphorically bear children named trouble . . . evil, and deception. What they did to others would cause their own downfall. Womb is the same word translated "himself" at the opening of Eliphaz's speech (see "his belly" in textual footnote at v. 2). Framing or bracketing a section of material in this way is a literary device called inclusio that is often not evident in the English translation.

16:4 Shaking the head was a gesture of mockery or contempt (2Kg 19:21; Ps 22:7).

16:6-17 Job observed that whether he spoke or said nothing, his suffering remained unaltered (v. 6). He would therefore speak, hoping that God would hear and be sympathetic (vv. 7-17).

16:7-8 Job switched the form of his verbs from third to second person; such changes are not uncommon in Hebrew poetry. Job addressed God as though He were present in the discussions among the four.

16:9 Gnashing of teeth conveys rage or hatred (Ps 37:12; Lm 2:16). Job called God his enemy who so scrutinized him that He seemed to look right through him (7:17-20).

16:10-11 Job's enemies showed their contempt by mocking him with open . . . mouths (Ps 22:13; Lm 2:16) as though to devour him. The enemies are unjust and wicked men; Job perceived that God had handed him over to them.

16:12-14 Job reminded his friends of his former state of ease. In graphic metaphors Job likened God to a warrior in command of a vast army. God had made him the object of His attack (7:20). Eventually an arrow struck Job's vital organ with tragic consequences (6:4). He compared himself to a besieged city whose defenses had been repeatedly assailed and finally penetrated by God's assaults.

16:15 In sorrow and mourning, Job had put on sackcloth (2Kg 19:1; Jl 1:13).

16:16-17 With reddened eyes that no longer saw clearly, Job viewed himself as good as dead. He felt he had done nothing to merit God's attack. He had maintained a pure attitude in prayer (1:22). Purity was an issue that had been brought up by his friends (4:17; 8:6; 11:4; 15:14-15).

16:18 Because Job must surely die soon, he pleaded that his spilled blood would not be covered (Gn 37:26). Like the blood of innocent Abel, Job's blood would cry out from the ground for justice (Gn 4:10). He asked that his cry for vindication not be forgotten until his blood shed in innocence was avenged (Ezk 24:7-8).

16:19-20 Job wanted an audience with God to plead his case (9:34-35; 13:20-22). If his case came before God, a holy God would bear witness to his integrity. Job placed his hope for vindication in God alone, despite his verbal attacks against Him. He could expect no help from his friends; God remained his only advocate.

16:21 Job repeated his need of and desire for an arbitrator to represent him before God. Although he longed for an audience with God (13:3) where a fair hearing would vindicate him (13:15-16), he felt inadequate to represent himself (9:2-4,32-33). Jesus the Messiah became just such an intercessor for humanity (Is 2:4; 11:4; Rm 8:34; Heb 7:25; 1Jn 2:1).

16:22 Job lamented that his life expectancy was short at best (7:16,21; 9:25). With few years remaining, he faced only a death from which there was no return (10:20-21).

17:1 Job felt overwhelmed by what he believed was a hopeless situation (6:9; 9:21,25; 16:16,22).

17:3 Job again turned to God as his only hope. The image is that of a friend who was willing to be responsible for any debt should a default occur (Dt 24:6,10-13; Pr 6:1-5; 17:18; 22:26).

17:4 The HCSB translation here suggests that because those who might have helped Job were not capable of understanding the issues involved, God would not honor anything they might present on Job's behalf. Alternatively, Job might have reminded God that with his case not settled, God would not be honored.

17:5 In this verse Job appears to cite an ancient proverb that a person who was paid to inform on his friends endangered his children. If Job's friends were attempting to gain favor with God by taking His side against him, it could put their family in jeopardy.

17:7-8 Job's desperate condition should have stirred righteous people to compassion. If his friends were truly upright, they would have sought to defend him (7:14-21; 13:4; 16:2-5).

17:9 Job is nothing if not intent on staying the course.

17:10 Job challenged everyone, particularly his friends, to launch further arguments against him. They could only demonstrate that none of them was wise (see notes at 12:2; 13:4-5).

17:11-12 Because of Job's affliction, his plans had been thwarted and turned topsy-turvy.

17:13-16 By Sheol is meant the grave (see notes at 7:9; 14:13; 26:5-6). In a graphic metaphor, Job pictured the grave as his future home. Job used personification in calling the grave my father and the maggot that would feed on his body my mother or my sister. It was as though in the grave Job would enter into a new home housing a new family. "Gates" are often used metaphorically for entrance into the state of death (38:17; Ps 9:13; 107:18). The phraseology of Jb 17:13-16 bears similarities to ideas of the afterlife in ancient Near Eastern mythology. It was believed that at death everyone entered into a dismal subterranean world with a city and gates ruled over by underworld deities. This is not the biblical view.

18:2 You in the original text is plural rather than singular. Because Bildad's speech was addressed to Job, the plural serves as a mark of politeness. The second line does not contain an imperative in the Hebrew text. Bildad was expressing a wish.

18:3 Bildad believed Job's rejection of their counsel was tantamount to calling them unthinking animals (12:7; Ps 73:22).

18:4 Bildad attempted to correct Job's perspective. It was not an angry God who was tearing at Job (12:14; 16:9) but his own anger at God. God was not obligated to empty the earth or move a rock just to satisfy Job's self-serving demands. As the physical order of the earth is established by divine law (Ps 104:5-7; Is 45:18), so are God's moral standards (Pr 11:20-21). For God to interrupt the laws of nature on Job's behalf would be as wrong as failing to hold him accountable for his sins.

18:5-6 As a lamp is put out, leaving a tent to grow dark, so misfortune would come to the wicked and his life would take a turn for the worse. Light represents a blessed life lived in accordance with the high standards of God, while darkness symbolizes the opposite (Pr 4:18-19). In other contexts light represents truth and knowledge, and darkness indicates error and ignorance (Dn 5:14; 2Pt 1:19).

18:7 The successful life is compared to walking without hindrance or stumbling (2Sm 22:33-37; Pr 4:10-12). The wicked person may appear to be walking well (with powerful stride), but his own schemes will be his undoing (Pr 15:22; 26:27).

18:8-10 Six different words for "trap" are used to depict metaphorically the unanticipated dangers that could ensnare a wicked person.

18:11-13 The dangers that the wicked person encounters bring constant terror, including the prospect of death. In Job's plight, Bildad saw signs that the fate of the wicked lay before Job. Death's firstborn means either the plague or the most terrible manner of death.

18:14 Finally the wicked person will lose everything and will be claimed by death, the last enemy (1Co 15:26) and the king of terrors. The language is reminiscent of the Canaanite deity Mot (death), whose appetite was insatiable and whose mouth and throat were always open to receive his victims. Death is similarly portrayed in the OT (Is 5:14; Hab 2:5). Paul pointed out that man has victory over death through Christ (1Co 15:57; cp. Is 25:3-8).

18:15 The wicked person's tent (home) is destroyed by others. The scattering of burning sulfur over it ensured that it would never be rebuilt and occupied.

18:16 Like a dead tree whose roots dry up and branches wither away, the wicked will leave nothing behind (14:2-7; 15:30; 19:10).

18:17-20 The wicked person's family will also disappear, leaving no memory of him. It is as though he never existed. So total and devastating are the wicked person's demise and loss that people will tremble at his horrible end. Bildad built upon language used by Job in describing public reaction to his condition (17:7-8). West and east is a merismus (the use of two parts to represent the whole) to designate people everywhere.

19:2 Job began his speech by using Bildad's phraseology (18:2): how long? Because words can crush, they should be weighed and used appropriately (Pr 15:1,23; Eph 4:29).

19:3 Rather than being helpful, the words of Job's friends had added to his grief. The number ten represents the concept of totality.

19:4 Job admitted that he might have sinned unintentionally as all people do (6:24; 7:20). He felt, however, that he had done nothing worthy of such harsh treatment. His simple sins had harmed only himself, not his friends.

19:6 Bildad had suggested that a wicked man's lifestyle would lead him into being trapped (18:8-10) and that God does not pervert justice (8:3). On the contrary, Job declared that God had unjustly set out to trap him (7:19-20).

19:8 Job felt his course of life had been cut off. His prospects were dim, and he was haunted by the darkness that portended his death.

19:12 Job felt like a besieged city. An army had built a siege ramp against him to bring up their battering rams and penetrate his last defenses. He was just a weak human being who was more like a tent than a mighty city necessitating a strong attack. Contrary to Bildad's description of the lot of the wicked (18:14-15), Job's tent (lifestyle) had been battered undeservedly by God, who wanted to overpower him (14:20). The tent expresses the idea of impermanence (2Co 5:1), the brevity of life (Jb 7:16,21; 9:25-26; 10:20; 14:1-6).

19:15-16 Job's home life was in shambles. His situation had brought the disdain of his guests . . . female servants, and his personal male servant. It was as though these relationships had been turned upside down (Pr 30:21-23).

19:17 The phrase my own family renders the Hebrew phrase that literally reads, "children of my belly." The word "belly" is a euphemism referring to Job's loins; cp. Ps 132:11; Mc 6:7. But had Job not lost all his children (Jb 1:18-19)? These could be children by one of Job's concubines or slaves, or they could be grandchildren who escaped the earlier destruction and came to live in his house. Alternatively, some interpreters take "my belly" (Hb bitni) to refer to Job's mother, hence these "children" would be his blood brothers.

19:18 For children to mock an old man was a serious violation of Israelite social norms.

19:20 The Hebrew here suggests that in Job's weakness he felt as though his bones were clinging to his skin and flesh (33:21). He is emaciated. The idiom skin of my teeth heightens the effect. Job was so weak that he was barely alive.

19:21-22 Job's plea for his friends' understanding and compassion was based on his belief that he was innocent. God simply had attacked him. With their continued fault-finding, they joined God in His persecution of Job (7:17-20) as though they had become witnesses for the prosecution (10:17). The Hebrew idiom underlying Job's second question (19:22) is "to eat the flesh." It is used for slander or of levying accusations against someone (Ps 27:2; Dn 3:8; 6:24). Job lamented that by their unkind remarks his friends were consuming his last bastion of defense.

19:23-24 A scroll was made of papyrus or leather. Better yet, Job would like his words engraved in lead on a stone stele. Carved stelae are found throughout the ancient world. Although they often contain royal decrees, they could be used to record significant events in a person's life or boundary stones at the edge of one's property. Job's insistence on the carved letters being filled in with lead emphasized his desire for a permanent record of his innocence.

19:25 The Hebrew term Redeemer reflects an ancient custom whereby a person's nearest kinsman served as a guarantor of his rights and privileges (Lv 25:23-34,47-54; Dt 19:6-12; Jos 20:2-5; Ru 4:1-17). Although Job had repeatedly described God as his enemy and persecutor (Jb 7:17-21; 16:7-14; 19:7-12), he had also expressed his confidence in God (12:13-16; 13:15-18; 14:14-17; 16:18-20). He said that in the end God was his only hope (17:3). Job's underlying faith ultimately surfaced, breaking through his dark doubts about God. God was Job's Redeemer who alone could serve as a guarantor of his rights and vindicate his cause. If Job were to die, he was confident that the living God would stand on the dust of his grave and testify on his behalf.

19:26-27 Job built on his earlier mention of skin and flesh (v. 20). He pointed out the inevitability of that which he had come to expect (7:7-10; 10:18,21-22; 14:12; 17:13-16). Although he would lie in the grave (19:25) with his body decayed, he would personally see God. No longer as a stranger (one outside of God's household, or an enemy), he would experience renewed fellowship. Job once again entertained the fond hope of personal life after death (14:14-15).

19:28-29 For Job's friends to pursue him with false accusations placed them in a dangerous position. They should become responsible counselors, or else they would face God's judicial wrath. The sword is a symbol of God's judgment (Dt 32:41; Rm 13:4).

20:3 Zophar still believed his understanding offered insight into Job's problems.

20:6-7 Although the wicked person may believe he is self-sufficient and the master of his own fate, eventually he will perish—like the arrogant king of Babylon (Is 14:12-15) and the proud, self-assured city of Nineveh (Zph 2:15).

20:11 The wicked person would die young, asserts Zophar. The word rendered grave here is literally "dust" (Hb 'aphar). Zophar was playing on Job's previous words (19:25). No longed-for Redeemer would appear over the dust of the wicked person's grave.

20:12-14 Much as a person savors honey under the tongue, the wicked person clings fondly to his ill-gotten gain. But that which tastes good in the mouth sometimes becomes harmful in the stomach (Pr 23:31-32).

20:15 As a physician may administer an emetic to force vomiting, so God would dislodge the wealth that the wicked person had coerced from others.

20:16 Obtaining wealth through illegitimate means was just as fatal as drinking poison or playing with a viper.

20:17 Honey was usually gathered from wild bees in ancient times (Jdg 14:8) rather than apiaries. "Honey" also designated thick date syrup. Together with refreshing cream (or fermented milk) honey symbolized an abundance of the best things in life (Ex 3:8; Jl 3:8).

20:19 The reason for the wicked man's fall is that he had gained his wealth by victimizing the less fortunate. In some cases he had seized a house, either in lieu of a debt or by some dishonest means (Mc 2:2).

20:21 The wicked person's ceaseless drive to get and use things would prove to be his undoing.

20:23 The image of eating expresses the idea of consuming life's pleasures and delicacies and enjoying them to the fullest.

20:24-25 Using the war implements of the day, Zophar described God's arsenal of weapons. It includes a sword made of iron, a powerful bronze bow, and arrows with metal tips (flashing tip). The force of the arrow is so great that it pierces the wicked person's liver and goes through to his back. In attempting to remove the arrow, he pulls out his internal organs and only adds to his doom. Job had complained that God's arrows had been unleashed against him (16:13) and had pierced him (6:4). Zophar might have been hinting that, like this wicked person, Job was being justly judged.

20:26 So drastic will be the wicked person's end that even his valued belongings will suffer the darkness of death (15:22). He and anything that survives him will be destroyed in the fire of divine wrath (15:34; 22:20; Dt 32:22; Ps 21:8-9; 1Co 3:13).

20:27 The wicked man's guilt is so great that the heavens and the earth will testify against him. The imagery portrays a trial in which the wicked person is accused by everyone before the heavenly court. Job had maintained that his innocence and integrity were on record in heaven (16:18-19). Zophar hinted that it could be otherwise.

20:29 Zophar's final summation is not only a reiteration of his thesis with regard to retribution but a declaration that this is indeed God's decreed policy. Rather than leaving an inheritance for his heirs, the wicked person will inherit the just judgment that God has ordained.

21:3 Eliphaz had suggested that he and his friends were offering Job consolation (15:11), but Job contended that Zophar and the others were instead mocking him (16:20). Earlier Zophar had accused Job of mocking or ridiculing them (11:3).

21:4 Job's rhetorical question indicated that his complaint was against God (19:4,21-22), not man. He had grown impatient (lit "short of spirit") because he seemingly could not get through to God (7:11-21; 9:33-35; 16:21).

21:5-6 Job invited his friends to take another look at him (2:12; 17:7-8; 18:20). Rather than speaking so glibly, let them gaze at him in silent astonishment (29:9; 40:4; Mc 7:16). Even Job was terrified as he thought about his condition.

21:7 Job asserted that his friends' statements about the short-lived success of the wicked were wrong (15:20; 18:5-21; 20:5,15-18). The fact is that the wicked often live long, prosperous lives in positions of power (Ec 7:15).

21:8-13 Contrary to his friends' assertions (15:20-30; 18:5-19; 20:21-28), the wicked live out their lives and leave behind children who were also successful and prosperous.

21:14-15 As Job viewed it, the wicked succeed even while rejecting the Almighty. They neither serve Him nor recognize His lordship (Ps 73:9-12; 94:3).

21:16 In a parenthetical statement, Job acknowledged that prosperity comes from God and distanced himself from the defiant attitude the wicked express in the previous verses.

21:17 Job's rhetorical question implies that despite the wicked person's acts of evil and flagrant defiance of God, it does not appear that the Lord disciplines them. Thus Bildad's statements did not hold up (18:5; cp. Ps 73:4-5,12). Lamp is used metaphorically as a symbol of a happy life (Ps 18:28). An extinguished lamp refers to an untimely death (2Sm 21:17), often because of the judgment of God (Pr 13:9; 20:20; 24:20).

21:18 Wind-blown straw and chaff often symbolize judgment. As Job saw it, the wicked person escapes judgment while he lives. Job's remarks were born of pessimism because of his suffering, and they do not accurately reflect biblical teaching (Ps 1:4; Dn 2:35; Zph 2:1-2).

21:19-20 As Job saw it, God's punishment unfairly passes over the wicked person and lands on the next generation (Dt 24:16; Jr 31:29-30; Ezk 18:2-4). To drink from the Almighty's wrath reflects the figure of the cup of God's judgment (Ps 75:8; Is 51:17; Jr 25:15; Ezk 23:31-34). In other contexts the cup symbolizes God's blessing (Ps 23:5). The cup is also used to signify Jesus' willing surrender to become mankind's sin bearer (Jn 18:11) and the new covenant that He enacted (Mt 26:27-29; 1Co 11:25-26).

21:22 Job had asked previously whether anyone could rightly question God (9:12,19). Job's friends had declared that no one could be especially wise (11:7-9) or be absolutely pure in God's eyes—not even the angels (4:17-18). Yet his friends had acted as though they had special insight into God's ways and truth (4:12-21; 8:3-7; 11:5-6; 15:8-13; 20:4-5,20).

21:23-26 Job's observations on life pointed to facts that could not be accounted for in the worldview expressed by his friends. As Job saw it, a person's goodness or wickedness had nothing to do with life's fortunes.

21:27 Job asserted that when his friends described the fate of the wicked, they were alluding to him (16:1-4), but they were wrong (19:1-6).

21:28 When Job's friends spoke of the loss of the nobleman's house and goods, he understood them to be applying that to his case (15:34; 18:14-21; 20:26-28). Their remarks were painful reminders to him of the loss of his children and all they had (1:13-19).

21:29-30 Job's questions imply that his friends' doctrine of swift retribution conflicts with facts that anyone who has traveled can observe. Rather than having their homes destroyed (18:14-15; 20:22), the wicked rich live securely in them.

21:31 Job's friends said that the wicked are on shaky ground and soon fall, but Job observes they are so powerful that no one can touch them.

21:32-33 Job's observation was that the wicked nobleman went to his grave with great honor and a large funeral procession (Ec 8:10), which was contrary to Bildad's remarks (Jb 18:17). The image of the sweet . . . dirt may indicate that as far as Job could tell, the wicked person's lot was pleasant even in death.

21:34 Job categorically denounced his friends' counsel as failing to provide comfort (v. 3; 16:2-3) and being deceptive (13:4).

22:2-3 Eliphaz began his speech with a series of rhetorical questions that expected a negative answer. Job's righteousness would not fill up a deficiency in God.

22:4-5 Previously Eliphaz had told Job that his piety would see him through his ordeal (4:6-7) after God's discipline had run its course (5:17-18). Now he accused Job of wickedness (see vv. 6-9). Later, Job defended himself against these charges (31:16-17).

22:6 Eliphaz charged Job with social crimes. He said Job had taken as collateral the outer garments or cloaks of those who were in debt to him. These should have been returned to the person each night as protection against the cool night air (Ex 22:26-27). Job later refuted Eliphaz's charge (see note at Jb 31:19-20).

22:7-8 Eliphaz accused Job of insensitivity. Although Job was a powerful and influential man, his actions showed he was not concerned about the needy. He supplied neither water nor food to them despite their circumstances (Is 58:7; Mt 10:41-42).

22:9 Eliphaz cited Job for failing to provide for widows and orphans. Care of the oppressed served as a standard of common decency and social obligation in the ancient Near East (Dt 14:28-29; 24:17-22; Jms 1:27). The alleviation of their need was of concern to God (Dt 10:17-18; 27:19).

22:10-11 Eliphaz applied Bildad's remarks (18:8-11,18) metaphorically to Job's situation. Job's misdeeds had so ensnared him that he was overwhelmed like water that flooded the soul (27:20; Ps 69:15).

22:12-14 Eliphaz argues that if God controlled the vast universe (see note at 1Kg 8:27), He would know all about mankind. Eliphaz suggested that Job interpreted the same fact (God's control of the vast universe) in the opposite way: God was too distant to see man's actions. Eliphaz misrepresented Job's position, for Job had complained that God scrutinized his actions (Jb 7:12,17-20; 9:17-18; 10:4-8; 13:27). The thick darkness Job felt was his inability to get through to God (19:7-8).

22:15-16 Eliphaz implied that Job was treading the same route to destruction that had overtaken man since ancient times (Gn 7:20-24; 19:24-25). Contrary to Job's observation that the wicked defied God but were seldom punished (Jb 21:15-16), the witness of time confirms that in God's judgment they suffer the loss of everything.

22:17 The defiant ones Job said were permitted to prosper (21:14) were the very ones Eliphaz said died prematurely. Experience shows that neither man was entirely correct.

22:18 Eliphaz may here be agreeing with Job (21:16) that God filled the houses of the wicked with good things, but since they didn't acknowledge God their prosperity was short-lived. Their defiance of God (v. 17) is repulsive. Alternately, Eliphaz is saying that Job's statement that God had blessed the wicked is the counsel of the wicked that is to be repudiated.

22:19-20 Eliphaz confirmed Zophar's counsel (20:26-29) that the wicked would lose everything in a fiery end. The righteous would rejoice at this justice (Ps 52:1-7).

22:21-22 Eliphaz argued it was in Job's best interest to learn from God's discipline (5:17-26). Job should take to heart God's wisdom that his friends had conveyed to him (Ps 78:2-4). Knowledge comes from God's mouth (Pr 2:6).

22:23-25 The verb return connotes turning from self to God with a deliberate choice to abandon sin and godlessness in order to live in submission to God and His standards (Jr 23:5; Ac 2:38). The verb translated renewed is literally "be built up." It implies a successful, godly lifestyle. The gold of Ophir was highly prized in the ancient Near East (1Kg 9:28), but Job should throw away his precious gold and let God be his treasure (Ps 16:5; Is 33:6; Mt 13:44; 19:21; Php 3:7-9; 1Tm 6:6).

22:26-27 Job had complained that he could get no answer from God when he prayed (13:20-24; 19:7-8). Eliphaz restated that when Job had submitted to God's discipline and had been renewed, he would enjoy restored fellowship with God (5:17-26).

22:28 Eliphaz suggested that when Job was restored his plans would no longer be frustrated. Rather than the darkness he now experienced (vv. 10-11; 19:8), the light of God's presence and guidance would shine on all he did (Ps 27:1; 56:13; 89:15; 1Jn 1:7).

22:29-30 With renewed fellowship with God, Job would become a blessing to others. God would hear Job's prayers, and Job would be a winsome example of godliness.

23:2 Job answered Eliphaz with an attempt to justify his attitude. He felt that God was oppressing him (Ps 32:4).

23:3-4 Job lamented his inability to have an audience with God (9:32-35; 13:20-24) where he would expect to find justice (Ps 97:2).

23:5 Whatever God decided, Job would at least have the satisfaction of renewed contact with God.

23:6-7 Job had expressed fear about a hearing before God (9:34-35; 13:21-22). Now he felt his case for innocence would be established, and he would be acquitted of any wrongdoing (14:14-17).

23:8-9 Job experienced God as highly elusive. He sought God east . . . west . . . north, and south but could not perceive Him. At the same time, God was so close Job felt His relentless attacks.

23:10 As dross is removed from gold in the crucible, leaving a shining surface, so when God finished dealing with him, Job would appear as a shining example of righteousness (Pr 17:3).

23:11-12 The word translated daily food (Hb choq) means "portion" (Ex 29:28). A related word (Hb chuqqah) means "statute" (Ex 29:9), suggesting that Job had prized God's precepts more than his own natural inclinations (Rm 7:23). The reading found in the Septuagint (LXX) and the Vulgate add the phrase "in my bosom" after treasured. This pictures that which was close to Job's heart (Ps 119:11).

23:13-14 Job acknowledged God's unchangeableness (lit "in/as one"; cp. Mal 3:6). God does what He desires, and His will is irresistible (Rm 9:19). God would yet finish what He had decided to do in testing Job.

23:15-17 Job was terrified (7:19; 9:34; 13:25) by God's omnipotence and presence. He lived in constant fear of the darkness of death that seemed near (16:16; 17:11-16).

24:1 Job's observations of society convinced him that God's justice was lacking. Those who kept His standards went unrewarded, and the wicked were not judged for their evil. God should establish times for administering justice.

24:2-3 The removal of boundary markers was a serious offense (Dt 19:14; Pr 23:10). Confiscation of animals in lieu of a debt was unforgivable, especially against the fatherless and widows. Care of the widow, orphans, and poor is a duty of righteousness (6:27; 22:9; Ps 82:3-4) and a priority to God (Dt 27:17; Ps 68:5).

24:4 The needy feared to travel the roads because the wicked might rob them.

24:6 The poor were left to the mercy of their wicked oppressors (Dt 24:14). They worked in the field and vineyards or gathered what remained behind the harvesters (Lv 19:9-10; Ru 2:2).

24:7-8 Lacking proper clothing, sometimes seized cruelly by the wicked (Dt 24:10-13,17), the poor were left to the mercy of the elements.

24:9 The poor, fatherless, and widows were often victims of the powerful (Is 10:2).

24:10-11 The poor toiled under oppressive conditions. Contrary to human decency (Mt 25:34-40), they were denied food and drink. They were not permitted portions of the produce they were hired to harvest (Dt 25:4; 1Tm 5:18). Grain, wine, and olive oil were basic staples (Jr 31:12).

Reconstruction of an olive press (24:11) at Tel Ekron. Heavy weights were hung from each end of the large shaft. Olives were placed in cloth bags between stones under the fulcrum point. The oil ran out into the collection reservoir to the left of the press.

24:12 Job complained that God did not rectify the prevailing injustice (9:23-24; 19:7). It was a familiar prophetic complaint (Jr 20:8; Hab 1:2-4), but the truth is God does act in His time (Is 29:15-21).

24:13-17 Evil persons use the cover of darkness to commit foul deeds, including murder, adultery, and theft. These are violations of the sixth, seventh, and eighth commandments. The verb lock (lit "seal") indicates that the wicked stay enclosed in their houses like a person who puts his seal on a document. The dark is a friend to evildoers, so light terrifies them (Jn 3:20; 1Co 4:5; Eph 5:8-11).

24:18-20 Job adapted his argument to his friends' teaching about the sudden demise of the wicked (18:14; 20:4-5; 22:16-18). As objects that float on . . . water move downstream, so the wicked pass on and their ill-gotten property becomes unusable. Their cycle of injustice is broken, and they are forgotten.

24:21-24 However much the wicked gain by preying on the helpless, it will not protect them against God's power. Although they feel secure, God is not unaware of their wickedness. They will experience short-lived success. Job acknowledged that God can and will judge. It just seems to be delayed.

24:25 Although the wicked might die prematurely, they do so without being brought to justice in this life (21:22-34). Job defied his friends to disprove his thesis (17:10).

25:2 Bildad summed up the friends' position against Job's claims. The might of God, who established harmony in the original creation (Gn 1:31; Ps 104:1-4) and maintained it (Ps 19:1-6; 103:19), should inspire dread in mankind (13:11).

25:3-6 Bildad asked a series of rhetorical questions implying negative answers. He restated the position of the three friends (4:17; 8:20; 11:14-16; 15:14-16; 22:4) as opposed to Job's claims of innocence and purity (13:18; 16:17; 23:4-7,10-12). If God's heavenly bodies were not pure, how could man claim to be (4:18-19; 15:15-16)? Job acknowledged that his life and man's destiny were tied to maggots and worms (7:5; 17:14; 21:26; 24:20), which speak of man's lowly existence (Ps 22:6) and terminal condition (Is 14:11).

26:2-4 Job replied sarcastically that Bildad had delivered the path to success (or "sound wisdom") to the unwise (Job). Yet Bildad had only parroted common knowledge (12:2-3) and his words originated with others (4:17-19; 25:4-6).

26:5-6 Job had previously delivered a discourse about God's dominion. Bildad had extolled God's heavenly rule (25:5). Job had added that Sheol was open to God's view (Pr 15:11). Sheol here refers to the place of the wicked departed spirits, quartered in Abaddon (the place of destruction; see note at 28:20-22). Elsewhere "Sheol" simply has the grave in view, with no specific reference to the fate of the wicked (see note at 7:9).

26:7-8 Northern refers to God's dwelling in the heavenly heights (Ps 48:1-2). God filled the clouds with water like celestial water skins that do not burst (see note at 38:36-38).

26:9-10 The clouds serve to keep people from beholding the glory of God in heaven (Ps 104:1-3; Am 9:6). The rising and setting of the sun appear most vividly at the far horizon of the sea's surface, where it separates light and darkness.

26:11 God's power is felt in His presence on the mountains, which stretch from deep below the sea (Jnh 2:6) into the sky like pillars (or standing columns; cp. 1Kg 7:15-21).

26:12-13 God's power and wisdom were evident in His control over the primal sea with its mighty creatures. Stirred may also be translated "stilled" (Jr 50:34). The reference to God destroying Rahab and the fleeing serpent counters ancient cosmologies in which mythical deities conquered chaos at creation. Job underscored the fact that Yahweh alone is God and the controller of everything (9:13-14; Ps 74:13; 89:10).

26:14 Mankind catches just a glimpse and a whisper of God's workings. Full knowledge is beyond human understanding (5:9; 11:8; 42:3).

27:4 The upright use their lips (Ps 141:3) and tongue wisely. Their organs of speech should praise God (Ps 51:14-15).

27:7-10 In their godless state, Job's detractors lived for self, not God. Therefore, God would not hear their cries for relief.

27:11-12 Job and his friends knew about God's power and providence. They lectured him about God's judgment of the wicked (11:5-6; 22:5) but misapplied it to Job's case.

27:13-23 Job displayed his understanding of the wicked man's lot, which his friends had described.

27:18 House portrays metaphorically the wicked person's life and possessions. A watchman's booth was a temporary structure built during harvest time as a shelter from which to guard the fields. After harvest it was allowed to fall into ruin.

27:19-23 The wicked person's prosperity can disappear overnight. Terrifying disasters haunt his soul constantly like a flood or tornadic wind (1:19; 38:24). Such could not designate Job. He might be discouraged, but he was confident of his integrity (27:5-6). The wicked must bear the scorn of those who rejoiced over his fall. Clapping the hands, hissing, and shaking the head were common gestures of contempt (Lm 2:15; Nah 3:19; Zph 2:15).

28:1-2 Mining and refining were widely known in the ancient world.

28:3-4 At times men were suspended in cages or baskets hung by ropes in order to pick out the minerals at the side of the mineshaft. In some cases they cut horizontal tunnels. In dark places workers illuminated their way with torches.

28:5-6 Sometimes tunnel walls were heated with fire and then quickly drenched with water to crack hard stone. The rocks, which were then hauled to the surface, might contain sapphire (lapis lazuli, a dark blue stone), which typically contain flecks of gold-colored pyrite.

28:7-8 Neither the bird with keenest sight nor the proudest animal knew the way to the treasures that miners unearthed.

28:9-11 Miners developed and employed remarkable technology for their day.

28:12-13 Despite man's impressive technical expertise, he does not know the path to wisdom and understanding.

28:15-19 Glass was a valuable commodity in the ancient Near East. Wisdom is more valuable than precious metals and gem stones, including the famed gold of Ophir (see note at 22:23-25) or topaz from Cush (Ethiopia).

28:20-22 Wisdom (v. 12) is unseen by all creatures (see v. 7), living and dead (Lk 16:19-31). Abaddon and Death (here personified) have only heard . . . of it. Seeing and hearing are often paired in the Bible (42:6; cp. Is 64:4; 1Co 2:9).

28:23-27 The all-seeing God, the only true source of wisdom, established and balanced the laws and forces of nature.

28:28 God reveals to man what neither man nor creatures can find out on their own: wisdom resides with God, and man acts wisely when he follows God's standards and shuns evil (Dt 4:5-6; Ps 111:10; Pr 1:7; 9:10).

29:2-3 Job had complained about God's scrutiny (7:17-20; 13:27). Now he recalled previous days when God made him successful. The lamp symbolized God's blessings and direction. When it is extinguished, disaster follows (18:6; 21:17).

29:4-6 Job's prior life was filled with God's abundant blessings. Cream and oil symbolize life's finest pleasures (20:17; Ps 104:15). The rock was either the rocky soil where the olive trees grew or the stone press used to extract the oil.

29:7-10 The town square at the city gate served as a place for legal (Ru 4:1,11) and judicial decisions, a marketplace (2Kg 7:1), and general gathering place (Jr 17:19-20). Job's seat and the public reaction to his presence indicate prominence and respect.

29:11-13 Contrary to Eliphaz's charges (22:8-9), Job's beneficence toward the needs of the poor, orphan, dying, and widow earned the admiration of everyone.

29:14-17 In cases where Job served in an official capacity, he demonstrated righteousness as he defended the rights of the helpless and rendered their oppressors powerless.

29:18-20 Because of God's blessings and Job's righteousness, Job expected to live a long and healthy life (Dt 4:39-40; 1Kg 3:14). Sand symbolizes things too numerous to count (6:3; Gn 22:17; 1Kg 4:29). A nest presents a secure image of home and family. The well-watered tree speaks of health and prosperity as well as Job's righteousness (Ps 1:1-3; 92:12). The bow symbolizes strength and virility (Gn 49:24).

29:21-23 Job's opinions and decisions were as valued as refreshing rain or dew in a dry region (Is 55:10-11).

29:24 Because he was considered both wise and powerful, everyone highly valued Job's approval.

30:1-4 Previously young and old, officials and nobles, had respected Job (29:7-11,21-23) and waited for his approval (29:24). Now he suffered humiliation at the hands of society's rabble (see note at 19:18). The mockers' fathers were worthless men whose indolent lifestyle sapped their vitality and forced them to scrounge for food. Mallow (or saltwort) came from an edible plant that served as food for the poor. The roots of the broom tree were usually used to make charcoal rather than food (Ps 120:4).

30:7-8 These men cried from hunger like wild donkeys. To be referred to as having no name was an insult; it was the same as nonexistence.

30:9 Returning to the topic of verse 1, Job lamented the songs the young men created to mock him (Lm 3:14).

30:11-14 Job had hoped for renewed strength and vitality (29:20); now he lamented his weakness before his tormentors. He compared himself to a besieged city and his tormentors to invaders (16:13-14). Erecting siege ramps made from trees, stones, and earth to breach a wall was a common tactic in ancient warfare (Jr 6:6).

30:16-19 Job's life had disintegrated into days and nights of unbearable suffering. It was as though God had bound him in a straitjacket and thrown him on the ground.

30:24 Job questioned the Lord's conduct. God's attack was like "kicking a man when he is down."

30:27-30 Job's suffering was total—physical, spiritual, and emotional. His churning insides and fever may have been a side-effect of the disease that blackened his skin. Abandoned by God and his fellow man, he compared his unheeded cries for help to the jackal's woeful howl and the mournful sound of the ostrich (Mc 1:8).

30:31 In bold figures Job portrayed his cries as the sounds of musical instruments. Rather than tunes of joy (21:12; Ps 33:2), praise (Ps 150:4), or comfort (1Sm 16:23), Job's lyre produced only dirge-like tones. His flute provided no happy melody (21:12; Mt 11:17), only a mourning sound (Mt 9:23).

31:1 Job began the final defense of his purity by declaring that he had never looked at a young woman lustfully. The eyes were considered the gateway to the inner person. The wandering eye got Samson (Jdg 16:1) and David (2Sm 11:2-3) into serious trouble, and Jesus warned of its dangers (Mt 5:27-30). Job's covenant language underscored the seriousness of his purpose and his binding self-limitation.

31:2-4 Job posed three questions emphasizing God's dealing with him should he violate his covenant not to lust after a young woman. Job would have neither standing with God nor blessing, and God—who saw all that Job did (7:17-19)—would judge him as an evildoer (18:5-12; 27:13-23).

31:5-6 The metaphor of where one's foot walks expresses proper conduct (12:5; 23:11; Pr 4:26-27). The weighing of a man in the scales was a test of character (Dn 5:27).

31:7 The body parts mentioned here are often used figuratively to express ethical conduct: foot (Ps 17:5), heart or mind (Pr 23:19), eyes (Ps 101:3), and hands (Ps 24:4).

31:9-10 Adultery has dire consequences (Lv 20:10; 2Sm 12:7-10).

31:12 Illicit sex is likened to a fire that burns the person (Pr 6:27-29) to the utmost—all the way to Abaddon, the realm of death and destruction (26:6; 28:22).

31:13-15 Any mishandling of his servants' complaints would make Job liable before his heavenly judge (Eph 6:9; 2Co 5:10). Just treatment of slaves and servants was expected of Israelites (Lv 25:42-43). Job had testified previously to God's care in creating him (Jb 10:8-12). Now he acknowledged that God is the Creator of all people, giving both servants and masters value in God's eyes.

31:16-22 Job offered a long list of if-then statements, calling down a curse on himself if he had failed to do the right thing in any of these cases.

31:16-18 Eliphaz had charged Job with dealing unjustly with the widow, fatherless, and poor (22:4-9). Job denied such wrongdoing. Even as a young man he had been concerned for the needs of the helpless.

31:19-20 Eliphaz had charged Job with taking the clothes of a debtor as collateral (22:6). Refuting this charge, Job stated that when any person lacked necessary clothing, he supplied it and they blessed him for it. The HCSB's he (lit "his loins") is a synecdoche where a part refers to the whole body.

31:21 Job denied that he had ever used his official position to take advantage of the weak, such as the fatherless, even though he had the backing of others.

31:22 See note at verses 16-22.

31:23 Job's obedience was motivated by the two aspects of the fear of the Lord: terror and awe.

31:24-28 Job offered another list of if-then statements (cp. vv. 16-22), denying that he had sinned in any of these ways (v. 28).

31:24-25 Job disavowed materialistic and greedy desires. Eliphaz's implied criticism was false (22:24-25).

31:26-27 Job had not secretly paid homage to false deities identified with the sun or moon, as some would do by throwing a kiss toward the heavens. Such false worship did affect the Israelites later (2Kg 21:3). Job understood that idolatry and paganism were an abomination to the Lord (Dt 4:19; 17:2-5).

31:29-30 Job had not gloated over an enemy's misfortune. This would violate accepted ethical standards (Pr 24:17-18; 25:21-22; Mt 5:43-47).

31:31-32 God's concern included the welfare of the stranger (Lv 24:22; Dt 26:12; Ps 94:6-7). Hospitality is commended in both the OT and the NT (Gn 24:24-32; 1Tm 5:10).

31:33-34 Job had not covered up his sins by tucking them away in his heart (lit "bosom") like a thief concealing stolen goods. Job had not played the hypocrite by sinning in secret while pretending to be virtuous (2Kg 5:24-27). He had no need to shut himself up from public view (Gn 3:8-9). Jesus condemned spiritual hypocrisy (Mt 6:2-4; 23:25-28).

31:35-37 Job had repeatedly pleaded for a fair hearing before God (13:18-23;

23:2-7) even though he feared such a meeting (9:14-16) and felt the need for an arbitrator (9:32-35; 16:21). Job nonetheless felt so confident that his integrity would be vindicated that he signed his affidavit. His signature is literally his tav, the last letter in the Hebrew alphabet, in the form of an X in ancient Hebrew. The name of the letter means "mark" (Ezk 9:4). Documents were usually sealed with an engraved seal (1Kg 21:8), but when signed by hand even a literate person used the tav. When God presented His indictment (7:20), Job would place it proudly on his shoulder and approach the Lord as a prince wearing a victor's crown. Job was certain that he had proven his innocence and righteousness (23:3-7; 27:6).

31:38-40 Job finished with a final testimony toward his vindication in the form of two more conditional statements and a curse (cp. vv. 16-22). He had demonstrated his integrity and righteousness toward his fellow man. He had neither overworked his land (cp. Lv 25:2-7) nor defrauded its tenants (24:10-11). He fortified his declaration with an imprecation involving the failure of his crops (Gn 3:18; Is 5:6).

32:2-3 The names Elihu ("He is my God") and Barachel ("God has blessed") testify to vital faith. The names Elihu and Ram appear in connection with the later family of David (Ru 4:19; 1Ch 27:18). Buz was the brother of Uz and Abraham's nephew (Gn 22:20-21). Job was from the land of Uz (Jb 1:1). Elihu was angry because he perceived that Job had argued for his own righteousness, implying that God was therefore unjust (cp. 40:8), and because Job's friends had condemned him without getting to the essential issue in his case.

32:6-10 Though he was young, Elihu maintained that wisdom was not the exclusive possession of the old but was available to everyone. God created man in His image (Gn 1:27), imparting His breath to him (Gn 2:7). Thus man is a rational creature (Jb 38:36; Pr 16:9), capable of acquiring vast knowledge (1Kg 4:29-34). Elihu implied that God had so enlightened his spirit that he must speak (Jb 32:17-20).

32:11-12 Elihu prefaced his remarks by noting that he had given due deference to his elders.

32:13-14 Elihu agreed with Job (12:20; 13:12-19; 17:10; 21:34) that the friends had failed to demonstrate their claim to represent godly instruction (4:12-16) or traditional wisdom (15:17-19). Job would find Elihu a tougher opponent who would not follow the friends' line of argumentation.

32:15-17 Elihu noted the friends' dismay at exhausting their arguments against Job without refuting him successfully. Since they no longer had anything to say, Elihu would take up the controversy.

32:19 Elihu's heart (inner being; lit "belly") was so full that it was about to burst. New wine was normally put into new wineskins, which would expand with the fermentation process (Mt 9:17). If the wineskin was closed off without proper ventilation, it could burst.

32:21-22 Elihu was under divine obligation to speak his mind impartially. The word partial is literally "lift up the face." This idiom is used of showing respect (Gn 32:21) or partiality (Pr 18:5). The Bible condemns showing favoritism (Pr 28:21), especially in rendering judicial decisions (Lv 19:15) or by giving special treatment to prominent individuals (Jms 2:1-4). Elihu would not use flattering speech (Ps 12:1-3; Pr 28:23) by making reference to anyone's title.

33:3 Elihu spoke directly to Job from an upright heart (Ps 37:30; Pr 8:7-8). The heart was viewed as the source of thoughts (Ec 2:1,15), feelings (Ps 28:7), and will (Pr 23:12). Elihu's words would be carefully crafted from his heart (cp. Mt 15:18) and expressed with sincerity (Pr 16:23).

33:5 Elihu acted like an attorney in a legal proceeding. After he had stated his case, Job was free to try to refute him with counter arguments.

33:6-7 Although Elihu believed he was representing God in confronting Job, he claimed neither human superiority nor inferiority to Job. Therefore, Job need not fear a heavy-handed approach (13:21). The image of the clay portrays God as the heavenly potter and man as formed from clay (Gn 2:7; Is 64:8; Rm 9:21).

33:8-11 Elihu demonstrated that he had listened carefully to Job's claims of being pure and innocent (16:17; 23:7,10-12; 27:5-6), as well as being unjustly oppressed by God (10:6-7; 13:26-27; 19:11; 30:18-19).

33:12-13 Elihu reminded Job that as a finite man, he was not in a position to bring accusations against God (Is 55:8). Nor should God be called into court for Job's every wish (9:3,14-16; 13:2; 18:4).

33:14-17 Job had complained that God might pass by him without his noting it (9:11) and that God had ignored his requests for Him to answer (13:24; 19:7; 30:20). Elihu implied that Job had failed to notice God's speaking to him. Elihu built upon Eliphaz's words about God instructing him in a nighttime visitation (4:12-19). To uncover the ear is to instruct, inform, or reveal (36:15; Ru 4:4; Is 22:14).

33:18 By the Pit is meant the grave or the state of death (16:10; 17:14). Just as Israel crossed the Jordan River to enter the promised land, so the image of the river of death portrays man's passing from this life into the next. "River" is the preferred rendering of a Hebrew word that also can be translated as "sword."

33:19-22 God may also communicate with a person through the discipline of pain. The distress may be so aggravating that a person loses all desire for food. In his severe pain, Job had expressed the fear that death was near (10:18-22; 16:16,22).

33:23-24 Elihu pointed out that the arbitrator Job had longed for between himself and God (9:33; 16:21) was available to bring a person to repentance. Angels often served in this capacity (Gn 48:15-16; Ps 34:6-7). God through His mediating angel supplies grace to ransom and deliver the repentant and surrendered person from death (Ex 14:19-20; Jb 17:3; Ps 49:7-9). In a deeper sense, such a work anticipates God's full revelation in Christ (2Co 5:18-19; Heb 9:12). Alternatively, the word translated angel may also be rendered as "messenger" (Jdg 11:13; 1Kg 20:2-10; Mal 2:7). Elihu may have sensed that he was serving as God's messenger to bring about Job's reconciliation with God (Jb 33:6-7).

33:29-30 God's offer to reclaim the sinner may be extended several times, but His grace should not be spurned continually (Jl 2:14; Heb 6:4-6).

33:31-33 Elihu asked for Job's further attention (vv. 1-5) while he developed his teaching. Job should interrupt only if he had something significant to add.

34:2 Elihu appears to be playing on Job's reference to his three friends as wise men. Since they had failed to refute Job (32:12-13), however, perhaps all involved could benefit from words of wisdom from Elihu.

34:3-4 Elihu referred to Job's earlier comments about the ear's ability to test words much as the palate tastes food (12:11). Elihu was confident that his words would stand up to scrutiny.

34:5-6 Elihu summarized Job's claims, which he was about to refute.

34:7-9 Elihu observed that Job was neither affected by the (justified) derision heaped upon him by others, nor was he above deriding others, especially God. In Elihu's opinion, this showed that Job had assumed the stance of an evildoer (cp. 21:7-15), especially when he complained that being righteous gained a person nothing before God (9:15,29-31).

34:10-12 In returning to his opening issue about God's justice (v. 5; cp. 32:2), Elihu denied Job's claim that God was treating him unjustly (27:2). All three friends had repeatedly applied in rigid fashion the doctrine of equal divine retribution: blessings for righteousness, judgment for unrighteousness, each in its proper degree (Jr 25:14; 30:11). Eliphaz had likewise championed that thesis but insisted that God's nature prohibited His wrongdoing (Dt 32:4; Ps 62:12; Jr 9:23-24). Elihu gave the implied answer to Bildad's earlier rhetorical question (Jb 8:2-3). God could not and did not act unrighteously or unjustly (Ps 92:15; Rm 3:5-6).

34:13-15 Elihu declared that as a sovereign and omnipotent God, the Lord is not accountable to anyone. Job had admitted as much (9:12), but he had questioned God's dealings with him (10:4-7). Elihu implied that for Job to question God was wrong and illogical. If God was sovereign, He had no reason to be unjust or show partiality. If mankind was dependent on God for sustenance, to question God's authority and justice puts a person in danger of judgment for rebellion.

34:17-18 As Elihu saw it, a being who is not truly righteous and all-powerful would not be able to govern the world properly. Without a just and omnipotent God, life on earth would be characterized by injustice and chaos.

34:21-23 Elihu built on Job's earlier remarks that God watches everything that men do on earth (7:20; 31:4). There is no place, however dark, where evildoers can escape God's view. Job had asked for a court appearance in order to present his case before God (9:32-35; 13:18; 21:3-7; 31:35-37). As the omniscient, all-seeing Judge, He does not need to come to court to examine a person's ways.

34:24-25 Elihu cited the example of wicked rulers. God did not need to launch an investigation of their deeds. He already knew everything.

34:26-28 God sees the godless ways of wicked rulers and hears the outcry of those whom they have oppressed. He judges wicked rulers and punishes them as a public example.

34:29-30 Job felt that at times the unrighteous seem to have God's provision (12:6), but Elihu declared that such instances are illusions. Although God appears to ignore cases where wickedness prevails, He does see them. God's intervention may appear to be slow in coming, but He will rectify the situation in accordance with His wise and sovereign disposition of earthly affairs (2Pt 3:8-9).

34:31-33 Rather than repentance, Job had claimed his innocence and righteousness (27:2-6; 31:35-37). God's terms for the sinner's forgiveness and restoration to His favor are conditioned upon the sinner's repentance (22:21-27; 1Jn 1:8). Elihu challenged Job to consider his remarks and reply.

34:36-37 Elihu alluded to Zophar's initial declaration that God had not punished Job to the full limit for his sins (11:4-6). Because he had refused to acknowledge his sins, Job was rebelling against God. Elihu observed that Job had shown contempt for his friends (cp. Lm 2:15) while condemning God with his much speaking (Jb 16:12-17; 30:18-19). This put Job on dangerous ground (Ezk 25:6-7).

35:2-3 In a rhetorical question implying a negative answer, Elihu suggested that Job had established his righteousness apart from God, but Job had made no such assertion. Elihu based his argument on Job's remarks that keeping God's righteous standards appeared to gain mankind nothing (9:22,29-31; 10:1-3,17; 21:4-21; 27:1).

35:5-7 Since God is transcendent and superior to man, neither man's sin nor his righteousness can harm or benefit God (7:20; 22:2-3). God's character and glory are not conditioned by man's actions.

35:8 Far from enjoying an absolute moral autonomy without reference to others, our actions influence people for good or evil.

35:9-11 Elihu reminded Job that the oppressed often fail to consider the person and work of God. They are too concerned with their own situation rather than understanding that God may have a disciplinary purpose in their suffering (33:19-30). Elihu had shown that God will deal with oppressors in His own time and in His own way (34:11-22). The songs are the divine gift of music to alleviate painful nights of suffering (Ps 42:8; 77:6). These songs may be those of anticipated deliverance (Ps 30:4-5) or reminders of God's concern for His people in their need (Ps 118:1-7,14,28-29) or praise to God (Pss 96; 98). Job had pointed to the creatures of land, sea, and air as those who understand that God is the Creator and controller of all things (Jb 12:7-10). If creatures can appreciate the working of God, how much more should mankind, His special creation?

35:12-13 Elihu contended that when God is silent as the oppressed cry out, it is because their cry is born of pride, not contrition. God hears the penitent when they cry (Ps 4:3-4; 22:23-24). If He does not answer, the fault lies with man, not God (2Ch 7:14; Jr 11:9-11).

35:14 Job had asked God why He did not answer his requests for the opportunity to state his case before Him (13:20-24; 23:2-7). Elihu suggested that God's silence (30:20) was not because He was unaware of Job's situation (33:21-23) but was due to Job's self-righteousness and pride in maintaining his innocence (27:2-6; 31:35-37) in the face of God's discipline (34:11-12). Job might be ignoring God's many attempts to communicate with him (33:8-17). He might be missing his opportunities to exercise his God-given wisdom (35:11) and to consider his Creator's provision for relief in his distress (v. 10).

35:15-16 Elihu ended this discourse on a similar note to his previous speech in which he recounted Job's rebellious tendencies (34:36-37). Because God had not given Job the full punishment that he deserved (11:6), he foolishly babbled on with meaningless prattle.

36:3-4 Elihu claimed to have access to the flawless mind of God. Here he professed perfect knowledge for himself; in 37:16 he attributed the same to God.

36:5 The phrase He understands all things is literally "He is mighty in strength of heart." The Hebrew word for "heart" can refer to the emotions or to the mind (Ps 77:6; see textual footnote at Jr 7:31). Elihu stated categorically that God's great power does not compromise His dealings with mankind. His strength of heart moves Him to deal with compassionate firmness of purpose.

36:6 Contrary to Job's insistence that he received no justice from God in his suffering (7:19; 9:27-35; 10:20-21; 16:18-22; 19:7; 30:16-23), Elihu declared that God's justice did extend to the afflicted (34:28).

36:7 Job had complained of God's constant scrutiny of him (7:17-20; 10:4-7), yet he had admitted that in times past when God watched over him, he experienced the good life (29:2-6). Elihu pointed out that the all-seeing God always looks to the good of the righteous.

36:8-9 Elihu pointed out that people's good includes their correction. God may allow the righteous to suffer like those bound with chains (i.e., like captives of war; cp. Nah 3:10) in order to keep them from going further along the path to destruction. Apparent injustice may be a disguised good in order that God may bring people's arrogance and sin to their attention.

36:10-12 The uncovered or opened ear symbolizes God's revelation and instruction to mankind (33:16; Is 50:4-5). The sinner's unopened ear indicates rebellion against God (Is 48:8). If a person's ears are opened to accept God's correction, he will obey God and serve Him faithfully. If the person's ear remains closed in disobedience, he will proceed in ignorance along the road to certain death (33:18).

36:13-14 Elihu pointed out that some people respond to God's chastisement angrily. Cult prostitutes were involved in the worship of idols (Dt 23:17; 1Kg 14:22-24; Hs 4:14).

36:15 Rather than being a sign of God's unconcern as Job had reasoned (9:15-16), affliction is a mark of God's mercy, keeping one from the deadly path of ignorance (v. 12).

36:16 Elihu turned to Job's speech in which he had contrasted his former life and present situation (chaps. 29-30). Rather than complaining that he was suffering unjustly, Job should recognize that he was experiencing God's means of correction and restoration, as Eliphaz had also argued (5:17-26).

36:17-19 The prosperity of the wicked was distracting Job. Neither wealth nor personal effort could deliver Job from his distress. Only God's chastisement could work its intended result.

36:20-21 Job should neither wish for death (7:13-16; 10:19-22) nor resign himself to it (17:13-18; 30:20-23). Elihu warned Job that by seeking some alternative method of ending his affliction, he was committing iniquity. Rather, Job should learn the reasons for God's discipline in his life.

36:22-23 Elihu implied that Job should not accuse God of injustice in his case (10:6-7; 13:26-27; 19:11; 30:18-19; 33:8-11).

36:24-25 Rather than finding fault with God, Job should join all mankind in singing His praise (Ps 48:10; 100:1-2).

36:26-37 : 13 Elihu followed his own advice and launched into a long hymn-like praise of God. This prayer provides a setting for God's subsequent declarations to Job.

36:26 Elihu began his praise by pointing out that full knowledge of God is beyond human comprehension (42:3; Is 40:13-14). Mankind cannot fully appreciate His infinity (Ps 102:27). Job was in no position to criticize such a One, because His power and wisdom defied human understanding (Is 40:28).

36:27-30 The complexities of the hydrologic cycle are under God's control.

36:31-33 God's control of the forces of nature involves both the sustenance and the judgment of the nations. Like a mighty cosmic warrior shooting His arrows (Hab 3:8-13), God propels the lightning across the sky (37:3) as an instrument of judgment, unerringly hitting its mark (see Ps 18:14; 144:6). God's power and presence are felt by man and beast in the thunderstorm (Ps 77:18).

37:1-5 Elihu sensed God's power in the thunderstorm. The extent of its working is beyond human comprehension, but it is under the control of the Exalted One (36:26).

37:6-8 Both the snow (38:22) and torrential rains (1Kg 18:45; Ezk 13:11) are under God's control. They testify to His handiwork. Under such conditions even beasts seek shelter from the elements. If winter is in view (as in Jb 37:9-10), Elihu may be noting the process of animal hibernation.

37:9-10 Elihu portrayed as the breath of God the chilling winds of winter, transforming the landscape by the power of the Lord and under His direction. Snow and ice are rare but not unheard of in Israel (2Sm 23:20).

37:11-13 God forms and controls all weather and sends it to accomplish His purposes. This may include punishment (lit "a rod") for disobedience or a special blessing and evidence of God's faithful love toward His people for covenant obedience (Dt 11:13-15). Elihu implied that Job should understand this so he may recognize God's dealing with him for correction and restoration (Ps 119:71).

37:17-18 Elihu now asked whether Job had any part in bringing the hot sirocco winds. The cloudless sky is like a vast metal mirror over the landscape.

37:19-20 Job had spoken previously of wanting to present his case before the Lord, confident that he was in the right (13:18; 23:4) and would be vindicated (31:35-37). Elihu maintained that no one has the wisdom to debate God, let alone win. If man cannot understand God's basic activities in the natural world, how can he expect to speak boldly in His presence?

37:21-22 If the sun is too dazzling to behold, the splendor of the Lord is even more so (Ac 22:6-11; 26:13). Therefore, God softens His appearance (Ezk 1:4-28; Mt 17:2). The imagery may suggest the approach of a storm from the north (cp. Pr 25:23) as the sun's rays streamed through the gathering clouds with a golden glow. This would herald the Lord's presence (Ps 18:2). The north (Hb tsaphon) was linked with God's residence in some cultures of the ancient Near East (Jb 23:9; 26:7; cp. Ps 48:2; Is 14:13-14).

37:23 Elihu implied that Job's quest for a personal hearing before God (13:14-16; 31:35-37) was ill-founded. Elihu maintained that God was not singling out Job for persecution as he had complained (10:20; 16:12; 30:19,21). Such was impossible, because God's basic moral character functioned in accordance with His justice and righteousness (Dt 32:4; Jnh 4:2).

37:24 Elihu's final advice was to fear God (Ec 12:13). This is wise, as Job himself had admitted (Jb 28:28). But God does not favorably regard the person who is wise in heart (one who prides himself as having superior wisdom). True wisdom begins with reverential fear of God (Pr 1:7). Elihu was from the beginning angry with Job because he believed that Job was self-righteous (Jb 32:2). Although Job feared God, he was playing God in his own life despite his constant acts of piety (1:5; cp. chap. 31). Job had been certain of his righteousness (27:6), but he had failed to recognize God's essential justice and righteousness (32:2; 37:23). Elihu's advice to Job was that he should truly fear (revere) God and turn from his self-centeredness. Then he would understand both God's power and His moral integrity (42:2-6). Thus Job would find God sufficient for his every trial.

38:1 God's speaking to Job from the whirlwind was not from a windstorm such as that which destroyed the house of Job's children (1:18-19) or the winds of judgment (21:18). It was a theophany, a manifestation of God Himself (Ezk 1:4; cp. 2Kg 2:11). In the book of Job, the divine name Lord (Yahweh) had occurred previously only in the Prologue (it appears in Job's first response to Zophar in Jb 12:9, though some manuscripts read "God"). Although Job may have been upright and he was not suffering because of wrongdoing, his frequent complaints against God were tantamount to assuming the Lord's prerogatives—playing God in his life. Job needed to be reminded of who and what the LORD is in order to find Him sufficient for his situation.

"Then the Lord answered Job from the whirlwind. He said: Who is this who obscures My counsel with ignorant words?" (38:1-2) 38:3 The Lord addressed Job by challenging him to enter into a dialogue in full possession of his human strength and faculties. The Hebrew word translated man often reflects a man in his strength and virility (Jr 30:6). It is used at times of vigorous spiritual strength (Jb 16:21). Get ready to answer renders the Hebrew "gird up your loins." The idiom reflects the tucking of one's long garment between the legs and into the belt in preparation for an arduous task such as running (1Kg 18:46) or battle (Is 5:27). Job's difficult task consisted of fully understanding and answering God's questions.

38:4-6 God's first round of questions to Job challenged him to understand something of the Lord's creative power in both the inanimate (vv. 4-38) and animate (38:39-39:30) worlds. God alone brought the earth into being. The imagery here is that of a building carefully conceived, measured, and laid out. Its supporting pillars are securely fastened to its foundations (or sockets for the pillars). In an earlier image, the earth was conceived of as hanging in empty space (26:7).

38:7 The stars are personified as being able to sing. Music accompanied the dedication of Solomon's temple (2Ch 7:6). Music and singing also accompanied the laying of the second temple's foundation (Ezr 3:10-11). Alternatively, the morning stars may be a metaphor for the angels, who appear in the parallel line.

38:8-11 The origin of the sea is depicted in the imagery of childbirth.

Although the delimitation of the oceans' boundaries has a significant place in the Genesis creation account (Gn 1:6-7; Ps 104:6-9), neither there nor here is there any hint of ancient Near Eastern mythology in which a primeval sea god is defeated.

38:12-15 Much as the appearance of clay is altered by a seal impression, so the landscape becomes dramatically changed by the rosy rays of dawn. The imagery is that of a garment whose folds—unseen in the darkness—become visible in the light. "Light" for the wicked is the darkness in which they accomplish their evil deeds. With the true light of day their "light" is extinguished. As an evildoer's arm is rendered impotent by being broken, so the plans of the wicked are thwarted by the light of day.

38:16-18 The extent of Job's experiential knowledge is questioned. His limited travels cannot have included going to the hidden springs that lie in the depths of the oceans. Job had not seen even the shadow of the gates of death, let alone passed through them. Earlier Job had described the realm of death as a gloomy place (10:21-22), yet he expressed a longing to find refuge there (14:13). An alternative proposal sees an allusion to ancient mythological concepts about the afterlife. Thus there is a movement from the depths of the sea to the underlying netherworld through whose gates one enters at death into a vast subterranean world ruled by underworld deities. If so, the force is apologetic, Yahweh being shown to be the true Lord. The point is that Job, with his limited perspective, should trust in Him who is infinite in wisdom, power, and knowledge.

38:19-21 Light and darkness are personified, each having a home from which they daily emerged and returned. The Lord satirically reminded Job that he was not born when God commanded the first light to penetrate the primeval darkness (15:7; Gn 1:2-5).

38:22-23 The imagery of these verses views God as keeping snow and hail in heavenly storehouses for His use at appropriate times. God could use them as weapons (Ex 9:18-26; Ps 68:14; 78:47-48; Is 28:2,19).

38:24 God reminded Job that his knowledge did not include the distribution of the lightning (see textual footnote; also 36:30,32; 37:3,11,15) or the place where the east wind originated. Such a mighty desert wind had swept away Job's family (1:19).

38:28-29 God reminded Job that only a master craftsman could account for the manifold forms that water can assume and the places where these may be found. The elemental forces of nature are under God's control (5:10; 28:25-26; 36:32; Ps 147:16-18).

A view of Orion Nebula, the constellation bearing the name of a giant Greek hunter who, according to the myth, was bound and placed in the heavens. Job 38:31 may allude to this myth. God is consistently portrayed as the creator of the Orion constellation (9:9; Am 5:8). The plural of the Hebrew term for Orion is rendered "constellations" in Isaiah 13:10.

The Pleiades, a brilliant grouping of six or seven visible stars located in the shoulder of the constellation Taurus (9:9; 38:31; Am 5:8).

38:31-33 God turned Job's attention to the constellations: the Pleiades . . . Orion, and the Bear. Job had mentioned them earlier in connection with God's creative activity (9:9). The meaning of the term constellations is uncertain and may include the planets (2Kg 23:5). Although Job knew of their existence, he did not understand the laws of physics and astronomy and their effect on the earth. God alone exercises dominion over all of this.

38:36-38 God's questions implied that neither Job nor any human being had the wisdom to control the weather. In a metaphor the clouds are likened to giant water jars (or skins), which are tipped to spill their water on hard, dry soil (see Dt 28:23).

38:39-41 Lions are capable of securing their own prey, but it is God who established the complex relationship of predator and prey. God also cares for the needs of the ravens, scavengers that often feed on the remains of prey. His control of ravens included using them to care for one of His prophets (1Kg 17:4-6). The stately lion and lowly raven serve as a merism, the two extremes (stately and lowly) representing the whole animal world.

39:1-4 The female mountain goats (ibex) and deer are able to reproduce without human help. God controls the entire process.

39:5-8 God implied that He looks after the wild donkey in the wilderness, free from the work and constraints of its domesticated counterpart. There is a theme here: God has placed every animal in a suitable environment. The Hebrew word rendered scoffs can mean "laughs" or "plays"; it occurs six times in the divine speeches (vv. 7,18,22; 40:20; 41:5,29).

39:9-12 Only God can control the powerful wild ox (Hb re'em; probably the aurochs, Bos primigenius). Unlike the domesticated ox, the wild ox cannot be harnessed to harvest man's grain. The Assyrian King Sennacherib compared his indomitable courage and strength to that of the wild ox. Its long horns were symbolic of strength (Nm 23:22; 24:8; Dt 33:17).

39:13-18 The depiction of the ostrich conforms to popular conception rather than scientific observation. Because some females shared the same nesting area, one ostrich might look with disdain at another's eggs. Though they are unintelligent, they can outrun horses. Even this strange animal is designed and watched over by God.

39:19-25 The horse was particularly prized and possessed by royalty (1Kg 4:26; 10:26-28). The horse's great strength and swiftness made it an important part of ancient military forces, especially in pulling war chariots (Ex 15:1; Jdg 5:22; Jr 4:13; Nah 3:2). The leaping ability of locusts as well as their appearance and swift orderly advance when swarming made their comparison with horses a familiar one (Jl 2:4; Rv 9:7). The horse's fearlessness, eagerness, and confidence in the face of battle is personified as his saying "Aha!" (see textual footnote at Jb 39:25). The horse's amazing physical qualities can only be attributed to God's creative genius. He alone can strike terror into the otherwise fearless horse (Zch 12:4).

39:26-30 God closed this portion of His questioning of Job in the same way He began it. He challenged Job's understanding about the workings of nature (38:4). Job had not taught the hawk how to fly or when and where to migrate. The eagle did not build its lofty nest in an inaccessible rocky crag (Ob 4) at Job's direction. Job did not equip the eagle with keen eyesight. Eagles (and vultures) are at hand after military battles that leave dead bodies on the ground (Mt 24:28).

40:2 God questioned Job with a renewed challenge to either answer or make a rebuttal. Otherwise Job must admit that his criticism was groundless. Job had criticized the Lord often in the earlier dialogues (9:14-20; 16:11-12; 21:17-26) and had longed to present his case before God to see how He would answer him (23:2-5; 31:35-37). Job now had that opportunity.

40:3-5 Job's answer was a non-answer. The Hebrew phrase "I am insignificant" is literally "I am [too] light/little." Job did not disclaim his innocence. He had said all he could about his situation. Placing his hand over his mouth showed Job's reluctance to add anything further.

40:8 God now came to the heart of the matter. Was Job ready to condemn God who had demonstrated His loving care for all creatures? Was Job so willing to defend his uprightness and innocence that he would declare God unjust? (cp. 27:2). Would Job justify himself (27:6) rather than see his suffering in the light of God's greater purposes? Job had an attitude problem that must be resolved if his fellowship with God was to be restored (14:15; 19:26-27; 29:2-6).

40:9 The arm is used figuratively for strength. God asked Job whether he had sufficient strength to enforce his decision if he were in charge of meting out justice. God's arm was stretched out against the Egyptians to redeem His people out of Egyptian slavery (Ex 6:6; Dt 4:34; 26:8). God brings justice to the world by His arm (Is 51:5; 63:5-6; Jr 21:3-5).

40:10 If Job was to be in charge, where were his royal garments and evidence of his authority? Such matters are characteristic of God's person (Ps 29:1-2; 112:9; 113:4; Rv 4:11).

40:11-14 Job had complained that God failed to bring the wicked to justice in this life (21:30-33; 24:1-17) while depriving Job of justice (27:2). Should Job be able to demonstrate his ability to bring the wicked to justice, God would admit Job's sufficiency to care for his own situation. The right hand often symbolizes honor, authority, or power (Ps 110:1-2; 118:15-16). By it God lays hold of His enemies and the wicked and brings them to judgment (Ps 21:8-13). If Job was unable to deal similarly with the wicked, he must not accuse God of injustice.

40:15 Some have identified Behemoth as some kind of mythological beast, such as the bull of heaven in the Mesopotamian Epic of Gilgamesh or the ferocious bullock, the Ugaritic goddess that Anat defeated. Allusions to mythological creatures had been made previously (3:8; 7:12; 9:13-14; 26:12-13), but the description here favors a living animal known to Job. The buffalo, a dinosaur, the rhinoceros, and (most often) the hippopotamus have been suggested. The term behemoth occurs elsewhere only in Ps 73:22 where the psalmist compared his formerly embittered soul to a brute beast.

40:17 The Hebrew verb c*haphats*, translated in verse 17 as stiffens, occurs only here with this meaning. The point of comparison between the short tail of the hippopotamus and the cedar tree may simply be the fact of their respective hardness. Elsewhere the same Hebrew word carries emphases such as "take pleasure in" or "delight." "Tail" could be a euphemism, hence speaking to Behemoth's virility. Readings found in manuscripts of ancient versions (LXX, Vg, Syr) support this possibility.

40:19 Only God would dare to face this creature alone (v. 24). Cattle (Hb behemah) were the first of God's created land animals. Behemoth (pl) would represent the foremost of all. Since Job could not face Behemoth, would he have the power to enforce justice against the wicked (vv. 10-14)? Job should entrust justice to the Lord, Behemoth's creator (v. 15).

40:20-22 Behemoth found food on the hills (cp. v. 15), but it sought refuge in marshes where the lotus plants grew. Alternatively, this plant may refer to a thorny tree that grew in deep moist valleys.

40:24 Hunting parties attempted to pierce the nose of Behemoth to impair his breathing, making him vulnerable to snares or hooks. Such was no easy task while Behemoth was watching.

41:1 Leviathan has been identified by interpreters as a whale, shark, dinosaur, sea monster, and a crocodile. For its mythological associations, see notes at 3:8-9; 7:12. In ancient Egypt the crocodile could symbolize royal power, yet it was a hunted animal.

41:2-4 God's challenge indicates that Job would be unable to hunt and subdue Leviathan unaided. In the ancient Near East, stronger nations imposed treaty obligations on a weaker state. Fierce Leviathan would neither petition Job for such a covenant arrangement nor ask to be his perpetual slave (Ex 21:5-6; Dt 15:16-17).

41:6 Leviathan cannot be captured and sold.

41:7-9 It would be impossible for Job to face Leviathan alone with the usual hunting methods. Most likely Job would collapse in fear at seeing him.

41:10-11 If Job would not dare to face Leviathan single-handedly, how could he hope to confront God who owned everything (including Leviathan) in order to present and win an argument? (31:35-37).

41:12-17 God reminded Job of Leviathan's magnificent physical features that made him too formidable to face by any one person.

41:18-21 God's portrayal of Leviathan's foaming emergence from water is compared to that of a fire-breathing dragon. Similar creatures are described in Ugaritic mythology depicting Baal's defeat of Yam, the sea god.

41:22-25 Leviathan's strength and seemingly impregnable body were exceeded only by his inner courage and fearlessness. Leviathan's power and self-assurance made him a fitting symbol of Satan, the fearsome and fallen being whose raging is fully and finally quelled by God in the end times (Rv 20:10).

41:26-29 No human weapon had any effect on Leviathan. His fearlessness in the face of danger is compared to laughing.

41:30-31 A threshing sledge consisted of two boards whose undersides were embedded with sharp stones for crushing grain, which would leave marks in the mud. When Leviathan dove into the water, he made it foam like ingredients boiled by the perfumer.

41:33-34 Fearless Leviathan was unequaled in power. If neither man nor beast dared to oppose God's foremost creature, certainly no one could challenge the Lord, its Creator (vv. 10-11).

42:1-2 Job confessed God's rightful sovereignty over all matters, including his situation. He had questioned God's actions previously (16:12-14). God's speeches about His ordering of the world caused Job's capitulation.

42:3 Job had questioned the equity and justice of God's dealings (7:20; 21:7-34). God's wise handling of the physical and natural worlds convinced him that, though he may have committed no overt sin, he had dabbled in questions beyond his understanding and experience.

42:4-5 Job now understood something of God's justice and wise dealings with the strongest of creatures. Although Job had previously considered himself to be upright, he confessed that he had been influenced by traditional but errant understandings (15:17-19; 16:2). By saying he now saw God, he meant that he had experienced God's presence and understood Him better.

42:6 Job was humbled that the Lord of the universe had spoken to him. This went beyond his fondest wish for reestablished fellowship (9:32-35; 19:26-27; 23:3-5; 29:2-6). With genuine contrition he abandoned self in full dependence on God.

42:7 God rebuked Eliphaz and his friends for their treatment of Job. While defending God they had attributed false reasons for Job's condition. They did not consider it possible that his suffering was not directly due to sin. They also misrepresented God as an insensitive enforcer of justice.

42:10 Job's restoration was complete. Because he was now pure in his attitude toward God and had demonstrated spiritual maturity toward his friends, the Lord accepted him into full fellowship. The doubled possessions (v. 12) reflect God's full acceptance of Job as His own (Dt 21:17; 2Kg 2:9). Not only had Job found God to be sufficient for his every need, but Satan had been proved wrong. He had remained blameless throughout his long ordeal (Jb 27:4-6; 28:28). Although he had questioned God's dealings with him (10:18-21; 27:2) and had even accused the Lord of attacking him (13:20-27; 16:12-14; 23:2), he did not curse God as Satan had predicted he would (1:11; 2:5) or as his wife had urged him to do (2:9). In this at least, Job proved to be exemplary (Jms 5:11). By remembering Job's suffering and its outcome, believers can be encouraged to rejoice in times of their trial and testing (Jms 1:2-4; 1Pt 1:6-7). Rather than complaining or doubting God, they can humbly trust in God and His sufficiency so that Satan will not be given any advantage over them (1Pt 5:6-9).

42:11 Job's family and friends believed that the LORD controls and causes all events. They offered him the comfort they had formerly withheld (12:4; 16:20; 19:14). The (Hb) qesitah was a unit of silver used in the times covered in some of the earliest biblical accounts (Gn 33:19; Jos 24:32).

42:12-15 The fact that the number of Job's children was not doubled may indicate that at least the souls of his deceased children lived on after death. In a sense, then, his children now numbered twice what they were. Job's fairness toward everyone (29:12-17,21-25) is seen in his concern that his daughters would share the inheritance with their brothers.

42:16-17 Job's 140 years may indicate that he was 70 at the time of his testing and may reflect the number of added years that he lived. His epitaph is the same accorded other godly men (Gn 25:8; 1Ch 29:28; 2Ch 24:15). The Septuagint (LXX) adds that Job "will rise again with the ones whom the Lord raises up."

Uses in the OT 74
Focus Passage Job 5:17

Ma'as implies a dismissive evaluation and often involves contempt. It frequently occurs with near synonyms like "abhor" (ga'al ; Lv 26:43), "despise" (na'ats ; Is 5:24), or "spurn" (zanach ; Ps 89:38). Antonyms include "choose" (bachar ; Is 41:9) and "trust" (batach ; Is 30:12). Israel tended to reject God (1Sm 8:7), His instruction (Jr 6:19), and His land (Nm 14:31). In return God rejected Israel (Ps 78:59). The pattern was rejection of God's word followed by God rejecting the offender (1Sm 15:26). When God rejected , He might abandon (Jr 7:29). Ma'as denotes renounce , refuse , and dismiss (Jb 9:21; 30:1; 31:13). Despising cities is comparable to disregarding human life (Is 33:8); rejection can be murderous (Jr 4:30). Ma'as can imply giving up on life (Jb 7:16), taking back words (Jb 42:6), or despising oneself (Pr 15:32). Occasionally it indicates good human behavior such as refusing what is bad or illegal (Is 7:16; 33:15).

Focus Passage Job 13:28

This root in Akkadian means "die out, waste away." Balah indicates something is old and worn out, especially clothing (Dt 8:4). Sinners, the heavens, earth's foundations, and all mankind will wear out like a garment (Jb 13:28; Ps 102:26; Is 50:9; 51:6). People become shriveled up (Gn 18:12) and bones become brittle (Ps 32:3). Intensive forms take objects: God wears away flesh and skin (Lm 3:4). People spend their days (Jb 21:13) and fully enjoy, or wear out, the work of their hands (Is 65:22). Evildoers oppress others (1Ch 17:9). The related Aramaic bala' describes an end time king oppressing God's holy ones (Dn 7:25). Balah shows bodies wasting away in Sheol (Ps 49:14). Baleh (5x) describes worn-out, old, and threadbare items (Jos 9:4-5), and women worn out by adultery (Ezk 23:43).

Derek, from verbal darak (tread), indicates way, either as physical path (Nm 22:22) or metaphor for behavior (Ezk 16:27). It occurs alongside other words for roadway, and implies highway (Nm 20:17), road (1Sm 6:9), route (Dt 1:22), or passageway (Ezk 42:11). It suggests journey (Gn 24:21) or trip (Ex 3:18), especially when modified temporally. Derek can mean distance (Ex 8:27). With compass points it is untranslated, or suggests direction (1Kg 8:44) or toward (Ezk 42:7). Ethically, "walk in His ways" (Dt 10:12) implies following an example (1Kg 16:26), instruction (Dt 5:33), or custom (Gn 19:31). Anything you do is literally "your ways" (Dt 28:29). Derek signifies one's course (Jb 29:25), works (Jb 40:19), or life (Ps 119:26). In comparisons it can be like (Am 4:10). Scripture contrasts ways of life and death (Jr 21:8), the evil way (Pr 28:10), and the way of integrity (Ps 101:6).

PSALMS

BOOK I

(Psalms 1–41)

The Two Ways

1 How happy is the man who does not follow [A] the advice of the wicked or take [B] the path of sinners or join a group [C] of mockers! [a] 2 Instead, his delight is in the LORD's instruction, and he meditates on it day and night. [b] 3 He is like a tree planted beside streams of water [D] that bears its fruit in season [E, c] and whose leaf does not wither. [d]
Whatever he does prospers. [e]

4 The wicked are not like this;
instead, they are like chaff that the wind blows away. [f] 5 Therefore the wicked will not survive [F] the judgment, [g] and sinners will not be in the community of the righteous.

6 For the LORD watches over the way of the righteous, [h]
but the way of the wicked leads to ruin. [i]

Coronation of the Son

2 Why [a] do the nations rebel [A, b] and the peoples plot in vain? [c] 2 The kings of the earth take their stand, [d] and the rulers conspire together against the LORD and His Anointed One: [B, e] 3 “Let us tear off their chains and free ourselves from their restraints.” [C, f]

4 The One enthroned [D] in heaven laughs;
the Lord ridicules them. [g] 5 Then He speaks to them in His anger and terrifies them in His wrath: [h] 6 “I have consecrated My King [E] on •Zion , My holy mountain.” [i]

7 I will declare the LORD’s decree:
He said to Me, “You are My Son; [F]
today I have become Your [G] Father. [j] 8 Ask of Me,
and I will make the nations Your [H] inheritance and the ends of the earth Your [I] possession. [k] 9 You will break [l] them with a rod of iron;
You [J] will shatter them like pottery.” [K, m]

10 So now, kings, be wise;
receive instruction, you judges of the earth.
11 Serve the LORD with reverential awe and rejoice with trembling. [n]
12 Pay homage to [L] the Son or He [M] will be angry and you will perish in your rebellion, [N, o]
for His [O] anger may ignite at any moment. [p]
All those who take refuge in Him [P] are happy. [q]

Confidence in Troubled Times

A psalm of David when he fled from his son Absalom. [a]

3 LORD, how my foes increase!
There are many who attack me. [b]
2 Many say about me,
"There is no help for him in God." [c]

• Selah

3 But You, LORD, are a shield around me, [d]
my glory, [e] and the One who lifts up my head. [f] 4 I cry aloud to the LORD, and He answers me from His holy mountain. [g]

Selah

5 I lie down and sleep;
I wake again because the LORD sustains me. [h]
6 I am not afraid of the thousands of people who have taken their stand against me on every side. [i]

7 Rise up, LORD! [j]
Save me, my God!
You strike all my enemies on the cheek; [k]
You break the teeth of the wicked. [l]
8 Salvation belongs to the LORD; [m] may Your blessing be on Your people. [n]

Selah

A Night Prayer

For the choir director: with stringed instruments. [a] A Davidic psalm.

4 Answer me when I call,
God, who vindicates me. [A, b]
You freed me from affliction; [c] be gracious to me and hear my prayer.

2 How long, exalted men, will my honor be insulted? [d]
How long will you love what is worthless [e]
and pursue a lie?

• Selah

3 Know that the LORD has set apart
the faithful for Himself;
the LORD will hear when I call to Him.
4 Be angry [B] and do not sin; [f]
on your bed, reflect in your heart and be still. [g]

Selah

5 Offer sacrifices in righteousness [C, h] and trust in the LORD. [i]

6 Many are saying, “Who can show us anything good? ”
Look on us with favor, LORD. [j]

7 You have put more joy in my heart than they have when their grain and new wine abound. [k] 8 I will both lie down and sleep in peace, [l]
for You alone, LORD, make me live in safety. [m]

The Refuge of the Righteous

For the choir director: with the flutes. A Davidic psalm.

5 Listen to my words, LORD;
consider my sighing. [a] 2 Pay attention to the sound of my cry, [b]
my King and my God, [c]
for I pray to You.

3 At daybreak, [d] LORD, You hear my voice;
at daybreak I plead my case to You [e] and watch expectantly.

4 For You are not a God who delights in wickedness;
evil cannot dwell with You. [f]
5 The boastful cannot stand in Your presence; [g]
You hate all evildoers. [h]
6 You destroy those who tell lies; [i] the LORD abhors a man of bloodshed and treachery. [j]

7 But I enter Your house
by the abundance of Your faithful love; [k]
I bow down toward Your holy temple in reverential awe of You. [l]
8 LORD, lead me in Your righteousness [m] because of my adversaries; [A] make Your way straight before me. [n]

9 For there is nothing reliable in what they say; [B, o] destruction is within them;
their throat is an open grave;
they flatter with their tongues. [p] 10 Punish them, God;
let them fall by their own schemes. [q]
Drive them out [r] because of their many crimes, for they rebel against You. [s]

11 But let all who take refuge in You rejoice; [t]
let them shout for joy forever.
May You shelter them, [u]
and may those who love Your name boast about You. [v] 12 For You, LORD, bless the righteous one;
You surround him with favor like a shield. [w]

A Prayer for Mercy

For the choir director: with stringed instruments, according to • Sheminith . [a] A Davidic psalm.

6 LORD, do not rebuke me in Your anger;
do not discipline me in Your wrath. [b]
2 Be gracious to me, LORD, for I am weak; [A, c] heal me, [d] LORD, for my bones are shaking; [e] 3 my whole being is shaken with terror. [f]
And You, LORD — how long? [g]

4 Turn, LORD! Rescue me;
save me because of Your faithful love. [h] 5 For there is no remembrance of You in death;
who can thank You in •Sheol ? [i]

6 I am weary from my groaning; [j] with my tears I dampen my pillow [B] and drench my bed every night. [k] 7 My eyes are swollen from grief; [l]
they [m] grow old because of all my enemies.

8 Depart from me, all evildoers, for the LORD has heard the sound of my weeping. [n]
9 The LORD has heard my plea for help; [o]
the LORD accepts my prayer. [p]
10 All my enemies will be ashamed and shake with terror;
they will turn back [q] and suddenly be disgraced. [r]

Prayer for Justice

A Shiggaion [a] of David, which he sang to the LORD concerning the words of •Cush , [b] a Benjaminite.

7 •Yahweh my God, I seek refuge in You; [c]
save me from all my pursuers and rescue me [d] 2 or they [A] will tear me like a lion, ripping me apart with no one to rescue me. [B, e]

3 Yahweh my God, if I have done this,
if there is injustice on my hands, [f]
4 if I have done harm to one at peace with me [g] or have plundered [C] my adversary without cause, [h] 5 may an enemy pursue and overtake me;
may he trample me to the ground [i]
and leave my honor in the dust. [j]

• Selah

6 Rise up, LORD, in Your anger;
lift Yourself up against the fury of my adversaries; [k]
awake for me; [l, m]
You have ordained [D] a judgment. [n]
7 Let the assembly of peoples gather around You; [o] take Your seat [p] on high over it. [q] 8 The LORD judges the peoples; [r]
vindicate me, LORD,
according to my righteousness and my integrity. [E, s]

9 Let the evil of the wicked come to an end, [t]
but establish the righteous. [u]
The One who examines the thoughts and emotions [F]
is a righteous God. [v]
10 My shield is with [G] God, [w] who saves the upright in heart. [x] 11 God is a righteous judge and a God who shows His wrath every day. [y]

12 If anyone does not repent,
God [H] will sharpen His sword; [z]
He has strung [I] His bow and made it ready. [a] 13 He has prepared His deadly weapons;

He tips His arrows with fire. [b]

14 See, the wicked one is pregnant with evil, conceives trouble, and gives birth to deceit. [c] 15 He dug a pit and hollowed it out but fell into the hole he had made. [d] 16 His trouble comes back on his own head, and his violence falls on the top of his head. [e]

17 I will thank the LORD for His righteousness;
I will sing about the name of Yahweh the •Most High. [f]

God’s Glory, Man’s Dignity

For the choir director: on the • Gittith . [a] A Davidic psalm.

8 •Yahweh , our Lord,
how magnificent is Your name throughout the earth! [b]

You have covered the heavens with Your majesty. [A, c]
2 Because of Your adversaries,
You have established a stronghold [d]
from the mouths of children and nursing infants [e]
to silence the enemy and the avenger.

3 When I observe Your heavens,
the work of Your fingers,
the moon and the stars,
which You set in place, [f]
4 what is man that You remember him,
the son of man that You look after him? [g] 5 You made him little less than God [h, B] and crowned him with glory and honor.
6 You made him lord over the works of Your hands;
You put everything under his feet: [C, i] 7 all the sheep and oxen,
as well as the animals in the wild, 8 the birds of the sky,
and the fish of the sea
that pass through the currents of the seas. [j]

9 Yahweh, our Lord,
how magnificent is Your name throughout the earth!

Celebration of God's Justice

For the choir director: according to Muth-labben. [a] A Davidic psalm.

9 I will thank •Yahweh with all my heart;
I will declare all Your wonderful works. [b]
2 I will rejoice and boast about You; [c]
I will sing about Your name, •Most High. [d]

3 When my enemies retreat,
they stumble and perish before You. [e]
4 For You have upheld my just cause; [A, f]
You are seated on Your throne as a righteous judge. [g]
5 You have rebuked the nations: [h]
You have destroyed the wicked; [i]
You have erased their name forever and ever. [j]
6 The enemy has come to eternal ruin;
You have uprooted the cities,
and the very memory of them has perished. [k]

7 But the LORD sits enthroned forever; [l]
He has established His throne for judgment. [m]
8 He judges the world with righteousness;
He executes judgment on the nations with fairness. [n]
9 The LORD is a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble. [o] 10 Those who know Your name trust in You because You have not abandoned
those who seek You, Yahweh. [p]

11 Sing to the LORD, who dwells in •Zion ; [q] proclaim His deeds among the nations. [r] 12 For the One who seeks an accounting for bloodshed remembers them; [s]
He does not forget the cry of the afflicted. [t]

13 Be gracious to me, LORD;
consider my affliction at the hands of those who hate me. [u]
Lift me up from the gates of death, [v]
14 so that I may declare all Your praises.
I will rejoice in Your salvation [w]
within the gates of Daughter Zion.

15 The nations have fallen into the pit they made;
their foot is caught in the net they have concealed. [x] 16 The LORD has revealed Himself;
He has executed justice, [y]
striking down [B] the wicked [z]
by the work of their hands. [a]

• Higgaion . • Selah

17 The wicked will return to •Sheol [b] — all the nations that forget God. [c] 18 For the oppressed will not always be forgotten;
the hope of the afflicted [d] will not perish forever. [e]

19 Rise up, LORD! Do not let man prevail;
let the nations be judged in Your presence. [f] 20 Put terror in them, LORD; [g]
let the nations know they are only men. [h]

Selah

10 LORD, [a, b] why do You stand so far away? [c]
Why do You hide in times of trouble? [d]
2 In arrogance the wicked relentlessly pursue the afflicted;
let them be caught in the schemes they have devised. [e] 3 For the wicked one boasts about his own cravings; [f]
the one who is greedy curses [A] and despises the LORD. [g] 4 In all his scheming,
the wicked arrogantly thinks: [B]
“There is no accountability, since God does not exist.” [h]
5 His ways are always secure; [C]
Your lofty judgments are beyond his sight;
he scoffs at all his adversaries. [i] 6 He says to himself, “I will never be moved — from generation to generation without calamity.” [j] 7 Cursing, deceit, and violence fill his mouth;
trouble and malice are under his tongue. [k]
8 He waits in ambush near the villages; [l]
he kills the innocent in secret places.
His eyes are on the lookout for the helpless; [m]
9 he lurks in secret like a lion in a thicket.
He lurks in order to seize the afflicted;
he seizes the afflicted and drags him in his net.
10 So he is oppressed and beaten down;
the helpless fall because of his strength. [n]
11 He says to himself, “God has forgotten;
He hides His face and will never see.” [o]
12 Rise up, LORD God! Lift up Your hand. [p]
Do not forget the afflicted. [q]
13 Why has the wicked person despised God?
He says to himself, “You will not demand an account.” [r]
14 But You Yourself have seen trouble and grief, observing it in order to take the matter into Your hands. [s]
The helpless entrusts himself to You;
You are a helper of the fatherless. [t]

15 Break the arm of the wicked and evil person; [u]
call his wickedness into account until nothing remains of it. [D, v]

16 The LORD is King forever and ever; [w]
the nations will perish from His land. [x]
17 LORD, You have heard the desire of the humble; [y]
You will strengthen their hearts.
You will listen carefully, [z]
18 doing justice for the fatherless and the oppressed so that men of the earth may terrify them no more. [a]

Refuge in the LORD

For the choir director. Davidic.

11 I have taken refuge in the LORD. [a]
How can you say to me,
“Escape to the mountain like a bird! [A, b]
2 For look, the wicked string the bow;
they put the [B] arrow on the bowstring to shoot from the shadows at the upright in heart. [c] 3 When the foundations are destroyed,
what can the righteous do? ” [d]

4 The LORD is in His holy temple; [e]
the LORD’s throne is in heaven. [f]
His eyes watch; He examines [C] •everyone .
5 The LORD examines the righteous and the wicked.
He hates the lover of violence. [g]
6 He will rain burning coals [h] and sulfur on the wicked;
a scorching wind will be their portion. [D, i] 7 For the LORD is righteous; He loves righteous deeds.
The upright will see His face. [j]

Oppression by the Wicked

For the choir director: according to • Sheminith . [a] A Davidic psalm.

12 Help, LORD, for no faithful one remains;
the loyal have disappeared from the •human race. [b]
2 They lie to one another;
they speak with flattering lips and deceptive hearts. [c] 3 May the LORD cut off all flattering lips and the tongue that speaks boastfully. [d] 4 They say, “Through our tongues we have power; [A] our lips are our own — who can be our master? ” [e]

5 “Because of the oppression of the afflicted and the groaning of the poor,
I will now rise up,” says the LORD.
“I will put the one who longs for it in a safe place.” [f]

6 The words of the LORD are pure words, like silver refined in an earthen furnace,
purified seven times. [g]

7 You, LORD, will guard us; [h]
You will protect us [i] from this generation forever. [j] 8 The wicked wander [B] everywhere, and what is worthless is exalted by the human race. [k]

A Plea for Deliverance

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

13 LORD, how long will You forget me?
Forever?
How long will You hide Your face from me? [a] 2 How long will I store up anxious concerns [A] within me, agony in my mind every day?
How long will my enemy dominate me? [b]

3 Consider me and answer, LORD my God.
Restore brightness to my eyes; [c]
otherwise, I will sleep in death.
4 My enemy will say, “I have triumphed over him,”
and my foes will rejoice because I am shaken. [d]

5 But I have trusted in Your faithful love; [e]
my heart will rejoice in Your deliverance. [f] 6 I will sing to the LORD
because He has treated me generously. [g]

A Portrait of Sinners

For the choir director. Davidic.

14 The fool says in his heart, “God does not exist.” [a]
They are corrupt; they do vile deeds.
There is no one who does good.
2 The Lord looks down from heaven on the •human race [b]
to see if there is one who is wise,
one who seeks God.
3 All have turned away;
all alike have become corrupt.
There is no one who does good,
not even one. [c, d]

4 Will evildoers never understand?
They consume My people as they consume bread; [e]
they do not call on the Lord. [f]

5 Then [A] they will be filled with terror, for God is with those who are [B] righteous. [g] 6 You sinners frustrate the plans of the afflicted, [h]
but the Lord is his refuge. [i]

7 Oh, that Israel’s deliverance would come from •Zion !
When the Lord restores the fortunes of His people, [C]
Jacob will rejoice; Israel will be glad. [D, j]

A Description of the Godly

A Davidic psalm.

15 LORD, who can dwell in Your tent? [a]
Who can live on Your holy mountain? [b]

2 The one who lives honestly, practices righteousness, and acknowledges the truth in his heart [c] — 3 who does not slander with his tongue, [d] who does not harm his friend or discredit his neighbor, [e] 4 who despises the one rejected by the LORD [A] but honors those who •fear the LORD, [f]
who keeps his word whatever the cost, [g] 5 who does not lend his money at interest [h] or take a bribe against the innocent [i] — the one who does these things will never be moved. [j]

Confidence in the LORD A Davidic • Miktam . [a]

16 Protect me, God, for I take refuge in You. [b]
2 I [c] said to •Yahweh , “You are my Lord;
I have nothing good besides You.” [A, d]
3 As for the holy people who are in the land, [e]
they are the noble ones.
All my delight is in them.
4 The sorrows of those who take another god for themselves will multiply;
I will not pour out their •drink offerings of blood, and I will not speak their names with my lips. [f]

5 LORD, You are my portion [B] and my cup of blessing;
You hold my future. [g]
6 The boundary lines have fallen for me in pleasant places;
indeed, I have a beautiful inheritance. [h]

7 I will praise the LORD who counsels me [i] — even at night my conscience instructs me. [j] 8 I keep the LORD in mind [C] always.
Because He is at my right hand,
I will not be shaken. [k]

9 Therefore my heart is glad and my spirit rejoices;
my body also rests securely. [l]
10 For You will not abandon me to •Sheol ; [m]
You will not allow Your Faithful One to see decay. [n]
11 You reveal the path of life to me;
in Your presence is abundant joy; [o]
in Your right hand are eternal pleasures. [p]

A Prayer for Protection

A Davidic prayer.

17 LORD, hear a just cause; [a] pay attention to my cry;
listen to my prayer —
from lips free of deceit. [b] 2 Let my vindication come from You, for You see what is right. [c]
3 You have tested my heart; [d]
You have examined me at night.
You have tried me and found nothing evil; [e]
I have determined that my mouth will not sin. [A] 4 Concerning what people do:
by the word of Your lips [f]
I have avoided the ways of the violent. [g]
5 My steps are on Your paths;
my feet have not slipped. [h]

6 I call on You, God, because You will answer me; [i] listen closely to me; hear what I say.
7 Display the wonders of Your faithful love, [j] Savior of all who seek refuge [k]
from those who rebel against Your right hand. [B] 8 Protect me as the pupil of Your eye; [l] hide me in the shadow of Your wings [m] 9 from [C] the wicked who treat me violently, [D]
my deadly enemies who surround me. [n]

10 They have become hardened; [E, o] their mouths speak arrogantly. [p] 11 They advance against me; [q] now they surround me. [r]
They are determined [F]
to throw me to the ground. [s] 12 They are [G] like a lion eager to tear, like a young lion lurking in ambush. [t]

13 Rise up, LORD!
Confront him; bring him down. [u]

With Your sword, save me from the wicked. [v] 14 With Your hand, LORD, save me from men, from men of the world
whose portion is in this life:
You fill their bellies with what You have in store;
their sons are satisfied,
and they leave their surplus to their children. [w]

15 But I will see Your face in righteousness; [x]
when I awake, I will be satisfied with Your presence. [H, y]

Praise for Deliverance

For the choir director. Of the servant of the LORD, David, who spoke the words of this song to the LORD on the day the LORD rescued him from the hand of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul. [a] He said:

18 I love You, LORD, my strength.
2 The LORD is my rock,
my fortress, and my deliverer, [b]
my God, my mountain where I seek refuge, my shield [c] and the •horn of my salvation, [d]
my stronghold.
3 I called to the LORD, who is worthy of praise, [e]
and I was saved from my enemies. [f]

4 The ropes of death were wrapped around me;
the torrents of destruction terrified me. [g] 5 The ropes of •Sheol entangled me;
the snares of death confronted me. [h]
6 I called to the LORD in my distress, and I cried to my God for help.
From His temple He heard my voice, [i] and my cry to Him reached His ears. [j]

7 Then the earth shook and quaked;
the foundations of the mountains trembled; [k]
they shook because He burned with anger.
8 Smoke rose from His nostrils, and consuming fire came from His mouth;
coals were set ablaze by it. [A, l] 9 He parted the heavens and came down, [m] a dark cloud beneath His feet.
10 He rode on a cherub and flew,
soaring on the wings of the wind. [n] 11 He made darkness His hiding place, dark storm clouds His canopy around Him. [o]
12 From the radiance of His presence, [p]
His clouds swept onward with hail and blazing coals.
13 The LORD thundered from [q] heaven;
the •Most High projected His voice. [r, s]
14 He shot His arrows and scattered them;
He hurled [B] lightning bolts and routed them. [t]
15 The depths of the sea became visible, the foundations of the world were exposed,

at Your rebuke, LORD,
at the blast of the breath of Your nostrils. [u]

16 He reached down from heaven and took hold of me;
He pulled me out of deep waters. [v]
17 He rescued me from my powerful enemy and from those who hated me,
for they were too strong for me. [w] 18 They confronted me in the day of my distress, but the LORD was my support. [x]
19 He brought me out to a spacious place; [y]
He rescued me because He delighted in me. [z]

20 The LORD rewarded me
according to my righteousness; [a]
He repaid me
according to the cleanness of my hands. [b] 21 For I have kept the ways of the LORD and have not turned from my God to wickedness. [c] 22 Indeed, I have kept all His ordinances in mind [C] and have not disregarded His statutes. [d] 23 I was blameless toward Him [e]
and kept myself from sinning.
24 So the LORD repaid me
according to my righteousness, [f]
according to the cleanness of my hands in His sight. [g]

25 With the faithful
You prove Yourself faithful;
with the blameless man
You prove Yourself blameless;
26 with the pure
You prove Yourself pure,
but with the crooked
You prove Yourself shrewd. [h]
27 For You rescue an afflicted people, [i] but You humble those with haughty eyes. [j] 28 LORD, You light my lamp;

my God illuminates my darkness. [k]
29 With You I can attack a barrier, [D] and with my God I can leap over a wall. [l]

30 God — His way is perfect; [m]
the word of the LORD is pure. [n]
He is a shield to all who take refuge in Him. [o]
31 For who is God besides •Yahweh ? [p]
And who is a rock? Only our God. [q] 32 God — He clothes me with strength [r] and makes my way perfect.
33 He makes my feet like the feet of a deer [s] and sets me securely on the heights. [E, t] 34 He trains my hands for war; [u]
my arms can bend a bow of bronze. [v]
35 You have given me the shield of Your salvation;
Your right hand upholds me, [w]
and Your humility exalts me.
36 You widen a place beneath me for my steps, [x]
and my ankles do not give way. [y]

37 I pursue my enemies and overtake them;
I do not turn back until they are wiped out. [z] 38 I crush them, and they cannot get up;
they fall beneath my feet. [a] 39 You have clothed me with strength for battle; [b]
You subdue my adversaries beneath me. [c]
40 You have made my enemies retreat before me; [F, d]
I annihilate those who hate me. [e]
41 They cry for help, but there is no one to save them [f] — they cry to the LORD, but He does not answer them. [g] 42 I pulverize them like dust before the wind; [h]
I trample them [i] like mud in the streets. [j]

43 You have freed me from the feuds among the people;

You have appointed me the head of nations; [k]
a people I had not known serve me. [l] 44 Foreigners submit to me grudgingly;
as soon as they hear, [G] they obey me. [m] 45 Foreigners lose heart and come trembling from their fortifications. [n]

46 The LORD lives — may my rock be praised!
The God of my salvation is exalted. [o]
47 God — He gives me vengeance [p] and subdues peoples under me. [q]
48 He frees me from my enemies.
You exalt me above my adversaries;
You rescue me from violent men. [r]
49 Therefore I will praise You, Yahweh, among the nations;
I will sing about Your name. [s]
50 He gives great victories to His king; [t]
He shows loyalty to His anointed, to David and his descendants forever. [u]

The Witness of Creation and Scripture

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

19 The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky [A] proclaims the work of His hands. [a] 2 Day after day they pour out speech;
night after night they communicate knowledge. [B] 3 There is no speech; there are no words;
their voice is not heard.
4 Their message [b] has gone out to all the earth,
and their words to the ends of the world. [c]

In the heavens [C] He has pitched a tent for the sun. [d] 5 It is like a groom coming from the [D] bridal chamber;
it rejoices like an athlete running a course.
6 It rises from one end of the heavens and circles [E] to their other end; [e] nothing is hidden from its heat.

7 The instruction of the LORD is perfect, renewing one's life; [f]
the •testimony of the LORD is trustworthy, making the inexperienced wise. [g] 8 The precepts of the LORD are right, making the heart glad; [h]
the command of the LORD is radiant, making the eyes light up. [i] 9 The •fear of the LORD is pure, enduring forever; [j]
the ordinances of the LORD are reliable and altogether righteous. [k] 10 They are more desirable than gold — than an abundance of pure gold; [l] and sweeter than honey,
which comes from the honeycomb. [m] 11 In addition, Your servant is warned by them;
there is great reward in keeping them. [n]

12 Who perceives his unintentional sins?
Cleanse me from my hidden faults. [o]
13 Moreover, keep Your servant from willful sins; [p] do not let them rule over me. [q]

Then I will be innocent and cleansed from blatant rebellion. [r] 14 May the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable to You, [s]
LORD, my rock and my Redeemer. [t]

Deliverance in Battle

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

20 May •Yahweh answer you in a day of trouble; [a] may the name of Jacob's God protect you. [b] 2 May He send you help from the sanctuary and sustain you from •Zion . [c] 3 May He remember all your offerings and accept your •burnt offering. [d]

• Selah

4 May He give you what your heart desires [e]
and fulfill your whole purpose. [f] 5 Let us shout for joy at your victory [g]
and lift the banner in the name of our God. [h]
May Yahweh fulfill all your requests. [i]

6 Now I know that the LORD gives victory to His anointed; [j]
He will answer him from His holy heaven with mighty victories from [k] His right hand. [l] 7 Some take pride in chariots, and others in horses, but we take pride in the name of Yahweh our God. [m] 8 They collapse and fall,
but we rise and stand firm. [n]
9 LORD, give victory to the king! [o]
May He [A] answer us on the day that we call.

The King’s Victory

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

21 LORD, the king finds joy in Your strength.
How greatly he rejoices in Your victory! [a] 2 You have given him his heart's desire [b] and have not denied the request of his lips. [c]

• Selah

3 For You meet him with rich blessings;
You place a crown of pure gold on his head. [d] 4 He asked You for life, and You gave it to him — length of days forever and ever. [e]
5 His glory is great through Your victory;
You confer majesty and splendor on him. [f]
6 You give him blessings forever; [g]
You cheer him with joy in Your presence. [h]
7 For the king relies on the LORD;
through the faithful love of the •Most High
he is not shaken. [i]

8 Your hand will capture all your enemies;
your right hand will seize those who hate you. [j] 9 You will make them burn like a fiery furnace when you appear;
the LORD will engulf them in His wrath,
and fire will devour them. [k]
10 You will wipe their descendants from the earth and their offspring from the •human race. [l] 11 Though they intend to harm [A] you and devise a wicked plan, they will not prevail. [m] 12 Instead, you will put them to flight
when you aim your bow [B] at their faces. [n]

13 Be exalted, LORD, in Your strength;
we will sing and praise Your might. [o]

From Suffering to Praise

For the choir director: according to "The Deer of the Dawn." [a] A Davidic psalm.

22 My God, my God, why have You forsaken me? [b]
Why are You so far from my deliverance [c]
and from my words of groaning? [A, d] 2 My God, I cry by day, but You do not answer, by night, yet I have no rest. [e] 3 But You are holy,
enthroned on the praises of Israel. [f]
4 Our fathers trusted in You;
they trusted, and You rescued them. [g] 5 They cried to You and were set free;
they trusted in You and were not disgraced. [h]

6 But I am a worm and not a man, [i] scorned by men and despised by people. [j] 7 Everyone who sees me mocks me;
they sneer [B] and shake their heads: [k]
8 "He relies on [C] the LORD;
let Him rescue him;
let the LORD [D] deliver him,
since He takes pleasure in him." [l]

9 You took me from the womb, making me secure while at my mother's breast. [m]
10 I was given over to You at birth; [E]
You have been my God from my mother's womb. [n]

11 Do not be far from me, because distress is near and there is no one to help. [o]

12 Many bulls surround me;
strong ones of Bashan encircle me. [p]
13 They open their mouths against me —
lions, mauling and roaring. [q] 14 I am poured out like water, [r] and all my bones are disjointed; [s]
my heart is like wax, melting within me. [t]
15 My strength is dried up like baked clay; [u]

my tongue sticks to the roof of my mouth. [v]
You put me into the dust of death. [w]
16 For dogs have surrounded me; [x]
a gang of evildoers has closed in on me;
they pierced [y] my hands and my feet. [z] 17 I can count all my bones;
people [F] look and stare at me. [a] 18 They divided my garments among themselves, and they cast lots for my clothing. [b]

19 But You, LORD, don't be far away. [c]
My strength, come quickly to help me. [d] 20 Deliver my life from the sword, [e]
my only life [G] from the power of these dogs.
21 Save me from the mouth of the lion! [f]
You have rescued [H] me from the horns of the wild oxen.

22 I will proclaim Your name to my brothers;
I will praise You in the congregation. [g]
23 You who •fear •Yahweh , praise Him! [h]
All you descendants of Jacob, honor Him!
All you descendants of Israel, revere Him! [i] 24 For He has not despised or detested
the torment of the afflicted. [j]
He did not hide His face from him [k]
but listened when he cried to Him for help. [l]

25 I will give praise [I] in the great congregation because of You; [m]
I will fulfill my vows
before those who fear You. [J, n] 26 The humble [K] will eat and be satisfied; [o]
those who seek the LORD will praise Him.
May your hearts live forever! [p]

27 All the ends of the earth will remember and turn to the LORD.

All the families of the nations will bow down before You, [q] 28 for kingship belongs to the LORD;
He rules over the nations. [r]
29 All who prosper on earth will eat and bow down;
all those who go down to the dust will kneel before Him —
even the one who cannot preserve his life. [s] 30 Their descendants will serve Him;
the next generation will be told about the Lord. [t] 31 They will come and tell a people yet to be born about His righteousness —
what He has done. [u]

The Good Shepherd

A Davidic psalm.

23 The LORD is my shepherd; [a]
there is nothing I lack. [b]
2 He lets me lie down in green pastures; [c]
He leads me beside quiet waters. [d]
3 He renews my life;
He leads me along the right paths [A] for His name's sake. [e]
4 Even when I go through the darkest valley, [B]
I fear no danger,
for You are with me; [f]
Your rod and Your staff [g] — they comfort me. [h]

5 You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies;
You anoint my head with oil; [i]
my cup overflows. [j]
6 Only goodness and faithful love will pursue me all the days of my life, [k] and I will dwell in [l] the house of the LORD
as long as I live. [C, m]

The King of Glory

A Davidic psalm.

24 The earth and everything in it,
the world and its inhabitants, belong to the LORD; [a] 2 for He laid its foundation on the seas and established it on the rivers. [b]

3 Who may ascend the mountain of the LORD?
Who may stand in His holy place? [c]
4 The one who has •clean hands and a pure heart, [d] who has not set his mind [A] on what is false, [e]
and who has not sworn deceitfully.
5 He will receive blessing from the LORD, [f]
and righteousness from the God of his salvation. [g] 6 Such is the generation of those who seek Him, who seek the face of the God of Jacob. [h, i]

• Selah

7 Lift up your heads, you gates!
Rise up, ancient doors!
Then the King of glory will come in. [j]
8 Who is this King of glory?
The LORD, strong and mighty,
the LORD, mighty in battle. [k]
9 Lift up your heads, you gates!
Rise up, ancient doors!
Then the King of glory will come in.
10 Who is He, this King of glory?
The LORD of •Hosts ,
He is the King of glory. [l]

Selah

Dependence on the LORD

Davidic.

25 LORD, [a] I turn to You. [A, b]
2 My God, I trust in You.
Do not let me be disgraced; [c]
do not let my enemies gloat over me. [d] 3 No one who waits for You will be disgraced; [e]
those who act treacherously without cause will be disgraced. [f]

4 Make Your ways known to me, LORD;
teach me Your paths. [g]
5 Guide me in Your truth and teach me, [h] for You are the God of my salvation; [i]
I wait for You all day long. [j]
6 Remember, LORD, Your compassion and Your faithful love,
for they have existed from antiquity. [B, k] 7 Do not remember the sins of my youth [l] or my acts of rebellion; [m] in keeping with Your faithful love, remember me because of Your goodness, LORD. [n]

8 The LORD is good and upright; [o]
therefore He shows sinners the way. [p] 9 He leads the humble in what is right [q]
and teaches them His way. [r] 10 All the LORD's ways show faithful love and truth to those who keep His covenant and decrees. [s] 11 Because of Your name, •Yahweh , forgive my sin, for it is great. [t]

12 Who is the man who •fears the LORD? [u]
He will show him the way he should choose. [v]
13 He will live a good life, and his descendants will inherit the land. [C, w] 14 The secret counsel of the LORD is for those who fear Him,

and He reveals His covenant to them. [x] 15 My eyes are always on the LORD, for He will pull my feet out of the net. [y]

16 Turn to me and be gracious to me,
for I am alone and afflicted. [z] 17 The distresses of my heart increase; [D, a] bring me out of my sufferings. [b] 18 Consider my affliction and trouble, [c] and take away all my sins. [d] 19 Consider my enemies; they are numerous, [e]
and they hate me violently. [f] 20 Guard me and deliver me; [g]
do not let me be put to shame,
for I take refuge in You. [h] 21 May integrity and what is right watch over me,
for I wait for You. [i]

22 God, redeem Israel, from all its distresses. [j]

Prayer for Vindication

Davidic.

26 Vindicate me, LORD,
because I have lived with integrity and have trusted in the LORD without wavering. [a] 2 Test me, LORD, and try me;
examine my heart and mind. [b] 3 For Your faithful love is before my eyes, and I live by Your truth. [c]

4 I do not sit with the worthless or associate with hypocrites.
5 I hate a crowd of evildoers, and I do not sit with the wicked. [d] 6 I wash my hands [e] in innocence [f]
and go around Your altar, LORD, [g] 7 raising my voice in thanksgiving [h] and telling about Your wonderful works. [i]

8 LORD, I love the house where You dwell, the place where Your glory resides. [j] 9 Do not destroy me along with sinners, or my life along with men of bloodshed [k] 10 in whose hands are evil schemes and whose right hands are filled with bribes. [l]

11 But I live with integrity;
redeem me and be gracious to me. [m]
12 My foot stands on level ground; [n]
I will praise the LORD in the assemblies. [o]

My Stronghold

Davidic.

27 The LORD is my light and my salvation — whom should I fear? [a]
The LORD is the stronghold of my life — of whom should I be afraid? [b]
2 When evildoers came against me to devour my flesh, [c]
my foes and my enemies stumbled and fell. [d] 3 Though an army deploys against me,
my heart is not afraid;
though a war breaks out against me,
still I am confident. [e]

4 I have asked one thing from the LORD;
it is what I desire:
to dwell in the house of the LORD
all the days of my life, [f] gazing on the beauty of the LORD [g]
and seeking Him in His temple. [h] 5 For He will conceal me in His shelter in the day of adversity;
He will hide me under the cover of His tent;
He will set me high on a rock. [i] 6 Then my head will be high above my enemies around me; [j]
I will offer sacrifices in His tent with shouts of joy. [k]
I will sing and make music to the LORD. [l]

7 LORD, hear my voice when I call;
be gracious to me and answer me. [m]
8 My heart says this about You,
"You [n] are to seek My face."
LORD, I will seek Your face. [o]
9 Do not hide Your face from me; [p] do not turn Your servant away in anger. [q]
You have been my helper; [r]
do not leave me or abandon me,
God of my salvation.
10 Even if my father and mother abandon me,

the LORD cares for me. [s]

11 Because of my adversaries, show me Your way, LORD,
and lead me on a level path. [t]
12 Do not give me over to the will of my foes, for false witnesses rise up against me,
breathing violence. [u]

13 I am certain that I will see the LORD's goodness in the land of the living. [v] 14 Wait for the LORD;
be strong [A] and courageous. [w]
Wait for the LORD. [x]

My Strength

Davidic.

28 LORD, I call to You;
my rock, do not be deaf to me. [a]
If You remain silent to me,
I will be like those going down to the •Pit . [b]
2 Listen to the sound of my pleading
when I cry to You for help, when I lift up my hands toward Your holy sanctuary. [c]

3 Do not drag me away with the wicked,
with the evildoers,
who speak in friendly ways with their neighbors
while malice is in their hearts. [d] 4 Repay them according to what they have done —
according to the evil of their deeds.
Repay them according to the work of their hands;
give them back what they deserve. [e] 5 Because they do not consider what the LORD has done
or the work of His hands,
He will tear them down and not rebuild them. [f]

6 May the LORD be praised,
for He has heard the sound of my pleading. [g] 7 The LORD is my strength and my shield;
my heart trusts in Him, and I am helped. [h]
Therefore my heart rejoices, and I praise Him with my song. [i]

8 The LORD is the strength of His people; [j]
He is a stronghold of salvation for His anointed. [k]
9 Save Your people, bless Your possession, shepherd them, and carry them forever. [l]

The Voice of the LORD A Davidic psalm.

29 Ascribe to •Yahweh , you heavenly beings, [A] ascribe to the LORD glory and strength.
2 Ascribe to Yahweh the glory due His name;
worship Yahweh
in the splendor of His holiness. [B, a]

3 The voice of the LORD is above the waters.
The God of glory thunders —
the LORD, above vast waters, [b] 4 the voice of the LORD in power,
the voice of the LORD in splendor. [c] 5 The voice of the LORD breaks the cedars;
the LORD shatters the cedars of Lebanon. [d] 6 He makes Lebanon skip like a calf, [e] and Sirion, [f] like a young wild ox. [g] 7 The voice of the LORD flashes flames of fire. [h]
8 The voice of the LORD shakes the wilderness;
the LORD shakes the wilderness of Kadesh. [i] 9 The voice of the LORD makes the deer give birth [C, j] and strips the woodlands bare. [k]

In His temple all cry, “Glory! ”

10 The LORD sat enthroned at the flood;
the LORD sits enthroned, King forever. [l]
11 The LORD gives His people strength; [m]
the LORD blesses His people with peace. [n]

Joy in the Morning

A psalm; a dedication song for the house. Davidic.

30 I will exalt You, LORD, because You have lifted me up [a]
and have not allowed my enemies to triumph over me. [b]
2 LORD my God,
I cried to You for help, and You healed me. [c]
3 LORD, You brought me up from •Sheol ; [d]
You spared me from among those going down [e] to the •Pit . [f]

4 Sing to •Yahweh , you His faithful ones, and praise His holy name. [g] 5 For His anger lasts only a moment, but His favor, a lifetime.
Weeping may spend the night,
but there is joy in the morning. [h]

6 When I was secure, I said,
“I will never be shaken.” [i]
7 LORD, when You showed Your favor,
You made me stand like a strong mountain; [j]
when You hid Your face, I was terrified. [k]
8 LORD, I called to You;
I sought favor from my Lord: [l]
9 “What gain is there in my death,
if I go down to the Pit?
Will the dust praise You?
Will it proclaim Your truth? [m]
10 LORD, listen and be gracious to me;
LORD, be my helper.” [n]

11 You turned my lament into dancing;
You removed my •sackcloth and clothed me with gladness, [o]
12 so that I can sing to You and not be silent.
LORD my God, I will praise You forever. [p]

A Plea for Protection

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

31 LORD, I seek refuge in You;
let me never be disgraced. [a]
Save me by Your righteousness.
2 Listen closely to me; rescue me quickly.
Be a rock of refuge for me,
a mountain fortress to save me. [b]
3 For You are my rock and my fortress; [c]
You lead and guide me
because of Your name. [d] 4 You will free me from the net that is secretly set for me,
for You are my refuge. [e]
5 Into Your hand I entrust my spirit; [f]
You redeem [A] me, LORD, God of truth. [g]

6 I [h] hate those who are devoted to worthless idols, but I trust in the LORD. [i] 7 I will rejoice and be glad in Your faithful love because You have seen my affliction.
You have known the troubles of my life [j]
8 and have not handed me over to the enemy. [k]
You have set my feet in a spacious place. [l]

9 Be gracious to me, LORD,
because I am in distress; [m]
my eyes are worn out from angry sorrow —
my whole being [B] as well. [n]
10 Indeed, my life is consumed with grief and my years with groaning; [o]
my strength has failed
because of my sinfulness, [p]
and my bones waste away. [q] 11 I am ridiculed by all my adversaries and even by my neighbors.
I am dreaded by my acquaintances;
those who see me in the street run from me. [r] 12 I am forgotten: gone from memory like a dead person — like broken pottery. [s] 13 I have heard the gossip of many;

terror is on every side. [t]
When they conspired against me,
they plotted to take my life. [u]

14 But I trust in You, LORD;
I say, “You are my God.” [v]
15 The course of my life is in Your power; [w] deliver me from the power of my enemies and from my persecutors. [x] 16 Show Your favor to Your servant;
save me by Your faithful love. [y]
17 LORD, do not let me be disgraced when I call on You. [z]
Let the wicked be disgraced;
let them be silent [a, C] in •Sheol . [b] 18 Let lying lips be quieted; [c] they speak arrogantly against the righteous with pride and contempt. [d]

19 How great is Your goodness that You have stored up for those who •fear You and accomplished in the sight of •everyone for those who take refuge in You. [e] 20 You hide them in the protection of Your presence;
You conceal them in a shelter [D]
from the schemes of men,
from quarrelsome tongues. [f]
21 May the LORD be praised,
for He has wonderfully shown His faithful love to me in a city under siege. [E, g]
22 In my alarm I had said,
“I am cut off from Your sight.” [h]
But You heard the sound of my pleading when I cried to You for help. [i]

23 Love the LORD, all His faithful ones. [j]
The LORD protects the loyal,

but fully repays the arrogant. [k] 24 Be strong [F] and courageous, all you who put your hope in the LORD. [l]

The Joy of Forgiveness

Davidic. A • Maskil **.

32 How joyful is the one whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered! [a] 2 How joyful is the man
the LORD does not charge with sin [b] and in whose spirit is no deceit! [c]

3 When I kept silent, my bones became brittle from my groaning all day long. [d] 4 For day and night Your hand was heavy on me; [e] my strength was drained [A]
as in the summer's heat. [f]

• Selah

5 Then I acknowledged my sin to You and did not conceal my iniquity.
I said,
"I will confess my transgressions to the LORD,"
and You took away the •guilt of my sin. [g]

Selah

6 Therefore let everyone who is faithful pray to You at a time that You may be found. [B, h]
When great floodwaters come,
they will not reach him. [i]
7 You are my hiding place; [j]
You protect me from trouble. [k]
You surround me with joyful shouts of deliverance.

Selah

8 I will instruct you and show you the way to go; [l]
with My eye on you, I will give counsel. [m] 9 Do not be like a horse or mule, without understanding,
that must be controlled with bit and bridle
or else it will not come near you. [n]

10 Many pains come to the wicked, [o]

but the one who trusts in the LORD will have faithful love surrounding him. [p] 11 Be glad in the LORD and rejoice, you righteous ones;
shout for joy,
all you upright in heart. [q]

Praise to the Creator

33 Rejoice in the LORD, you righteous ones; praise from the upright is beautiful. [a] 2 Praise the LORD with the lyre;
make music to Him with a ten-stringed harp. [b] 3 Sing a new song to Him; [c] play skillfully on the strings, with a joyful shout. [d]

4 For the word of the LORD is right, and all His work is trustworthy. [e] 5 He loves righteousness and justice; [f]
the earth is full of the LORD's unfailing love. [g]

6 The heavens were made by the word of the LORD, [h] and all the stars, by the breath of His mouth. [i] 7 He gathers the waters of the sea into a heap; [j]
He puts the depths into storehouses. [k]
8 Let the whole earth tremble before the LORD;
let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of Him. [l] 9 For He spoke, and it came into being;
He commanded, and it came into existence. [m]

10 The LORD frustrates the counsel of the nations;
He thwarts the plans of the peoples. [n]
11 The counsel of the LORD stands forever, the plans of His heart from generation to generation. [o] 12 Happy is the nation whose God is •Yahweh —
the people He has chosen to be His own possession! [p]

13 The LORD looks down from heaven;
He observes everyone. [q]
14 He gazes on all the inhabitants of the earth from His dwelling place. [r]
15 He alone shapes their hearts;
He considers all their works. [s]
16 A king is not saved by a large army;
a warrior will not be delivered by great strength. [t] 17 The horse is a false hope for safety;
it provides no escape by its great power. [u]

18 Now the eye of the LORD is on those who •fear Him — those who depend on His faithful love [v] 19 to deliver them from death and to keep them alive in famine. [w]

20 We wait for Yahweh; [x]
He is our help and shield. [y]
21 For our hearts rejoice in Him [z] because we trust in His holy name. [a] 22 May Your faithful love rest on us, Yahweh, for we put our hope in You. [b]

The LORD Delivers the Righteous

Concerning David, when he pretended to be insane in the presence of Abimelech, [a], [b] who drove him out, and he departed.

34 I [c] will praise the LORD at all times;
His praise will always be on my lips. [d]
2 I will boast in the LORD; [e]
the humble will hear and be glad. [f] 3 Proclaim •Yahweh 's greatness with me; [g]
let us exalt His name together. [h]

4 I sought the LORD, and He answered me and delivered me from all my fears. [i] 5 Those who look to Him are [j] radiant with joy; [k]
their faces will never be ashamed. [l] 6 This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him and saved him from all his troubles. [m]
7 The Angel of the LORD encamps around those who •fear Him, and rescues them. [n]

8 Taste and see that the LORD is good. [o]
How happy is the man who takes refuge in Him! [p]
9 You who are His holy ones, fear Yahweh, for those who fear Him lack nothing. [q] 10 Young lions [r] lack food and go hungry, [s]
but those who seek the LORD will not lack any good thing. [t]

11 Come, children, listen to me;
I will teach you the fear of the LORD. [u]
12 Who is the man who delights in life, loving a long life to enjoy what is good? [v] 13 Keep your tongue from evil and your lips from deceitful speech. [w] 14 Turn away from evil and do what is good; [x] seek peace and pursue it. [y]

15 The eyes of the LORD are on the righteous, and His ears are open to their cry for help. [z] 16 The face of the LORD is set against those who do what is evil, [a] to erase [A] all memory of them from the earth. [b]

17 The righteous [B] cry out, and the LORD hears, and delivers them from all their troubles. [c] 18 The LORD is near the brokenhearted;
He saves those crushed in spirit. [d]

19 Many adversities come to the one who is righteous, but the LORD delivers him from them all. [e] 20 He protects all his bones;
not one of them is broken. [f]
21 Evil brings death to the wicked, and those who hate the righteous will be punished. [g] 22 The LORD redeems the life of His servants, and all who take refuge in Him will not be punished. [h]

Prayer for Victory

Davidic.

35 Oppose my opponents, LORD;
fight those who fight me. [a] 2 Take Your shields — large and small — and come to my aid. [b]
3 Draw the spear and javelin against my pursuers, and assure me: “I am your deliverance.” [c]

4 Let those who seek to kill me
be disgraced and humiliated;
let those who plan to harm me
be turned back and ashamed. [d] 5 Let them be like chaff in the wind, with the angel of the LORD driving them away. [e] 6 Let their way be dark and slippery, with the angel of the LORD pursuing them. [f]
7 They hid their net for me without cause;
they dug a pit for me without cause. [g]
8 Let ruin come on him unexpectedly, and let the net that he hid ensnare him;
let him fall into it — to his ruin. [h]

9 Then I will rejoice in the LORD;
I will delight in His deliverance. [i]
10 My very bones will say,
“LORD, who is like You, [j] rescuing the poor from one too strong for him,
the poor or the needy from one who robs him? ” [k]

11 Malicious witnesses come forward;
they question me about things I do not know. [l] 12 They repay me evil for good,
making me desolate. [m] 13 Yet when they were sick,
my clothing was •sackcloth ;
I humbled myself with fasting,
and my prayer was genuine. [A, n]
14 I went about grieving as if for my friend or brother;
I was bowed down with grief,

like one mourning a mother. [o] 15 But when I stumbled, they gathered in glee;
they gathered against me.
Assailants I did not know tore at me and did not stop. [p]
16 With godless mockery [B]
they gnashed their teeth at me. [q]

17 Lord, how long will You look on? [r]
Rescue my life from their ravages,
my only one from the young lions. [s]
18 I will praise You in the great congregation;
I will exalt You among many people. [t]
19 Do not let my deceitful enemies rejoice over me;
do not let those who hate me without cause [u]
look at me maliciously. [v] 20 For they do not speak in friendly ways, but contrive deceitful schemes [C]
against those who live peacefully in the land. [w]
21 They open their mouths wide against me and say, “Aha, aha! We saw it! ” [D, x]

22 You saw it, LORD; do not be silent.
Lord, do not be far from me. [y]
23 Wake up and rise to my defense, to my cause, my God and my LORD! [z]
24 Vindicate me, LORD my God,
in keeping with Your righteousness,
and do not let them rejoice over me. [a] 25 Do not let them say in their hearts,
“Aha! Just what we wanted.”
Do not let them say,
“We have swallowed him up! ” [b]
26 Let those who rejoice at my misfortune
be disgraced and humiliated;
let those who exalt themselves over me
be clothed with shame and reproach. [c]

27 Let those who want my vindication shout for joy and be glad;
let them continually say,
“The LORD be exalted.
He takes pleasure in His servant’s well-being.” [d]
28 And my tongue will proclaim Your righteousness,
Your praise all day long. [e]

Human Wickedness and God's Love

For the choir director. A psalm of David, the LORD's servant.

36 An •oracle within my heart concerning the transgression of the wicked person:
There is no dread of God before his eyes, [a] 2 for in his own eyes he flatters himself too much to discover and hate his sin. [b] 3 The words of his mouth are malicious and deceptive; [c] he has stopped acting wisely and doing good. [d]
4 Even on his bed he makes malicious plans. [e]
He sets himself on a path that is not good and does not reject evil. [f]

5 LORD, Your faithful love reaches to heaven,
Your faithfulness to the clouds. [g]
6 Your righteousness is like the highest mountains;
Your judgments, like the deepest sea. [h]
LORD, You preserve man and beast. [i] 7 God, Your faithful love is so valuable that •people take refuge in the shadow of Your wings. [j] 8 They are filled from the abundance of Your house;
You let them drink from Your refreshing stream, [k]
9 for with You is life's fountain. [l]
In Your light we will see light. [m]

10 Spread Your faithful love over those who know You, and Your righteousness over the upright in heart. [n] 11 Do not let the foot of the arrogant man come near me or the hand of the wicked one drive me away. [o] 12 There the evildoers fall;
they have been thrown down and cannot rise. [p]

Instruction in Wisdom

Davidic.

37 Do [a] not be agitated by evildoers;
do not envy those who do wrong. [b]
2 For they wither quickly like grass and wilt like tender green plants. [c]

3 Trust in the LORD and do what is good; [d] dwell in the land and live securely. [A, e] 4 Take delight in the LORD, and He will give you your heart's desires. [f]

5 Commit your way to the LORD;
trust in Him, and He will act, [g] 6 making your righteousness shine like the dawn, your justice like the noonday. [h]

7 Be silent before the LORD and wait expectantly for Him; [i] do not be agitated by one who prospers in his way,
by the man who carries out evil plans. [j]

8 Refrain from anger and give up your rage;
do not be agitated — it can only bring harm. [k] 9 For evildoers will be destroyed, but those who put their hope in the LORD will inherit the land. [B, l]

10 A little while, and the wicked person will be no more;
though you look for him, he will not be there. [m] 11 But the humble will inherit the land [C, n]
and will enjoy abundant prosperity. [o]

12 The wicked person schemes against the righteous and gnashes his teeth at him. [p] 13 The Lord laughs at him [q]
because He sees that his day is coming. [r]

14 The wicked have drawn the sword and strung the [D] bow to bring down the afflicted and needy and to slaughter those whose way is upright. [s] 15 Their swords will enter their own hearts, and their bows will be broken. [t]

16 The little that the righteous man has is better than the abundance of many wicked people. [u] 17 For the arms [E] of the wicked will be broken, [v]
but the LORD supports the righteous. [w]

18 The LORD watches over the blameless all their days,
and their inheritance will last forever. [x] 19 They will not be disgraced in times of adversity;
they will be satisfied in days of hunger. [y]

20 But the wicked will perish;
the LORD's enemies, like the glory of the pastures, will fade away —
they will fade away like smoke. [z]

21 The wicked man borrows and does not repay, but the righteous one is gracious and giving. [a] 22 Those who are blessed by Him will inherit the land, [F]
but those cursed by Him will be destroyed. [b]

23 A man's steps are established by the LORD, and He takes pleasure in his way. [c] 24 Though he falls, he will not be overwhelmed, because the LORD holds his hand. [G, d]

25 I have been young and now I am old, yet I have not seen the righteous abandoned or his children begging for bread. [e] 26 He is always generous, always lending, and his children are a blessing. [f]

27 Turn away from evil and do what is good,
and dwell there [g] forever. [h]
28 For the LORD loves justice and will not abandon His faithful ones. [i]
They are kept safe forever,
but the children of the wicked will be destroyed. [j] 29 The righteous will inherit the land [H] and dwell in it permanently. [k]

30 The mouth of the righteous utters wisdom;
his tongue speaks what is just. [l] 31 The instruction of his God is in his heart;
his steps do not falter. [m]

32 The wicked one lies in wait for the righteous and seeks to kill him; [n] 33 the LORD will not leave him in the power of the wicked one or allow him to be condemned when he is judged. [o]

34 Wait for the LORD and keep His way,
and He will exalt you to inherit the land.
You will watch when the wicked are destroyed. [p]

35 I have seen a wicked, violent man well-rooted [I] like a flourishing native tree. [q] 36 Then I passed by and [r] noticed he was gone;
I searched for him, but he could not be found. [s]

37 Watch the blameless and observe the upright, for the man of peace will have a future. [J, t] 38 But transgressors will all be eliminated;
the future [K] of the wicked will be destroyed. [u]

39 The salvation of the righteous is from the LORD, their refuge in a time of distress. [v]
40 The LORD helps and delivers them;
He will deliver them from the wicked and will save them because they take refuge in Him. [w]

Prayer of a Suffering Sinner

A Davidic psalm for remembrance. [a]

38 LORD, do not punish me in Your anger or discipline me in Your wrath. [b] 2 For Your arrows have sunk into me, and Your hand has pressed down on me. [c]

3 There is no health in my body because of Your indignation;
there is no strength [A] in my bones
because of my sin. [d]
4 For my sins have flooded over my head;
they are a burden too heavy for me to bear. [e] 5 My wounds are foul and festering because of my foolishness. [f] 6 I am bent over and brought low;
all day long I go around in mourning. [g] 7 For my loins are full of burning pain, and there is no health in my body. [h]
8 I am faint and severely crushed;
I groan because of the anguish of my heart. [i]

9 Lord, my every desire is known to [B] You;
my sighing is not hidden from You. [j] 10 My heart races, my strength leaves me, and even the light of my eyes has faded. [C, k] 11 My loved ones and friends stand back from my affliction, and my relatives stand at a distance. [l] 12 Those who seek my life set traps, and those who want to harm me threaten to destroy me;
they plot treachery all day long. [m]

13 I am like a deaf person; I do not hear.
I am like a speechless person who does not open his mouth. [n] 14 I am like a man who does not hear and has no arguments in his mouth. [o]
15 I put my hope in You, LORD;
You will answer, Lord my God. [p]

16 For I said, “Don’t let them rejoice over me — those who are arrogant toward me when I stumble.” q 17 For I am about to fall, and my pain is constantly with me. r
18 So I confess my •guilt ;
I am anxious because of my sin. s
19 But my enemies are vigorous and powerful; D
many hate me for no reason. t 20 Those who repay evil for good attack me for pursuing good. u

21 LORD, do not abandon me;
my God, do not be far from me. v
22 Hurry to help me,
Lord, my Savior. w

The Fleeting Nature of Life

For the choir director, for Jeduthun. A Davidic psalm.

39 I said, “I will guard my ways
so that I may not sin with my tongue;
I will guard my mouth with a muzzle
as long as the wicked are in my presence.” [a] 2 I was speechless and quiet;
I kept silent, even from speaking good,
and my pain intensified. [b] 3 My heart grew hot within me;
as I mused, a fire burned. [c]
I spoke with my tongue:
4 “LORD, reveal to me the end of my life
and the number of my days.
Let me know how short-lived I am. [d]
5 You, indeed, have made my days short in length, and my life span as nothing in Your sight.
Yes, every mortal man is only a vapor. [e]

• Selah

6 “Certainly, man walks about like a mere shadow.
Indeed, they frantically rush around in vain, gathering possessions
without knowing who will get them. [f]
7 Now, Lord, what do I wait for?
My hope is in You. [g]
8 Deliver me from all my transgressions;
do not make me the taunt of fools. [h]
9 I am speechless; I do not open my mouth because of what You have done. [i] 10 Remove Your torment from me;
I fade away because of the force of Your hand. [j]
11 You discipline a man with punishment for sin, consuming like a moth what is precious to him; [k]
every man is only a vapor. [l]

Selah

12 “Hear my prayer, LORD,

and listen to my cry for help;
do not be silent at my tears. [m]
For I am a foreigner residing with You,
a temporary resident like all my fathers. [n] 13 Turn Your angry gaze from me so that I may be cheered up before I die and am gone.” [o]

Thanksgiving and a Cry for Help

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

40 I waited patiently for the Lord, and He turned to me and heard my cry for help. [a] 2 He brought me up from a desolate [A] pit, out of the muddy clay, [b]
and set my feet on a rock, making my steps secure. [c] 3 He put a new song in my mouth,
a hymn of praise to our God. [d]
Many will see and fear and put their trust in the Lord. [e]

4 How happy is the man who has put his trust in the Lord and has not turned to the proud or to those who run after lies! [f]
5 Lord my God, You have done many things —
Your wonderful works and Your plans for us;
none can compare with You.
If I were to report and speak of them,
they are more than can be told. [g]

6 You do not delight in sacrifice and offering;
You open my ears to listen. [B]
You do not ask for a whole •burnt offering or a •sin offering. [h]
7 Then I said, “See, I have come;
it is written about me in the volume of the scroll. [i] 8 I delight to do Your will, my God; [j]
Your instruction lives within me.” [C, k]

9 I proclaim righteousness in the great assembly;
see, I do not keep my mouth closed [D] — as You know, Lord. [l]
10 I did not hide Your righteousness in my heart;
I spoke about Your faithfulness and salvation;
I did not conceal Your constant love and truth
from the great assembly. [m]

11 Lord, do not withhold Your compassion from me;

Your constant love and truth will always guard me. [n]
12 For troubles without number have surrounded me;
my sins have overtaken me; I am unable to see.
They are more than the hairs of my head,
and my courage leaves me. [o]
13 LORD, be pleased to deliver me;
hurry to help me, LORD. [p]

14 Let those who seek to take my life
be disgraced and confounded.
Let those who wish me harm
be driven back and humiliated. [q] 15 Let those who say to me, “Aha, aha! ” be horrified because of their shame. [r]

16 Let all who seek You rejoice and be glad in You;
let those who love Your salvation continually say,
“The LORD is great! ” [s]
17 I am afflicted and needy;
the Lord thinks of me.
You are my helper and my deliverer;
my God, do not delay. [t]

Victory in Spite of Betrayal

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

41 Happy is one who cares for the poor;
the LORD will save him in a day of adversity. [a] 2 The LORD will keep him and preserve him;
he will be blessed in the land. [b]
You will not give him over to the desire of his enemies. [c]
3 The LORD will sustain him on his sickbed;
You will heal him on the bed where he lies. [d]

4 I said, "LORD, be gracious to me;
heal me, for I have sinned against You." [e] 5 My enemies speak maliciously about me:
"When will he die and be forgotten? " [f] 6 When one of them comes to visit, he speaks deceitfully;
he stores up evil in his heart;
he goes out and talks. [g]
7 All who hate me whisper together about me;
they plan to harm me. [h]
8 "Lethal poison has been poured into him, and he won't rise again from where he lies! " [i] 9 Even my friend [A] in whom I trusted, one who ate my bread,
has raised his heel against me. [j]

10 But You, LORD, be gracious to me and raise me up;
then I will repay them. [k]
11 By this I know that You delight in me: [l]
my enemy does not shout in triumph over me. [m] 12 You supported me because of my integrity [n]
and set me in Your presence forever. [o]

13 May •Yahweh , the God of Israel, be praised from everlasting to everlasting.
•Amen and amen. [p]

BOOK II

(Psalms 42–72)

Longing for God

For the choir director. A • Maskil of the sons of Korah.

42 As a deer longs for streams of water,
so I long for You, God. [a] 2 I thirst for God, the living God.
When can I come and appear before God? [b]
3 My tears have been my food day and night, while all day long people say to me,
“Where is your God? ” [c]
4 I remember this as I pour out my heart: [d]
how I walked with many,
leading the festive procession to the house of God,
with joyful and thankful shouts. [e]

5 Why am I so depressed?
Why this turmoil within me?
Put your hope in God, for I will still praise Him,
my Savior and my God. [f]
6 I [g] am deeply depressed;
therefore I remember You from the land of Jordan and the peaks of Hermon, from Mount Mizar. [h] 7 Deep calls to deep in the roar of Your waterfalls;
all Your breakers and Your billows have swept over me. [i] 8 The LORD will send His faithful love by day; [j]
His song will be with me in the night —
a prayer to the God of my life.

9 I will say to God, my rock, [k]
“Why have You forgotten me?
Why must I go about in sorrow
because of the enemy’s oppression? ” [l] 10 My adversaries taunt me, as if crushing my bones,
while all day long they say to me,
“Where is your God? ” [m]
11 Why am I so depressed?
Why this turmoil within me?
Put your hope in God, for I will still praise Him,
my Savior and my God. [n]

Psalm 43 [a]

[1] Vindicate me, God, and defend my cause against an ungodly nation;
rescue me from the deceitful and unjust man. [b]
[2] For You are the God of my refuge.
Why have You rejected me?
Why must I go about in sorrow
because of the enemy's oppression? [c]

[3] Send Your light and Your truth; let them lead me. [d]
Let them bring me to Your holy mountain, to Your dwelling place. [e] [4] Then I will come to the altar of God, to God, my greatest joy. [f]
I will praise You with the lyre,
God, my God. [g]

[5] Why am I so depressed?
Why this turmoil within me?
Put your hope in God, for I will still praise Him,
my Savior and my God. [h]

Israel’s Complaint

For the choir director. A • Maskil of the sons of Korah.

44 God, we have heard with our ears —
our ancestors have told us —
the work You accomplished in their days,
in days long ago: [a]
2 to plant them,
You drove out the nations with Your hand;
to settle them,
You crushed the peoples. [b]
3 For they did not take the land by their sword — their arm did not bring them victory — but by Your right hand, Your arm, and the light of Your face,
for You were pleased with them. [c]

4 You are my King, my God, who ordains [d] victories for Jacob. [e] 5 Through You we drive back our foes;
through Your name we trample our enemies. [f] 6 For I do not trust in my bow, and my sword does not bring me victory. [g] 7 But You give us victory over our foes and let those who hate us be disgraced. [h] 8 We boast in God all day long;
we will praise Your name forever. [i]

• Selah

9 But You have rejected and humiliated us;
You do not march out with our armies. [j] 10 You make us retreat from the foe, and those who hate us
have taken plunder for themselves. [k] 11 You hand us over to be eaten like sheep and scatter us among the nations. [l]
12 You sell Your people for nothing;
You make no profit from selling them. [m]
13 You make us an object of reproach to our neighbors, a source of mockery and ridicule to those around us. [n]

14 You make us a joke among the nations,
a laughingstock [A] among the peoples. [o] 15 My disgrace is before me all day long,
and shame has covered my face, [p] 16 because of the voice of the scorner and reviler, because of the enemy and avenger. [q]

17 All this has happened to us, but we have not forgotten You or betrayed Your covenant. [r] 18 Our hearts have not turned back;
our steps have not strayed from Your path. [s] 19 But You have crushed us in a haunt of jackals and have covered us with deepest darkness. [t] 20 If we had forgotten the name of our God and spread out our hands to a foreign god, [u] 21 wouldn't God have found this out, since He knows the secrets of the heart? [v] 22 Because of You we are slain all day long;
we are counted as sheep to be slaughtered. [w]

23 Wake up, LORD! Why are You sleeping?
Get up! Don't reject us forever! [x]
24 Why do You hide Yourself and forget our affliction and oppression? [y] 25 For we have sunk down to the dust;
our bodies cling to the ground. [z]
26 Rise up! Help us!
Redeem us because of Your faithful love. [a]

A Royal Wedding Song

For the choir director: according to “The Lilies.” [a] A • Maskil of the sons of Korah. A love song.

45 My heart is moved by a noble theme as I recite my verses to the king;
my tongue is the pen of a skillful writer. [b]
2 You are the most handsome of •men ;
grace flows from your lips. [c]
Therefore God has blessed you forever. [d]

3 Mighty warrior, strap your sword at your side.
In your majesty and splendor [e] — 4 in your splendor ride triumphantly in the cause of truth, humility, and justice.
May your right hand show your awe-inspiring acts. [f]
5 Your arrows pierce the hearts of the king's enemies;
the peoples fall under you. [g]

6 Your throne, [h] God, is [A] forever and ever;
the scepter of Your [B] kingdom is a scepter of justice. [i] 7 You love righteousness and hate wickedness; [j] therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of joy more than your companions.
8 Myrrh, aloes, and cassia perfume all your garments;
from ivory palaces harps bring you joy. [k] 9 Kings' daughters are among your honored women; [l]
the queen, adorned with gold from Ophir, stands at your right hand. [m]

10 Listen, daughter, pay attention and consider:
forget your people and your father's house, [n]
11 and the king will desire your beauty.
Bow down to him, for he is your lord. [o]
12 The daughter of Tyre, the wealthy people, will seek your favor with gifts. [p]

13 In her chamber, the royal daughter is all glorious, her clothing embroidered with gold. [q] 14 In colorful garments she is led to the king;
after her, the virgins, her companions, are brought to you. [r] 15 They are led in with gladness and rejoicing;

they enter the king’s palace. [s]

16 Your sons will succeed your ancestors;
you will make them princes throughout the land. [t] 17 I will cause your name to be remembered for all generations;
therefore the peoples will praise you forever and ever. [u]

God Our Refuge

For the choir director. A song of the sons of Korah. According to Alamoth.
a, b

46 God is our refuge and strength, a helper who is always found
in times of trouble. [c] 2 Therefore we will not be afraid, though the earth trembles
and the mountains topple into the depths of the seas, [d] 3 though its waters roar and foam and the mountains quake with its turmoil. [e]

• Selah

4 There is a river —
its streams delight the city of God,
the holy dwelling place of the •Most High. [f]
5 God is within her; she will not be toppled.
God will help her when the morning dawns. [g] 6 Nations rage, kingdoms topple;
the earth melts when He lifts His voice. [h] 7 The LORD of •Hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our stronghold. [i]

Selah

8 Come, see the works of the LORD, who brings devastation on the earth. [j]
9 He makes wars cease throughout the earth.
He shatters bows and cuts spears to pieces;
He burns up the chariots. [A, k]
10 "Stop your fighting — and know that I am God, exalted among the nations, exalted on the earth." [l] 11 •Yahweh of Hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our stronghold. [m]

Selah

God Our King

For the choir director. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

47 Clap your hands, all you peoples; [a] shout to God with a jubilant cry. [b] 2 For •Yahweh , the •Most High, is awe-inspiring, a great King over all the earth. [c] 3 He subdues peoples under us and nations under our feet. [d] 4 He chooses for us our inheritance — the pride of Jacob, whom He loves. [e]

• Selah

5 God ascends among shouts of joy,
the LORD, among the sound of trumpets. [f] 6 Sing praise to God, sing praise;
sing praise to our King, sing praise! [g] 7 Sing a song of wisdom, [h] for God is King of all the earth. [i]

8 God reigns over the nations;
God is seated on His holy throne. [j] 9 The nobles of the peoples have assembled with the people of the God of Abraham. [k]
For the leaders [A] of the earth belong to God;
He is greatly exalted. [l]

Zion Exalted

A song. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

48 The LORD is great and highly praised in the city of our God. [a]
His holy mountain, [2] rising splendidly, is the joy of the whole earth.
Mount •Zion on the slopes of the north is the city of the great King. [b] [3] God is known as a stronghold in its citadels. [c]

[4] Look! The kings assembled;
they advanced together. [d] [5] They looked and froze with fear;
they fled in terror. [e]
[6] Trembling seized them there, agony like that of a woman in labor, [f] [7] as You wrecked the ships of Tarshish with the east wind. [g]

[8] Just as we heard, so we have seen in the city of •Yahweh of •Hosts ,
in the city of our God;
God will establish it forever. [h]

• Selah

[9] God, within Your temple, we contemplate Your faithful love. [i] [10] Your name, God, like Your praise, reaches to the ends of the earth; [j]
Your right hand is filled with justice. [k] [11] Mount Zion is glad.
The towns [A] of Judah rejoice
because of Your judgments. [l]

[12] Go around Zion, encircle it;
count its towers,
[13] note its ramparts; tour its citadels
so that you can tell a future generation: [m] [14] "This God, our God forever and ever —

He will always lead us.” n, o

Misplaced Trust in Wealth

For the choir director. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

49 Hear this, all you peoples;
listen, all who inhabit the world, [a] 2 both low and high, [A] rich and poor together. [b] 3 My mouth speaks wisdom;
my heart's meditation brings understanding. [c]
4 I turn my ear to a proverb;
I explain my riddle with a lyre. [d]

5 Why should I fear in times of trouble?
The iniquity of my foes surrounds me. [e] 6 They trust in their wealth and boast of their abundant riches. [f] 7 Yet these cannot redeem a person [B] or pay his ransom to God [g] — 8 since the price of redeeming him is too costly, one should forever stop trying [C, h] — 9 so that he may live forever and not see the •Pit . [i]

10 For one can see that wise men die;
foolish and stupid men also pass away. [j]
Then they leave their wealth to others. [k]
11 Their graves are their eternal homes, [l]
their homes from generation to generation, though they have named estates after themselves. [m] 12 But despite his assets, [D] man will not last;
he is like the animals that perish. [n]

13 This is the way of those who are arrogant, and of their followers,
who approve of their words. [E, o]

• Selah

14 Like sheep they are headed for •Sheol ;
Death will shepherd them.
The upright will rule over them in the morning, [p]
and their form will waste away in Sheol, [F]

far from their lofty abode. [q] 15 But God will redeem my life from the power of Sheol,
for He will take me. [r]

Selah

16 Do not be afraid when a man gets rich, when the wealth [G] of his house increases. [s] 17 For when he dies, he will take nothing at all;
his wealth [H] will not follow him down. [t] 18 Though he praises himself during his lifetime — and people praise you when you do well for yourself [u] — 19 he will go to the generation of his fathers;
they will never see the light. [v] 20 A man with valuable possessions [I] but without understanding is like the animals that perish. [w]

God as Judge

A psalm of •Asaph . [a]

50 •Yahweh , the God of gods [A] speaks;
He summons the earth from east to west. [B, b]
2 From •Zion , the perfection of beauty,
God appears in radiance. [C, c]
3 Our God is coming; He will not be silent!
Devouring fire precedes Him,
and a storm rages around Him. [d] 4 On high, He summons heaven and earth in order to judge His people. [e] 5 “Gather My faithful ones to Me, those who made a covenant with Me by sacrifice.” [f] 6 The heavens proclaim His righteousness, [g] for God is the Judge. [h]

• Selah

7 “Listen, My people, and I will speak;
I will testify against you, Israel.
I am God, your God. [i]
8 I do not rebuke you for your sacrifices or for your •burnt offerings, which are continually before Me. [j] 9 I will not accept a bull from your household or male goats from your pens, [k] 10 for every animal of the forest is Mine,
the cattle on a thousand hills.
11 I know every bird of the mountains, [l] and the creatures of the field are Mine. [m] 12 If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world and everything in it is Mine. [n] 13 Do I eat the flesh of bulls or drink the blood of goats? [o] 14 Sacrifice a thank offering to God, [p] and pay your vows to the •Most High. [q]
15 Call on Me in a day of trouble;
I will rescue you, and you will honor Me.” [r]

16 But God says to the wicked:
“What right do you have to recite My statutes and to take My covenant on your lips? [s] 17 You hate instruction and turn your back on My words. [D, t] 18 When you see a thief,
you make friends with him,
and you associate with adulterers. [u] 19 You unleash your mouth for evil and harness your tongue for deceit. [v] 20 You sit, maligning your brother, slandering your mother’s son. [w] 21 You have done these things, and I kept silent;
you thought I was just like you. [x]
But I will rebuke you and lay out the case before you. [E, y]

22 “Understand this, you who forget God, or I will tear you apart,
and there will be no one to rescue you. [z] 23 Whoever sacrifices a thank offering honors Me,
and whoever orders his conduct,
I will show him the salvation of God.” [a]

A Prayer for Restoration

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm, when Nathan the prophet came to him after he had gone to Bathsheba. [a]

51 Be gracious to me, God, according to Your faithful love;
according to Your abundant compassion,
blot out my rebellion. [b]
2 Wash away my •guilt and cleanse me from my sin. [c] 3 For I am conscious of my rebellion, and my sin is always before me. [d]
4 Against You — You alone — I have sinned and done this evil in Your sight. [e]
So You are right when You pass sentence;
You are blameless when You judge. [f]
5 Indeed, I was guilty when I was born;
I was sinful when my mother conceived me. [g]

6 Surely You desire integrity in the inner self, and You teach me wisdom deep within. [h]
7 Purify me with hyssop, and I will be •clean ;
wash me, and I will be whiter than snow. [i] 8 Let me hear joy and gladness;
let the bones You have crushed rejoice. [j] 9 Turn Your face away [A] from my sins and blot out all my guilt. [k]

10 God, create a clean heart for me and renew a steadfast [B] spirit within me. [l] 11 Do not banish me from Your presence or take Your Holy Spirit from me. [m] 12 Restore the joy of Your salvation to me, and give me a willing spirit. [C, n]
13 Then I will teach the rebellious Your ways, and sinners will return to You. [o]

14 Save me from the guilt of bloodshed, God, [p]
the God of my salvation, and my tongue will sing of Your righteousness. [q] 15 Lord, open my lips,

and my mouth will declare Your praise. [r]
16 You do not want a sacrifice, or I would give it;
You are not pleased with a •burnt offering. [s]
17 The sacrifice pleasing to God is [D] a broken spirit.
God, You will not despise a broken and humbled heart. [t]

18 In Your good pleasure, cause •Zion to prosper;
build [E] the walls of Jerusalem. [u] 19 Then You will delight in righteous sacrifices, whole burnt offerings;
then bulls will be offered on Your altar. [v]

God Judges the Proud

For the choir director. A Davidic • Maskil . When Doeg the Edomite went and reported to Saul, telling him, “David went to Ahimelech’s house.” [a]

52 Why brag about evil, you hero! [b]
God’s faithful love is constant. [c]
2 Like a sharpened razor,
your tongue devises destruction,
working treachery. [d]
3 You love evil instead of good, lying instead of speaking truthfully. [e]

• Selah

4 You love any words that destroy,
you treacherous tongue! [f]

5 This is why God will bring you down forever.
He will take you, ripping you out of your tent;
He will uproot you from the land of the living. [g]

Selah

6 The righteous will look on with awe and will ridicule him: [h] 7 “Here is the man who would not make God his refuge,
but trusted in the abundance of his riches,
taking refuge in his destructive behavior.” [A, i]

8 But I am like a flourishing olive tree in the house of God; [j]
I trust in God’s faithful love forever and ever. [k]
9 I will praise You forever for what You have done.
In the presence of Your faithful people,
I will put my hope in Your name, for it is good. [l]

A Portrait of Sinners

For the choir director: on Mahalath. [a, b] A Davidic • Maskil **.

53 The fool says in his heart, “God does not exist.”
They are corrupt, and they do vile deeds.
There is no one who does good. [c]
2 God looks down from heaven on the •human race
to see if there is one who is wise,
one who seeks God. [d]
3 All have turned away;
all alike have become corrupt.
There is no one who does good,
not even one. [e]

4 Will evildoers never understand?
They consume My people as they consume bread; [f]
they do not call on God. [g] 5 Then they will be filled with terror — terror like no other [h] —
because God will scatter
the bones of those who besiege you. [i]
You will put them to shame,
for God has rejected them. [j]

6 Oh, that Israel’s deliverance would come from •Zion !
When God restores the fortunes of His people, [A] Jacob will rejoice; Israel will be glad. [k]

Prayer for Deliverance

For the choir director: with stringed instruments. A Davidic • Maskil . When the Ziphites went and said to Saul, “Is David not hiding among us? ” [a]

54 God, save me by Your name, and vindicate me by Your might! [b] 2 God, hear my prayer;
listen to the words of my mouth. [c] 3 For strangers rise up against me,
and violent men seek my life.
They have no regard for God. [A, d]

• Selah

4 God is my helper;
the Lord is the sustainer of my life. [B, e]
5 He will repay my adversaries for their evil.
Because of Your faithfulness, annihilate them. [f]

6 I will sacrifice a freewill offering to You. [g]
I will praise Your name, •Yahweh , because it is good. [h]
7 For He has delivered me from every trouble, and my eye has looked down on my enemies. [i]

Betrayal by a Friend

For the choir director: with stringed instruments. A Davidic • Maskil .

55 God, listen to my prayer and do not ignore [A] my plea for help. [a] 2 Pay attention to me and answer me. [b]
I am restless and in turmoil with my complaint, [c] 3 because of the enemy's voice,
because of the pressure [B] of the wicked.
For they bring down disaster on me [d]
and harass me in anger. [e]

4 My heart shudders within me; [f] terrors of death sweep over me.
5 Fear and trembling grip me;
horror has overwhelmed me. [g]
6 I said, "If only I had [C] wings like a dove!
I would fly away and find rest. [h]
7 How far away I would flee;
I would stay in the wilderness. [i]

• Selah

8 I would hurry to my shelter from the raging wind and the storm." [j]

9 Lord, confuse [D] and confound their speech, [E, k] for I see violence and strife in the city;
10 day and night they make the rounds on its walls.
Crime and trouble are within it; [l]
11 destruction is inside it;
oppression and deceit never leave its marketplace. [m]

12 Now it is not an enemy who insults me — otherwise I could bear it;
it is not a foe who rises up against me —
otherwise I could hide from him.
13 But it is you, a man who is my peer,
my companion and good friend! [n] 14 We used to have close fellowship;
we walked with the crowd into the house of God. [o]

15 Let death take them by surprise; [p] let them go down to •Sheol alive, because evil is in their homes and within them. [q] 16 But I call to God, and the LORD will save me. [r]
17 I complain and groan morning, noon, and night, [s] and He hears my voice. [t]
18 Though many are against me,
He will redeem me from my battle unharmed. [u]
19 God, the One enthroned from long ago, [v] will hear and will humiliate them

Selah

because they do not change and do not •fear God. [w]

20 My friend [x] acts violently against those at peace with him; [y]
he violates his covenant. [z] 21 His buttery words are smooth, [a] but war is in his heart.
His words are softer than oil,
but they are drawn swords. [b]

22 Cast your burden on the LORD, and He will sustain you; [c]
He will never allow the righteous to be shaken. [d]

23 God, You will bring them down to the •Pit of destruction; [e] men of bloodshed and treachery will not live out half their days. [f]
But I will trust in You. [g]

A Call for God’s Protection

For the choir director: according to “A Silent Dove Far Away.” [a] A Davidic • Miktam . When the Philistines seized him in Gath. [b]

56 Be gracious to me, God, for man tramples me;
he fights and oppresses me all day long.
2 My adversaries trample me all day,
for many arrogantly fight against me. A, c

3 When I am afraid,
I will trust in You. d
4 In God, whose word I praise,
in God I trust; I will not fear.
What can man do to me? e

5 They twist my words all day long;
all their thoughts against me are evil. f 6 They stir up strife, B they lurk;
they watch my steps
while they wait to take my life. g
7 Will they escape in spite of such sin?
God, bring down the nations in wrath. h

8 You Yourself have recorded my wanderings. C Put my tears in Your bottle.
Are they not in Your records? i
9 Then my enemies will retreat on the day when I call. j
This I know: God is for me. k

10 In God, whose word I praise,
in the LORD, whose word I praise,
11 in God I trust; I will not fear.
What can man do to me? l

12 I am obligated by vows D to You, God;
I will make my thank offerings to You. m 13 For You delivered me from death, even my feet from stumbling,
to walk before God in the light of life. n

Praise for God’s Protection

For the choir director: “Do Not Destroy.” [a] A Davidic • Miktam . When he fled before Saul into the cave. [b]

57 Be gracious to me, God, be gracious to me, for I take refuge in You.
I will seek refuge in the shadow of Your wings
until danger passes. [c]
2 I call to God •Most High,
to God who fulfills His purpose for me. [A, d] 3 He reaches down from heaven and saves me, challenging the one who tramples me. [e]

• Selah

God sends His faithful love and truth. [f]
4 I am surrounded by lions;
I lie down with those who devour •men .
Their teeth are spears and arrows;
their tongues are sharp swords. [g]
5 God, be exalted above the heavens;
let Your glory be over the whole earth. [h]
6 They prepared a net for my steps;
I was despondent.
They dug a pit ahead of me,
but they fell into it! [i]

Selah

7 My heart is confident, God, my heart is confident.
I will sing; I will sing praises. [j]
8 Wake up, my soul! [B]
Wake up, harp and lyre!
I will wake up the dawn. [k]
9 I will praise You, Lord, among the peoples;
I will sing praises to You among the nations. [l]
10 For Your faithful love is as high as the heavens;
Your faithfulness reaches the clouds. [m] 11 God, be exalted above the heavens; [n]
let Your glory be over the whole earth. [o]

A Cry against Injustice

For the choir director: “Do Not Destroy.” [a] A Davidic • Miktam **.

58 Do you really speak righteously, you mighty ones? [A]
Do you judge •people fairly? [b]
2 No, you practice injustice in your hearts;
with your hands you weigh out violence in the land. [c]

3 The wicked go astray from the womb;
liars err from birth. [d]
4 They have venom like the venom of a snake, like the deaf cobra that stops up its ears, [e] 5 that does not listen to the sound of the charmers who skillfully weave spells. [f]

6 God, knock the teeth out of their mouths;
LORD, tear out the young lions' fangs. [g] 7 They will vanish like water that flows by;
they will aim their useless arrows. [B, C, h] 8 Like a slug that moves along in slime, like a woman's miscarried child,
they will not see the sun. [i]

9 Before your pots can feel the heat of the thorns — whether green or burning —
He will sweep them away. [D, j] 10 The righteous one will rejoice when he sees the retribution; [k]
he will wash his feet in the blood of the wicked. [l] 11 Then people will say,
"Yes, there is a reward for the righteous!
There is a God who judges on earth! " [m]

God Our Stronghold

For the choir director: “Do Not Destroy.” [a] A Davidic • Miktam . When Saul sent agents to watch the house and kill him. [b]

59 Deliver me from my enemies, my God; [c] protect me from those who rise up against me. [d] 2 Deliver me from those who practice sin, and save me from men of bloodshed. [e]
3 LORD, look! They set an ambush for me. [f]
Powerful men attack me,
but not because of any sin or rebellion of mine. [g] 4 For no fault of mine,
they run and take up a position.
Awake to help me, and take notice. [h]
5 LORD God of •Hosts , You are the God of Israel, rise up to punish all the nations;
do not show grace to any wicked traitors. [i]

• Selah

6 They return at evening, snarling like dogs and prowling around the city. [j] 7 Look, they spew from their mouths — sharp words from [A] their lips. [k]
"For who," they say, "will hear? " [l]
8 But You laugh at them, LORD;
You ridicule all the nations. [m]
9 I will keep watch for You, my [n] strength, because God is my stronghold. [o]
10 My faithful God [p] will come to meet me;
God will let me look down on my adversaries. [q]

11 Do not kill them; otherwise, my people will forget.
By Your power, make them homeless wanderers [r] and bring them down,
Lord, our shield. [s]
12 For the sin of their mouths and the words of their lips, let them be caught in their pride.
They utter curses and lies. [t]
13 Consume them in rage;
consume them until they are gone. [u]

Then people will know throughout [B] the earth that God rules over Jacob. [v]

Selah

14 And they return at evening, snarling like dogs and prowling around the city. [w] 15 They scavenge for food;
they growl if they are not satisfied. [x]

16 But I will sing of Your strength and will joyfully proclaim
Your faithful love in the morning. [y]
For You have been a stronghold for me,
a refuge in my day of trouble. [z]
17 To You, my strength, I sing praises, because God is my stronghold —
my faithful God. [a]

Prayer in Difficult Times

For the choir director: according to "The Lily of Testimony." [a] A Davidic • Miktam for teaching. When he fought with Aram-naharaim and Aram-zobah, and Joab returned and struck Edom in the Valley of Salt, killing 12,000. [b]

60 God, You have rejected us;
You have broken out [A] against us;
You have been angry. Restore us! [B, c]
2 You have shaken the land and split it open.
Heal its fissures, for it shudders. [d]
3 You have made Your people suffer hardship;
You have given us wine to drink
that made us stagger. [e]
4 You have given a signal flag to those who •fear You, so that they can flee before the archers. [C, f]

• Selah

5 Save with Your right hand, and answer me,
so that those You love may be rescued. [g]

6 God has spoken in His sanctuary: [D]
"I will triumph! I will divide up Shechem. [h]
I will apportion the Valley of Succoth. [i]
7 Gilead is Mine, Manasseh is Mine, and Ephraim is My helmet; [j]
Judah is My scepter. [k]
8 Moab is My washbasin. [l]
I throw My sandal on Edom; [m]
I shout in triumph over Philistia." [n]

9 Who will bring me to the fortified city?
Who will lead me to Edom? [o]
10 God, haven't You rejected us?
God, You do not march out with our armies. [p]
11 Give us aid against the foe,
for human help is worthless. [q]
12 With God we will perform valiantly; [r]
He will trample our foes. [s]

Security in God

For the choir director: on stringed instruments. Davidic.

61 God, hear my cry;
pay attention to my prayer. [a] 2 I call to You from the ends of the earth
when my heart is without strength. [b]
Lead me to a rock that is high above me, [c] 3 for You have been a refuge for me,
a strong tower [d] in the face of the enemy.
4 I will live in Your tent forever and take refuge under the shelter of Your wings. [e]

• Selah

5 God, You have heard my vows; [f]
You have given a heritage to those who •fear Your name. [g] 6 Add days to the king's life;
may his years span many generations. [h]
7 May he sit enthroned before God forever; [i] appoint faithful love and truth to guard him. [j] 8 Then I will continually sing of Your name, [k] fulfilling my vows day by day. [l]

Trust in God Alone

For the choir director: according to Jeduthun. [a] A Davidic psalm.

62 I am at rest in God alone;
my salvation comes from Him. [b]
2 He alone is my rock and my salvation, [c]
my stronghold; I will never be shaken. [d]

3 How long will you threaten a man?
Will all of you attack [e]
as if he were a leaning wall or a tottering stone fence? [f] 4 They only plan to bring him down from his high position.
They take pleasure in lying;
they bless with their mouths,
but they curse inwardly. [g]

• Selah

5 Rest in God alone, my soul,
for my hope comes from Him. [h] 6 He alone is my rock and my salvation, [i] my stronghold; I will not be shaken. [j]
7 My salvation and glory depend on God, my strong rock.
My refuge is in God. [k]
8 Trust in Him at all times, you people;
pour out your hearts before Him.
God is our refuge. [l]

Selah

9 •Men are only a vapor;
exalted men, an illusion.
Weighed in the scales, they go up;
together they are less than a vapor. [m] 10 Place no trust in oppression, or false hope in robbery.
If wealth increases,
pay no attention to it. [A, n]

11 God has spoken once;
I have heard this twice:

strength belongs to God, [o]
12 and faithful love belongs to You, LORD.
For You repay each according to his works. [p]

Praise God Who Satisfies

A Davidic psalm. When he was in the Wilderness of Judah. [a] 63 God, You are my God; I eagerly seek You.

I thirst for You;
my body faints for You
in a land that is dry, desolate, and without water. [b] 2 So I gaze on You in the sanctuary to see Your strength and Your glory. [c]

3 My lips will glorify You because Your faithful love is better than life. [d] 4 So I will praise You as long as I live;
at Your name, I will lift up my hands. [e] 5 You satisfy me as with rich food; [A, f]
my mouth will praise You with joyful lips. [g]

6 When I think of You as I lie on my bed,
I meditate on You during the night watches [h]
7 because You are my helper; [i]
I will rejoice in the shadow of Your wings. [j]
8 I follow close to You;
Your right hand holds on to me. [k]

9 But those who seek to destroy my life will go into the depths of the earth. [l] 10 They will be given over to the power of the sword; [m]
they will become the jackals' prey.
11 But the king will rejoice in God; [n]
all who swear by Him [B] will boast, for the mouths of liars will be shut. [o]

Protection from Evildoers

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

64 God, hear my voice when I complain. [a]
Protect my life from the terror of the enemy. [b]
2 Hide me from the scheming of wicked people, [c]
from the mob of evildoers, [d] 3 who sharpen their tongues like swords and aim bitter words like arrows, [e]
4 shooting from concealed places at the innocent.
They shoot at him suddenly and are not afraid. [f]
5 They encourage each other in an evil plan; [A, B]
they talk about hiding traps and say,
“Who will see them? ” [C, g]
6 They devise crimes and say,
“We have perfected a secret plan.” [h]
The inner man and the heart are mysterious.

7 But God will shoot them with arrows;
suddenly, they will be wounded. [i] 8 They will be made to stumble;
their own tongues work against them.
All who see them will shake their heads. [j] 9 Then everyone will fear and will tell about God’s work,
for they will understand what He has done. [k]

10 The righteous one rejoices in the LORD and takes refuge in Him;
all those who are upright in heart will offer praise. [l]

God’s Care for the Earth

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm. A song.

65 Praise is rightfully Yours, [A] God, in •Zion ;
vows to You will be fulfilled. [a] 2 All humanity will come to You,
the One who hears prayer. [b] 3 Iniquities overwhelm me;
only You can •atone for [B] our rebellions. [c] 4 How happy is the one You choose and bring near to live in Your courts!
We will be satisfied with the goodness of Your house,
the holiness of Your temple. [C, d]

5 You answer us in righteousness, with awe-inspiring works,
God of our salvation,
the hope of all the ends of the earth and of the distant seas. [e] 6 You establish the mountains by Your [f] power, robed with strength. [g]
7 You silence the roar of the seas,
the roar of their waves,
and the tumult of the nations. [h]
8 Those who live far away are awed by Your signs;
You make east and west shout for joy. [i]

9 You visit the earth and water it abundantly, enriching it greatly.
God's stream is filled with water,
for You prepare the earth [D] in this way, providing people with grain. [j] 10 You soften it with showers and bless its growth, soaking its furrows and leveling its ridges. [k]
11 You crown the year with Your goodness;
Your ways overflow with plenty. [E, l]
12 The wilderness pastures overflow, and the hills are robed with joy. [m] 13 The pastures are clothed with flocks and the valleys covered with grain. [n]

They shout in triumph; indeed, they sing. [o]

Praise for God’s Mighty Acts

For the choir director. A song. A psalm.

66 Shout joyfully to God, all the earth! [a] 2 Sing about the glory of His name;
make His praise glorious. [b]
3 Say to God, “How awe-inspiring are Your works!
Your enemies will cringe before You because of Your great strength. [c] 4 All the earth will worship You and sing praise to You.
They will sing praise to Your name.” [d]

• Selah

5 Come and see the wonders of God; [e]
His acts for •humanity are awe-inspiring.
6 He turned the sea into dry land,
and they crossed the river on foot. [f]
There we rejoiced in Him. [g]
7 He rules forever by His might;
He keeps His eye on the nations. [h]
The rebellious should not exalt themselves. [i]

Selah

8 Praise our God, you peoples;
let the sound of His praise be heard. [j] 9 He keeps us alive [A] and does not allow our feet to slip. [k]

10 For You, God, tested us;
You refined us as silver is refined. [l]
11 You lured us into a trap;
You placed burdens on our backs. [m]
12 You let men ride over our heads;
we went through fire and water,
but You brought us out to abundance. [B, n]

13 I will enter Your house with •burnt offerings;
I will pay You my vows [o]
14 that my lips promised and my mouth spoke during my distress. [p] 15 I will offer You fattened sheep as burnt offerings, with the fragrant smoke of rams;

I will sacrifice oxen with goats. [q]

Selah

16 Come and listen, all who •fear God, and I will tell what He has done for me. [r] 17 I cried out to Him with my mouth, and praise was on my tongue. [s] 18 If I had been aware of malice in my heart,
the Lord would not have listened. [t] 19 However, God has listened;
He has paid attention to the sound of my prayer. [u]
20 May God be praised!
He has not turned away my prayer or turned His faithful love from me. [v]

All Will Praise God

For the choir director: with stringed instruments. A psalm. A song.

67 May God be gracious to us and bless us;
look on us with favor [a]

• Selah

2 so that Your way may be known on earth,
Your salvation among all nations. [b]

3 Let the peoples praise You, God;
let all the peoples praise You. [c] 4 Let the nations rejoice and shout for joy, for You judge the peoples with fairness and lead the nations on earth. [d]

Selah

5 Let the peoples praise You, God,
let all the peoples praise You. [e]

6 The earth has produced its harvest;
God, our God, blesses us. [f]
7 God will bless us, and all the ends of the earth will •fear Him. [g]

God’s Majestic Power

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm. A song.

68 God arises. His enemies scatter, and those who hate Him flee from His presence. [a] 2 As smoke is blown away,
so You blow them away.
As wax melts before the fire,
so the wicked are destroyed before God. [b] 3 But the righteous are glad;
they rejoice before God and celebrate with joy. [c]

4 Sing to God! Sing praises to His name.
Exalt Him who rides on the clouds [A] —
His name is •Yahweh [B] — and rejoice before Him. [d] 5 God in His holy dwelling is a father of the fatherless and a champion of widows. [e]
6 God provides homes for those who are deserted.
He leads out the prisoners to prosperity, [C]
but the rebellious live in a scorched land. [f]

7 God, when You went out before Your people, when You marched through the desert,

• Selah

8 the earth trembled and the skies poured down rain before God, the God of Sinai, [D] before God, the God of Israel. [g]
9 You, God, showered abundant rain;
You revived Your inheritance when it languished. [h]
10 Your people settled in it;
God, You provided for the poor by Your goodness. [i]

11 The Lord gave the command;
a great company of women brought the good news: [j]
12 "The kings of the armies flee — they flee! "
She who stays at home divides the spoil. [k]
13 While [E] you lie among the sheepfolds, [F]
the wings of a dove are covered with silver, and its feathers with glistening gold. [l]

14 When the •Almighty scattered kings in the land,
it snowed on Zalmon. G, m

15 Mount Bashan is God's towering mountain;
Mount Bashan is a mountain of many peaks. n 16 Why gaze with envy, you mountain peaks,
at the mountain o God desired for His dwelling?
The LORD will live there forever! p 17 God's chariots are tens of thousands, thousands and thousands; q
the Lord is among them in the sanctuary H as He was at Sinai. r
18 You ascended to the heights, taking away captives;
You received gifts from I people,
even from the rebellious,
so that the LORD God might live there. J, s

19 May the Lord be praised!
Day after day He bears our burdens;
God is our salvation. t

Selah

20 Our God is a God of salvation, and escape from death belongs to the Lord GOD. u 21 Surely God crushes the heads of His enemies, the hairy head of one who goes on in his •guilty acts. v 22 The Lord said, "I will bring them back from Bashan;
I will bring them back from the depths of the sea w 23 so that your foot may wade x in blood and your dogs' tongues may have their share from the enemies." y 24 People have seen Your procession, God,
the procession of my God,
my King, in the sanctuary. K, z 25 Singers a lead the way, with musicians following;
among them are young women

playing tambourines. [b] 26 Praise God in the assemblies; praise the LORD from the fountain of Israel. [c] 27 There is Benjamin, the youngest, leading them, the rulers of Judah in their assembly, [L]
the rulers of Zebulun, the rulers of Naphtali. [d]

28 Your God has decreed your strength.
Show Your strength, God,
You who have acted on our behalf. [e]
29 Because of Your temple at Jerusalem, kings will bring tribute to You. [f] 30 Rebuke the beast [g] in the reeds, the herd of bulls with the calves of the peoples. [h]
Trample underfoot those with bars of silver. [M]
Scatter the peoples who take pleasure in war. [i] 31 Ambassadors will come [N] from Egypt;
•Cush will stretch out its hands [j] to God. [k]

32 Sing to God, you kingdoms of the earth;
sing praise to the Lord, [l]

Selah

33 to Him who rides in the ancient, highest heavens. [m]
Look, He thunders with His powerful voice! [n] 34 Ascribe power to God.
His majesty is over Israel,
His power among the clouds. [o]
35 God, You are awe-inspiring in Your sanctuaries.
The God of Israel gives power and strength to His people.
May God be praised! [p]

A Plea for Rescue

For the choir director: according to “The Lilies.” [a] Davidic.

69 Save me, God,
for the water has risen to my neck. [b]
2 I have sunk in deep mud, and there is no footing;
I have come into deep waters,
and a flood sweeps over me. [c] 3 I am weary from my crying;
my throat is parched.
My eyes fail, looking for my God. [d] 4 Those who hate me without cause are more numerous than the hairs of my head;
my deceitful enemies, who would destroy me,
are powerful. [e]
Though I did not steal, I must repay. [f]

5 God, You know my foolishness, and my •guilty acts are not hidden from You. [g] 6 Do not let those who put their hope in You be disgraced because of me,
Lord GOD of •Hosts ;
do not let those who seek You be humiliated because of me,
God of Israel. [h]
7 For I have endured insults because of You,
and shame has covered my face. [i] 8 I have become a stranger to my brothers and a foreigner to my mother's sons [j] 9 because zeal for Your house has consumed me, [k] and the insults of those who insult You have fallen on me. [l] 10 I mourned and fasted,
but it brought me insults. [m] 11 I wore •sackcloth as my clothing, and I was a joke to them.
12 Those who sit at the city •gate talk about me,
and drunkards make up songs about me. [n]

13 But as for me, LORD,

my prayer to You is for a time of favor.
In Your abundant, faithful love, God,
answer me with Your sure salvation. [o]
14 Rescue me from the miry mud; don't let me sink.
Let me be rescued from those who hate me
and from the deep waters. [p] 15 Don't let the floodwaters sweep over me or the deep swallow me up;
don't let the •Pit close its mouth over me. [q] 16 Answer me, LORD,
for Your faithful love is good;
in keeping with Your great compassion,
turn to me. [r]
17 Don't hide Your face from Your servant, for I am in distress.
Answer me quickly! [s]
18 Draw near to me and redeem me;
ransom me because of my enemies. [t]

19 You know the insults I endure —
my shame and disgrace.
You are aware of all my adversaries. [u] 20 Insults have broken my heart, and I am in despair.
I waited for sympathy,
but there was none;
for comforters, but found no one. [v] 21 Instead, they gave me gall [w] for my food, and for my thirst
they gave me vinegar to drink. [x]

22 Let their table set before them be a snare, and let it be a trap for their allies. [y] 23 Let their eyes grow too dim to see,
and let their loins continually shake. [z] 24 Pour out Your rage on them, and let Your burning anger overtake them. [a] 25 Make their fortification desolate;

may no one live in their tents. [b] 26 For they persecute the one You struck and talk about the pain of those You wounded. [c] 27 Add guilt to their guilt;
do not let them share in Your righteousness. [d] 28 Let them be erased from the book of life and not be recorded with the righteous. [e]

29 But as for me — poor and in pain —
let Your salvation protect me, God. [f] 30 I will praise God's name with song and exalt Him with thanksgiving. [g] 31 That will please •Yahweh more than an ox, more than a bull with horns and hooves. [h]
32 The humble will see it and rejoice.
You who seek God, take heart! [i] 33 For the LORD listens to the needy and does not despise
His own who are prisoners. [j]

34 Let heaven and earth praise Him,
the seas and everything that moves in them, [k] 35 for God will save •Zion and build up [A] the cities of Judah.
They will live there and possess it. [l]
36 The descendants of His servants will inherit it, and those who love His name will live in it. [m]

A Call for Deliverance

For the choir director. Davidic. To bring remembrance. [a] 70 God, deliver me.

Hurry to help me, LORD! [b]

2 Let those who seek my life
be disgraced and confounded;
let those who wish me harm
be driven back and humiliated.
3 Let those who say, “Aha, aha! ” retreat because of their shame. [c]

4 Let all who seek You rejoice and be glad in You;
let those who love Your salvation continually say, “God is great! ” [d] 5 I am afflicted and needy;
hurry to me, God.
You are my help and my deliverer;
LORD, do not delay. [e]

God’s Help in Old Age

71 LORD, I seek refuge in You;
let me never be disgraced. [a] 2 In Your justice, rescue and deliver me;
listen closely to me and save me. [b]
3 Be a rock of refuge for me,
where I can always go.
Give the command to save me,
for You are my rock and fortress. [c] 4 Deliver me, my God, from the power of the wicked, from the grasp of the unjust and oppressive. [d] 5 For You are my hope, Lord GOD,
my confidence from my youth. [e]
6 I have leaned on You from birth;
You took me from my mother's womb. [f]
My praise is always about You. [g] 7 I have become an ominous sign to many,
but You are my strong refuge. [h]
8 My mouth is full of praise and honor to You all day long. [i]

9 Don't discard me in my old age;
as my strength fails, do not abandon me. [j] 10 For my enemies talk about me,
and those who spy on me plot together, [k] 11 saying, "God has abandoned him;
chase him and catch him,
for there is no one to rescue him." [l] 12 God, do not be far from me;
my God, hurry to help me. [m] 13 May my adversaries be disgraced and destroyed;
may those who seek my harm
be covered with disgrace and humiliation. [n] 14 But I will hope continually and will praise You more and more. [o] 15 My mouth will tell about Your righteousness and Your salvation all day long,

though I cannot sum them up. [p]
16 I come because of the mighty acts of the Lord God;
I will proclaim Your righteousness, Yours alone. [q]

17 God, You have taught me from my youth, and I still proclaim Your wonderful works. [r] 18 Even when I am old and gray,
God, do not abandon me. [s]
Then I will [A] proclaim Your power to another generation,
Your strength to all who are to come. [t]
19 Your righteousness reaches heaven, God,
You who have done great things;
God, who is like You? [u]
20 You caused me to experience many troubles and misfortunes, [v]
but You will revive me again. [w]
You will bring me up again,
even from the depths of the earth. [x] 21 You will increase my honor and comfort me once again. [y] 22 Therefore, I will praise You with a harp for Your faithfulness, my God;
I will sing to You with a lyre,
Holy One of Israel. [z]
23 My lips will shout for joy
when I sing praise to You because You have redeemed me. [a] 24 Therefore, my tongue will proclaim Your righteousness all day long,
for those who seek my harm
will be disgraced and confounded. [b]

A Prayer for the King

Solomonic. [a]

72 God, give Your justice to the king and Your righteousness to the king’s son. [b] 2 He will judge Your people with righteousness and Your afflicted ones with justice. [c] 3 May the mountains bring prosperity [A] to the people and the hills, righteousness. [d] 4 May he vindicate the afflicted among the people, help the poor,
and crush the oppressor. [e]

5 May he continue [f] while the sun endures and as long as the moon, throughout all generations. [g] 6 May he be like rain that falls on the cut grass, like spring showers that water the earth. [h] 7 May the righteous [i] flourish in his days and prosperity [B] abound until the moon is no more. [j]

8 May he rule from sea to sea and from the Euphrates
to the ends of the earth. [k] 9 May desert tribes kneel before him and his enemies lick the dust. [l]
10 May the kings of Tarshish and the coasts and islands bring tribute, the kings of Sheba and Seba offer gifts. [m] 11 Let all kings bow down to him,
all nations serve him. [n]

12 For he will rescue the poor who cry out and the afflicted who have no helper. [o] 13 He will have pity on the poor and helpless and save the lives of the poor. [p] 14 He will redeem them from oppression and violence, for their lives are [C] precious [D] in his sight. [q]

15 May he live long!
May gold from Sheba be given to him.

May prayer be offered for him continually,
and may he be blessed all day long. [r] 16 May there be plenty of grain in the land;
may it wave on the tops of the mountains.
May its crops be like Lebanon.
May people flourish in the cities like the grass of the field. [s] 17 May his name endure forever;
as long as the sun shines,
may his fame increase.
May all nations be blessed by him
and call him blessed. [t]

18 May the LORD God, the God of Israel, who alone does wonders, be praised. [u] 19 May His glorious name be praised forever;
the whole earth is filled with His glory. [v] •Amen and amen.
20 The prayers of David son of Jesse are concluded. [w]

BOOK III

(Psalms 73–89)

God’s Ways Vindicated

A psalm of •Asaph . [a]

73 God is indeed good to Israel, to the pure in heart. [b]
2 But as for me, my feet almost slipped;
my steps nearly went astray. [c]
3 For I envied the arrogant;
I saw the prosperity of the wicked. [d]

4 They have an easy time until they die, [A] and their bodies are well fed. [B, e] 5 They are not in trouble like others;
they are not afflicted like most people. [f]
6 Therefore, pride is their necklace, and violence covers them like a garment. [g] 7 Their eyes bulge out from fatness;
the imaginations of their hearts run wild. [h]
8 They mock, and they speak maliciously;
they arrogantly threaten oppression. [i] 9 They set their mouths against heaven, and their tongues strut across the earth. [j] 10 Therefore His people turn to them [C] and drink in their overflowing words. [D, k] 11 The wicked say, “How can God know?
Does the •Most High know everything? ” [l]
12 Look at them — the wicked!
They are always at ease,
and they increase their wealth. [m]

13 Did I purify my heart and wash my hands in innocence for nothing? [n] 14 For I am afflicted all day long and punished every morning. [o]
15 If I had decided to say these things aloud,
I would have betrayed Your people. [E, p] 16 When I tried to understand all this,
it seemed hopeless [F, q]
17 until I entered God’s sanctuary.

Then I understood their destiny. [r]
18 Indeed, You put them in slippery places;
You make them fall into ruin. [s]
19 How suddenly they become a desolation!
They come to an end, swept away by terrors. [t]
20 Like one waking from a dream,
Lord, when arising, You will despise their image. [u]

21 When I became embittered and my innermost being [G] was wounded, [v] 22 I was stupid and didn't understand;
I was an unthinking animal toward You. [w]
23 Yet I am always with You;
You hold my right hand. [x]
24 You guide me with Your counsel, and afterward You will take me up in glory. [H, y]
25 Who do I have in heaven but You?
And I desire nothing on earth but You. [z]
26 My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength [I] of my heart,
my portion forever. [a] 27 Those far from You will certainly perish;
You destroy all who are unfaithful to You. [b]
28 But as for me, God's presence is my good.
I have made the Lord GOD my refuge,
so I can tell about all You do. [c]

Prayer for Israel

A • Maskil of •Asaph . [a]

74 Why have You rejected us forever, God?
Why does Your anger burn against the sheep of Your pasture? [b] 2 Remember Your congregation, which You purchased long ago
and redeemed as the tribe for Your own possession. [c]
Remember Mount •Zion where You dwell. [d]
3 Make Your way [A] to the everlasting ruins, to all that the enemy has destroyed in the sanctuary. [e] 4 Your adversaries roared in the meeting place where You met with us. [B]
They set up their emblems as signs. [f]
5 It was like men in a thicket of trees, wielding axes, [g]
6 then smashing all the carvings with hatchets and picks. [h] 7 They set Your sanctuary on fire;
they utterly [C] desecrated
the dwelling place of Your name. [i] 8 They said in their hearts,
"Let us oppress them relentlessly."
They burned down every place throughout the land where God met with us. [D, j] 9 There are no signs for us to see.
There is no longer a prophet.
And none of us knows how long this will last. [k]
10 God, how long will the enemy mock?
Will the foe insult Your name forever? [l]
11 Why do You hold back Your hand?
Stretch out [E] Your right hand and destroy them! [m]

12 God my King is from ancient times, performing saving acts on the earth. [n]
13 You divided the sea with Your strength;
You smashed the heads of the sea monsters
in the waters; [o]

14 You crushed the heads of •Leviathan ;
You fed him to the creatures of the desert. [p]
15 You opened up springs and streams; [q]
You dried up ever-flowing rivers. [r]
16 The day is Yours, also the night;
You established the moon and the sun. [s]
17 You set all the boundaries of the earth;
You made summer and winter. [t]

18 Remember this: the enemy has mocked •Yahweh , and a foolish people has insulted Your name. [u] 19 Do not give the life of Your dove to beasts; [v]
do not forget the lives of Your poor people forever. [w] 20 Consider the covenant, [x]
for the dark places of the land are full of violence. [y] 21 Do not let the oppressed turn away in shame;
let the poor and needy praise Your name. [z]
22 Rise up, God, defend Your cause! [a] Remember the insults that fools bring against You all day long. [b] 23 Do not forget the clamor of Your adversaries, the tumult of Your opponents that goes up constantly. [c]

God Judges the Wicked

For the choir director: “Do Not Destroy.” [a] A psalm of •Asaph . [b] A song.

75 We give thanks to You, God;
we give thanks to You, for Your name is near.
People tell about Your wonderful works. [c]

2 “When I choose a time,
I will judge fairly. [d]
3 When the earth and all its inhabitants shake,
I am the One who steadies its pillars. [e]

• Selah

4 I say to the boastful, ‘Do not boast,’ and to the wicked, ‘Do not lift up your •horn . [f] 5 Do not lift up your horn against heaven or speak arrogantly.’ ” [g]

6 Exaltation does not come from the east, the west, or the desert,
7 for God is the Judge:
He brings down one and exalts another. [h]
8 For there is a cup in the LORD’s hand, full of wine blended with spices, and He pours from it.
All the wicked of the earth will drink, draining it to the dregs. [i]

9 As for me, I will tell about Him forever;
I will sing praise to the God of Jacob. [j]

10 “I will cut off all the horns of the wicked, [k] but the horns of the righteous will be lifted up.” [l]

God, the Powerful Judge

For the choir director: with stringed instruments. A psalm of •Asaph . [a] A song.

76 God is known in Judah;
His name is great in Israel. [b]
2 His tent is in Salem, [c]
His dwelling place in •Zion . [d]
3 There He shatters the bow's flaming arrows, the shield, the sword, and the weapons of war. [e]

• Selah

4 You are resplendent and majestic coming down from the mountains of prey. [f] 5 The brave-hearted have been plundered;
they have slipped into their final sleep.
None of the warriors was able to lift a hand. [g]
6 At Your rebuke, God of Jacob, both chariot and horse lay still. [h]

7 And You — You are to be •feared . [A]
When You are angry,
who can stand before You? [i]
8 From heaven You pronounced judgment.
The earth feared and grew quiet [j] 9 when God rose up to judge and to save all the lowly of the earth. [k]

Selah

10 Even human wrath will praise You;
You will clothe Yourself with their remaining wrath. [B, l]

11 Make and keep your vows to the LORD your God; [m]
let all who are around Him bring tribute to the awe-inspiring One. [C, n]
12 He humbles the spirit of leaders;
He is feared by the kings of the earth. [o]

Confidence in a Time of Crisis

For the choir director: according to Jeduthun. Of •Asaph . [a] A psalm.

77 I cry aloud to God, aloud to God, and He will hear me. [b]
2 I sought the Lord in my day of trouble.
My hands were continually lifted up all night long;
I refused to be comforted. [c]
3 I think of God; I groan;
I meditate; my spirit becomes weak. [d]

• Selah

4 You have kept me from closing my eyes;
I am troubled and cannot speak. [e]
5 I consider days of old,
years long past. [f]
6 At night I remember my music;
I meditate in my heart, and my spirit ponders. [g]

7 "Will the Lord reject forever and never again show favor? [h]
8 Has His faithful love ceased forever?
Is His promise at an end for all generations? [i]
9 Has God forgotten to be gracious?
Has He in anger withheld His compassion? " [j]

Selah

10 So I say, "I am grieved [A] that the right hand of the •Most High has changed." [k] 11 I will remember the LORD's works;
yes, I will remember Your ancient wonders. [l] 12 I will reflect on all You have done and meditate on Your actions. [m]

13 God, Your way is holy.
What god is great like God? [n]
14 You are the God who works wonders;
You revealed Your strength among the peoples. [o]
15 With power You redeemed Your people,

the descendants of Jacob and Joseph. [p]

Selah

16 The waters saw You, God.
The waters saw You; they trembled.
Even the depths shook. [q]
17 The clouds poured down water.
The storm clouds thundered;
Your arrows flashed back and forth. [r]
18 The sound of Your thunder was in the whirlwind;
lightning lit up the world. [s]
The earth shook and quaked. [t]
19 Your way went through the sea and Your path through the great waters, but Your footprints were unseen. [u] 20 You led Your people like a flock [v]
by the hand of Moses and Aaron. [w]

Lessons from Israel’s Past

A • Maskil of •Asaph . [a]

78 My people, hear my instruction;
listen to what I say. [b]
2 I will declare wise sayings;
I will speak mysteries from the past [c] — 3 things we have heard and known and that our fathers have passed down to us. [d] 4 We must not hide them from their children, but must tell a future generation
the praises of the LORD,
His might, and the wonderful works
He has performed. [e]
5 He established a •testimony in Jacob and set up a law in Israel, which He commanded our fathers to teach to their children [f] 6 so that a future generation — children yet to be born — might know.
They were to rise and tell their children [g] 7 so that they might put their confidence in God and not forget God's works,
but keep His commands. [h]
8 Then they would not be like their fathers,
a stubborn and rebellious generation,
a generation whose heart was not loyal and whose spirit was not faithful to God. [i]

9 The Ephraimite archers turned back on the day of battle. [j] 10 They did not keep God's covenant and refused to live by His law. [k] 11 They forgot what He had done,
the wonderful works He had shown them. [l] 12 He worked wonders in the sight of their fathers in the land of Egypt, the region of Zoan. [m] 13 He split the sea and brought them across;
the water stood firm like a wall. [n]
14 He led them with a cloud by day and with a fiery light throughout the night. [o] 15 He split rocks in the wilderness and gave them drink as abundant as the depths. [p] 16 He brought streams out of the stone and made water flow down like rivers. [q]

17 But they continued to sin against Him, rebelling in the desert against the •Most High. [r] 18 They deliberately [A] tested God, demanding the food they craved. [s]
19 They spoke against God, saying,
“Is God able to provide food in the wilderness?
20 Look! He struck the rock and water gushed out;
torrents overflowed. [t]
But can He also provide bread or furnish meat for His people? ” [u] 21 Therefore, the LORD heard and became furious;
then fire broke out against Jacob,
and anger flared up against Israel [v] 22 because they did not believe God or rely on His salvation. [w] 23 He gave a command to the clouds above and opened the doors of heaven. [x]
24 He rained manna for them to eat;
He gave them grain from heaven. [y]
25 People [B] ate the bread of angels. [C]
He sent them an abundant supply of food. [z]
26 He made the east wind blow in the skies and drove the south wind by His might. [a] 27 He rained meat on them like dust, and winged birds like the sand of the seas.
28 He made them fall in His camp,
all around His tent. [b, D] [c] 29 They ate and were completely satisfied, for He gave them what they craved. [d] 30 Before they had satisfied their desire,
while the food was still in their mouths,

31 God’s anger flared up against them,
and He killed some of their best men.
He struck down Israel’s choice young men. [e]

32 Despite all this, they kept sinning and did not believe His wonderful works. [f] 33 He made their days end in futility, their years in sudden disaster. [g] 34 When He killed some of them,
the rest began to seek Him;
they repented and searched for God. [h] 35 They remembered that God was their rock, the Most High God, their Redeemer. [i] 36 But they deceived Him with their mouths, they lied to Him with their tongues, [j] 37 their hearts were insincere toward Him, and they were unfaithful to His covenant. [k]
38 Yet He was compassionate;
He •atoned for [E] their •guilt
and did not destroy them.
He often turned His anger aside and did not unleash [F] all His wrath. [l] 39 He remembered that they were only flesh,
a wind that passes and does not return. [m]

40 How often they rebelled against Him
in the wilderness
and grieved Him in the desert.
41 They constantly tested God [n]
and provoked the Holy One of Israel. [o] 42 They did not remember His power shown on the day He redeemed them from the foe, [p] 43 when He performed His miraculous signs in Egypt and His wonders in the region of Zoan. [q] 44 He turned their rivers into blood, and they could not drink from their streams. [r] 45 He sent among them swarms of flies, [s] which fed on them,

and frogs, which devastated them. [t]
46 He gave their crops to the caterpillar and the fruit of their labor to the locust. [u] 47 He killed their vines with hail and their sycamore fig trees with a flood.
48 He handed over their livestock to hail and their cattle to lightning bolts. [v] 49 He sent His burning anger against them:
fury, indignation, and calamity —
a band of deadly messengers. [G, w]
50 He cleared a path for His anger.
He did not spare them from death
but delivered their lives to the plague. [x] 51 He struck all the firstborn [y] in Egypt, the first progeny of the tents of Ham. [z, a] 52 He led His people out like sheep and guided them like a flock in the wilderness. [b] 53 He led them safely, and they were not afraid;
but the sea covered their enemies. [c] 54 He brought them to His holy land, to the mountain His right hand acquired. [d]
55 He drove out nations before them. [e]
He apportioned their inheritance by lot and settled the tribes of Israel in their tents. [f]

56 But they rebelliously tested the Most High God, for they did not keep His decrees. [g] 57 They treacherously turned away like their fathers;
they became warped like a faulty bow. [h] 58 They enraged Him with their •high places and provoked His jealousy with their carved images. [i] 59 God heard and became furious;
He completely rejected Israel. [j]
60 He abandoned the tabernacle at Shiloh, the tent where He resided among men. [H, k] 61 He gave up His strength [l] to captivity and His splendor to the hand of a foe. [m] 62 He surrendered His people to the sword because He was enraged with His heritage. [n] 63 Fire consumed His chosen young men, and His young women had no wedding songs. [I, o] 64 His priests fell by the sword,

but the [J] widows could not lament. [p, q]

65 Then the Lord awoke as if from sleep, like a warrior from the effects of wine. [r]
66 He beat back His foes;
He gave them lasting shame. [s]
67 He rejected the tent of Joseph and did not choose the tribe of Ephraim.
68 He chose instead the tribe of Judah,
Mount •Zion , which He loved. [t]
69 He built His sanctuary like the heights, [u] like the earth that He established forever. [v] 70 He chose David His servant and took him from the sheepfolds; [w] 71 He brought him from tending ewes to be shepherd over His people Jacob — over Israel, His inheritance. [x] 72 He shepherded them with a pure heart and guided them with his skillful hands. [y]

Faith amid Confusion

A psalm of •Asaph . [a]

79 God, the nations have invaded Your inheritance, desecrated Your holy temple,
and turned Jerusalem into ruins. [b] 2 They gave the corpses of Your servants to the birds of the sky for food,
the flesh of Your godly ones to the beasts of the earth. [c] 3 They poured out their blood like water all around Jerusalem, and there was no one to bury them. [d] 4 We have become an object of reproach to our neighbors,
a source of mockery and ridicule
to those around us. [e]

5 How long, •Yahweh ? Will You be angry forever?
Will Your jealousy keep burning like fire? [f]
6 Pour out Your wrath on the nations that don't acknowledge You, on the kingdoms that don't call on Your name, [g] 7 for they have devoured Jacob and devastated his homeland. [h]
8 Do not hold past sins [A] against us;
let Your compassion come to us quickly,
for we have become weak. [i]

9 God of our salvation, help us [j] — for the glory of Your name.
Deliver us and •atone for [B] our sins,
because of Your name. [k]
10 Why should the nations ask,
"Where is their God? " [l]
Before our eyes,
let vengeance for the shed blood of Your servants be known among the nations. [m] 11 Let the groans of the prisoners reach You;
according to Your great power,

preserve those condemned to die. [n]

12 Pay back sevenfold to our neighbors [o]
the reproach they have hurled at You, Lord. [p] 13 Then we, Your people, the sheep of Your pasture, [q] will thank You forever;
we will declare Your praise to generation after generation. [r]

A Prayer for Restoration

For the choir director: according to “The Lilies.” [a] A testimony of •Asaph . [b] A psalm.

80 Listen, Shepherd of Israel, who leads Joseph like a flock; [c]
You who sit enthroned on the •cherubim , [d] rise up [e]
2 before Ephraim,
Benjamin, and Manasseh. [f, g]
Rally Your power and come to save us. [h] 3 Restore us, God;
look on us with favor,
and we will be saved. [i]

4 LORD God of •Hosts ,
how long will You be angry with Your people's prayers? [j] 5 You fed them the bread of tears and gave them a full measure [A]
of tears to drink. [k]
6 You make us quarrel with our neighbors;
our enemies make fun of us. [l]
7 Restore us, God of Hosts;
look on us with favor, and we will be saved. [m]

8 You uprooted a vine from Egypt;
You drove out the nations and planted it. [n]
9 You cleared a place for it;
it took root and filled the land. [o]
10 The mountains were covered by its shade, and the mighty cedars [B] with its branches. [p] 11 It sent out sprouts toward the Sea [q]
and shoots toward the River. [r, s]

12 Why have You broken down its walls
so that all who pass by pick its fruit? [t] 13 The boar from the forest tears it and creatures of the field feed on it. [u]
14 Return, God of Hosts. [v]
Look down from heaven and see;

take care of this vine,
15 the root [C] Your right hand has planted,
the shoot [D] that You made strong for Yourself. [w] 16 It was cut down and burned up; [E]
they [F] perish at the rebuke of Your countenance. [x] 17 Let Your hand be with the man at Your right hand, with the son of man
You have made strong for Yourself. [y] 18 Then we will not turn away from You;
revive us, and we will call on Your name. [z]
19 Restore us, •Yahweh , the God of Hosts; [a] look on us with favor, and we will be saved. [b]

A Call to Obedience

For the choir director: on the • Gittith . Of •Asaph . [a] 81 Sing for joy to God our strength;

shout in triumph to the God of Jacob. [b] 2 Lift up a song — play the tambourine, the melodious lyre, and the harp. [c] 3 Blow the horn on the day of our feasts [A, d] during the new moon [e]
and during the full moon.
4 For this is a statute for Israel, a judgment of the God of Jacob. [f] 5 He set it up as an ordinance for Joseph when He went throughout [g] the land of Egypt. [h]

I heard an unfamiliar language:
6 "I relieved his shoulder from the burden;
his hands were freed from carrying the basket. [i] 7 You called out in distress, and I rescued you;
I answered you from the thundercloud. [j]
I tested you at the waters of Meribah. [k]

• Selah

8 Listen, My people, and I will admonish you.
Israel, if you would only listen to Me! [l]
9 There must not be a strange god among you;
you must not bow down to a foreign god. [m]
10 I am •Yahweh your God, who brought you up from the land of Egypt. [n]
Open your mouth wide, and I will fill it. [o]

11 "But My people did not listen to Me;
Israel did not obey Me. [p]
12 So I gave them over to their stubborn hearts to follow their own plans. [q] 13 If only My people would listen to Me and Israel would follow My ways, [r] 14 I would quickly subdue their enemies and turn My hand against their foes." [s] 15 Those who hate the LORD would pretend submission to Him; [t] their doom would last forever. [u] 16 But He would feed Israel [B] with the best wheat.

"I would satisfy you with honey from the rock." [v]

A Plea for Righteous Judgment

A psalm of •Asaph . [a]

82 God has taken His place in the divine assembly;
He judges among the gods: [A, b]
2 “How long will you judge unjustly and show partiality to the wicked? [c]

• Selah

3 Provide justice for the needy and the fatherless;
uphold the rights of the oppressed and the destitute. [d] 4 Rescue the poor and needy;
save them from the power of the wicked.” [e]

5 They do not know or understand;
they wander in darkness. [f]
All the foundations of the earth are shaken. [g]

6 I said, “You are gods; [h]
you are all sons of the •Most High. [i] 7 However, you will die like men and fall like any other ruler.” [j]

8 Rise up, God, judge the earth,
for all the nations belong to You. [k]

Prayer against Enemies

A song. A psalm of •Asaph . [a]

83 God, do not keep silent.
Do not be deaf, God; do not be idle. [b]
2 See how Your enemies make an uproar;
those who hate You have acted arrogantly. [A, c] 3 They devise clever schemes against Your people;
they conspire against Your treasured ones. [d] 4 They say, “Come, let us wipe them out as a nation
so that Israel’s name will no longer be remembered.” [e] 5 For they have conspired with one mind;
they form an alliance [B] against You [f] —
6 the tents of Edom and the Ishmaelites, [g]
Moab and the Hagrites, [h]
7 Gebal, Ammon, and Amalek, [i]
Philistia with the inhabitants of Tyre. [j]
8 Even Assyria has joined them;
they lend support [C] to the sons of Lot. [k, l]

• Selah

9 Deal with them as You did with Midian, [m] as You did with Sisera and Jabin at the Kishon River. [n] 10 They were destroyed at En-dor;
they became manure for the ground. [o]
11 Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeeb, [p] and all their tribal leaders like Zebah and Zalmunna, [q]
12 who said, “Let us seize God’s pastures for ourselves.” [r]

13 Make them like tumbleweed, my God, like straw before the wind. [s] 14 As fire burns a forest,
as a flame blazes through mountains, [t] 15 so pursue them with Your tempest and terrify them with Your storm. [u] 16 Cover their faces with shame
so that they will seek Your name •Yahweh . [v] 17 Let them be put to shame and terrified forever;

let them perish in disgrace. [w] 18 May they know that You alone — whose name is Yahweh — are the •Most High over all the earth. [x]

Longing for God’s House

For the choir director: on the • Gittith . [a] A psalm of the sons of Korah.

84 How lovely is Your dwelling place,
LORD of •Hosts . [b]
2 I long and yearn
for the courts of the LORD;
my heart and flesh cry out for [A] the living God. [c]

3 Even a sparrow finds a home, and a swallow, a nest for herself where she places her young — near Your altars, LORD of Hosts,
my King and my God. [d] 4 How happy are those who reside in Your house, who praise You continually. [e]

• Selah

5 Happy are the people whose strength is in You, whose hearts are set on pilgrimage. [f]
6 As they pass through the Valley of Baca, [B]
they make it a source of springwater;
even the autumn rain will cover it with blessings. [C, g] 7 They go from strength to strength;
each appears before God in •Zion . [h]

8 LORD God of Hosts, hear my prayer;
listen, God of Jacob. [i]

Selah

9 Consider our shield, [j] God; [k]
look on the face of Your anointed one. [l]

10 Better a day in Your courts than a thousand anywhere else.
I would rather be at the door of the house of my God than to live in the tents of wicked people. [m] 11 For the LORD God is a sun and shield. [n]
The LORD gives grace and glory;
He does not withhold the good from those who live with integrity. [o]

12 Happy is the person who trusts in You, LORD of Hosts! p

Restoration of Favor

For the choir director. A psalm of the sons of Korah.

85 LORD, You showed favor to Your land; [a]
You restored Jacob's prosperity. [A, b]
2 You took away Your people's •guilt ;
You covered all their sin. [c]

• Selah

3 You withdrew all Your fury;
You turned from Your burning anger. [d]

4 Return to us, God of our salvation, and abandon Your displeasure with us. [e]
5 Will You be angry with us forever?
Will You prolong Your anger for all generations? [f]
6 Will You not revive us again
so that Your people may rejoice in You? [g] 7 Show us Your faithful love, LORD, and give us Your salvation. [h]

8 I will listen to what God will say; surely the LORD will declare peace to His people, His godly ones, and not let them go back to foolish ways. [i] 9 His salvation is very near those who •fear Him, so that glory may dwell in our land. [j]

10 Faithful love and truth will join together;
righteousness and peace will embrace. [k] 11 Truth will spring up from the earth, and righteousness will look down from heaven. [l] 12 Also, the LORD will provide what is good,
and our land will yield its crops. [m] 13 Righteousness will go before Him to prepare the way for His steps. [n]

Lament and Petition

A Davidic prayer.

86 Listen, LORD, and answer me,
for I am poor and needy. [a] 2 Protect my life, for I am faithful. [b]
You are my God; save Your servant who trusts in You. [c]
3 Be gracious to me, Lord,
for I call to You all day long. [d] 4 Bring joy to Your servant's life, because I turn to You, Lord. [e]

5 For You, Lord, are kind and ready to forgive, [f] rich in faithful love to all who call on You. [g] 6 LORD, hear my prayer;
listen to my plea for mercy. [h]
7 I call on You in the day of my distress, for You will answer me. [i]

8 Lord, there is no one like You among the gods, and there are no works like Yours. [j] 9 All the nations You have made will come and bow down before You, Lord, and will honor Your name. [k]
10 For You are great and perform wonders;
You alone are God. [l]

11 Teach me Your way, •Yahweh , and I will live by Your truth.
Give me an undivided mind to •fear Your name. [m]
12 I will praise You with all my heart, Lord my God, and will honor Your name forever. [n] 13 For Your faithful love for me is great, and You deliver my life from the depths of •Sheol . [o]

14 God, arrogant people have attacked me;
a gang of ruthless men seeks my life.
They have no regard for You. [p]
15 But You, Lord, are a compassionate and gracious God, slow to anger and rich in faithful love and truth. [q]
16 Turn to me and be gracious to me.

Give Your strength to Your servant;
save the son of Your female servant. [r] 17 Show me a sign of Your goodness;
my enemies will see and be put to shame
because You, LORD, have helped and comforted me. [s]

Zion, the City of God

A psalm of the sons of Korah. A song.

87 His foundation is on the holy mountains. [a]
2 The LORD loves the gates of •Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob. [b] 3 Glorious things are said about you, city of God. [c]

• Selah

4 "I will mention those who know Me:
•Rahab , Babylon, Philistia, Tyre, and •Cush — each one was born there." [d]
5 And it will be said of Zion,
"This one and that one were born in her."
The •Most High Himself will establish her. [e] 6 When He registers the peoples, the LORD will record,
"This one was born there." [f]

Selah

7 Singers and dancers alike will say,
"My whole source of joy is [A] in you." [g]

A Cry of Desperation

A song. A psalm of the sons of Korah. For the choir director: according to Mahalath Leannoth. A • Maskil of Heman the Ezrahite. [a]

88 LORD, God of my salvation,
I cry out before You day and night. [b]
2 May my prayer reach Your presence;
listen to my cry. [c]

3 For I have had enough troubles, and my life is near •Sheol . [d]
4 I am counted among those going down to the •Pit . [e]
I am like a man without strength, [f]
5 abandoned [A] among the dead.
I am like the slain lying in the grave, [g]
whom You no longer remember, and who are cut off from Your care. [B, h]

6 You have put me in the lowest part of the Pit, in the darkest places, in the depths. [i] 7 Your wrath weighs heavily on me; [j]
You have overwhelmed me with all Your waves. [k]

• Selah

8 You have distanced my friends from me;
You have made me repulsive to them. [l]
I am shut in and cannot go out.
9 My eyes are worn out from crying. [m]
LORD, I cry out to You all day long; [n]
I spread out my hands to You. [o]

10 Do You work wonders for the dead?
Do departed spirits rise up to praise You? [p]

Selah

11 Will Your faithful love be declared in the grave,
Your faithfulness in •Abaddon ? [q]
12 Will Your wonders be known in the darkness or Your righteousness in the land of oblivion? [r]

13 But I call to You for help, LORD;
in the morning my prayer meets You. [s]

14 LORD, why do You reject me? t
Why do You hide Your face from me? u
15 From my youth,
I have been afflicted and near death.
I suffer Your horrors; I am desperate. v
16 Your wrath sweeps over me;
Your terrors destroy me. w
17 They surround me like water all day long;
they close in on me from every side. x 18 You have distanced loved one and neighbor from me; darkness is my only friend. C, y

Perplexity about God’s Promises

A • Maskil of Ethan the Ezrahite. [a]

89 I will sing about the LORD's faithful love forever; [b]
I will proclaim Your faithfulness to all generations with my mouth. [c]
2 For I will declare,
"Faithful love is built up forever;
You establish Your faithfulness in the heavens." [d]

3 The LORD said,
"I have made a covenant with My chosen one;
I have sworn an oath to David My servant:
4 'I will establish your offspring forever and build up your throne for all generations.' " [e]

• Selah

5 LORD, the heavens praise Your wonders [f] —
Your faithfulness also — in the assembly of the holy ones. [g]
6 For who in the skies can compare with the LORD?
Who among the heavenly beings [A] is like the LORD? [h]
7 God is greatly •feared in the council of the holy ones, more awe-inspiring than [B] all who surround Him. [i] 8 LORD God of •Hosts ,
who is strong like You, LORD? [j]
Your faithfulness surrounds You.
9 You rule the raging sea;
when its waves surge, You still them. [k]
10 You crushed •Rahab like one who is slain; [l]
You scattered Your enemies with Your powerful arm. [m] 11 The heavens are Yours; the earth also is Yours.
The world and everything in it — You founded them. [n]
12 North and south — You created them. [o]
Tabor and Hermon shout for joy at Your name. [p]
13 You have a mighty arm;
Your hand is powerful;
Your right hand is lifted high. [q]
14 Righteousness and justice are the foundation of Your throne; [r]

faithful love and truth go before You. [s] 15 Happy are the people who know the joyful shout; [t]
•Yahweh , they walk in the light of Your presence. [u]
16 They rejoice in Your name all day long,
and they are exalted by Your righteousness. [v] 17 For You are their magnificent strength; [w]
by Your favor our •horn is exalted. [x] 18 Surely our shield [y] belongs to the LORD, our king to the Holy One of Israel. [z]

19 You once spoke in a vision to Your loyal ones and said: “I have granted help to a warrior;
I have exalted one chosen [C] from the people. [a] 20 I have found David My servant;
I have anointed him with My sacred oil. [b]
21 My hand will always be with him, and My arm will strengthen him. [c] 22 The enemy will not afflict [D] him;
no wicked man will oppress him. [d]
23 I will crush his foes before him and strike those who hate him. [e] 24 My faithfulness and love will be with him, and through My name
his horn will be exalted. [f]
25 I will extend his power to the sea and his right hand to the rivers. [g] 26 He will call to Me, ‘You are my Father, [h]
my God, the rock of my salvation.’ [i] 27 I will also make him My firstborn, greatest of the kings of the earth. [j] 28 I will always preserve My faithful love for him, and My covenant with him will endure. [k] 29 I will establish his line forever, his throne as long as heaven lasts. [E, l] 30 If his sons forsake My instruction and do not live by My ordinances, [m]

31 if they dishonor My statutes and do not keep My commands, [n] 32 then I will call their rebellion to account with the rod, their sin with blows. [o]
33 But I will not withdraw My faithful love from him or betray My faithfulness. [p] 34 I will not violate My covenant or change what My lips have said. [q]
35 Once and for all
I have sworn an oath by My holiness;
I will not lie to David. [r]
36 His offspring will continue forever, his throne like the sun before Me, [s] 37 like the moon, established forever,
a faithful witness in the sky.” [t]

Selah

38 But You have spurned and rejected him;
You have become enraged with Your anointed. [u]
39 You have repudiated the covenant with Your servant;
You have completely dishonored his crown. [F, v]
40 You have broken down all his walls;
You have reduced his fortified cities to ruins. [w]
41 All who pass by plunder him; [x]
he has become an object of ridicule to his neighbors. [y]
42 You have lifted high the right hand of his foes;
You have made all his enemies rejoice. [z]
43 You have also turned back his sharp sword and have not let him stand in battle. [a] 44 You have made his splendor [G] cease and have overturned his throne. [b]
45 You have shortened the days of his youth;
You have covered him with shame. [c]

Selah

46 How long, LORD? Will You hide Yourself forever?
Will Your anger keep burning like fire? [d] 47 Remember how short my life is.
Have You created •everyone for nothing? [e]
48 What man can live and never see death?
Who can save himself from the power of •Sheol ? [f]

Selah

49 Lord, where are the former acts of Your faithful love that You swore to David in Your faithfulness? [g] 50 Remember, Lord, the ridicule against Your servants — in my heart I carry abuse from all the peoples — 51 how Your enemies have ridiculed, LORD, how they have ridiculed every step of Your anointed. [h]

52 May the LORD be praised forever.
•Amen and amen. [i]

BOOK IV

(Psalms 90–106)

Eternal God and Mortal Man

A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

90 Lord, You have been our refuge [a]
in every generation. [b]
2 Before the mountains were born, before You gave birth to the earth and the world,
from eternity to eternity, You are God. [c]

3 You return mankind to the dust, saying, “Return, descendants of Adam.” [d] 4 For in Your sight a thousand years are like yesterday that passes by,
like a few hours of the night. [e]
5 You end their lives; [A] they sleep. [f]
They are like grass that grows in the morning — 6 in the morning it sprouts and grows;
by evening it withers and dries up. [g]

7 For we are consumed by Your anger;
we are terrified by Your wrath. [h]
8 You have set our unjust ways before You, our secret sins in the light of Your presence. [i] 9 For all our days ebb away under Your wrath;
we end our years like a sigh. [j] 10 Our lives last [B] seventy years or, if we are strong, eighty years.
Even the best of them are [k] struggle and sorrow;
indeed, they pass quickly and we fly away. [l]
11 Who understands the power of Your anger?
Your wrath matches the fear that is due You. [m]
12 Teach us to number our days carefully so that we may develop wisdom in our hearts. [C, n]

13 LORD — how long?
Turn and have compassion on Your servants. [o]
14 Satisfy us in the morning with Your faithful love so that we may shout with joy and be glad all our days. [p] 15 Make us rejoice for as many days as You have humbled us, for as many years as we have seen adversity. [q]

16 Let Your work be seen by Your servants, and Your splendor by their children. [r] 17 Let the favor of the Lord our God be on us; establish for us the work of our hands —
establish the work of our hands! [s]

The Protection of the Most High

91 The one who lives under the protection of the •Most High dwells in the shadow of the •Almighty . [a]

2 I will say [b] to the LORD, “My refuge and my fortress, my God, in whom I trust.” [c]

3 He Himself will deliver you from the hunter’s net, [d] from the destructive plague.
4 He will cover you with His feathers;
you will take refuge under His wings. [e]
His faithfulness will be a protective shield. [f] 5 You will not fear the terror of the night,
the arrow that flies by day, [g] 6 the plague that stalks in darkness, or the pestilence that ravages at noon. [h] 7 Though a thousand fall at your side and ten thousand at your right hand,
the pestilence will not reach you. [i] 8 You will only see it with your eyes and witness the punishment of the wicked. [j]

9 Because you have made the LORD — my refuge, [k]
the Most High — your dwelling place, [l] 10 no harm will come to you;
no plague will come near your tent. [m] 11 For He will give His angels orders concerning you,
to protect you in all your ways. [n]
12 They will support you with their hands
so that you will not strike your foot against a stone. [o] 13 You will tread on the lion and the cobra;
you will trample the young lion and the serpent. [p]

14 Because he is lovingly devoted to Me,
I will deliver him;
I will protect him because he knows My name. [q]
15 When he calls out to Me, I will answer him;
I will be with him in trouble.
I will rescue him and give him honor. [r]

16 I will satisfy him with a long life [s] and show him My salvation. [t]

God’s Love and Faithfulness

A psalm. A song for the Sabbath day.

92 It is good to praise •Yahweh , to sing praise to Your name, •Most High, [a] 2 to declare Your faithful love in the morning and Your faithfulness at night, [b] 3 with a ten-stringed harp and the music of a lyre. [c]

4 For You have made me rejoice, LORD,
by what You have done;
I will shout for joy
because of the works of Your hands. [d] 5 How magnificent are Your works, LORD, how profound Your thoughts! [e] 6 A stupid person does not know,
a fool does not understand this: [f]
7 though the wicked sprout like grass and all evildoers flourish,
they will be eternally destroyed. [g]
8 But You, LORD, are exalted forever. [h]
9 For indeed, LORD, Your enemies — indeed, Your enemies will perish;
all evildoers will be scattered. [i] 10 You have lifted up my •horn [j]
like that of a wild ox;
I have been anointed [k] with oil. [l]
11 My eyes look down on my enemies;
my ears hear evildoers when they attack me. [m]

12 The righteous thrive like a palm tree and grow like a cedar tree in Lebanon. [n] 13 Planted in the house of the LORD, they thrive in the courts of our God. [o] 14 They will still bear fruit in old age, healthy and green, [p] 15 to declare: “The LORD is just;
He is my rock,
and there is no unrighteousness in Him.” [q]

God’s Eternal Reign

93 The LORD reigns! He is robed in majesty;
The LORD is robed, enveloped in strength.
The world is firmly established;
it cannot be shaken. [a] 2 Your throne has been established from the beginning; [A]
You are from eternity. [b]
3 The floods have lifted up, LORD,
the floods have lifted up their voice;
the floods lift up their pounding waves. [c] 4 Greater than the roar of many waters —
the mighty breakers of the sea —
the LORD on high is majestic. [d]

5 LORD, Your testimonies are completely reliable; [e] holiness is the beauty of [B] Your house for all the days to come. [f]

The Just Judge

94 LORD, God of vengeance —
God of vengeance, appear. [a] 2 Rise up, Judge of the earth;
repay the proud what they deserve. [b] 3 LORD, how long will the wicked —
how long will the wicked gloat? [c]

4 They pour out arrogant words;
all the evildoers boast. [d]
5 LORD, they crush Your people;
they afflict Your heritage. [e] 6 They kill the widow and the foreigner and murder the fatherless. [f]
7 They say, “The LORD doesn’t see it.
The God of Jacob doesn’t pay attention.” [g]

8 Pay attention, you stupid people!
Fools, when will you be wise? [h]
9 Can the One who shaped the ear not hear, the One who formed the eye not see? [i] 10 The One who instructs nations, the One who teaches man knowledge —
does He not discipline? [j] 11 The LORD knows man’s thoughts;
they are meaningless. [k]

12 LORD, happy is the man You discipline and teach from Your law [l] 13 to give him relief from troubled times until a pit is dug for the wicked. [m] 14 The LORD will not forsake His people or abandon His heritage, [n] 15 for justice will again be righteous, and all the upright in heart will follow [A] it. [o]

16 Who stands up for me against the wicked?
Who takes a stand for me against evildoers? [p]
17 If the LORD had not been my helper,

I would soon rest in the silence of death. [q]
18 If I say, “My foot is slipping,”
Your faithful love will support me, LORD. [r]
19 When I am filled with cares,
Your comfort brings me joy. [s]

20 Can a corrupt throne — one that creates trouble by law — become Your ally? [t]
21 They band together against the life of the righteous and condemn the innocent to death. [u] 22 But the LORD is my refuge;
my God is the rock of my protection. [v] 23 He will pay them back for their sins and destroy them for their evil.
The LORD our God will destroy them. [w]

Worship and Warning

95 Come, let us shout joyfully to the LORD, shout triumphantly to the rock of our salvation! [a] 2 Let us enter His presence with thanksgiving;
let us shout triumphantly to Him in song. [b]

3 For the LORD is a great God,
a great King above all gods. [c] 4 The depths of the earth are in His hand, and the mountain peaks are His. [d]
5 The sea is His; He made it.
His hands formed the dry land. [e]

6 Come, let us worship and bow down;
let us kneel before the LORD our Maker. [f]
7 For He is our God,
and we are the people of His pasture,
the sheep under His care. [A, g]

Today, if you hear His voice: [h]
8 Do not harden your hearts as at Meribah, as on that day at Massah in the wilderness [i] 9 where your fathers tested Me;
they tried Me, though they had seen what I did. [j] 10 For 40 years I was disgusted with that generation;
I said, “They are a people whose hearts go astray;
they do not know My ways.” [k]
11 So I swore in My anger,
“They will not enter My rest.” [l]

Psalm 96 [a]

King of the Earth

1 Sing a new song to the LORD;
sing to the LORD, all the earth. [b]
2 Sing to •Yahweh , praise His name;
proclaim His salvation from day to day. [c]
3 Declare His glory among the nations,
His wonderful works among all peoples. [d]

4 For the LORD is great and is highly praised;
He is feared above all gods. [e]
5 For all the gods of the peoples are idols, but the LORD made the heavens. [f] 6 Splendor and majesty are before Him;
strength and beauty are in His sanctuary. [g]

7 Ascribe to the LORD, you families of the peoples, ascribe to the LORD glory and strength. [h] 8 Ascribe to Yahweh the glory of His name; [i] bring an offering and enter His courts. [j] 9 Worship the LORD in the splendor of His holiness; [k] tremble before Him, all the earth. [l]

10 Say among the nations: “The LORD reigns. [m]
The world is firmly established; it cannot be shaken. [n]
He judges the peoples fairly.” [o]
11 Let the heavens be glad and the earth rejoice;
let the sea and all that fills it resound. [p]
12 Let the fields and everything in them exult.
Then all the trees of the forest will shout for joy [q]
13 before the LORD, for He is coming — for He is coming to judge the earth.
He will judge the world with righteousness and the peoples with His faithfulness. [r]

The Majestic King

97 The LORD reigns! Let the earth rejoice;
let the many coasts and islands be glad. [a]

2 Clouds and thick darkness surround Him; righteousness and justice are the foundation of His throne. [b] 3 Fire goes before Him and burns up His foes on every side. [c] 4 His lightning lights up the world;
the earth sees and trembles. [d] 5 The mountains melt like wax at the presence of the LORD —
at the presence of the Lord of all the earth. [e]

6 The heavens proclaim His righteousness; [f] all the peoples see His glory. [g]

7 All who serve carved images, those who boast in idols, will be put to shame. [h]
All the gods [i] must worship Him. [j]

8 •Zion hears and is glad,
and the towns [A] of Judah rejoice because of Your judgments, LORD. [k] 9 For You, LORD,
are the •Most High over all the earth;
You are exalted above all the gods. [l]

10 You who love the LORD, hate evil! [m]
He protects the lives of His godly ones; [n]
He rescues them from the power of the wicked. [o]
11 Light dawns [p, B] for the righteous, gladness for the upright in heart. [q] 12 Be glad in •Yahweh , you righteous ones, and praise His holy name. [C, r]

Praise the King

A psalm.

98 Sing a new song to the LORD, [a]
for He has performed wonders;
His right hand and holy arm
have won Him victory. [b]
2 The LORD has made His victory known;
He has revealed His righteousness in the sight of the nations. [c] 3 He has remembered His love and faithfulness to the house of Israel;
all the ends of the earth
have seen our God's victory. [d]

4 Shout to the LORD, all the earth;
be jubilant, shout for joy, and sing. [e] 5 Sing to the LORD with the lyre, with the lyre and melodious song. [f]
6 With trumpets and the blast of the ram's horn shout triumphantly
in the presence of the LORD, our King. [g]

7 Let the sea and all that fills it,
the world and those who live in it, resound. [h]
8 Let the rivers clap their hands;
let the mountains shout together for joy [i] 9 before the LORD,
for He is coming to judge the earth.
He will judge the world righteously and the peoples fairly. [j]

The King Is Holy

99 The LORD reigns! Let the peoples tremble.
He is enthroned above the •cherubim . [a]
Let the earth quake. [b]
2 •Yahweh is great in •Zion ;
He is exalted above all the peoples. [c]
3 Let them praise Your great and awe-inspiring name. [d]
He is holy. [e]

4 The mighty King loves justice.
You have established fairness;
You have administered justice and righteousness in Jacob. [f] 5 Exalt the LORD our God;
bow in worship at His footstool. [g]
He is holy. [h]

6 Moses and Aaron were among His priests; [i]
Samuel also was among those calling on His name.
They called to Yahweh and He answered them. [j]
7 He spoke to them in a pillar of cloud; [k]
they kept His decrees and the statutes He gave them.
8 LORD our God, You answered them.
You were a forgiving God to them, [l] an avenger of their sinful actions. [m]

9 Exalt the LORD our God;
bow in worship at His holy mountain,
for the LORD our God is holy. [n]

Be Thankful

A psalm of thanksgiving.

100 Shout triumphantly to the LORD, all the earth. [a] 2 Serve the LORD with gladness;
come before Him with joyful songs. [b]
3 Acknowledge that •Yahweh is God.
He made us, and we are His [c, d] —
His people, the sheep of His pasture. [e] 4 Enter His gates with thanksgiving [f]
and His courts with praise.
Give thanks to Him and praise His name. [g]
5 For Yahweh is good, and His love is eternal;
His faithfulness endures through all generations.

A Vow of Integrity

A Davidic psalm.

101 I will sing of faithful love and justice;
I will sing praise to You, LORD. [a]
2 I will pay attention to the way of integrity.
When will You come to me?
I will live with a heart of integrity in my house. [b]
3 I will not set anything worthless before my eyes.
I hate the practice of transgression;
it will not cling to me. [c]
4 A devious heart will be far from me;
I will not be involved with [A] evil. [d]

5 I will destroy anyone who secretly slanders his neighbor; [e]
I cannot tolerate anyone with haughty eyes or an arrogant heart. [f] 6 My eyes favor the faithful of the land
so that they may sit down with me.
The one who follows the way of integrity
may serve me. [g]
7 No one who acts deceitfully will live in my palace;
no one who tells lies will remain in my presence. [B, h] 8 Every morning I will destroy all the wicked of the land, eliminating all evildoers from the LORD's city. [i]

Affliction in Light of Eternity

A prayer of an afflicted person who is weak and pours out his lament before the LORD. [a]

102 LORD, hear my prayer;
let my cry for help come before You. [b]
2 Do not hide Your face from me in my day of trouble.
Listen closely to me;
answer me quickly when I call. [c]

3 For my days vanish like smoke, and my bones burn like a furnace. [d]
4 My heart is afflicted, withered like grass; [e]
I even forget to eat my food. [f]
5 Because of the sound of my groaning, my flesh sticks to my bones. [g]
6 I am like a desert owl, [A] like an owl among the ruins. [h]
7 I stay awake; [i]
I am like a solitary bird on a roof.
8 My enemies taunt me all day long;
they ridicule and curse me. [j] 9 I eat ashes like bread and mingle my drinks with tears [k] 10 because of Your indignation and wrath;
for You have picked me up and thrown me aside. [l] 11 My days are like a lengthening shadow, and I wither away like grass. [m]

12 But You, LORD, are enthroned forever; [n]
Your fame endures to all generations. [o]
13 You will rise up and have compassion on •Zion , for it is time to show favor to her —
the appointed time has come. [p] 14 For Your servants take delight in its stones and favor its dust. [q]

15 Then the nations will fear the name of •Yahweh , and all the kings of the earth Your glory, [r]
16 for the LORD will rebuild Zion;
He will appear in His glory. [s]

17 He will pay attention to the prayer of the destitute and will not despise their prayer. [t]

18 This will be written for a later generation, and a newly created people will praise the LORD: [u] 19 He looked down from His holy heights — the LORD gazed out from heaven to earth [v] — 20 to hear a prisoner's groaning, to set free those condemned to die, [B, w] 21 so that they might declare the name of Yahweh in Zion and His praise in Jerusalem, [x] 22 when peoples and kingdoms are assembled to serve the LORD. [y]

23 He has broken my [z] strength in midcourse;
He has shortened my days. [a] 24 I say: "My God, do not take me in the middle of my life! [C]
Your years continue through all generations. [b] 25 Long ago You established the earth, and the heavens are the work of Your hands. [c] 26 They will perish, but You will endure;
all of them will wear out like clothing.
You will change them like a garment, and they will pass away. [d] 27 But You are the same,
and Your years will never end. [e] 28 Your servants' children will dwell securely, and their offspring will be established before You." [f]

The Forgiving God

Davidic.

103 My soul, praise •Yahweh ,
and all that is within me, praise His holy name. [a] 2 My soul, praise the LORD, and do not forget all His benefits. [b]

3 He forgives all your sin; [c]
He heals all your diseases. [d]
4 He redeems your life from the •Pit ; [e]
He crowns you with faithful love and compassion. [f]
5 He satisfies you [A] with goodness; [g]
your youth is renewed like the eagle. [h]

6 The LORD executes acts of righteousness and justice for all the oppressed. [i] 7 He revealed His ways to Moses, [j]
His deeds to the people of Israel. [k]
8 The LORD is compassionate and gracious, slow to anger and rich in faithful love. [l] 9 He will not always accuse us or be angry forever. [m]
10 He has not dealt with us as our sins deserve or repaid us according to our offenses. [n]

11 For as high as the heavens are above the earth, so great is His faithful love toward those who •fear Him. [o] 12 As far as the east is from the west, so far has He removed our transgressions from us. [p] 13 As a father has compassion on his children, so the LORD has compassion on those who fear Him. [q] 14 For He knows what we are made of, remembering that we are dust. [r]

15 As for man, his days are like grass —
he blooms like a flower of the field; [s] 16 when the wind passes over it, it vanishes, and its place is no longer known. [B, t]

17 But from eternity to eternity
the LORD's faithful love is toward those who fear Him, and His righteousness toward the grandchildren [u] 18 of those who keep His covenant, who remember to observe His precepts. [v] 19 The LORD has established His throne in heaven, and His kingdom rules over all. [w]

20 Praise the LORD,
all His angels of great strength,
who do His word,
obedient to His command. [x]
21 Praise the LORD, all His armies,
His servants who do His will. [y]
22 Praise the LORD, all His works in all the places where He rules. [z]
My soul, praise Yahweh!

God the Creator

104 My soul, praise •Yahweh !
LORD my God, You are very great;
You are clothed with majesty and splendor. [a] 2 He wraps Himself in light as if it were a robe, spreading out the sky like a canopy, [b] 3 laying the beams of His palace on the waters above, [c] making the clouds His chariot, [d]
walking on the wings of the wind, [e] 4 and making the winds His messengers, [A] flames of fire His servants. [f]

5 He established the earth on its foundations;
it will never be shaken. [g] 6 You covered it with the deep as if it were a garment;
the waters stood above the mountains. [h]
7 At Your rebuke the waters fled;
at the sound of Your thunder they hurried away [i] — 8 mountains rose and valleys sank [B] — to the place You established for them. [j] 9 You set a boundary they cannot cross;
they will never cover the earth again. [k]

10 He causes the springs to gush into the valleys;
they flow between the mountains. [l]
11 They supply water for every wild beast;
the wild donkeys quench their thirst. [m] 12 The birds of the sky live beside the springs;
they sing among the foliage. [n] 13 He waters the mountains from His palace;
the earth is satisfied by the fruit of Your labor. [o]

14 He causes grass to grow for the livestock and provides crops for man to cultivate, producing food from the earth, [p] 15 wine that makes man’s heart glad — making his face shine with oil — and bread that sustains man’s heart. [q]

16 The trees of the LORD flourish, [C]
the cedars of Lebanon that He planted. [r] 17 There the birds make their nests;
the stork makes its home in the pine trees. [s] 18 The high mountains are for the wild goats;
the cliffs are a refuge for hyraxes. [t]

19 He made the moon to mark the [D] festivals; [E]
the sun knows when to set. [u] 20 You bring darkness, and it becomes night, when all the forest animals stir. [v] 21 The young lions roar for their prey and seek their food from God. [w] 22 The sun rises; they go back and lie down in their dens. [x] 23 Man goes out to his work and to his labor until evening. [y]

24 How countless are Your works, LORD!
In wisdom You have made them all;
the earth is full of Your creatures. [F, z] 25 Here is the sea, vast and wide, teeming with creatures beyond number — living things both large and small. [a] 26 There the ships move about,
and •Leviathan , which You formed to play there. [b]

27 All of them wait for You to give them their food at the right time. [c] 28 When You give it to them,
they gather it;
when You open Your hand,
they are satisfied with good things. [d] 29 When You hide Your face,
they are terrified;

when You take away their breath,
they die and return to the dust. [e] 30 When You send Your breath, [G]
they are created,
and You renew the face of the earth. [f]

31 May the glory of the LORD endure forever;
may the LORD rejoice in His works. [g] 32 He looks at the earth, and it trembles;
He touches the mountains,
and they pour out smoke. [h]
33 I will sing to the LORD all my life;
I will sing praise to my God while I live. [i] 34 May my meditation be pleasing to Him;
I will rejoice in the LORD. [j]
35 May sinners vanish from the earth and wicked people be no more. [k]
My soul, praise Yahweh!
•Hallelujah !

God’s Faithfulness to His People

105 Give thanks to •Yahweh , call on His name; proclaim His deeds among the peoples. [a] 2 Sing to Him, sing praise to Him;
tell about all His wonderful works! [b] 3 Honor His holy name;
let the hearts of those who seek Yahweh rejoice. [c] 4 Search for the LORD and for His strength;
seek His face always. [d]
5 Remember the wonderful works He has done,
His wonders, and the judgments He has pronounced, [A, e]
6 you offspring of Abraham His servant,
Jacob's descendants — His chosen ones. [f]

7 He is the LORD our God;
His judgments govern the whole earth. [g]
8 He remembers His covenant forever, the promise He ordained for a thousand generations [h] — 9 the covenant He made with Abraham, swore [B] to Isaac, [i] 10 and confirmed to Jacob as a decree and to Israel as an everlasting covenant: [j] 11 "I will give the land of Canaan to you as your inherited portion." [k]

12 When they were few in number,
very few indeed,
and temporary residents in Canaan, [l] 13 wandering from nation to nation and from one kingdom to another, [m]
14 He allowed no one to oppress them;
He rebuked kings on their behalf: [n] 15 "Do not touch My anointed ones, [o] or harm My prophets." [p]

16 He called down famine against the land and destroyed the entire food supply. [q]

17 He had sent a man ahead of them —
Joseph, who was sold as a slave. [r]
18 They hurt his feet with shackles;
his neck was put in an iron collar. [s] 19 Until the time his prediction came true,
the word of the LORD tested him. [t] 20 The king sent for him and released him;
the ruler of peoples set him free. [u] 21 He made him master of his household, ruler over all his possessions [v] — 22 binding [w] his officials at will and instructing his elders. [x]

23 Then Israel went to Egypt;
Jacob lived as a foreigner in the land of Ham. [y, z]
24 The LORD [C] made His people very fruitful;
He made them more numerous than their foes, [a] 25 whose hearts He turned to hate His people and to deal deceptively with His servants. [b] 26 He sent Moses His servant, and Aaron, whom He had chosen. [c] 27 They performed His miraculous signs among them, and wonders in the land of Ham. [d, e] 28 He sent darkness, and it became dark — for did they not defy [f] His commands? [g] 29 He turned their water into blood and caused their fish to die. [h] 30 Their land was overrun with frogs, even in their royal chambers. [i] 31 He spoke, and insects came [j] — gnats throughout their country. [k] 32 He gave them hail for rain, and lightning throughout their land. [l] 33 He struck their vines and fig trees and shattered the trees of their territory. [m] 34 He spoke, and locusts came — young locusts without number.

35 They devoured all the vegetation in their land and consumed the produce of their land. [n] 36 He struck all the firstborn in their land, all their first progeny. [o]

37 Then He brought Israel out with silver and gold, and no one among His tribes stumbled. [p] 38 Egypt was glad when they left, for the dread of Israel [D] had fallen on them. [q] 39 He spread a cloud as a covering and gave a fire to light up the night. [r] 40 They asked, and He brought quail and satisfied them with bread from heaven. [s] 41 He opened a rock, and water gushed out;
it flowed like a stream in the desert. [t] 42 For He remembered His holy promise to Abraham His servant. [u]
43 He brought His people out with rejoicing,
His chosen ones with shouts of joy. [v]
44 He gave them the lands of the nations, and they inherited
what other peoples had worked for. [w]

45 All this happened
so that they might keep His statutes and obey His instructions. [x]
•Hallelujah !

Israel's Unfaithfulness to God

106 •Hallelujah !
Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good;
His faithful love endures forever. [a]
2 Who can declare the LORD's mighty acts or proclaim all the praise due Him? [b] 3 How happy are those who uphold justice, who practice righteousness at all times. [c]

4 Remember me, LORD,
when You show favor to Your people. [d]
Come to me with Your salvation
5 so that I may enjoy the prosperity of Your chosen ones,
rejoice in the joy of Your nation,
and boast about Your heritage. [e]

6 Both we and our fathers have sinned;
we have done wrong and have acted wickedly. [f] 7 Our fathers in Egypt did not grasp the significance of Your wonderful works or remember Your many acts of faithful love;
instead, they rebelled by the sea — the •Red Sea. [g]
8 Yet He saved them because of His name, to make His power known. [h]
9 He rebuked the Red Sea, and it dried up;
He led them through the depths as through a desert. [i]
10 He saved them from the hand of the adversary;
He redeemed them from the hand of the enemy. [j] 11 Water covered their foes;
not one of them remained. [k] 12 Then they believed His promises and sang His praise. [l]

13 They soon forgot His works and would not wait for His counsel. [m] 14 They were seized with craving in the wilderness and tested God in the desert. [n]

15 He gave them what they asked for,
but sent a wasting disease among them. [o]

16 In the camp they were envious of Moses and of Aaron, the LORD's holy one. [p] 17 The earth opened up and swallowed Dathan;
it covered the assembly of Abiram. [q] 18 Fire blazed throughout their assembly; flames consumed the wicked. [r]

19 At Horeb they made a calf and worshiped the cast metal image. [s] 20 They exchanged their glory [t, u] for the image of a grass-eating ox. [v] 21 They forgot God their Savior, who did great things in Egypt, [w] 22 wonderful works in the land of Ham, [x] awe-inspiring acts at the Red Sea. [y] 23 So He said He would have destroyed them — if Moses His chosen one had not stood before Him in the breach to turn His wrath away from destroying them. [z]

24 They despised the pleasant land and did not believe His promise. [a] 25 They grumbled in their tents and did not listen to the LORD's voice. [b] 26 So He raised His hand against them with an oath that He would make them fall in the desert [c] 27 and would disperse their descendants [d]
among the nations,
scattering them throughout the lands. [e]

28 They aligned themselves with •Baal of Peor and ate sacrifices offered to lifeless gods. [A, f] 29 They provoked the LORD with their deeds, and a plague broke out against them. [g] 30 But Phinehas stood up and intervened, and the plague was stopped. [h]

31 It was credited to him as righteousness throughout all generations to come. [i]

32 They angered the LORD at the waters of Meribah, and Moses suffered [B] because of them; [j] 33 for they embittered his spirit, [k]
and he spoke rashly with his lips. [l]

34 They did not destroy the peoples as the LORD had commanded them [m] 35 but mingled with the nations and adopted their ways. [n] 36 They served their idols, which became a snare to them. [o]
37 They sacrificed their sons and daughters to demons. [p] 38 They shed innocent blood —
the blood of their sons and daughters whom they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan;
so the land became polluted with blood. [q] 39 They defiled themselves by their actions and prostituted themselves by their deeds. [r]

40 Therefore the LORD's anger burned against His people, and He abhorred His own inheritance. [s] 41 He handed them over to the nations;
those who hated them ruled them. [t] 42 Their enemies oppressed them, and they were subdued under their power. [u] 43 He rescued them many times, but they continued to rebel deliberately and were beaten down by their sin. [v]

44 When He heard their cry,
He took note of their distress, [w]
45 remembered His covenant with them, and relented according to the riches
of His faithful love. [x]

46 He caused them to be pitied before all their captors. [y]

47 Save us, •Yahweh our God, and gather us from the nations,
so that we may give thanks to Your holy name and rejoice in Your praise. [z]

48 May Yahweh, the God of Israel, be praised from everlasting to everlasting. [a] Let all the people say, "•Amen ! "
Hallelujah! [b]

BOOK V

(Psalms 107–150)

Thanksgiving for God's Deliverance

107 Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good;
His faithful love endures forever. [a]
2 Let the redeemed of the LORD proclaim that He has redeemed them from the hand of the foe [b] 3 and has gathered them from the lands — from the east and the west,
from the north and the south. [c]

4 Some [A] wandered in the desolate wilderness, finding no way to a city where they could live. [d] 5 They were hungry and thirsty;
their spirits failed [B] within them. [e]
6 Then they cried out to the LORD in their trouble;
He rescued them from their distress. [f]
7 He led them by the right path to go to a city where they could live. [g]
8 Let them give thanks to the LORD
for His faithful love
and His wonderful works for all •humanity . [h] 9 For He has satisfied the thirsty and filled the hungry with good things. [i]

10 Others [C] sat in darkness and gloom [D] — prisoners in cruel chains [j] — 11 because they rebelled against God's commands and despised the counsel of the •Most High. [k] 12 He broke their spirits [E] with hard labor;
they stumbled, and there was no one to help. [l]
13 Then they cried out to the LORD in their trouble;
He saved them from their distress. [m]
14 He brought them out of darkness and gloom [F]
and broke their chains apart. [n] 15 Let them give thanks to the LORD
for His faithful love
and His wonderful works for all humanity. [o] 16 For He has broken down the bronze gates and cut through the iron bars. [p]

17 Fools suffered affliction because of their rebellious ways and their sins. [q] 18 They loathed all food and came near the gates of death. [r]
19 Then they cried out to the LORD in their trouble;
He saved them from their distress. [s]
20 He sent His word and healed them;
He rescued them from the •Pit . [t]
21 Let them give thanks to the LORD
for His faithful love
and His wonderful works for all humanity. [u] 22 Let them offer sacrifices of thanksgiving and announce His works with shouts of joy. [v]

23 Others [G] went to sea in ships, conducting trade on the vast waters. [w]
24 They saw the LORD's works,
His wonderful works in the deep. [x]
25 He spoke and raised a tempest that stirred up the waves of the sea. [H, y] 26 Rising up to the sky, sinking down to the depths, their courage [I] melting away in anguish, [z] 27 they reeled and staggered like drunken men, and all their skill was useless. [a] 28 Then they cried out to the LORD in their trouble, and He brought them out of their distress. [b] 29 He stilled the storm to a murmur, and the waves of the sea [J] were hushed. [c]
30 They rejoiced when the waves [K] grew quiet.
Then He guided them to the harbor they longed for. [d]
31 Let them give thanks to the LORD
for His faithful love
and His wonderful works for all humanity. [e] 32 Let them exalt Him in the assembly of the people and praise Him in the council of the elders. [f]

33 He turns rivers into desert, springs of water into thirsty ground, [g] 34 and fruitful land into salty wasteland, because of the wickedness of its inhabitants. [h] 35 He turns a desert into a pool of water, dry land into springs of water. [i] 36 He causes the hungry to settle there,

and they establish a city where they can live. [j] 37 They sow fields and plant vineyards that yield a fruitful harvest. [k]
38 He blesses them, and they multiply greatly; [l]
He does not let their livestock decrease. [m]

39 When they are diminished and are humbled by cruel oppression and sorrow, [n] 40 He pours contempt on nobles [o]
and makes them wander in a trackless wasteland. [p] 41 But He lifts the needy out of their suffering [q]
and makes their families multiply like flocks. [r] 42 The upright see it and rejoice, [s] and all injustice shuts its mouth. [t]

43 Let whoever is wise pay attention to these things and consider [L] the LORD's acts of faithful love. [u]

A Plea for Victory

A song. A Davidic psalm.

108 My heart is confident, God; [a]
I will sing; I will sing praises with the whole of my being. [A, b]
2 Wake up, harp and lyre!
I will wake up the dawn. [c]
3 I will praise You, LORD, among the peoples;
I will sing praises to You among the nations. [d] 4 For Your faithful love is higher than the heavens, and Your faithfulness reaches to the clouds. [e] 5 God, be exalted above the heavens, [f]
and let Your glory be over the whole earth. [g] 6 Save with Your right hand and answer me
so that those You love may be rescued. [h]

7 God has spoken in His sanctuary: [B]
"I will triumph!
I will divide up Shechem. [i]
I will apportion the Valley of Succoth. [j]
8 Gilead is Mine, Manasseh is Mine,
and Ephraim is My helmet; [k]
Judah is My scepter. [l]
9 Moab is My washbasin; [m]
I throw My sandal on Edom. [n]
I shout in triumph over Philistia." [o]

10 Who will bring me to the fortified city?
Who will lead me to Edom? [p]
11 God, haven't You rejected us?
God, You do not march out with our armies. [q]
12 Give us aid against the foe,
for human help is worthless. [r]
13 With God we will perform valiantly; [s]
He will trample our foes. [t]

Prayer against an Enemy

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

109 God of my praise, do not be silent. [a]
2 For wicked and deceitful mouths open against me;
they speak against me with lying tongues. [b] 3 They surround me with hateful words and attack me without cause. [c] 4 In return for my love they accuse me, but I continue to pray. [A, d]
5 They repay me evil for good,
and hatred for my love. [e]

6 Set a wicked person over him;
let an accuser [B] stand at his right hand. [f]
7 When he is judged, let him be found •guilty , and let his prayer be counted as sin. [g] 8 Let his days be few;
let another take over his position. [h] 9 Let his children be fatherless and his wife a widow. [i] 10 Let his children wander as beggars, searching for food far [j] from their demolished homes. [k] 11 Let a creditor seize all he has;
let strangers plunder what he has worked for. [l] 12 Let no one show him kindness, and let no one be gracious to his fatherless children. [m] 13 Let the line of his descendants be cut off;
let their name be blotted out in the next generation. [n] 14 Let his ancestors' guilt be remembered before the LORD, [o]
and do not let his mother's sin be blotted out. [p] 15 Let their sins [C] always remain before the LORD, and let Him erase [D] all memory of them from the earth. [q]

16 For he did not think to show kindness, but pursued the afflicted, poor, and brokenhearted
in order to put them to death. [r] 17 He loved cursing — let it fall on him;

he took no delight in blessing — let it be far from him. [s] 18 He wore cursing like his coat — let it enter his body like water and go into his bones like oil. [t] 19 Let it be like a robe he wraps around himself, like a belt he always wears. [u]
20 Let this be the LORD's payment to my accusers, to those who speak evil against me. [v]

21 But You, •Yahweh my Lord, deal kindly with me because of Your name; [w] deliver me because of the goodness of Your faithful love. [x] 22 For I am afflicted and needy; [y]
my heart is wounded within me. [z]
23 I fade away like a lengthening shadow; [a]
I am shaken off like a locust.
24 My knees are weak from fasting, and my body is emaciated. [E, b] 25 I have become an object of ridicule to my accusers; [F]
when they see me, they shake their heads in scorn. [c]

26 Help me, LORD my God;
save me according to Your faithful love [d] 27 so they may know that this is Your hand and that You, LORD, have done it. [e] 28 Though they curse, You will bless.
When they rise up, they will be put to shame,
but Your servant will rejoice. [f] 29 My accusers will be clothed with disgrace;
they will wear their shame like a cloak. [g]
30 I will fervently thank the LORD with my mouth;
I will praise Him in the presence of many. [h]
31 For He stands at the right hand of the needy to save him from those who would condemn him. [i]

The Priestly King

A Davidic psalm.

110 This is the declaration of the LORD to my Lord:
“Sit at My right hand
until I make Your enemies Your footstool.” [a] 2 The LORD will extend Your mighty scepter from •Zion .
Rule [b] over Your surrounding [A] enemies. [c] 3 Your people will volunteer on Your day of battle. [B, d]
In holy splendor, from the womb of the dawn,
the dew of Your youth belongs to You. [C, e]
4 The LORD has sworn an oath and will not take it back:
“Forever, You are a priest
like Melchizedek.” [f]

5 The Lord is at Your right hand;
He will crush kings on the day of His anger. [g]
6 He will judge the nations, heaping up corpses; [h]
He will crush leaders over the entire world. [i] 7 He will drink from the brook by the road; [j] therefore, He will lift up His head. [k]

Praise for the LORD's Works

111

•Hallelujah ! [a]
I will praise the LORD with all my heart
in the assembly of the upright and in the congregation. [b]

2 The LORD's works are great, studied by all who delight in them. [c]
3 All that He does is splendid and majestic; [d]
His righteousness endures forever. [e]
4 He has caused His wonderful works to be remembered. [f]
The LORD is gracious and compassionate. [g]
5 He has provided food for those who fear Him; [h]
He remembers His covenant forever. [i] 6 He has shown His people the power of His works by giving them the inheritance of the nations. [j] 7 The works of His hands are truth and justice;
all His instructions are trustworthy. [k]
8 They are established forever and ever, enacted in truth and in what is right. [l]
9 He has sent redemption to His people. [m]
He has ordained His covenant forever.
His name is holy and awe-inspiring. [n]

10 The •fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom; [o]
all who follow His instructions [A] have good insight. [p]
His praise endures forever. [q]

The Traits of the Righteous

112 •Hallelujah ! [a]
Happy is the man who •fears the LORD, taking great delight in His commands. [b]

2 His descendants will be powerful in the land;
the generation of the upright will be blessed. [c] 3 Wealth and riches are in his house, [d]
and his righteousness endures forever. [e]
4 Light shines in the darkness for the upright. [f]
He is gracious, compassionate, and righteous. [g] 5 Good will come to a man who lends generously and conducts his business fairly. [h]
6 He will never be shaken. [i]
The righteous man will be remembered forever. [j]
7 He will not fear bad news;
his heart is confident, trusting in the LORD. [k]
8 His heart is assured; he will not fear. [l]
In the end he will look in triumph on his foes. [m]
9 He distributes freely to the poor;
his righteousness endures forever. [n]
His •horn will be exalted in honor. [o]

10 The wicked man will see it and be angry;
he will gnash his teeth in despair. [p]
The desire of the wicked man will come to nothing. [q]

Praise to the Merciful God

113 •Hallelujah !
Give praise, servants of •Yahweh ;
praise the name of Yahweh. [a] 2 Let the name of Yahweh be praised both now and forever. [b]
3 From the rising of the sun to its setting, let the name of Yahweh be praised. [c]

4 Yahweh is exalted above all the nations, [d]
His glory above the heavens. [e] 5 Who is like Yahweh our God —
the One enthroned on high, [f] 6 who stoops down to look on the heavens and the earth? [g] 7 He raises the poor from the dust and lifts the needy from the garbage pile [h] 8 in order to seat them with nobles — with the nobles of His people. [i] 9 He gives the childless woman a household, making her the joyful mother of children. [j]
Hallelujah!

God's Deliverance of Israel

114 When Israel came out of Egypt — the house of Jacob from a people who spoke a foreign language [a] — 2 Judah became His sanctuary,
Israel, His dominion. [b]

3 The sea looked and fled; [c]
the Jordan turned back. [d] 4 The mountains skipped like rams,
the hills, like lambs. [e]
5 Why was it, sea, that you fled?
Jordan, that you turned back? [f]
6 Mountains, that you skipped like rams?
Hills, like lambs? [g]

7 Tremble, earth, at the presence of the Lord,
at the presence of the God of Jacob, [h] 8 who turned the rock into a pool of water,
the flint into a spring of water. [i]

Glory to God Alone

115 Not to us, •Yahweh , not to us, but to Your name give glory
because of Your faithful love, because of Your truth. [a] 2 Why should the nations say,
“Where is their God? ” [b]
3 Our God is in heaven and does whatever He pleases. [c]

4 Their idols are silver and gold, made by human hands. [d]
5 They have mouths but cannot speak, eyes, but cannot see.
6 They have ears but cannot hear,
noses, but cannot smell. [e] 7 They have hands but cannot feel, feet, but cannot walk. [f]
They cannot make a sound with their throats. [g]
8 Those who make them are [A] just like them,
as are all who trust in them. [h]

9 Israel, [i] trust in the LORD! [j]
He is their help and shield. [k]
10 House of Aaron, trust in the LORD! [l]
He is their help and shield. [m]
11 You who •fear the LORD, trust in the LORD! [n]
He is their help and shield.
12 The LORD remembers us and will bless us.
He will bless the house of Israel;
He will bless the house of Aaron; [o]
13 He will bless those who fear the LORD — small and great alike. [p]

14 May the LORD add to your numbers, both yours and your children’s. [q]
15 May you be blessed by the LORD,
the Maker of heaven and earth. [r]
16 The heavens are the LORD’s, [B]

but the earth He has given to the •human race. [s] 17 It is not the dead who praise the LORD, nor any of those descending into the silence of death. [t] 18 But we will praise the LORD, both now and forever. [u]
•Hallelujah !

Thanks to God for Deliverance

116 I love the LORD because He has heard my appeal for mercy. [a]
2 Because He has turned His ear to me,
I will call out to Him as long as I live. [b]

3 The ropes of death were wrapped around me,
and the torments of •Sheol overcame me;
I encountered trouble and sorrow. [c]
4 Then I called on the name of •Yahweh :
“Yahweh, save me! ” [d]

5 The LORD is gracious and righteous;
our God is compassionate. [e]
6 The LORD guards the inexperienced;
I was helpless, and He saved me. [f]
7 Return to your rest, my soul,
for the LORD has been good to you. [g] 8 For You, LORD, rescued me from death, my eyes from tears,
my feet from stumbling. [h]
9 I will walk before the LORD in the land of the living. [i] 10 I believed, even when I said,
“I am severely afflicted.” [j]
11 In my alarm I said,
“Everyone is a liar.” [k]

12 How can I repay the LORD for all the good He has done for me? [l] 13 I will take the cup of salvation and call on the name of Yahweh. [m]
14 I will fulfill my vows to the LORD
in the presence of all His people. [n]

15 The death of His faithful ones is valuable in the LORD’s sight. [o]
16 LORD, I am indeed Your servant;
I am Your servant, the son of Your female servant.

You have loosened my bonds. [p]

17 I will offer You a sacrifice of thanksgiving and call on the name of Yahweh. [q]
18 I will fulfill my vows to the LORD
in the presence of all His people, [r] 19 in the courts of the LORD's house — within you, Jerusalem. [s]
•Hallelujah !

Universal Call to Praise

117 Praise the LORD, all nations!
Glorify Him, all peoples! [a] 2 For His faithful love to us is great;
the LORD's faithfulness endures forever. [b]
•Hallelujah !

Thanksgiving for Victory

118 Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good;
His faithful love endures forever. [a]
2 Let Israel say,
“His faithful love endures forever.” [b]
3 Let the house of Aaron say,
“His faithful love endures forever.” [c]
4 Let those who fear the LORD say,
“His faithful love endures forever.” [d]

5 I called to the LORD in distress; [e]
the LORD answered me and put me in a spacious place. [A, f]
6 The LORD is for me; I will not be afraid.
What can man do to me? [g]
7 The LORD is my helper,
Therefore, I will look in triumph on those who hate me. [h]

8 It is better to take refuge in the LORD
than to trust in man. [i] 9 It is better to take refuge in the LORD
than to trust in nobles. [j]

10 All the nations surrounded me;
in the name of •Yahweh I destroyed them. [k] 11 They surrounded me, yes, they surrounded me;
in the name of Yahweh I destroyed them. [l] 12 They surrounded me like bees; [m]
they were extinguished like a fire among thorns;
in the name of Yahweh I destroyed them. [n] 13 You [o] pushed me [p] hard to make me fall, but the LORD helped me. [q]
14 The LORD is my strength and my song;
He has become my salvation. [r]

15 There are shouts of joy and victory in the tents of the righteous:
“The LORD’s right hand performs valiantly! [s]
16 The LORD’s right hand is raised.

The LORD's right hand performs valiantly! " [t]
17 I will not die, but I will live and proclaim what the LORD has done. [u] 18 The LORD disciplined me severely but did not give me over to death. [v]

19 Open the gates of righteousness for me;
I will enter through them
and give thanks to the LORD. [w] 20 This is the gate of the LORD;
the righteous will enter through it. [x] 21 I will give thanks to You because You have answered me
and have become my salvation. [y] 22 The stone that the builders rejected has become the cornerstone. [z] 23 This came from the LORD;
it is wonderful in our eyes. [a] 24 This is the day the LORD has made;
let us rejoice and be glad in it. [b]

25 LORD, save us!
LORD, please grant us success! [c]
26 He who comes in the name of the LORD is blessed. [d]
From the house of the LORD we bless you. [e]
27 The LORD is God and has given us light.
Bind the festival sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar. [f]
28 You are my God, and I will give You thanks.
You are my God; I will exalt You. [g]
29 Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good;
His faithful love endures forever. [h]

they violate Your instruction.

A Cry for Truth and Peace

A •song of ascents.

120 In my distress I called to the LORD, and He answered me. [a] 2 “LORD, deliver me from lying lips and a deceitful tongue.” [b]

3 What will He give you,
and what will He do to you,
you deceitful tongue? [c] 4 A warrior’s sharp arrows with burning charcoal! [A, d]

5 What misery that I have stayed in Meshech, [e, f] that I have lived among the tents of Kedar! [g, h] 6 I have lived too long with those who hate peace. [i] 7 I am for peace; but when I speak,
they are for war. [j]

The LORD Our Protector A •song of ascents.

121 I lift my eyes toward the mountains.
Where will my help come from? [a]
2 My help comes from the LORD,
the Maker of heaven and earth. [b]

3 He will not allow your foot to slip;
your Protector will not slumber. [c] 4 Indeed, the Protector of Israel does not slumber or sleep. [d]

5 The LORD protects you;
the LORD is a shelter right by your side. [A, e] 6 The sun will not strike you by day or the moon by night. [f]

7 The LORD will protect you from all harm;
He will protect your life. [g]
8 The LORD will protect your coming and going both now and forever. [h]

A Prayer for Jerusalem

A Davidic •song of ascents.

122 I rejoiced with those who said to me,
“Let us go to the house of the Lord.” [a]
2 Our feet are standing within your gates, Jerusalem [b] —

3 Jerusalem, built as a city should be, solidly joined together, [c]
4 where the tribes, •Yahweh ’s tribes, go up to give thanks to the name of Yahweh. [d]
(This is an ordinance for Israel. [e])
5 There, thrones for judgment are placed, thrones of the house of David. [f]

6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem:
“May those who love you prosper; [g]
7 may there be peace within your walls, prosperity within your fortresses.” [h]
8 Because of my brothers and friends,
I will say, “Peace be with you.” [i]
9 Because of the house of the Lord our God,
I will seek your good. [j]

Looking for God’s Favor

A •song of ascents.

123 I lift my eyes to You,
the One enthroned in heaven. [a] 2 Like a servant’s eyes on his master’s hand, like a servant girl’s eyes on her mistress’s hand, so our eyes are on the LORD our God until He shows us favor. [b]

3 Show us favor, LORD, show us favor, for we’ve had more than enough contempt. [c] 4 We’ve had more than enough scorn from the arrogant and contempt from the proud. [d]

The LORD Is on Our Side A Davidic •song of ascents.

124 If the LORD had not been on our side —
let Israel say —
2 If the LORD had not been on our side [a]
when men attacked us, [b] 3 then they would have swallowed us alive in their burning anger against us. [c] 4 Then the waters would have engulfed us;
the torrent would have swept over us;
5 the raging waters would have swept over us. [d]

6 Praise the LORD,
who has not let us be ripped apart by their teeth. [e] 7 We have escaped like a bird from the hunter's net;
the net is torn, and we have escaped. [f]
8 Our help is in the name of •Yahweh , the Maker of heaven and earth. [g]

Israel’s Stability

A •song of ascents.

125 Those who trust in the LORD are like Mount •Zion .
It cannot be shaken; it remains forever. [a]
2 Jerusalem — the mountains surround her.
And the LORD surrounds His people,
both now and forever. [b]

3 The scepter of the wicked will not remain over the land allotted to the righteous, so that the righteous will not apply their hands to injustice. [c] 4 Do what is good, LORD, to the good, to those whose hearts are upright. [d] 5 But as for those who turn aside to crooked ways, the LORD will banish them with the evildoers. [e]

Peace be with Israel. [f]

Zion’s Restoration

A •song of ascents.

126 When the LORD restored the fortunes of •Zion , [A] we were like those who dream. [a] 2 Our mouths were filled with laughter then, [b] and our tongues with shouts of joy. [c]
Then they said among the nations,
“The LORD has done great things for them.” [d]
3 The LORD had done great things for us;
we were joyful. [e]

4 Restore our fortunes, [B] LORD, like watercourses in the •Negev . [f] 5 Those who sow in tears will reap with shouts of joy. [g] 6 Though one goes along weeping, carrying the bag of seed,
he will surely come back with shouts of joy,
carrying his sheaves. [h]

The Blessing of the LORD A Solomonic •song of ascents.

127 Unless the LORD builds a house, its builders labor over it in vain; [a] unless the LORD watches over a city, the watchman stays alert in vain. [b]
2 In vain you get up early and stay up late, working hard to have enough food —

yes, He gives sleep to the one He loves. [A, c]

3 Sons are indeed a heritage from the LORD, children, a reward. [d]
4 Like arrows in the hand of a warrior are the sons born in one's youth. [e]
5 Happy is the man who has filled his quiver with them. [f]
Such men will never be put to shame
when they speak with their enemies at the city •gate . [g]

Blessings for Those Who Fear God

A •song of ascents.

128 How happy is everyone who •fears the LORD, who walks in His ways! [a] 2 You will surely eat
what your hands have worked for. [b]
You will be happy,
and it will go well for you. [c]
3 Your wife will be like a fruitful vine within your house,
your sons, like young olive trees around your table. [d] 4 In this very way
the man who fears the LORD will be blessed. [e]

5 May the LORD bless you from •Zion , so that you will see the prosperity of Jerusalem
all the days of your life [f]
6 and will see your children's children!

Peace be with Israel. [g]

Protection of the Oppressed

A •song of ascents.

129 Since my youth they have often attacked me —
let Israel say —
2 Since my youth they have often attacked me, but they have not prevailed against me. [a] 3 Plowmen plowed over my back;
they made their furrows long. [b]
4 The LORD is righteous;
He has cut the ropes of the wicked. [c]

5 Let all who hate •Zion be driven back in disgrace. [d] 6 Let them be like grass on the rooftops, which withers before it grows up [A, e] 7 and can't even fill the hands of the reaper or the arms of the one who binds sheaves. [f]
8 Then none who pass by will say,
"May the LORD's blessing be on you."

We bless you in the name of •Yahweh . [g]

Awaiting Redemption

A •song of ascents.

130 Out of the depths I call to You, •Yahweh ! [a] 2 Lord, listen to my voice;
let Your ears be attentive
to my cry for help. [b]

3 Yahweh, if You considered sins,
Lord, who could stand? [c]
4 But with You there is forgiveness, so that You may be revered. [d]

5 I wait for Yahweh; I wait and put my hope in His word. [e] 6 I wait for the Lord
more than watchmen for the morning —
more than watchmen for the morning. [f]

7 Israel, put your hope in the LORD. [g]
For there is faithful love with the LORD, and with Him is redemption in abundance. [h] 8 And He will redeem Israel from all its sins. [i]

A Childlike Spirit

A Davidic •song of ascents.

131 LORD, my heart is not proud;
my eyes are not haughty. [a]
I do not get involved with things too great or too difficult for me. [b] 2 Instead, I have calmed and quieted myself like a little weaned child with its mother;
I am like a little child. [c]

3 Israel, put your hope in the LORD, both now and forever. [d]

David and Zion Chosen

A •song of ascents.

132 LORD, remember David and all the hardships he endured, [a] 2 and how he swore an oath to the LORD, making a vow to the Mighty One of Jacob: [b] 3 "I will not enter my house [A]
or get into my bed, [B] 4 I will not allow my eyes to sleep or my eyelids to slumber [c] 5 until I find a place for the LORD,
a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob." [d]

6 We heard of the ark in Ephrathah; [e, f]
we found it in the fields of Jaar. [g, h] 7 Let us go to His dwelling place;
let us worship at His footstool. [i] 8 Rise up, LORD, come to Your resting place,
You and Your powerful ark. [j]
9 May Your priests be clothed with righteousness, and may Your godly people shout for joy. [k] 10 Because of Your servant David,
do not reject Your anointed one. [l, m]

11 The LORD swore an oath to David, a promise He will not abandon:
"I will set one of your descendants [C] on your throne. [n]
12 If your sons keep My covenant and My decrees that I will teach them, their sons will also sit on your throne forever." [o]

13 For the LORD has chosen •Zion ;
He has desired it for His home: [p]
14 "This is My resting place forever;
I will make My home here because I have desired it. [q]
15 I will abundantly bless its food;
I will satisfy its needy with bread. [r]

16 I will clothe its priests with salvation, and its godly people will shout for joy. [s]
17 There I will make a •horn grow for David; [t]
I have prepared a lamp for My anointed one. [u]
18 I will clothe his enemies with shame, [v]
but the crown he wears [D] will be glorious.” [w]

Living in Harmony

A Davidic •song of ascents.

133 How good and pleasant it is when brothers live together in harmony! [a] 2 It is like fine oil on the head, running down on the beard, running down Aaron's beard onto his robes. [b]
3 It is like the dew of Hermon [c] falling on the mountains of •Zion . [d]
For there the LORD has appointed the blessing — life forevermore. [e]

all you servants of the LORD who stand in the LORD's house at night! [a] 2 Lift up your hands in the holy place and praise the LORD! [b]

in the courts of the house of our God. [b] 3 Praise Yahweh, for Yahweh is good;
sing praise to His name, for it is delightful. [c]
4 For Yahweh has chosen Jacob for Himself,
Israel as His treasured possession. [d]

5 For I know that Yahweh is great;
our Lord is greater than all gods. [e] 6 Yahweh does whatever He pleases in heaven and on earth,
in the seas and all the depths. [f]
7 He causes the clouds to rise from the ends of the earth.
He makes lightning for the rain
and brings the wind from His storehouses. [g]

8 He struck down the firstborn of Egypt, both man and beast. [h]
9 He sent signs and wonders against you, Egypt, against Pharaoh and all his officials. [i] 10 He struck down many nations and slaughtered mighty kings: [j] 11 Sihon king of the Amorites, Og king of Bashan,
and all the kings of Canaan. [k] 12 He gave their land as an inheritance, an inheritance to His people Israel. [l]

13 Yahweh, Your name endures forever,
Your reputation, Yahweh,
through all generations. [m]
14 For Yahweh will vindicate His people and have compassion on His servants. [n]

15 The idols of the nations are of silver and gold,

made by human hands. [o]
16 They have mouths but cannot speak, [p]
eyes, but cannot see.
17 They have ears but cannot hear;
indeed, there is no breath in their mouths. [q] 18 Those who make them are just like them,
as are all who trust in them. [r]

19 House of Israel, praise Yahweh! [s]
House of Aaron, praise Yahweh! [t]
20 House of Levi, praise Yahweh!
You who revere the LORD, praise the LORD! [u]
21 May the LORD be praised from •Zion ; [v]
He dwells in Jerusalem. [w]
Hallelujah!

His love is eternal.
8 the sun to rule by day,
His love is eternal.

His love is eternal.

His love is eternal.
12 with a strong hand and outstretched arm. [i]
His love is eternal.
13 He divided the •Red Sea [j]
His love is eternal.

into the Red Sea. [l]

His love is eternal.
23 He remembered us in our humiliation [o]
His love is eternal.
24 and rescued us from our foes. [p]
His love is eternal.
25 He gives food to every creature. [q]
His love is eternal.
26 Give thanks to the God of heaven! [r]
His love is eternal.

Lament of the Exiles

137 By the rivers of Babylon —
there we sat down and wept when we remembered •Zion . [a] 2 There we hung up our lyres on the poplar trees, [b] 3 for our captors there asked us for songs, and our tormentors, for rejoicing:
“Sing us one of the songs of Zion.” [c]

4 How can we sing the Lord’s song on foreign soil? [d]
5 If I forget you, Jerusalem, may my right hand forget its skill. [e] 6 May my tongue stick to the roof of my mouth
if I do not remember you,
if I do not exalt Jerusalem as my greatest joy! [f]

7 Remember, Lord, what the Edomites said that day [g] at Jerusalem: “Destroy it! Destroy it down to its foundations! ” [h]
8 Daughter Babylon, doomed to destruction, happy is the one who pays you back what you have done to us. [i] 9 Happy is he who takes your little ones and dashes them against the rocks. [j]

A Thankful Heart

Davidic.

138 I will give You thanks with all my heart; [a]
I will sing Your praise before the heavenly beings. [A, b]
2 I will bow down toward Your holy temple and give thanks to Your name for Your constant love and truth.
You have exalted Your name and Your promise above everything else. [c] 3 On the day I called, You answered me;
You increased strength within me. [B, d]

4 All the kings on earth will give You thanks, LORD, when they hear what You have promised. [C, e] 5 They will sing of the LORD's ways, for the LORD's glory is great. [f]
6 Though the LORD is exalted,
He takes note of the humble;
but He knows the haughty from a distance. [g]

7 If I walk into the thick of danger,
You will preserve my life
from the anger of my enemies. [h]
You will extend Your hand;
Your right hand will save me. [i]
8 The LORD will fulfill His purpose for me. [j]
LORD, Your love is eternal;
do not abandon the work of Your hands. [k]

The All-Knowing, Ever-Present God

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

139 LORD, You have searched me and known me. [a]
2 You know when I sit down and when I stand up;
You understand my thoughts from far away. [b]
3 You observe my travels and my rest;
You are aware of all my ways. [c]
4 Before a word is on my tongue,
You know all about it, LORD. [d]
5 You have encircled me;
You have placed Your hand on me. [e]
6 This extraordinary knowledge is beyond me.
It is lofty; I am unable to reach it. [f]

7 Where can I go to escape Your Spirit?
Where can I flee from Your presence? [g]
8 If I go up to heaven, You are there; [h]
if I make my bed in •Sheol , You are there. [i] 9 If I live at the eastern horizon or settle at the western limits, [A] 10 even there Your hand will lead me;
Your right hand will hold on to me. [j]
11 If I say, “Surely the darkness will hide me, and the light around me will be night” [k] — 12 even the darkness is not dark to You.
The night shines like the day;
darkness and light are alike to You. [l]

13 For it was You who created my inward parts; [B]
You knit me together in my mother’s womb. [m] 14 I will praise You because I have been remarkably and wonderfully made. [n, C]
Your works are wonderful,
and I know this very well. [o] 15 My bones were not hidden from You when I was made in secret,
when I was formed in the depths of the earth. [p] 16 Your eyes saw me when I was formless;
all my days were written in Your book and planned before a single one of them began. [q]

17 God, how difficult [D] Your thoughts are for me to comprehend;
how vast their sum is!
18 If I counted them,
they would outnumber the grains of sand; [r]
when I wake up, [s] I am still with You. [t]

19 God, if only You would kill the wicked —
you bloodthirsty men, stay away from me [u] — 20 who invoke You deceitfully.
Your enemies swear by You falsely. [v]
21 LORD, don't I hate those who hate You, and detest those who rebel against You?
22 I hate them with extreme hatred;
I consider them my enemies. [w]

23 Search me, God, and know my heart;
test me and know my concerns. [x]
24 See if there is any offensive [E] way in me;
lead me in the everlasting way. [y]

Prayer for Rescue

For the choir director. A Davidic psalm.

140 Rescue me, LORD, from evil men.
Keep me safe from violent men [a]
2 who plan evil in their hearts.
They stir up wars all day long. [b] 3 They make their tongues
as sharp as a snake's bite;
viper's venom is under their lips. [c]

• Selah

4 Protect me, LORD,
from the clutches of the wicked. [d]
Keep me safe from violent men who plan to make me stumble. [A, e] 5 The proud hide a trap with ropes for me;
they spread a net along the path
and set snares for me. [f]

Selah

6 I say to the LORD, "You are my God."
Listen, LORD, to my cry for help. [g]
7 Lord GOD, my strong Savior,
You shield my head on the day of battle. [h]
8 LORD, do not grant the desires of the wicked;
do not let them achieve their goals.
Otherwise, they will become proud. [i]

Selah

9 When those who surround me rise up, [B] may the trouble their lips cause overwhelm them. [j] 10 Let hot coals fall on them.
Let them be thrown into the fire,
into the abyss, never again to rise. [k]
11 Do not let a slanderer stay in the land.
Let evil relentlessly [C] hunt down a violent man. [l]

12 I [m] know that the LORD upholds
the just cause of the poor,

justice for the needy. [n]
13 Surely the righteous will praise Your name;
the upright will live in Your presence. [o]

Protection from Sin and Sinners A Davidic psalm.

141 LORD, I call on You; hurry to help me.
Listen to my voice when I call on You. [a] 2 May my prayer be set before You as incense, [b]
the raising of my hands as the evening offering. [c]

3 LORD, set up a guard for my mouth;
keep watch at the door of my lips. [d] 4 Do not let my heart turn to any evil thing or perform wicked acts
with men who commit sin.
Do not let me feast on their delicacies. [e] 5 Let the righteous one strike me — it is an act of faithful love; let him rebuke me —
it is oil for my head;
let me [A] not refuse it. [f]
Even now my prayer is against the evil acts of the wicked. [B, g] 6 When their rulers [C] will be thrown off
the sides of a cliff,
the people [D] will listen to my words,
for they are pleasing. [h]

7 As when one plows and breaks up the soil, turning up rocks,
so our [i] bones have been scattered at the mouth of •Sheol . [j]

8 But my eyes look to You, Lord GOD.
I seek refuge in You; do not let me die. [E, k]
9 Protect me from [F] the trap they have set for me, and from the snares of evildoers. [l] 10 Let the wicked fall into their own nets, while I pass by safely. [m]

A Cry of Distress

A Davidic • Maskil . When he was in the cave. [a] A prayer.

142 I cry aloud to the LORD; [b]
I plead aloud to the LORD for mercy. [c]
2 I pour out my complaint before Him;
I reveal my trouble to Him. [d]
3 Although my spirit is weak within me,
You know my way. [e]

Along this path I travel
they have hidden a trap for me. [f] 4 Look to the right and see: [g]
no one stands up for me;
there is no refuge for me;
no one cares about me. [h]

5 I cry to You, LORD;
I say, “You are my shelter,
my portion in the land of the living.” [i] 6 Listen to my cry,
for I am very weak. [j]
Rescue me from those who pursue me, for they are too strong for me. [k]
7 Free me from prison
so that I can praise Your name.
The righteous will gather around me because You deal generously with me. [l]

A Cry for Help

A Davidic psalm.

143 LORD, hear my prayer.
In Your faithfulness listen to my plea,
and in Your righteousness answer me. [a] 2 Do not bring Your servant into judgment, [b]
for no one alive is righteous in Your sight. [c]

3 For the enemy has pursued me, crushing me to the ground,
making me live in darkness
like those long dead. [d] 4 My spirit is weak within me;
my heart is overcome with dismay. [e]

5 I remember the days of old;
I meditate on all You have done;
I reflect on the work of Your hands. [f]
6 I spread out my hands to You;
I am like parched land before You. [g]

• Selah

7 Answer me quickly, LORD;
my spirit fails. [h]
Don't hide Your face from me, or I will be like those going down to the •Pit . [i] 8 Let me experience
Your faithful love in the morning,
for I trust in You. [j] Reveal to me the way I should go because I long for You. [k]
9 Rescue me from my enemies, LORD;
I come to You for protection. [l, m] 10 Teach me to do Your will,
for You are my God. [n]
May Your gracious Spirit lead me on level ground. [o]

11 Because of Your name, •Yahweh ,

let me live.
In Your righteousness deliver me from trouble, [p]
12 and in Your faithful love destroy my enemies.
Wipe out all those who attack me,
for I am Your servant. [q]

A King's Prayer

Davidic.

144 May the LORD, my rock, be praised, [a] who trains my hands for battle and my fingers for warfare. [b] 2 He is my faithful love and my fortress,
my stronghold and my deliverer.
He is my shield, [c] and I take refuge in Him; [d]
He subdues my people [e] under me. [f]

3 LORD, what is man, that You care for him,
the son of man, that You think of him? [g] 4 Man is like a breath;
his days are like a passing shadow. [h]

5 LORD, part Your heavens and come down. [i]
Touch the mountains, and they will smoke. [j]
6 Flash Your lightning and scatter the foe; [A] shoot Your arrows and rout them. [k] 7 Reach down [B] from heaven; [l] rescue me from deep water, and set me free from the grasp of foreigners [m] 8 whose mouths speak lies,
whose right hands are deceptive. [n]

9 God, I will sing a new song to You;
I will play on a ten-stringed harp for You [o] —
10 the One who gives victory to kings, who frees His servant David from the deadly sword. [p] 11 Set me free and rescue me from the grasp of foreigners [q]
whose mouths speak lies,
whose right hands are deceptive. [r]

12 Then our sons will be like plants nurtured in their youth,
our daughters, like corner pillars that are carved in the palace style. [s] 13 Our storehouses will be full, supplying all kinds of produce; [t] our flocks will increase by thousands and tens of thousands in our open fields. [u]

14 Our cattle will be well fed. [C]
There will be no breach in the walls, no going into captivity, [D]
and no cry of lament in our public squares. [v]
15 Happy are the people with such blessings.
Happy are the people whose God is •Yahweh . [w]

Praising God's Greatness

A Davidic hymn.

145 I [a] exalt You, my God the King, and praise Your name forever and ever. [b]
2 I will praise You every day;
I will honor Your name forever and ever. [c]

3 •Yahweh is great and is highly praised; [d]
His greatness is unsearchable. [e] 4 One generation will declare Your works to the next and will proclaim Your mighty acts. [f] 5 I [g] will speak of Your splendor and glorious majesty and [h] Your wonderful works. [i] 6 They will proclaim the power of Your awe-inspiring acts, and I will declare Your greatness. [j, k] 7 They will give a testimony of Your great goodness and will joyfully sing of Your righteousness. [l]

8 The LORD is gracious and compassionate, slow to anger and great in faithful love. [m]
9 The LORD is good to everyone; [n]
His compassion rests on all He has made. [o]
10 All You have made will thank You, LORD;
the [A] godly will praise You. [p] 11 They will speak of the glory of Your kingdom and will declare Your might, [q] 12 informing all •people of Your mighty acts and of the glorious splendor of Your [r] kingdom. [s] 13 Your kingdom is an everlasting kingdom;
Your rule is for all generations. [t]
The LORD is faithful in all His words and gracious in all His actions. [u, v]

14 The LORD helps all who fall;
He raises up all who are oppressed. [B, w] 15 All eyes look to You, and You give them their food at the proper time. [x] 16 You open Your hand and satisfy the desire of every living thing. [y]

17 The LORD is righteous in all His ways and gracious in all His acts. [z] 18 The LORD is near all who call out to Him, all who call out to Him with integrity. [a] 19 He fulfills the desires of those who •fear Him;
He hears their cry for help and saves them. [b]
20 The LORD guards all those who love Him, but He destroys all the wicked. [c] 21 My mouth will declare Yahweh's praise;
let every living thing
praise His holy name forever and ever. [d]

The God of Compassion

146

•Hallelujah !
My soul, praise the LORD. [a]
2 I will praise the LORD all my life;
I will sing to my God as long as I live. [b]

3 Do not trust in nobles,
in man, who cannot save. [c] 4 When his breath [A] leaves him,
he returns to the ground;
on that day his plans die. [d]

5 Happy is the one whose help is the God of Jacob, whose hope is in the LORD his God, [e] 6 the Maker of heaven and earth,
the sea and everything in them. [f]
He remains faithful forever, [g]
7 executing justice for the exploited and giving food to the hungry. [h]
The LORD frees prisoners. [i]
8 The LORD opens the eyes of the blind. [j]
The LORD raises up those who are oppressed. [B, k]
The LORD loves the righteous. [l]
9 The LORD protects foreigners and helps the fatherless and the widow, [m] but He frustrates the ways of the wicked. [n]

10 The LORD reigns forever;
•Zion , your God reigns for all generations. [o]
Hallelujah!

God Restores Jerusalem

147 •Hallelujah !
How good it is to sing to our God,
for praise is pleasant and lovely. [a]

2 The Lord rebuilds Jerusalem; [b]
He gathers Israel's exiled people. [c] 3 He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds. [d]
4 He counts the number of the stars;
He gives names to all of them. [e]
5 Our Lord is great, vast in power;
His understanding is infinite. [A, f]
6 The Lord helps the afflicted
but brings the wicked to the ground. [g]

7 Sing to the Lord with thanksgiving;
play the lyre to our God, [h] 8 who covers the sky with clouds, prepares rain for the earth,
and causes grass to grow on the hills. [i] 9 He provides the animals with their food,
and the young ravens, what they cry for. [j]

10 He is not impressed by the strength of a horse;
He does not value the power [B] of a man. [k]
11 The Lord values those who fear Him, those who put their hope in His faithful love. [l]

12 Exalt the Lord, Jerusalem;
praise your God, •Zion ! [m] 13 For He strengthens the bars of your gates and blesses your children within you. [n]
14 He endows your territory with prosperity; [C, o]
He satisfies you with the finest wheat. [p]

15 He sends His command throughout the earth;
His word runs swiftly. [q]
16 He spreads snow like wool;

He scatters frost like ashes; [r]
17 He throws His hailstones like crumbs.
Who can withstand His cold? [s]
18 He sends His word and melts them;
He unleashes His winds, [D] and the waters flow. [t]

19 He declares His word to Jacob,
His statutes and judgments to Israel. [u] 20 He has not done this for any nation;
they do not know [v] His judgments. [w]

12 young men as well as young women, old and young together. [l]
13 Let them praise the name of Yahweh,

His majesty covers heaven and earth. [m]

let them shout for joy on their beds. [g]

6 Let the exaltation of God be in their mouths [A] and a double-edged sword in their hands, [h] 7 inflicting vengeance on the nations and punishment on the peoples, [i]

9 carrying out the judgment decreed against them.
This honor is for all His godly people. [k]

6 Let everything that breathes praise the LORD. [i] Hallelujah!

PSALMS

Introduction

Psalm 1, the gateway to this inspired collection, presents what has come to be called "the two ways." The process of winnowing chaff from grain is an apt image of the two ways and their consequences. The rest of the psalms elaborate on this theme in a variety of ways.

The word for psalms in Hebrew is Tehilîm, which means "praise." The English title is derived from the Greek translation (LXX) Psalmoi, which means "songs of praise." Praise directed to Yahweh, the God of Israel, is certainly the primary emphasis in the psalms. Some have referred to the Psalms as Israel's hymnbook, which is partially true but overall is insufficient to account for all that is in the Psalms. More than one-third of the collection is made up of prayers to God. Therefore, it contains both hymns and prayers that were used in the context of Israel's worship.

Circumstances of Writing Author: Since the book is a collection of many different psalms written over a long time, there is not just one author for this collection. By far the most common designation in the titles is "Davidic," which may refer to David as the author of those psalms. David's role as a musician in Saul's court (1Sm 16:14-23) as well as his many experiences as a shepherd, a soldier, and a king make him a likely candidate for writing many of these psalms.

The problem is that the mention of his name in the titles consists of an ambiguous Hebrew construction. It is nothing more than a preposition attached to David's name. The preposition could be translated "written by," "belonging to," "for," or "about." This does nothing more than relate the psalms bearing that title to David in some way but not necessarily naming him as its author. The translation "Davidic" accurately conveys this same ambiguity.

Other titles include the designations of Solomon (Pss 72; 127), Asaph (Pss 50; 70-83), the sons of Korah (Pss 42; 44-49), Ethan (Ps 89), Heman son of Korah (Ps 88), and Moses (Ps 90). All of these use the same Hebrew preposition as appears with David's name and therefore have the same ambiguity about authorship. In the case of Asaph, although he was one of David's chief musicians (1Ch 6:39), the name itself became associated with a group of musicians bearing the same name (Ezr 2:40-41; see note at Ps 50 title). This might explain why an apparently postexilic psalm (Ps 74) includes the title "of Asaph."

Background: The book of Psalms consists of many different hymns and prayers composed by individuals but used by the community. If one were to take the names in the titles as authors, the date of composition ranges from the time of Moses (fifteenth century B.C.) to a time following the exile (sixth century B.C. or later). Some of the titles do contain historical information that might indicate the setting of the composition, although even this (like the authorship) is ambiguous. They might not refer to the date of composition but to the setting of its contents, being composed some time after the events had taken place. This is a more likely scenario since some of these psalms describe life-threatening situations, where composing a psalm in the heat of the moment would not have been a top priority. In many cases, these psalms include thanksgiving sections as well, showing that they were written after God had answered the prayers.

Message and Purpose There are myriad messages scattered through the 150 psalms, but overall, this record of the responses of God's people in worship and prayer serves the purpose of teaching us how to relate to God in various circumstances of life. The psalms also demonstrate God's sovereignty and goodness for His people in order to instill confidence in those who trust in Him.

Contribution to the Bible The relationship between God's activities in the lives of His people and their responses to them is the most significant contribution of this book. God never spoke directly in any of the psalms, as He often did in the narratives and prophets. Therefore, they are written from the human perspective as authors work their way through various life situations. The struggle to understand how God's attributes, particularly His sovereignty and goodness, relate to life experiences is a major theme in the collection. These words are from people who had not lost their faith in God, although they might have been tempted to at times (Ps 73). They wrestled with how God was dealing with them personally and as a community.

Structure The book of Psalms is, from first to last, a book of poetry. Hebrew poetry lacks rhyme and regular meter, but uses parallelism wherein two (or three) lines are balanced and complete a thought. Some parallelism is synonymous, where the second line echoes the first. Antithetic parallelism uses a contrast between the two segments, and in synthetic parallelism the second segment completes the idea in the first segment.

The psalms can be divided into classes. There are hymns (145-150) and songs of thanksgiving (30-32). Psalms of lament (38-39) are prayers or cries to God on the occasion of distressful situations. Royal psalms (2; 110) are concerned with the earthly king of Israel. Enthronement psalms (96; 98) celebrate the kingship of Yahweh. Penitential psalms (32; 38; 51) express contrition and repentance, and wisdom or didactic psalms (19; 119) tend to be proverbial.

Outline The book of Psalms is unlike most other biblical books since it contains many writings collected and compiled over a period of time and finally organized into its present form. For this reason, it is not possible to outline the book in the standard way. However, there is clearly a structure to the collection. The book is divided into five parts, also known as books. According to Jewish tradition, this fivefold division was based on the arrangement of the Torah (or Pentateuch), the first five books of the Bible. The book divisions are: Book 1 (Pss 1-41), Book

2 (Pss 42-72), Book 3 (Pss 73-89), Book 4 (Pss 90-106), and Book 5 (Pss 107-150).

Another part of the structure of the Psalms is that they are generally grouped together by their titles, such as the Asaph psalms and those of the sons of Korah. Following the close of each of the first of four books is a doxology or statement identifying the end of one book and the beginning of another. The psalms containing these statements are known as “seam” psalms because they show the “piecing together” of these psalms to form the collection as it now stands.

Timeline

Study Notes 1:1 Happy expresses the sense of joy and satisfaction in one’s state or circumstances. It often is the result of blessing that comes from trust in and obedience to Yahweh (34:8; 40:4; 84:5; 89:15). Though related to God’s blessing, it should be distinguished from the Hebrew word that is usually translated “blessed.” The three descriptions that follow are expressed in the negative, showing what is not characteristic of this man. From the structure, it is better to understand these behaviors as parallel rather than progressing from lesser to greater sins.

1:2 The Hebrew word torah is sometimes translated as "law," but it is better understood as "teaching" or instruction. It is the revelation of God's will for His people rather than a body of legislative material or a collection of judicial decisions, both of which are notions often associated with the English word "law." Yahweh's instruction is not a burden (Dt 30:11; 1Jn 5:3) but a delight for those who trust in Him. "Meditating" (from Hb root hgh; Jos 1:8) has a literal meaning of mumbling to oneself, an activity closely related to concentrating on something in order to understand it.

1:3 The image of the righteous as flourishing trees is a common metaphor (92:12-14; Jr 17:8). It is also attested in other ancient Near Eastern material, most notably the Egyptian wisdom text, "The Instruction of Amen-em-ope" (ANET, 421f.). Bearing fruit is an extension of the metaphor and refers to the products of the spiritual life in the individual (Pr 12:12; Jn 15:5; Col 1:10).

1:4 The contrast here focuses on the destiny of the two ways rather than on their behavior, which is developed in verses 1-3. Chaff, the useless product of threshing, is a contrast to the fruit in the previous verse. The wicked are to be carried away by the wind (see note at 35:5; cp. Hs 13:3), being separated from what is useful and valuable.

1:5 Survive the judgment is literally "rise up in the judgment." In this context, rising up has the idea of being able to remain (or survive) during the time of judgment. Some have argued that this only refers to the final judgment of God because it is definite (the judgment). However, it seems better to understand this as God's judgment whether in this life or in the future. Since sinners are not among the righteous, they are judged and removed from the scene.

1:6 The final summary shows what is anticipated for those who follow the two ways: God's protection for the righteous and disaster (or ruin) for the wicked.

2:1 The question introduced by why is rhetorical and expresses surprise at the presumption of the nations in light of the reality of God's reign through His co-regent (vv. 6-9). Elsewhere, nations that rebel against God's authority are compared to the raging sea (Is 17:12-13). The word plot is the same Hebrew word as "meditates" in 1:2, only in this case it is used negatively to describe contemplation of plans to be free of God's dominion.

2:2 To take a stand is often used in military contexts to describe preparation for battle (1Sm 17:16; Jr 46:4). The kings and rulers are not just two specific groups but they represent all governing authorities and dignitaries on the earth (see Jdg 5:3; Hab 1:10). Anointed is translated into Greek as christos, and it refers to God's choice and establishment of His King. In this context, the anointed One is the Davidic king who is ultimately, in the progress of divine revelation, Jesus Christ (Eph 1:20-22).

2:3 The desire of these rulers for autonomy is pictured as tearing off their chains and freeing themselves from restraints. For those who rebel against God, His dominion is seen as nothing more than slavery. Ironically, these same terms are used to describe what God did for His people in freeing them from the oppression of the wicked (107:14; 129:4).

2:4 The One enthroned in heaven is parallel to the Lord (Hb 'adonai, emphasizing God's sovereignty), indicating that God's place from which He reigns is heaven (11:4; 103:19). The combination of laughs and ridicules function together as one thought to show that God's response to the rebellion of the nations is to mock them, knowing that their attempts are futile and that their destiny is certain (37:13; 59:8).

2:5 Although God is laughing in derision in the previous verse, this attitude leads to action, which in this case is speaking to them in anger.

2:6 The opening phrase I have consecrated uses a separate first-person pronoun, which would otherwise be unnecessary. This adds emphasis to the subject, sometimes represented as "I Myself." The point is that God's King is established by God Himself, so there is no ambiguity about the legitimacy of His reign.

2:7 To validate the point of legitimacy further, there is a decree from Yahweh. This term is used to indicate royal protocol in order to validate the right to rule. This was a particular concern in the ancient world where there was often a conflict following newly established kings. The idea of the Davidic ruler being identified as God's Son was made clear in the covenant that God made with David (89:26-27; 2Sm 7:14).

2:8 The right of sonship includes the right to inheritance and possession of what belongs to one's father. In this case, it is not limited but extends to the ends of the earth, an expression meaning the whole world and everything in it. This includes the nations, the same word used in verse 1 to identify those who were rebelling against God.

2:9 Some ancient manuscripts use "shepherd" instead of break, but the parallel shatter shows that "break" is better. Smashing nations like pottery represents the effortless way in which something is annihilated (Is 30:14; Jr 19:11). Such imagery appears in ancient Egyptian and Assyrian texts to indicate subjugation of one's enemies.

2:10-11 The word of warning for the rebellious nations is to be wise and receive instruction. This bears a remarkable resemblance to OT Wisdom literature (Pr 8:32-33). The nations are given an opportunity to change their ways and submit to God's King. Their submission should include reverential awe and trembling, showing the connection between fearing Yahweh and the acquisition of wisdom (Pr 9:10).

2:12 The word Son here is a different word than the one used in verse 7. It is an Aramaic word, causing some scholars to question its authenticity because (1) it seems out of place, and (2) Aramaic did not become the main language of the region until the Neo-Babylonian Empire under Nebuchadnezzar. Therefore, some have proposed that it should be changed to "His feet," adding a few Hebrew letters to the existing form. However, there is no good reason to reject this form as original since Aramaic, while not the main language of the region until later, had been in existence since Abraham's time and was a more commonly used Semitic language than Hebrew among other nations. To pay homage (see note at Hs 13:2) is to express obedience (Gn 27:26). The alternative is to perish as a result of God's anger that could ignite at any moment. This psalm ends where Psalm 1 began—with the word happy. The contrast is that those who follow Yahweh see His dominion as a place of refuge rather than slavery (v. 3).

Ps 3 title This is one of 14 psalms (3; 7; 18; 30; 34; 51; 52; 54; 56; 57; 59; 60; 63; 142) that are linked directly, by virtue of their titles, with specific events in the life of David. Though the titles reference specific events in David's life—in this case the time when he fled from his son Absalom—the actual content of these psalms is generalized. For this reason God's people who face the sort of life circumstances discussed in these psalms can identify with the author's words and be blessed. The episode of Absalom's rebellion and David's escape from him is recorded in 2 Samuel 15-18. David was grieved over the actions of his son (2Sm 18:33), but in this psalm he showed his dependence on Yahweh as his deliverer from those who attacked him.

3:1-2 In these verses the Hebrew root rbb shows up three times: increase *(rabbu) in verse 1 and many *(rabbim) appearing twice, once in each verse. This is the same root used in God's command to mankind to "multiply" on the earth (Gn 1:28) and in God's promise to Abraham that He would "multiply" his descendants (Gn 17:2). The problem in this psalm is that the situation is reversed, and it is the enemies of God and of His servant who are multiplying. These enemies are the aggressors by actively attacking the psalmist and declaring that God will not rescue him. In lament psalms, attacks on the psalmist and attacks against God are closely linked and are often used as an appeal for God to act because of His own reputation.

3:3 The image of God as a shield is common, especially in the Psalms (18:30; 115:9; 144:2). It represents protection during a time of attack. A more unusual description is identifying God as one's glory. The Hebrew word kavod (lit "heavy") is often used of a person's reputation or significance, sometimes being translated as "honor." Its use here seems to indicate that the psalmist found his own significance and honor linked to his relationship with Yahweh rather than in his own strength.

3:4 The word answers expresses the idea of completed action in the Hebrew (sometimes translated in the past tense: "answered"), but it seems to be used here in the sense of confidence that God always answers. The holy mountain is Zion, which is the place where God dwelt among His people (Jl 3:17).

3:5-6 To lie down and to sleep are poetic and tangible ways to describe a state of security. Only a person who feels secure will be able to sleep undisturbed by troubling thoughts. Psalm 4:8 uses the same combination of verbs and adds the phrase "in peace." The psalmist was confident that he would wake again because it is Yahweh Himself who sustained (i.e., supported or helped) him. The psalmist's security was unrelated to his circumstances even though he was surrounded by enemies. Confidence in God's protection does not depend on one's circumstances.

3:7-8 Although the fact that the psalmist was calling out to the Lord is stated in verse 4, it is verse 7 that identifies the content of his plea. The request is rather brief and made up of two imperatives: rise up and save. The first of these describes a change of state from rest to action. The action that brings salvation is expressed in vivid terms. Verse 8 contains a timeless theological truth—only Yahweh can be trusted to save His people.

Ps 4 title This is the first psalm in the collection to have musical instructions to the choir director. While there is no description of the specific setting of the psalm, its theme and content are similar to Psalm 3.

4:1 God, who vindicates me (lit "God of my righteousness/justice") is an appeal to God's justice specifically as it relates to the psalmist's just cause. Affliction pictures the idea of being hemmed in or trapped by enemies. In response, God freed me (lit "made a broad place for me"). The verb expresses completed action and probably indicates the confidence of the psalmist that God would rescue him.

4:2 How long is an expression that shows concern about the duration of one's condition and is used in similar contexts in other psalms (79:5; 89:46). The enemies are called exalted men. In Hebrew this is literally "sons of a man" and refers to people of high social status or influence (62:9) and sometimes contrasted with the poor (49:2). The same expression is found in Egyptian and Babylonian texts to describe prominent and respected people who are to be distinguished from the poor.

4:3 Set apart is not the normal expression for "make holy" (Hb qadash) but is a word that means "distinguish" or "separate" (Hb palah). The Lord makes a clear distinction between the faithful (those loyal to Him) and the "exalted men" in how He relates to each of them (cp. Ex 11:7). Therefore, the psalmist could have confidence that the LORD would hear when he called out to Him.

4:4 The Hebrew word translated be angry means to "shake" or "tremble" and is sometimes used literally for physical shaking (18:7; 77:18). When used of people it can mean trembling with fear (Ex 15:14; Dt 2:25), quarrelling (Gn 45:24), or a fit of rage (2Kg 19:27-28). It can also refer to provoking God to anger (Jb 12:6). The basic sense of the term when it is not used literally seems to be agitation. The LXX translates it as "be angry" (from Gk orgizo), which is quoted by Paul in Eph 4:26. Though trembling with fear certainly works in the context of this psalm, the idea of anger also works if one assumes that this is a challenge to the angry enemies not to sin. In other words, their anger should not lead to attacks against God's people.

4:5 A further challenge to the enemies is to offer sacrifices in righteousness, which means those that are in keeping with God's righteousness that He has prescribed. The final challenge is for these enemies to turn from their ways by trusting in the LORD .

4:6 The quotation here seems to be coming from those who were restless and pessimistic about their own situation and fate. This is an example of those who were not trusting Yahweh within the community of God's people. The prayer for these people is that God would look . . . with favor on the entire community. The Hebrew here is "lift up on us the light of Your face" and is reminiscent of the Aaronic blessing in Nm 6:24-26.

4:7-8 The psalmist's own experience is in contrast to the pessimists' view in verse 6. He has both an abundance of joy and a sense of security because of his relationship with Yahweh. The same description of lying down and sleeping occurs in 3:5.

Ps 5 title Some interpreters have used this psalm and its designation as a Davidic psalm to argue that this phrase cannot mean "composed by David" since verse 7 seems to refer to the temple (see note at vv. 6-7).

5:1-2 The word sighing (Hb hgg) is perhaps related to the word meditate (Hb hgh ; see note at 1:2). Some translate it as "consider my meditation," but since the basic meaning of the word is "to murmur," it seems better in this context to understand it as a low murmuring sound (similar to a sigh) made in a time of intense sorrow. God is also addressed as King (44:4; 68:24; 74:12; 84:3), indicating confidence in His dominion and His power to answer this prayer.

5:3 Daybreak is repeated and indicates the time of the prayer, which was early in the morning (88:13). Plead my case is literally "I prepare (or set in order)." While it could mean preparing a sacrifice, there is no other indication that a sacrifice was being offered. Instead, it was more likely preparing words (Jb 32:14) in a request for vindication.

5:4-5 The term delights is the same word as in 1:2, but here it is negated. Not only does God have no desire for wickedness, it cannot even exist in His presence. The arrogant, those who practice evil, liars, and the violent (v. 6) are all included in the explanation of those who cannot stand in God's presence. The word "stand" is the same term as in 2:2 describing those who "take their stand" against God. There is no contest between these wicked people and God; they cannot get anywhere near the Lord to attack Him.

5:6-7 The combination of house and temple has led many to assume that this psalm must have been written by someone other than David since Solomon's temple was built after David's time. However, the Hebrew word for "temple" is not only used for Solomon's temple, but also for the temporary temple at Shiloh (translated "tabernacle" in 1Sm 1:9; 3:3), which existed in David's time. God's house is the place where God dwelt among His people (Ps 26:8).

5:8 The connection between the plea for God's guidance and the adversaries is that the situation (i.e., attacks by enemies) calls for not only protection and rescue but also guidance in the midst of the crisis. It is also an affirmation of the intent to remain loyal to Yahweh even during the time of danger.

5:9-10 Throat and tongues are metaphors for speech. Since there is nothing reliable in what they say, all of the enemies' speech is deadly, pictured here as an open grave. A similar use of this word picture appears in Jr 5:16 where "their quiver is like an open grave," meaning their weapons bring death. Since the enemies here were intent on death and destruction, the psalmist asked that God let their own schemes bring about their destruction (64:8; 2Sm 15:31).

5:11-12 The emphasis in these verses is on God's protection of those who remain faithful to Him. The terms take refuge in . . . shelter . . . surround, and shield convey this thought. In this context, all these words evoke military ideas: Those who trust Yahweh often take refuge from their enemies in Him (17:7). The word for "shelter" can describe protective gear for battle (140:7). "Surround" is used to describe enemies preparing to attack (1Sm 23:26). And this word for "shield" describes a large piece of flattened metal that was placed in front of a soldier to protect his entire body; they were sometimes called "large shields" (1Kg 10:16).

Ps 6 title The word Sheminith is difficult to interpret. The most commonly proposed root meaning is "eight," leading some to identify it with an eight-stringed instrument or an octave (an eight-note scale). In any case, it is part of the musical instructions for this psalm.

6:1 The combination of rebuke . . . discipline and anger . . . wrath indicates that the psalmist thought there was some sin behind his suffering, although the sin is not specified. The connection between sin and suffering is a common motif in lament psalms, and it shows how this relationship is part of the thinking of people who suffer even if there is no specific sin in mind; terms related to God's anger are a way of expressing this thought (38:1; 118:18). The opening to this psalm led the early church fathers to include it as one of the seven penitential psalms (along with 32; 38; 51; 102; 130; 143).

6:2-3 The parallelism between my bones and my whole being (or "my soul") demonstrates that the suffering was not only physical but also psychological and emotional. Suffering is never one-dimensional (only physical or psychological or spiritual); instead, it involves the whole person. The same Hebrew verb—meaning "shaken" when used literally but "terrified" in the figurative sense—is used for both subjects.

6:4-5 The plea has a twofold motivation. First, the appeal for Yahweh to act is because of His faithful love (Hb chesed). This is the covenant loyalty that God has for His people and the basis for the psalmist's trust (13:5; 26:3; 136). Second, the psalmist spoke of a loss of praise to Yahweh if he was allowed to go to Sheol (i.e., to die). This seems rather bold, but such appeals are common in lament psalms as a means of motivating God to act (30:9; 88:10,12; 115:17).

6:6-7 The extent of the psalmist's emotional distress is highlighted in these verses. His crying was so intense that his pillow and bed were soaked with tears. The second image (drench my bed) is hyperbolic and literally reads "make my bed swim." The mention of enemies introduces another dimension to the suffering: helplessness before enemies because of the psalmist's condition of sickness.

6:8-10 The enemies of verse 7 are further described as evildoers. It is likely from the statement in verse 9 that the enemies were taunting the psalmist by saying that God would not deliver him (3:2; 22:7-8; 71:11). Instead of their perception of God's inactivity, these enemies would be shaken with terror. The word shake is the same Hebrew verb used twice in verses 2-3 to describe the condition of the psalmist in his suffering. In essence, the prayer ends with a statement of confidence that God will take away his suffering and inflict it upon his enemies.

Ps 7 title The word Shiggaion occurs only this one time in the psalm titles, and its meaning is unknown. Some have proposed that it comes from an Assyrian word (shegu) meaning "lament"; others have related it to a Hebrew root meaning "go astray" or "wander." The identity of Cush, a Benjaminite is also uncertain. Scholars have often related it to one of David's enemies from the tribe of Benjamin: Saul (1Sm 18-31), Shimei (2Sm 16:5-13), or Sheba (2Sm 20).

7:1 -2 The use of the word pursuers to describe enemies indicates that the psalmist was a hunted man. He compared them collectively to a lion, ripping . . . apart its prey. This is a commonly used animal description of enemies in the psalms. Lions lurk in hiding places in order to attack their prey (10:9; 17:12); their mouths and teeth are fierce (58:6) as well as their roaring (22:13). In the NT, the same image of a roaring lion is used of Satan, the Christian's ultimate enemy (1Pt 5:8).

7:3-5 These verses contain a declaration of innocence in the form of an oath (cp. Jb 31:16-22). The if statements are rhetorical, assuming that the psalmist was innocent of those conditions ("if I have . . . and I have not"). The consequences are stated in a typical vow formula using the word may. This does not presuppose absolute innocence but is used to convey the notion of suffering without justifiable cause. There is no apparent sin or disobedience against God that would justify these results. It is another way of declaring that the psalmist had not knowingly acted unjustly toward anyone, intentionally harmed someone at peace with him, or stolen from anyone, including his enemy. Therefore, he should not be treated this way.

7:6-8 Calling down God's judgment on one's enemies is known as imprecation (see note at 109:1-31). The call for Yahweh to rise up was used as a battle cry for Israel when preparing to engage her enemies (Nm 10:35). The judgment that is called for is one that has already been ordained (lit "commanded") by God. Yahweh is the Judge of all the earth (Gn 18:25) and has promised to judge the whole world (1Sm 2:10; 1Ch 16:33), so this request is in keeping with God's character and promise. Some identify the assembly of peoples as the divine assembly of angels (82:1); however, "peoples" is most often used of nations and likely represents a gathering of the nations with Yahweh acting as the Judge. This section ends with a request for vindication based on the righteousness and integrity of the person praying (25:21; 26:1). As in the case of 7:3-5, this is not a statement of innocence from all sin but only from conscious sins that would justify this persecution.

7:9-11 Protection, pictured as a shield, is guaranteed by God's righteousness. The thoughts and emotions are literally "hearts and kidneys," imagery used to describe the inner parts of man that are not seen. In this case, it refers to inner thoughts and motives. Another text using a similar concept is Ps 139:13 where the idea is that God knows every part of a person; nothing is hidden from Him.

7:12-13 The imagery changes from God as a Judge to God as a Warrior. Such an image of God was part of Israel's history since He was the One who fought for His people (Dt 32:41-42). God was primed and ready to attack (i.e., judge) anyone who was unrepentant.

7:14-16 The terms pregnant and birth picture the wicked as creating, incubating, and unleashing their evil on the world as if it was their children (see Jb 15:35; Is 59:4, and Jms 1:15 for similar imagery). The plots of the wicked backfire (Ps 9:15; 35:8; 57:6; 141:10). This poetic justice is also described in Pr 26:27 and in the apocryphal book Sirach 27:25: "The one throwing a stone upward throws it on his own head."

7:17 Most High (Hb 'elyon) as a title for God first occurs in Gn 14:18-22, but it is also used throughout the OT to emphasize God's sovereignty over all mankind (Dt 32:8; Ps 47:2; Dn 4:17).

Ps 8 title Some propose that Gittith is some kind of musical instrument such as a lyre. The LXX translates it "for the winepress," relating it to a Hebrew root for grapes; in this sense, it could have been a song to be sung during the grape harvest.

8:1 This hymn of praise is more specifically identified as a creation hymn (along with 19:1-6; 33; and 104) in its focus on earth and the heavens, terms describing the whole of creation (Gn 1:1; Ex 20:11; Neh 9:6). Majesty, a synonym for "honor" or "glory," and name, representing the person and not just the designation, are parallel. They demonstrate that God and His glory fill all of creation. This language distinguishes God from His creation (He is transcendent) but also shows that He is present (He is immanent) within it.

8:2 Even the feeblest of humanity, with their sometimes-inarticulate speech (mouths), function as firm testimonies (a stronghold) of God's glory and silence the enemy and the avenger. According to Jesus, children and their simple faith are the best representatives of God's kingdom (Mt 18:4). Paul also made a similar argument when he described God's use of weakness and foolishness to "shame the wise" of this world (1Co 1:26-29).

8:3-4 The vastness of creation is contrasted with the smallness and insignificance of man. This is in the form of a question: How is it that God would remember and look after (both words mean "pay attention to and care for") people? This is perplexing in light of the difference between the size and scope of the cosmos and the relative puniness of humanity. The terms man and son of man are parallel and are used to describe humankind as a collective whole (146:3; Nm 23:19; Is 51:12).

8:5-8 The answer to the perplexing question in verse 4 is found in these verses, which are essentially a commentary on Gn 1:26-28. While the perception is that humans are insignificant in the grand scheme of things, the reality is found in God's purpose for creating humanity. The word translated as God (Hb 'elohim) is plural here and could be understood as indicating "gods" or "heavenly beings" instead of its usual sense of a plural of majesty emphasizing God's greatness. Therefore the LXX, which is quoted in Heb 2:7, translates it as "angels." The point is the same in both cases, even if the referent is different: Because of their divinely given purpose, humans are functionally closer to God and the angels than to the animals. We have been made . . . lord over creation, expressing humanity's function of dominion (Gn 1:26). The image of everything under his feet is developed in the rest of Scripture as a picture of the reign of God's King, Jesus Christ (the second Adam), over His kingdom (1Co 15:25,27; Eph 1:22; Heb 2:8).

8:9 The psalm ends as it began, forming an inclusio (essentially "bookends") for its content.

Ps 9 title The Hebrew word Muth-labben could be related to alamoth, which appears in the title of Psalm 46. It could be translated as "for the death of a son" in the sense of being used for that occasion. More likely it identifies a specific tune or style of music. Psalm 10 does not have a title and is joined to this psalm in the LXX and the Vulgate. Another reason for seeing Psalms 9 and 10 as one is that there is an alphabetic acrostic that begins in Psalm 9 and is continued in Psalm 10. However, there is a sufficient change that takes place, especially in terms of mood and form (Ps 9 focuses on thanksgiving whereas Ps 10 takes the form of a lament psalm). This seems to argue for them being two distinct psalms.

9:1 With all my heart means "sincerely" (86:12; 111:1; 119:10). Wonderful works is unspecified here, but elsewhere it refers to God's acts of creation (136:4), His works in the natural order (Jb 5:9), or the redemptive acts performed on behalf of His people (Ex 3:20).

9:3 The retreat and stumbling of enemies describes either an event recently experienced or a frequent situation brought about by God (27:2; 56:4).

9:4-6 The verbs in these verses express completed action, indicating the confidence of the psalmist that the execution of God's justice was certain. In this context, the throne describes God's judgment (v. 7; 11:4) more than His rule, as it is sometimes used (45:6). Their name being erased and their memory perishing are related phrases; they refer to complete annihilation and the destruction of one's existence (21:10; 83:4; Dt 32:26).

9:7-8 Yahweh is enthroned forever (29:10; 93:2) and is portrayed as judging the world (see note at 7:6-8). Even though there will be a final judgment of the world in the future (96:13; 98:9), God is currently executing His justice on the world as well since He is and has always been the Judge of the earth (94:2).

9:9-10 The fact that Yahweh is on His throne is a comfort to the oppressed because He offers them protection (a refuge) from the wicked who afflict them. The phrases know Your name and trust in You and seek You have essentially the same meaning. They describe those who have personal, experiential knowledge of Yahweh ("know" is connected with love in 91:14), and who depend on Him and look to Him in times of need.

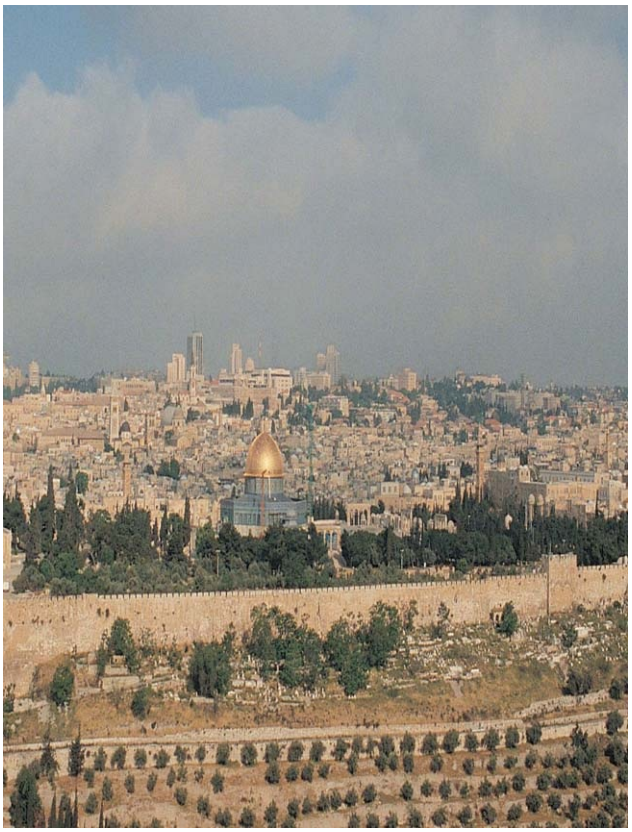
9:11 Sing and proclaim are parallel commands indicating the responsibility of those who know God and His works to tell others (30:4; 1Ch 16:8; Is 12:4).



The Temple Mount and the old city of Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives (9:11,14) 9:12 Bloodshed is literally "bloods"; it is used in a phrase describing the avenging of murder (Gn 9:5; 42:22; Ezk 33:6).

9:13-14 The plea in verse 13 has a purpose, which is to declare all Your praises. This further expands the commands in verse 11 and shows how the psalmist's deliverance will be used to tell others about God's goodness. Rescue from the gates of death will allow him to once again enter the gates of Daughter Zion. This description of Jerusalem appears only here in the Psalms, but it is not uncommon in other books, especially Isaiah and Lamentations. It refers to more than the city itself, including its inhabitants as well.

9:15-16 The idea of enemies suffering the same fate that they had planned for someone else is found in other psalms (7:15-16; 35:8; 57:6). In this case, the enemies are the nations who are being judged by God for their rebellion against

His authority (2:1). This is clear from the parallel designation the wicked in verse 16. Higgaion comes perhaps from a Hebrew root meaning "murmur." It might refer to the use of quieter instruments.

9:17-18 There is a play on the word "forget" in these verses. Those who forget God will go to Sheol, a place where they are forgotten (88:5), a concept similar to that of 9:5-6. In contrast, the future looks good for those who trust in Yahweh but are currently being persecuted by others; the God of justice will see to it that they are remembered.

9:19-20 Rise up is a martial call for the Lord to act (see note at 7:6-8). More specifically, He is asked to put terror in them. This is not the "fear of the Lord" that is characteristic of those who believe in Yahweh but the terror of people at the approach of an army (Dt 2:25; 11:25).

10:1 -2 The perceived absence of Yahweh in the psalmist's suffering is described as standing far away (35:22; 38:21) and hiding (13:1). This is another way of saying that God has not yet delivered the psalmist, although there is an implication of rejection as expressed more forcefully in other lament psalms (22:1). The specific affliction here is identified in 10:2 in the request for the wicked to be caught in their own schemes (see note at 7:14-16).

10:3-6 The arrogance of the wicked one climaxes in a statement denying God's existence. This is not metaphysical atheism, in which there is absolute unbelief in God's existence, but practical atheism, which denies that God pays any attention to what people are doing (14:1; 53:1). The enemy's security rests on his thinking, which is that he can get away with anything his own cravings allow. He will never be moved (15:5; 16:8; 21:7; 62:2; 112:6) in the sense that no higher being will divert him from doing what he desires.

10:7 Mouth and tongue are used for speech, describing the deadly arsenal of the enemy's words (5:9; 140:3). A similar image appears in 64:3 where a tongue is a sword and speech is an arrow.

10:8-10 The image of a wild animal, specifically a lion, is commonly used for the wicked (see note at 7:1-2). He preys on the innocent (94:21; 106:38) and the helpless. This second term is used only in this psalm (vv. 10,14).

10:11 God's inactivity is evidence enough for the wicked that He has forgotten the righteous, reinforcing the practical atheism expressed in verse 4. This is coupled with the assumption that God was hiding Himself. For the afflicted, this apparent situation was a perplexing question (v. 1).

10:12-15 On rise up, see notes at 7:6-8 and 9:19-20. What is true in Psalm 9 is now in conflict with what appears to be happening in Psalm 10. God is asked not to forget the afflicted, but in 9:12,18 He does not forget them. Here the wicked think that God will not demand an account, but in 9:12 He clearly does.

The tension is between appearance and reality, a common situation in the lament psalms. Fatherless is a better rendering than “orphan,” since in Hebrew society it was the lack (or loss) of a father that made a person helpless by not having property or rights. Breaking the arm of the wicked would make them helpless as well (37:17), allowing them to be called into account.

10:16-18 Since Yahweh is sovereign forever, His justice will triumph. The statement that nations will perish from His land is reminiscent of the annihilation of the Canaanites from the promised land, a land that belonged to Yahweh and was given to His people (Dt 7). The final result is that the wicked will no longer terrify others but will themselves be terrified (9:20).

11:1 A bird is a defenseless animal that can only fly away rather than stand its ground and fight (55:6; 124:7). The statement expresses the counsel of the psalmist’s advisers or perhaps his own thoughts.

11:2 Comparing this verse to 7:12 where God is the One primed and ready to shoot at the wicked shows the irony of this situation.

11:3 The foundations are undefined here but could refer to moral foundations or the principles of justice within society. The activities of the wicked shake the foundations of justice and morality (82:5; Ezk 30:4).

11:4-5 The security of the psalmist rested in the fact that God had not left His holy temple (see Mc 1:2; Hab 2:20) and was still on His throne (103:19), both of which are in heaven. Though the wicked thought that God was not paying any attention to what was happening on earth (10:4; 14:1; 53:1), He was actually watching and examining everyone (33:13-14). This included both the righteous and the wicked.

11:6 The Hebrew text of this verse reads, “He will rain down traps on the wicked.” This reading might have originated from a connection with verse 1, since the word “trap” most often describes something used to catch birds (Am 3:5). Another reading is “coals of fire,” which only amounts to a slight variation of letters. This seems more likely in light of the parallel with scorching wind.

11:7 Seeing God’s face is equivalent to experiencing God’s favor or blessing (17:15; Jb 33:26). It is the opposite of God hiding His face (Ps 10:11). A related image is for God’s face to “shine” on His people (Nm 6:25).

Ps 12 title On Sheminith, see note at Psalm 6 title.

12:1 These words were spoken from personal experience and conclude that there did not seem to be anyone left who was faithful or loyal to Yahweh (14:3; 53:3; Mc 7:2). This is similar to Elijah’s experience when he believed he was the last person in the land who was faithful to the Lord (1Kg 19:10).

12:4 As in other descriptions of the wicked, their speech gave away their motives (5:9; 10:7; 59:12). In fact, they believed that their power resided in their speech, highlighting perhaps their ability to influence others by what they said.

12:5 The familiar image of God rising up (7:6; 9:19) indicates that He is going to act. The picture of God acting as a result of hearing the cries of His people is similar to Ex 2:24.

12:6 In contrast to the unreliability of the words of the wicked (vv. 2-4; also 5:9), Yahweh's words are pure like refined . . . silver, meaning absolutely trustworthy (18:30; 19:7-10). Seven times refers to the fullest sense or the fact that a person cannot exceed this limit (Dn 3:19).

12:7-8 Yahweh protects His own (31:23), but the wicked wander about aimlessly. The Hebrew word translated "wander" is a common word for "walk," but in this form it expresses the idea of walking back and forth. When combined with everywhere, it means to walk around without any sense of purpose. The fact that what is worthless is exalted shows the extent of the influence of sin in society (Ec 8:11). God does not tolerate people who love what is worthless (Ps 4:2).

13:1-2 The phrase how long is not uncommon in the lament psalms (6:3; 35:17; 74:10; 79:5; 80:4; 94:3); however, it appears more times here (four times) than in any other single text. This highlights the fact that the psalmist had endured his suffering for a long time and was considering that Yahweh might have hidden His face from Him and forgotten Him. Both of these descriptions convey the idea of rejection (44:24).

13:3-4 Brightness in the eyes represents vitality and is the opposite of one's eyes growing dim during times of grief and suffering (6:7; 38:10; Jb 17:7). In this context it is contrasted with death. The enemy was adding to the psalmist's suffering by proclaiming triumph over him. The statement I am shaken could refer to dying, but it could also be used to indicate defeat. In most contexts it is used with the negative as a statement of the assurance of security: "I will not be shaken" (16:8; 30:6; 62:6).

13:5-6 Even though the question about the time of God's intervention remained, the psalmist reaffirmed his trust in Yahweh's faithful love. This is the Hebrew word chesed , which is rooted in Yahweh's covenant with His people; sometimes it is even synonymous with the term covenant (see note at 89:28). The psalmist's trust was not in himself but in the God of the covenant who promised that He would show faithful love to those who love and obey Him (Dt 7:9; Neh 1:5; Dn 9:4).

14:1 The statement that God does not exist affirms practical rather than metaphysical atheism (see note at 10:3-6). The person making this claim is described as the fool (Hb nabal ; 1Sm 25:25). This is not someone who was simple or gullible because it was outside his ability to be otherwise, but someone who was willfully ignorant, closing his mind off from God's wisdom and truth.

14:2 The LORD is depicted as one who, though He resides in heaven, is not ignorant of what happens on earth (11:4-5; 33:13-15). While in actuality God always knows the hearts of all mankind, here He is described in anthropomorphic terms as looking down to evaluate people. For similar terminology, see Gn 11:5; 18:21.

14:3 This verse expands the thought from the end of verse 1 by indicating that the psalmist felt isolated because he seemed to be the only one left who was faithful to Yahweh (12:1). Paul used this verse in a more absolute sense that no one among mankind is righteous since all are corrupt. Paul's usage is not contradictory to the original verse but extends its imagery to reflect the meaning that no person can claim righteousness apart from that which is given through faith in Jesus Christ.

14:4 The image of wicked people who devour or consume others is found elsewhere (27:2; Pr 30:14). It is perhaps related to the image of wild beasts such as lions that devour their prey (Ps 10:9; 17:12).

14:5-6 Terror is what the wicked bring to God's people (10:18), but the hope is that God will do the same to them (9:20). The plans of the afflicted will succeed when God frustrates the plans of the wicked (33:10).

14:7 The Hebrew for restores . . . His people is difficult. It is literally "turns with a turning His people." The Hebrew word for turn can also mean "return," and some understand this to mean the return of captives (perhaps from the exile). Such an event does not seem to fit this context. Here the idea is probably more general and describes God's blessings on His people.

15:1 The phrase Your Tent is parallel to Your holy mountain and refers to the sanctuary of Yahweh. This is the place of God's presence and protection (61:4). Certain people are not allowed in God's presence because of His holiness (5:4-5). The desire of God's people is to be in His presence forever (65:4; 84:3-4).

15:2 Lives honestly is literally "walks blamelessly," and it refers to a life of integrity (18:23; 119:1). The truth of God is not just something proclaimed. It must reside in a person's heart, which is the mind or the inner person (Dt 6:6; Is 29:13).

15:3 God is intolerant of those who destroy others with their speech (101:5). Slandering and discrediting come from an attitude of hatred and a desire to harm others (10:12,18).

15:4 Despising the wicked and honoring the godly are attitudes that show we are made in God's image—we love what He loves and hate what He hates (139:21-22).

15:5 The command against lending at interest was only applicable to fellow Israelites and not to foreigners (Dt 23:20). However, someone who is close to the Lord will follow the spirit of the law and not just the letter. What is common between lending at interest and bribery is that both profit from someone else's misfortune or lack (Pr 15:27). Those who are able to enter God's sanctuary will never be moved. This is sometimes translated as "shaken," meaning that they will be secure (10:6; 13:4).

Ps 16 title Miktam occurs in the titles of six psalms (Pss 16; 56-60). Its meaning is difficult to determine. The Hebrew root from which the form is derived may mean "cover," "secret," or "inscribe." It is most likely a musical term, though its precise relationship with music is uncertain.

16:2 The phrase nothing good besides You is literally "my good (is) not above/beyond You" and is difficult in Hebrew. It is most likely related to a similar expression in 73:25 that carries the idea of finding nothing desirable on earth apart from the Lord.

16:3 Holy people (lit "holy ones") and noble ones are difficult to identify. Based on a common meaning of "holy ones" as heavenly beings, some have suggested angels or gods. Another suggestion is that these are leaders or rulers because of the designation "noble ones." The phrase in the land seems to argue for their identity as mortals. Most likely "holy" and "noble" are used to describe God's people in general. The more common word for God's people is the word meaning "faithful," as in "faithful ones" (50:5).

16:4 Multiplied sorrows is reminiscent of the curse in Gn 3:16 whereby God intensified "labor pains" for the woman. Drink offerings of blood could be a reference to human sacrifice (Is 57:5), although it is probably offerings made by those with impure motives who therefore remained guilty of sin (Is 1:15; 66:3).

16:5-6 My portion . . . cup of blessing and boundary lines . . . inheritance are terms usually used to describe the land promised to Israel. But the idea that God Himself is the true inheritance rather than the land was a promise specifically to Aaron and his sons (Nm 18:20; Dt 10:9). Here the concept is expressed more generally as true for anyone who is among God's people.

16:7 God guides His people with His counsel (33:11; 73:24). Conscience is literally "kidneys," which are often used in parallel with "heart" to signify the inner person (26:2; Jr 17:10).

16:8 In legal contexts the person who represented the defense of another was at the right hand (109:6). In military contexts the soldier protecting his comrade was at the right hand; also, it was the location for the sword, the primary weapon used in hand-to-hand combat. On not be shaken, see note at 13:3-4.

16:9-11 Along with verse 8, these verses are quoted (from the LXX) in the NT and explained as referring to Jesus' resurrection (Ac 2:25-31). Though in its original context it is possible to understand the terminology as meaning deliverance from death, it can also be used to describe resurrection from the dead. The language is sufficiently ambiguous to allow for both possibilities. The NT usage is within the range of meaning and is, according to Peter, the meaning that God ultimately intended in reference to Christ. Confidence is expressed in the fact that one can rest securely. As in the case of the imagery in verses 5-6, this language usually relates to the land (Dt 33:12,28; Jr 23:6; 33:16). The path of life usually means the way to life in OT Wisdom literature (Pr 5:6).

17:1 -2 The concept of a just cause is also found in 9:4, although the Hebrew words are slightly different. In that context the psalmist praised God for hearing his case and answering his prayer. Here this forms part of the petition and is further identified as vindication and what is right in verse 2. In this context they are legal terms describing a case brought before Yahweh who is acting as judge in the case. Lips free of deceit refers to sincerity and truthfulness. God will not tolerate deceit (101:7).

17:3-5 God is the One who tests and tries people, particularly their motives (Pr 26:2; Jr 17:10). He is the only One who can declare a person righteous (Gn 15:6; Dt 6:25; Ps 37:6). Therefore, the truthfulness of this plea can be verified by God. As in the case of other declarations of innocence (see note at 7:3-5), this is not a statement of absolute righteousness, as found in the NT, but relative righteousness in terms of being habitually faithful to God and avoiding behavior that characterizes sin and rebellion against God (1:1; 26:4-5; Ezk 18:6-8).

17:7 Wonders is similar to "wonderful works" (see note at 9:1). Though this could be general enough to include works of creation, here it seems to be related to God's intervention in a time of need. The terms "wonders," faithful love, and right hand also occur together in Ex 15:11-13 where Moses in his song related the events of the exodus and God's wonderful acts that were part of Israel's redemption.

17:8 Both images in verse 8 convey the idea of protection. The pupil of the eye is that part of the body that is closely guarded (Dt 32:10; Pr 7:2). The image of being hidden in the shadow of Your wings portrays God as a mother bird protecting her young (36:7; 57:1).

17:10-12 The Hebrew in verse 10 is literally "they have closed up their fat." Fat represented prosperity, but such a state of abundance could and often did lead to callousness and rebellion (73:7; Dt 32:15; Jr 5:28). The idea here is that these enemies of God had become hardened toward Him and were surrounding the psalmist (both here and in v. 9) to attack a person who was faithful to God. The Hebrew text at the beginning of verse 11 is literally "our steps," which is difficult. Other texts read a verb such as advance, a reading that is more understandable and fits the context. On the lion imagery, see note at 7:1-2.

17:13-14 Rise up probably expresses the military idea of preparing for battle since it is linked with Your sword (see note at 7:6-8). The meaning of world here is similar to the use of the Greek cosmos in the NT to describe the world system that is against God. These men belong to the world system, and their inheritance or portion was only in this earthly life (see Ec 9:9). God would fill their bellies with punishment, so much so that it would continue in the generations to come (Ex 20:5; Dt 5:9; Jb 21:19).

17:15 Seeing God's face is equivalent to receiving blessings from Him (see note at 4:6). There is a contrast between this faithful one being satisfied with God and the wicked being satisfied with God's punishment in verse 14. Its use in verse 14 is sarcastic in comparison to here.

Ps 18 title This title contains more information about its setting than any other psalm. It is linked with the Lord's deliverance of David . . . from . . . all his enemies and from . . . Saul. This rescue is not specified or described any further in the title. Neither does its parallel, 2 Samuel 22, give any detailed information about its precise setting in David's life. However, it is clearly set against the backdrop of a military victory where Yahweh fought for David and delivered him from his enemies. Such was the promise for those who obeyed Yahweh. He would fight for them and bring them victory (Dt 32:41-42). Elsewhere in the OT, only Moses and Joshua are called the servant of the LORD (cp. Ps 36 title).

18:1-2 In no other psalm is there such a large number of metaphors used to convey God's attributes. All of these relate to a military setting where God is seen as the real strength behind the person who fights. He also protects the psalmist as a hiding place from the enemy (his rock . . . fortress . . . mountain, and stronghold). God also protects him by guarding him against the onslaught of weapons (He is his shield) and rescues him from his enemies (He is his deliverer and his salvation). In keeping with the military imagery in this psalm, the horn of salvation may refer to one of the horns of the altar, which represented a place of refuge (1Kg 1:50-51). However, it more likely refers to the horn of a wild animal that gored its enemies (Dt 33:17; Ps 92:10), signifying military strength.

18:3 Worthy of praise in some contexts is based on the attributes of God (48:1; 96:4; 145:3), but here it is clearly connected with specific events in the life of the psalmist.

18:4-5 The perception of the inevitability of death is pictured in a number of ways in the psalms (such as being near Sheol; 88:3). In this case it is pictured as being entangled in ropes and unable to escape (116:3; 119:61). Torrents is an image of being overwhelmed with water and in danger of drowning (Jnh 2:3,5).

When pieced together such imagery describes being tangled in ropes while overtaken with a flood of water. There was absolutely no chance to swim away since the psalmist's limbs were bound and unable to move. Death itself confronted him in the same way enemies did (17:13) and would not allow him to escape.

18:6 Temple most likely refers to heaven in this context (see note at 11:4-5).

18:7-15 These verses describe a theophany where God reveals His power through natural phenomena such as an earthquake (v. 7) and a thunderstorm (vv. 13-14). Mountains represent stability within the natural order, so their shaking and trembling describes God's power to bring upheaval to what seemed secure (Jdg 5:5; 1Sm 14:15). Smoke and consuming fire combined with God's voice that thundered from heaven is reminiscent of the Sinai experience (Ex 24:17; Dt 4:12,24; 9:3). The image of God acting as a warrior who fights for His people and uses the natural elements as His weapons is also connected with Israel's past experiences (Jos 10:11; Jdg 5:4,20). God's riding on a cherub—imagery found in creation hymns (19:1; 104:3)—blends the supernatural with the natural. Such a mixture is a common feature in many ancient Near Eastern myths, particularly those related to Baal, the Canaanite storm god. Some interpreters see this section of the psalm as a polemic against Baal, showing that Yahweh is the sovereign Lord of creation. Psalm 18:15 seems to be connected with the exodus event when the depths of the sea became visible because of God's breath (see Ex 14:21).

18:16-19 Reaching down, taking hold, and pulling out are anthropomorphic descriptions of God's condescension to rescue the psalmist in his time of need. These terms also allude to the image of a well as the place where one feels trapped during times of distress, connecting the concepts of "drawn up" and rescued (30:3; 40:2; Jr 38:10). The deep waters are related to the "torrents of destruction" in verse 4 and are identified more specifically as enemies. The spacious place is another illustration of being delivered from one's enemies (see note at 4:1). There is assurance that God delights in His people when He rescues them from harm and protects them from their enemies (41:11).

18:20-24 This declaration of innocence is set off by the same statements in verses 20 and 24. Unlike its use in prayers, these statements of innocence are part of thanksgiving for answered prayer, indicating why God delivered the psalmist from his calamity. Righteousness is further clarified as cleanness of . . . hands, meaning integrity in his obedience to God's commands (24:4; see note at 7:3-5). The psalmist was not absolutely perfect and free from sin, but he was blameless in terms of his faithfulness to God (15:2; Dt 18:13).

18:25-26 These verses make the connection between the statements of innocence in the previous section and Yahweh's covenant faithfulness. This is an outworking of the covenant stipulations in Deuteronomy 28 whereby God is faithful to those who are faithful to Him.

18:28-29 Light is sometimes connected with salvation (deliverance) and provides security and assurance that God protects His own (27:1). The security becomes confidence in 18:29 with the sense that the psalmist could leap over a wall. In other words, he could accomplish the impossible with God on his side (Mt 19:26; Mk 9:23; Lk 18:27).

18:31 The uniqueness of Yahweh is significant in Israel's theology, and it forms the basis for the distinctiveness of Israel among the other nations (35:10; 89:8; Ex 15:11; Dt 4:32-40).

18:32-36 The descriptions in these verses are of traits that are important for warfare. Strength is the clothing (1Sm 2:4). Feet of a deer represent swiftness (2Sm 1:23; 2:18). God made the psalmist more skillful by training his hands. The bow of bronze is unusual since bows were not covered with metal. The point seems to be that it was strengthened and made more effective as a weapon (Jb 20:24). The shield is perhaps related to its earlier mention where it was identified with God Himself (vv. 2,30). On widen a place, compare verse 19 and see note at 4:1.

18:37-42 Rather than being pursued (7:1,5), those who are strengthened by God pursue their enemies (Ex 15:9). The shift between first-person and second-person forms in these verses indicates that God is the One who is at work through His warrior. Though God can work directly, He also uses people as His instruments to accomplish His purposes.

18:43-48 The designation head of nations along with the verb subdues refers to the dominion over the nations that was promised to the Davidic ruler of Israel (110:1-2; Jr 31:7). Some interpreters see this as recalling situations where David himself conquered other nations (2Sm 8:9-10; 10:19).

18:49 The nations are not just defeated and subdued by Israel's king; they become the audience for the praise of Yahweh among His people (57:9; 108:3) so that they too participate in singing praise to God (67:4).

18:50 The combination of king . . . anointed . . . David and his descendants makes the connection with the Davidic covenant even more explicit than the previous verses (110:1-2; 2Sm 7:8-14).

19:1 Although the heavens can refer to God's dwelling place, here it is clarified by sky, which is what can be seen from the perspective of those who live on the earth. The "sky" is the same Hebrew word as the expanse that separated water from water in Gn 1:6-8. Creation is sometimes personified as a witness to God's work among His people, particularly in the covenant relationship He has with them (Dt 4:26; 30:19; Is 1:2). In this context one specific part of creation is personified as declaring and proclaiming a message. The parallelism between the glory of God and the work of His hands indicates that the objects of creation are demonstrations (or evidence) of God's glory (50:6; 89:5-8; 97:6; Rm 1:19-20).

19:2-3 Pour out is literally "gush" or "bubble up." This phrase is most often used for springs or fountains of water. The significance of the term here seems to be that speech never ceases. The concept is intensified by the doubling of the terms day and night. The message goes out all the time without ceasing. The paradox is that there is speech in verse 2, but there is no speech in verse 3. Although the same Hebrew term ('omer) appears in both verses, it is used differently. In the first instance it is equivalent to the message in verse 1; in the second instance it means words. Therefore, it is a message with clearly defined content, but it is not communicated with the words of human language.

19:4-6 While verse 2 says that the message comes at all times, this verse adds that it also comes to all places. The word for world (Hb tevel) is not the usual word for earth (as in the first line), but it denotes dry land that is capable of sustaining life (9:8; 24:1)—in other words, the inhabited world. No one can escape the message either in time or in space, and everyone is accountable for the message (Rm 1:20). The focus turns from the more general heavens to the most obvious and spectacular object in them: the sun. It is also personified and compared to a groom and an athlete. These images are used together to convey the idea of youthful strength, a concept that is elsewhere associated with the sun, especially when it rises (Jdg 5:31). The fact that nothing is hidden from the sun reinforces the idea that the message of God's glory is as obvious as the most visible and powerful object in God's creation.

19:7-9 The shift of subject between verses 1-6 and verses 7-14 seems abrupt. However, the common element in both cases is God's revelation of Himself and His purposes to mankind. In the first part of the psalm, it is God's creation (general revelation), whereas in the second part, it is the words that God specifically communicated to His people (special revelation). On the Hebrew word torah as instruction, see note at 1:2. Perfect is a term that is often used in relation to sacrifices that are acceptable to God because they are "unblemished" and "without defect" (Lv 1:3,10), but it can also refer to the perfect work of God (Dt 32:4). Renewing one's life means the restoration of strength or vitality (1Kg 17:22; Lm 1:11). Making the eyes light up seems like an unusual idiom, but it makes a connection between light and truth, or more specifically knowledge and understanding of the truth (119:105,130; Pr 6:23). The fear of the LORD is the only subject in this list that involves human response to God's instruction rather than a synonym for it. The concept involves obedience to God with an attitude of humility and reverence (see notes at 76:7 and 103:17-18). Its inclusion further demonstrates the relationship between fearing Yahweh and the knowledge and understanding of His truth (Pr 1:7; 9:10).

19:10-11 Gold and honey were valuable commodities in the ancient world, but God's words are even more valuable (119:103,127). The warning and reward are both positive benefits of knowing God's instruction because they keep God's servants from straying off the path of righteousness and provide them with blessings (119:35; Pr 4:18).

19:12-13 Unintentional or hidden sins can represent those that occur with or without proper instruction. The question is rhetorical and assumes a negative answer. For this reason, continual cleansing is required for these sins. Willful sins are different in that they must be avoided or else they lead to being "cut off" from God and His people (Nm 15:30-31).

19:14 The final plea is that the psalmist's speech and thinking (meditation, from the Hb root hgh; see note at 1:2) reflect what is acceptable to God. The language of sacrifice is used to show that life should be lived as a sacrifice to God (Rm 12:1).

20:1 Day of trouble can refer to any distress (50:15; 77:2; 86:7), but in this case it is a crisis caused by enemies. This is validated by the main request of the psalm in 20:9 for the king's victory. Name appears three times in this psalm (vv. 1,5,7) and is used as a substitute for Yahweh Himself (68:4; 145:1-2). It can represent His protection (Pr 18:10). In the most general sense, it conveys God's self-revelation and represents His presence among His people (Dt 12:5,11; 1Kg 8:29). The use of Jacob's name as a reference to the nation of Israel also emphasizes the personal aspects of God's relationship with His people.

20:4 The heart's desires and purpose are related in the sense that God's purposes and His people's desires should be the same. The word "purpose" refers to counsel or plans, such as military advice (2Sm 16:20; 2Kg 18:20).

20:5 Banners were used in military campaigns to identify members of an army. These banners often included symbols or representations of the national gods who were fighting for the respective armies. Yahweh took on this role with Israel (Ex 15:3; Jos 23:10) and was identified as Israel's banner (Ex 17:15).

20:6 Anointed has the sense of being chosen, a title often related to Israel's king who was chosen by God to rule over His people (2:2; 45:7). In 20:2 help comes from Zion, but here help comes from His holy heaven. Although Yahweh dwelt among His people, His real domain from which He ruled was heaven (11:4; Is 66:1).

20:7-8 Human armaments were of no value if Yahweh was not fighting because He and His armies were more numerous and powerful than any human army (68:17). He had no concern or need for human weapons (147:10).

20:9 This verse specifies the purpose of the psalm—that the king would experience victory. Only Yahweh could grant this.

21:1-2 These verses tie this psalm to the previous one with the mention of victory (see note at 20:9) and heart's desire (see note at 20:4). This is a thanksgiving psalm that expressed thanks to Yahweh for giving victory to the king (21:1,7).

21:3 The crown is used as a sign of victory over a defeated power (2Sm 12:30).

21:4 Lengthening of life seems to be related to the king's victory over his enemies. To suffer defeat often meant to be killed, especially in the case of kings who led their own armies. Long life was apparently a common aim in prayer offered for kings (61:6; 72:17; 1Kg 3:11,14), and in a broader sense, this related not just to them but to their dynasties as well.

21:5 Majesty and splendor along with the crown of verse 3 recall the creation hymn in Psalm 8, where man himself is to function as God's co-regent. Together they are symbols of rule and dominion.

21:6-7 To be in the presence of God is the ultimate joy for a person who relies on Yahweh (16:11). On Most High, see note at 7:17.

21:8-10 The Hebrew word yad "hand" can mean power or strength, but when used of God it is often a symbol of His judgment (Ex 9:3; Dt 2:15; Jdg 2:15). Fire is associated with God's wrath (89:46), symbolizing the intensity and destructive power of God's judgment. Being wiped from the earth and having no offspring show the annihilation of a person or people (Dt 4:26; 2Sm 4:11; Am 9:8).

21:11-12 The plan of the wicked will not succeed because God will thwart them (2:1-2,9). In some contexts their evil plans come back to them (7:15-16; Pr 26:27), but here it is God Himself who will deal with them. Put . . . to flight is literally "turn a shoulder." It refers to the enemies turning their back toward their attackers and running away (6:10; 9:3; Ex 23:27).

Ps 22 title "The Deer of the Dawn" was apparently a known tune of the time. The Hebrew word for "deer" ('ayyeleth) is similar to the rare word for "help" ('eyaluth) that is used in verse 19.

22:1 This psalm opens with a question about God's rejection, similar to other lament psalms (10:1; 13:1-2). This rejection is represented by the term forsaken. The same idea appears elsewhere in the psalm with God being "far away" (v. 19) and "hiding His face" (v. 24). In his suffering, the psalmist foreshadowed the Messiah; in His suffering, Jesus identified with the psalmist (Mt 27:46). When Jesus quoted this first line, He was probably calling attention to the whole psalm, including the theme of victory at the end.

22:3-5 These verses identify the psalmist with the nation of Israel and more specifically with Yahweh's covenant faithfulness to His people as shown by His deliverance of them time and time again (78:53; 107:6). Enthroned on the praises is unusual, picturing Yahweh's dwelling above the cherubim on the ark of the covenant (80:1; 99:1). However, in this instance it is the praise of God's people that is the focus because Yahweh is the praise of Israel (Dt 10:21).

22:6-8 Worm expresses humiliation (Jb 25:6; Is 41:14), an idea that is further developed with the scorn of the enemies. Shaking their heads was a physical gesture often associated with sneering and mocking (see textual footnote on 44:14; cp. 64:8). This disgrace was in direct contrast to the fact that Yahweh had kept Israel from disgrace (22:5). The thought that Yahweh would not rescue one of His own was a common assumption by Israel's enemies (3:2; 71:11).

22:9-10 The phrase over to You is in the emphatic position in the Hebrew text, emphasizing that Yahweh is the One in whom the psalmist has trusted since birth.

22:12-13 The connection between one's enemies and wild animals, especially lions, is found in other psalms (see note at 7:1-2). With bulls the point seems to be strength rather than fierceness.

22:14-15 The terminology in these verses conveys the notion of being drained of strength. A heart like melting wax is similar to the image of "melting hearts" in other contexts where the emotion of fear is so intense that all courage disappears (Dt 20:8; Jos 2:11; 7:5). Dust of death implies the nearness and inevitability of death (Jb 7:21; 10:9) and is sometimes linked with Sheol (Jb 17:16).

22:16 The Hebrew text is difficult, reading literally "like a lion my hands and my feet" for pierced my hands and my feet. Other manuscript traditions, including the LXX, read the Hebrew ka'ari ("like the lion") as a verb from the Hebrew root krh, meaning either "to bind" or "to dig." Digging could be synonymous with piercing. Christians have often adopted this reading and seen it as a prophetic allusion to Christ's crucifixion since NT authors quote so much of this psalm in relation to that event (e.g., Mt 27:46).

22:17-18 Counting bones seems to be related to imagery where a person was so emaciated from suffering or brutality that his bones were visible (102:5; Jb 19:20; 33:21). Dividing garments is an attested practice in Middle Assyrian laws where a criminal's clothes could be given to the prosecutor or to those carrying out the sentence. It was apparently practiced in other cultures, including Rome in the first century, as evident in the death of Jesus (Mt 27:35; Jn 19:23).

22:20-21 The psalmist uses imagery from animals to represent enemies. All are repeated with the exception of the wild oxen instead of bulls. Their horns that gored in an attack are the main focus in that image (see note at 18:1-2). Dogs might not seem like a negative image because of their role as pets in modern Western society, but in much of the ancient Near East they were never domesticated and were always wild and ravenous animals.

22:22-24 Verse 22 begins a new major section in this psalm, shifting the focus from petition to thanksgiving. The shift might indicate that the prayer of verses 1-21 had been answered or that such an answer was anticipated. Thanksgiving was to be offered in the congregation to evoke praise from the people of God. This was the responsibility of anyone whom Yahweh rescued, so that the entire community could rejoice in God's acts of deliverance (66:16). Whereas the psalmist praised God for being delivered from death, Jesus the Messiah brought glory to God through His death and resurrection.

22:25-26 The vows were those made during the time of prayer (50:14; 61:8; 66:13). Their fulfillment also took place in the great congregation as a further testimony of God's goodness to the psalmist. Any ceremonially clean person witnessing someone's praise offering was permitted to eat from it (Lv 7:11-21).

22:27-31 The psalm ends by broadening to the most universal purpose of God's kingdom over the earth. Israel's purpose was to be a testimony to other nations so they would bow down before Yahweh and serve Him (67:2; 72:11,17; 86:9). The growth of the kingdom throughout time is demonstrated in the phrase a people yet to be born (future generations). The inclusion of those who go down to the dust who would pay homage to Yahweh (v. 29) is unusual, since in other psalms it is clear that the dead cannot praise Him (6:5; 88:10-12). This is more likely a reference to the final stage of God's kingdom where even the dead are brought back to life to recognize Yahweh's authority over all things (Dn 12:2).

23:1 The LORD is often referred to as the shepherd of His people, Israel (74:1; 80:1; Is 40:11; Ezk 34:11-16). In the ancient Near East, kings were commonly known as the shepherds of their people. Since Yahweh is the true King, the title shepherd is most appropriate.

Shepherd leading his sheep 23:2-3 Lets me lie down is a Hebrew form implying causality, showing that God is the cause of the refreshment. On renews my life, see note at 19:7-9. Right paths might have a twofold idea. In keeping with the shepherd and sheep image, it can mean safe paths that are free from danger. In the larger context of Wisdom literature it refers to paths of righteousness, though usually that would contrast one path of life with another leading to death. The former idea is probably the primary meaning here.

23:4 Some argue that the Hebrew term tsalmaweth is related to an Akkadian word (tselem) that means "deep darkness." Others say it comes from two Hebrew words, tsal and moth, and means "shadow of death." It occurs approximately 20 times in the OT. It is clear that it implies intense darkness that represents extreme danger (Jb 10:21; 28:3; Jr 2:6). "Darkest" fits this specific context, since it is in the darkest valley where the greatest danger (such as a predator) lurks for sheep.

23:5 The image shifts from shepherd to friend. The identification of Yahweh with a shepherd emphasizes His care and protection, but He is much more than that for a person who is in close fellowship with Him. While protection from enemies is still implied, it is intensified with the image of a banquet (table) that is served while the enemies look on. In Jewish society oil was a symbol for rejoicing (104:15) and was also used in the welcoming of guests (45:7; 92:10; Lk 7:46).

23:6 The verb pursue is commonly used for attackers, but here Yahweh's goodness and faithful love are personified as the ones who chased the psalmist throughout his life. As long as I live represents the Hebrew "for the length of days." This is equivalent to the parallel all the days of my life. Though some translate this as "forever," it is nowhere else used that way but always refers to one's earthly life (91:16; Pr 3:2,16). Dwell (Hb yashav) is similar to the word for "return" (Hb shuv). In this verbal form, it differs only in the vowels. It is possible that the request is to return to the sanctuary of Yahweh throughout one's life, although the preposition in argues for the idea of "dwell."

24:1-2 Everything on earth belongs to the LORD by right of creation (Dt

10:14). World (Hb tevel) refers to the inhabited world (see note at 19:4-6). According to the ancient Israelite conception, the earth rested on the waters (136:6; Ex 20:4); the seas and rivers are what was seen of this phenomenon. The earth was set on a firm foundation, so it was stable and secure (104:5; Is 51:13).

24:3-4 The use of rhetorical questions about those who are worthy to enter into Yahweh's presence is similar to Psalm 15. Clean hands and a pure heart represent innocence and integrity (73:13) in a similar sense as a person who "lives honestly" (see note at 15:2).

24:6 Seek means more than looking for something that is lost or hidden. It means turning to someone for advice and help; it is thus synonymous with trust (9:10). This is reinforced with the fact that seeking Yahweh results in life (Am 5:6).

24:7-10 Lift up your heads is a poetic way of saying "extend your height" in reference to the gates. Some think that ancient doors refers to the "gate of heaven" (Gn 28:17). These doors are represented in the earthly gates of the city of Jerusalem. There is certainly a connection between the heavenly throne as the temple of God and the temple existing on earth among His people, so this is a possibility. While "hosts" can refer to the objects in the sky (sun, moon, stars, etc.; Dt 4:19), it can also refer to armies (Ex 7:4) as it does here. The LORD of Hosts portrays Yahweh the Warrior and King returning from battle (1Sm 17:45).

25:2-3 Disgraced (Hb bosh) is used three times in these two verses and once more in verse 20. The belief of the psalmist was that Yahweh would not allow His people to be put to shame because of their faithfulness to Him and the fact that His reputation was at stake (69:6; 119:31).

25:4-5 Guide and teach are essentially synonymous in this context, and they refer to Yahweh's directing those who are faithful to Him. His truth is the guide for their lives (43:3). The paths are similar to "ways" in verse 10 and are connected not only to God's truth but also to His faithful love.

25:6-7 The juxtaposition of remember . . . do not remember, and remember in these verses is significant. The first demonstrates that Yahweh's consciousness of His own attributes is the motivation for Him to act beneficently toward His people. In contrast to this, the sins of the psalmist must not be remembered, that is, they must be forgiven (vv. 11,18). Only after this has taken place could Yahweh remember (act on behalf of) the psalmist (74:2; 106:4; 112:6).

25:8-10 Way and ways are probably not the way of life or conduct of God's people in this instance, as these terms are commonly used elsewhere (143:8; Dt 5:33; also note this use in Ps 25:12). They are more likely related to verses 4-5, and they represent Yahweh's instruction of His people in the truth. In this sense the LORD's ways are equivalent to His covenant and decrees.

25:11 As in the case of verse 6, it is Yahweh's reputation (His name) that is at stake in His forgiveness of the sins of the psalmist. God's reputation is closely connected with His actions toward His people (Ezk 36:22).

25:13 The promise of inheriting the land is closely tied with those who are faithful to God. The promise of the land was never a "blank check" for Israel, but it could be realized only when the people were faithful (Dt 4:1,28-30).

25:14 The Hebrew word sod expresses the idea of "confidential," referring either to the material that is secret or to a "circle of confidants." Given the parallel of His covenant, it seems better to understand this as the content of God's secret counsel. God has the right to conceal what He wants (Pr 25:2), but He can also reveal His secret counsel to anyone He chooses. In this case it is revealed to those who fear Him (trust in Him and are faithful to Him).

25:15 Eyes are often used in the context of faith in the sense that a person "looks to" Yahweh as his source of help (123:2; 141:8).

25:17 The Hebrew text of this verse is difficult, reading literally "the distresses of my heart, they make wide." Although the form for "make wide" usually refers to relief from distress (4:2; 18:37), it can also express the meaning of "enlarge," which would be a figurative expression for increase. This idea is related to numerous enemies who surrounded the psalmist (v. 19).

25:20 Put to shame is similar to "disgrace" (see note at vv. 2-3).

25:21 Integrity and what is right are personified in a similar way as Yahweh's attributes were personified in 23:6. These characteristics will protect those who remain in God's will (37:37).

26:1-3 The request for vindication at the beginning sets the tone for this psalm that primarily involves a declaration of innocence. Although the terminology seems strong, it does not proclaim sinless perfection but moral and spiritual integrity (see note at 17:3-5). A sense of security comes from a life lived with integrity (Pr 10:9). This confidence is expressed in the psalmist's request that God test and examine him (Jr 12:3).

26:4-5 Evidence of a person's faithfulness toward Yahweh is not only in what is done but also in what is avoided, particularly in a person's associations with others. The repeated do not sit with in these verses recalls the language from 1:1.

26:6-7 Washing hands was part of an oath of purification symbolizing innocence (24:4; 73:13; Dt 21:6). Going around the altar is more difficult to interpret. Some suggest that the closest parallel is the activity of the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel (1Kg 18:26). However, their strange behavior, including self-mutilation, makes this an unlikely parallel. Instead, the present context suggests being around the altar and making sacrifices to Yahweh as part of a person's demonstration of purity and loyalty.

26:8 House is not necessarily Solomon's temple, but it may refer to the sanctuary in general (see note at 5:6-7). It was the place of Yahweh's glory, symbolizing God's presence among His people (Ex 40:34-35).

26:10 Some perverted the system of justice by the offering of bribes (15:5; Pr 17:23; 29:4).

26:12 Level ground is associated with the righteous way in which Yahweh leads His people (27:11; 143:10; Is 26:7).

27:1 Light is parallel to salvation, which in this context refers to rescue from danger. Darkness represents danger (23:4), but light dispels darkness, eliminating the immediate danger (18:28). With God's protection, there is no need to be afraid regardless of the danger (v. 3; Rm 8:31).

27:2 Devouring flesh is probably related to the imagery of wild animals as seen elsewhere in relation to enemies (see notes at 7:1-2 and 14:4).

27:4 To dwell in the house of the LORD may mean continually returning to the sanctuary for worship. It can also be more general in referring to living one's life in God's presence. In either case, the point is that there is constant fellowship with Yahweh throughout one's life (see note at 23:6).

27:5 The words conceal and hide mean protection when it is Yahweh hiding His people. Often the image is connected with a mother bird hiding her young under her wings (see note at 17:8).

27:6 Lifting one's head . . . above his enemies is another way of expressing triumph over those who are defeated (3:3).

27:8-9 Face is a key word in these verses, appearing three times. To seek God's face is to petition Yahweh, most often in the context of worship (2Ch 11:16). It involves complete devotion to God in the same sense as turning toward Him (Dt 4:29; Ps 24:6).

27:11 On the significance of level, see note at 26:12.

27:13 The land of the living is in contrast to Sheol, the realm of the dead (Ezk 32:27). Being cut off from the land of the living is another way to express being killed (Jr 11:19). The psalmist anticipated receiving Yahweh's blessings (goodness) while he was still alive.

27:14 Waiting for the LORD is an abbreviated way to express waiting for an answer to prayer. Rather than taking matters into their own hands, the people of God should wait patiently for Yahweh's response (37:7; 40:1; Pr 20:22).

28:1 Deaf and silent are often connected with being "far from" (35:22) and "silent" (83:1). These concepts describe God's lack of intervention in a time of need. "Pit" is sometimes parallel with Sheol, the realm of the dead (30:3; Jb 33:18; Pr 1:12; Is 14:15), so those going down to the Pit refers to those who are going to die.

28:2 Lifting up hands was a common gesture for prayer, perhaps related to the image of showing that one's hands were clean and therefore his motives were pure before the Lord (134:2; 1Kg 8:35,38,42). Sanctuary is a specific word (Hb devir) referring to the innermost part of the sanctuary—the most holy place. This was the place where the ark of the covenant resided, but more importantly it was the location of the mercy seat—the place from which Yahweh dispensed mercy on His people (Ex 26:34).

28:3-5 The psalmist's plea that he not be punished (i.e., dragged away) with the wicked is because he was not connected with them, either in association or in activities (26:9-10). Repay them appears twice as a call for retribution on one's enemies; it is also known as an imprecation (see note at 109:1-31). The reason for this request for judgment on these evildoers is that they did not consider what the LORD had done. Some think that this refers to God's judgment on the wicked; however, the phrase work of His hands is more commonly used for God's work of creation (19:1; 102:25) or for His work in delivering His people (143:5; Is 60:21). The second of these options seems more likely in this context where there is praise for Yahweh's help.

28:6 The shift from petition to thanksgiving is common in lament psalms (see note at 22:22-24).

28:8-9 The relationship between the individual and the community is evident in identifying Yahweh as the psalmist's strength in verse 7 and the strength of His people in verse 8. Though His anointed can refer to the Davidic king of Israel (18:50; 20:6; 45:7), in this case it is parallel to "His people" and represents the nation as a whole (105:15; Hab 3:13). Israel was also known as Yahweh's possession (see 135:4; Ex 19:5 and notes there). On the designation shepherd, see note at 23:1.

29:1 To ascribe something to someone is to acknowledge they have that attribute. Heavenly beings is literally "sons of gods." The word for "gods" (Hb 'elim), although similar to the word for "God" (Hb 'elohim), is never used of Him. The term has a background in ancient Near Eastern mythologies as referring to the divine assembly of the gods (see note at 82:1). In fact, it sometimes refers to pagan gods (Ex 15:11; Dn 11:36), though not as an affirmation that they existed but only as a recognition that other nations believed in them. It can also refer to people, with the meaning of "mighty ones" (Jb 41:25). In this context it is best to understand the term as angelic beings (Ps 89:6). The angels are witnesses of God's creation (Jb 38:7) and are allowed access to God in heaven (Jb 1:6; 2:1). They surround His throne to praise and worship Him (Is 6; Ezk 1). It is most appropriate to address them as those who worship Yahweh.

29:2 The word for splendor can mean "adornment," such as the ornate clothing worn by rulers or dignitaries. In the case of Yahweh, He is clothed in His own attributes (93:1), which in this case is His holiness (96:9; 2Ch 20:21).

29:3-4 Voice here and through verse 9 is used as Yahweh's audible expression of His power, comparable to thunder. The imagery of a thunderstorm for God's power is used in military contexts picturing Yahweh as a warrior (see note at 18:7-15); however, this context does not have any explicit military references and more likely compares Yahweh to the formidable physical phenomenon itself. In the ancient Near East, "waters" represented the primeval chaos that could not be tamed. The description of God's voice above the waters shows His dominion over them (93:3-4; Jr 10:13; 51:16).

29:5-6 Lebanon was known for its cedars, the strongest and most majestic trees in Israel (104:16; Sg 5:15; Is 2:13). Sirion refers to Mount Hermon, the tallest mountain in that area (Dt 3:9). Together these represent the greatest spectacles of creation in and around Israel.

29:7 Lightning, which accompanies thunder in storms, is called flames of fire that flash and come from Yahweh's voice (18:12,14).

29:8-9 The verb for shakes is commonly used to mean "tremble with fear" (96:9; 114:7), so that the picture is of creation itself trembling before Yahweh's power. In this psalm His temple is heaven (11:4; Mc 1:2) where all is the "heavenly beings" in verse 1.

29:10-11 The flood continues the image in verse 3, relating it to "waters," but here the unleashing of the destructive powers of chaos in a flood makes this even more significant than the earlier reference. Some interpreters relate it directly to the flood of Noah's time (Gn 6-7), while others see it as the waters at creation (Gn 1:7; Ps 148:4). The point in either case is that Yahweh rules over (sat enthroned) the most powerful forces in the natural world. Because of this great power, His people find strength in Him.

Ps 30 title If Davidic means "authored by David," then the inclusion of a dedication song for the house might have been added later to indicate how this psalm was used by the nation of Israel. This is a good possibility since psalms composed by individuals within a specific historical setting were later used by the community during worship or for special occasions.

30:1-2 Lifted . . . up is from a Hebrew word (dlh) that is most often used to describe drawing water from a well (Ex 2:16,19; Pr 20:5). Though enemies are not always the immediate cause of the psalmist's affliction, they aggravate the suffering, adding insult to injury (41:5,11). This seems to be the case here since the problem was more likely sickness, as indicated by the word healed in verse 2.

30:3 Sheol in many instances is a synonym for death. To be near Sheol is to be close to death (88:3), so being brought . . . up from Sheol or spared from the Pit is equivalent to being rescued from death (28:1; 88:4).

30:4-5 The personal experience of the individual becomes a lesson to be learned by the community. It is the individual's responsibility to communicate to the community what Yahweh has done (see note at 22:22-24). The lesson is that times of suffering pale in comparison to Yahweh's deliverance (30:5). On the connection between God's anger and human suffering, see note at 6:1.

30:6-7 These verses recall the time before the affliction in order to point out a likely reason for the suffering, which is the need for humility. Before God allowed the psalmist to suffer, he was so secure that he felt he could never be shaken. The security apparently became a source of overconfidence even though it was Yahweh who showed His favor and made him like a strong mountain (5:12). In other words, the blessing of God gave him a false sense of security. The suffering began when Yahweh hid His face (see note at 13:1-2).

30:9 The psalmist seeks to motivate God to act on behalf of His people by emphasizing the loss of praise and testimony for Yahweh if the sufferer were to die (6:5; 88:10-12). This may seem bold, but it demonstrates a key element in Israel's purpose—to be a testimony for Yahweh to the nations by proclaiming His truth (Dt 4:6-8; see note at Ps 18:49).

30:11-12 Lament is parallel with sackcloth, the clothing used to represent a time of mourning (Gn 37:34; Est 4:3; Ezk 27:31). Dancing and being clothed . . . with gladness are also related ideas showing the dramatic change after Yahweh delivered the psalmist from death. The purpose of the deliverance is praise and testimony. This demonstrates the change in perspective from the false sense of security to a renewed sense of purpose in keeping with the reason why God had called out His people from among the nations (30:9).

31:1-4 A number of different Hebrew words are used in these verses for refuge . . . rock, and fortress, all conveying the sense of Yahweh as a source of security and protection (18:1-2). Fortresses were places of protection from an enemy (27:1). Rocks also symbolize stability, something in which a person can place his trust (Is 26:4). A net was metaphorically a malicious plot (35:7; 140:5).

31:5 Spirit could represent the person as a whole or the life-giving force that God gives to each person (Gn 7:22; Is 38:16). Hand means possession or control (Jos 7:7). Although here the expression of trust in Yahweh is in the context of being protected from harm (or, more specifically, death), Jesus used these words as He was dying on the cross to describe the release of His own spirit to His Father (Lk 23:46).

31:6 Those who are faithful to Yahweh and remain close to Him should hate what He hates (101:3; 119:113; 139:12; see note at 15:4).

31:8 Spacious place conveys the notion of being delivered from surrounding enemies who have someone enclosed without an exit (see note at 4:1).

31:9-10 Physical suffering often accompanies emotional distress. Worn out . . . eyes, most likely from crying (6:7; 88:9; Jb 17:7), and bones that were wasting away (see 6:2; 22:14; 102:5) are figurative expressions describing sorrow and grief. The additional idea of my sinfulness as the cause shows the common perception that suffering is the result of sin. While this is true universally and generally, it is not always the case individually and specifically. The same issue is involved in the identification of suffering with God's anger (see note at 6:1).

31:11 Suffering often results not only in ridicule from enemies but also in abandonment (being dreaded) by friends (38:11; 88:18; Jb 16:20; 19:1). In a very real sense, enemies and friends are not easily distinguished during such times.

31:13 The phrase terror . . . on every side occurs frequently in Jeremiah (Jr 6:25; 20:10; 46:5) and is a vivid way to describe being surrounded by enemies. Enemies also plotted to take Jeremiah's life (Jr 11:19; 18:23). It is characteristic of the wicked to plot against the righteous (Ps 21:11; 37:12).

31:15 The request to be in God's power instead of the power of one's enemies is the central plea in this psalm (v. 5; cp. 2Sm 24:14).

31:17-18 The disgrace of one of God's faithful ones reflects negatively on Yahweh's reputation (see notes at 22:6-8 and 25:2-3). Sheol is equivalent to "the land of silence" (94:17; 115:17) where the dead are no longer able to communicate with the living. Death is the only thing that will quiet the deception (lying lips) of these enemies.

31:19 God is often said to store up the sins and punishment of people (Jb 21:19; Hs 13:12), but here it is God's goodness that is stored up for those who fear Him (1Co 2:9).

31:20 On hide and conceal, see note at 17:8.

31:22 To be cut off means to be separated, as in the case of being cut off from the Israelite community (Ex 12:15; Nm 19:13). The most extreme form of separation is death (Ex 9:15; 31:14; Jr 9:21). Being cut off from God's sight refers to His rejection that results in separation from Him. It is similar to other terms for rejection such as God being "far away" or "hiding" from the psalmist (see note at 10:1-2).

31:24 The phrase strong and courageous recalls the words of God to Joshua and Israel to prepare them for the conquest of the promised land (Dt 31:6-7,23; Jos 1:6-7,9,18).

Ps 32 title Maskil may be derived from a root word meaning "insight." For this reason, some have suggested that psalms with this title deal with wisdom or instruction. The problem is that many of the psalms bearing this title do not have teaching elements (even though this psalm does have them in vv. 8-9). It is also possible to connect the word with the idea of "skill," which is closely tied to the OT concept of "wisdom." In this sense, the title refers to a "skillful" or an "artistic" psalm.

32:1-2 On joyful, see note at 1:1. Four different Hebrew terms are used for sin in these verses, highlighting different aspects of sin: (1) pesha' (translated transgression) has the basic idea of rebellion, (2) hata'ah (translated sin) is a more general term referring to a deliberate offense, (3) 'awon (also translated sin) has the idea of going astray, and (4) remiyyah (translated deceit) emphasizes falsehood or even hypocrisy. There are also three different Hebrew verbs associated with the first three of these terms for sin, also showing different aspects of forgiveness: (1) the root ns' (translated forgiven) is literally "lifted up" and emphasizes the burden of sin being lifted from the person, (2) the root kasah (translated covered) means to hide or cover something that is offensive, and (3) the root chashav (translated charge) can mean "reckon" or "regard," but in legal contexts it means to reckon as liable for punishment (impute with guilt).

32:3-4 The silence here is quite specific—not confessing sin (v. 5). The references to bones . . . brittle . . . groaning, and strength . . . drained represent physical manifestations of a person who is suffering (see note at 31:9-10). The heavy hand of God represents God's wrath and punishment (38:2; 39:10), but here it is specifically due to the conviction of sin.

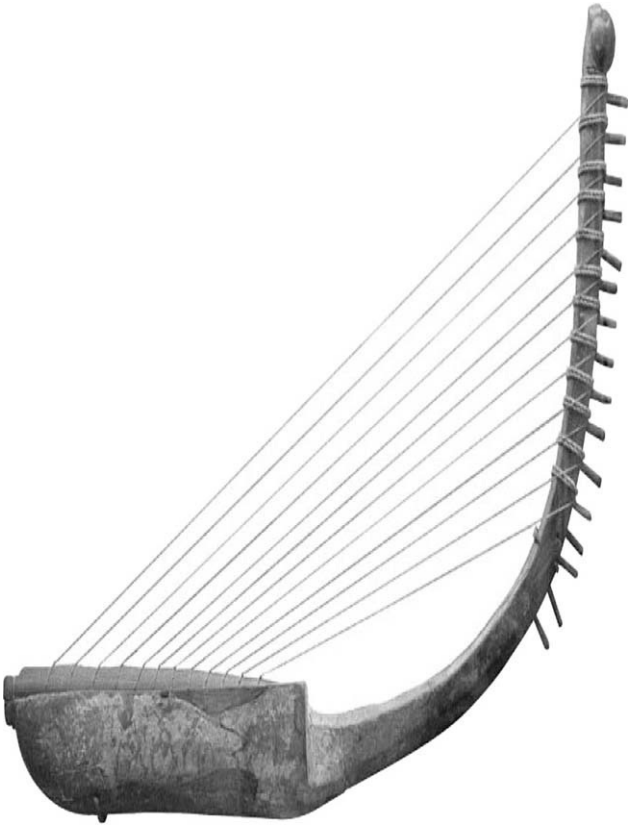
32:5 In contrast to the suffering in verses 3-4, the confession of sin brings relief because God took away the guilt of sin, which is another way of describing forgiveness. Guilt is not a subjective feeling but liability for punishment in a legal sense. Mere removal of the feelings over sin is clearly not intended, since God brings the conviction. What is needed is forgiveness (vv. 1-2).

32:6-7 Floodwaters represent the overwhelming trouble or disaster that the psalmist was facing as a result of his sin (18:16; Is 28:2,17; 30:28). The hiding place is not used in the same sense as in other psalms where it means protection from enemies. Here it is deliverance from the overwhelming guilt that was brought about by God's reaction to the psalmist's own sin.

32:8-9 This is a wisdom section in the psalm as evidenced by the terms instruct and counsel. This might be related to its designation as a Maskil (see note at Ps 32 title). A horse and mule need to be controlled in order to be useful to people. Otherwise, they are too obstinate and will not obey their masters. In the human world, they are best compared to fools (Pr 26:3).

32:11 After the psalmist confessed and experienced forgiveness, he became a conduit for God's praise and called on others to do the same (see note at 30:11-12).

33:1-3 This is a typical beginning for a descriptive praise psalm, which has the two main elements: a call to praise (vv. 1-3) and a cause for praise (vv. 4-22). The relationship between the beginning of this psalm and the end of Psalm 32 is evident in the use of righteous ones and upright. Since there is no title to this psalm, the connection is even more pronounced. Even though only the lyre and harp are mentioned, they probably represent all the musical instruments used for worship. A new song might be one newly composed for a special occasion or it might mean a new experience of God's acts through the singing of this psalm. Worship in Israel often involved "entering into history" in order to experience events as if they were happening at that moment.



This wooden harp (33:2), dating from 1379-1320 B.C., is similar to the instrument David would have played as a young man.

33:4 God's word (or revelation) is worthy of exaltation and praise because it is trustworthy (see note at 19:7-9).

33:5 Loving righteousness and justice means doing acts of righteousness and justice (99:4; Jr 9:24). They are not just abstract attributes but they involve actions, whether directed toward God or His people.

33:6 This verse and what follows specify this psalm as a creation hymn (along with Pss 8 and 104). Even though they refer to different things, the word of the LORD here and in verse 4 are related in that they both originate with God. The Lord of creation is the God of revelation. This is distinctive from other ancient world religions that had myths of creation involving a "creative word" but did not tie that act to any subsequent history. In the biblical text, the God of history who interacts with His people is the same God who spoke the world into existence (see note at v. 9). This brings together the general revelation of creation and the special revelation that God gave to His people (see note at 19:7-9).

33:7 The depths uses the same word (Hb tehom) as "watery depths" (Gn 1:2), only here it is plural. The gathering of the waters in that context is the initial act of God's forming and filling the earth with the separation of waters above and below the expanse. Though some interpreters argue that this could describe the exodus event, the immediate context argues for creation.

33:8 By right of creation, Yahweh is the God of all mankind; therefore, everyone should fear Him. This is in fact the ultimate goal of the kingdom of God (see notes at 8:5-8 and 22:27-31).

33:9 The phrase it came into being is similar to the recurring phrase "and it was so" in Genesis 1.

33:10-11 These verses set up a contrast between what the nations plan and what God plans. This is similar to 2:1-3 where the nations intend to thwart God's purposes, but it is instead God who frustrates their plans (Is 8:10). Yahweh is sovereign and will see to it that His plans come to pass. The verb stands implies certainty (Pr 19:21; Is 14:24).

33:12 The nation . . . He has chosen—Israel—is in contrast to "the nations" in verse 10. On happy, see note at 1:1. The terms "chosen" and possession refer to divine election of the nation and its unique relationship to Yahweh (Ex 19:5; Dt 7:6).

33:13-15 The omniscience of God is described as His looking down, observing, and gazing on the inhabitants of the earth. Even though His dwelling place is heaven, this does not mean that He is unconcerned with what is happening on earth, even if the nations and the enemies of Israel think this is the case (see note at 10:3-6). Moreover, He not only knows what is happening but He is actively involved in it. The word shapes (Hb yzr) is the same word used in the creation account of God's shaping man from the dust of the earth (Gn 2:7-8). This also connects the creative acts of God with His involvement in history.

33:16-17 Human weaponry is of no use if God does not support it (see note at

33:18-19 Eye is in an emphatic position in verse 18. Literally it is "behold the eye," emphasizing God's close watch on His people. This is even more intense than the descriptions in verses 13-15 since Yahweh has a concern for His own people that is unique in comparison to the other nations. Here, as in the previous verses, it is not only His knowledge but also His activity that is in view to deliver His people and to keep them alive (protect them).

33:20 Shield represents protection and is often identified with Yahweh Himself (3:3; 18:30; 115:9; 144:2) Ps 34 title The incident mentioned here is found in 1Sm 21:10-15. It relates David's deliverance from King Achish of Gath (see textual footnote). Although an unusual account of deliverance, this psalm praises Yahweh for rescuing the psalmist. The content of the psalm is not tied to the specific event, so it could be used in a general way by God's people.

34:2 Boast in the LORD is best defined in Jr 9:23-24 where it means to "understand and know" Yahweh, which is further explained as knowing that Yahweh shows "faithful love, justice, and righteousness on the earth." In other words, it is knowing who God is and what He does, having a personal knowledge and experience of Him through trusting in Him.

34:5 Look to is another way of expressing trust in time of need (145:15) and is equivalent to "seek" in some contexts (Is 31:1).

34:6 A person who is in need and prays to Yahweh often identifies himself with the poor. The term can also designate someone who is humble or, in the more negative sense, humiliated. The word for "afflicted" (Hb 'ani) is closely related and is often in parallel with the poor. There is not a strong distinction between these since it is assumed that the poor were the weakest and most helpless in society and were often the objects of oppression by stronger and more influential persons. Therefore, the term "poor" in the psalms should not be limited to economic hardship alone.

34:7 The Angel of the LORD can also be translated as "messenger of Yahweh." In most contexts there is a distinction between God and this angel. For example, in the story of Gideon, the angel of the Lord vanished (Jdg 6:21), but Gideon continued to speak to Yahweh (Jdg 6:22-24). This seems to indicate that they were different. However, in other contexts the angel of the Lord spoke as if he were God Himself (Gn 22:11-12; Ex 3:2). In this sense the angel could be a theophany (an appearance of Yahweh). Christian tradition has often identified such angels with the preincarnate appearances of Jesus Christ, but as noted above, this does not work in every instance. It is best to treat each context on its own merit and not impose the same meaning in every text. The connection between the "Angel of the Lord" and military imagery (note the word encamps) appears elsewhere to show that Yahweh fights for His people (2Kg 19:35). The "commander of the Lord's army" in Jos 5:13-15 may also be related to this angel.

34:8 Taste can mean "judge" in the sense of determine for oneself (Pr 31:18). See most likely carries the same sense in order to reinforce the concept.

34:9-10 God cares for His people more than the rest of His creation (8:5-8). Other texts use the argument that if God cares for His creation, He will care for mankind (104:14-15) and especially for His own people (Mt 6:28-30). Lack nothing also appears in the context of Yahweh's role as a shepherd in 23:1.

34:11 The identification of the psalmist's listeners as children recalls a common wisdom motif of parents instructing their children (Ex 12:26; Dt 6:6-9) and shows that Ps 34:11-14 form a wisdom section in this psalm (similar to 32:8-9). To be taught the fear of the LORD is preferable to learning it through experience. Fearing the Lord is where wisdom begins (Pr 9:10).

34:15 The reference to eyes in relation to Yahweh's watchful care of His people is similar to the singular form in 33:18. His open ears describe His attentiveness to their prayers (18:6; 130:2).

34:16 To erase the memory of someone from the earth is another way to describe annihilation (see note at 9:4-6).

34:18 Brokenhearted and crushed in spirit further develop the image of oppression, although the emphasis in these terms is on internal suffering. Yahweh is near those who are broken and humble (51:17) as opposed to those who have "hearts of stone" (Ezk 11:19; 36:26).

34:20 Broken bones are often symbols of physical affliction (51:8; Is 38:13) or oppression (Mc 3:3). God protects His own from these dangers.

34:21 Evil (Hb ra'ah) can mean disaster and calamity as well as the abstract concept of evil. In this case it is personified as the one who kills the wicked. Note how this contrasts with goodness and faithful love pursuing the person who trusts in Yahweh (23:6).

35:1 The description of Yahweh as a warrior who fights for His people is a common image in the OT (see note at 7:12-13).

35:2 On large shields, see note at 5:11-12.

35:5 Chaff was the waste from threshing (see note at 1:4). The angel of the LORD is sometimes used in military contexts as the one who fought for Israel (see note at 34:7).

35:6-8 It is a common request that one's enemies fall into their own traps (9:15; 31:4; 57:6; 141:10; see note at 7:14-16).

35:10 Bones often represent suffering. In this case they are used for the whole person, but they emphasize that Yahweh protects His people from suffering.

Needy (Hb 'evyon) is often parallel to poor and is used to make the connection between poverty and oppression (see note at 34:6).

35:11-14 Witnesses who were caught lying in their accusations were to receive the punishment they intended for the accused (Dt 19:18-19). It is clear from this context that their accusations were unfounded ("without cause," Ps 35:19). They were most likely fellow Israelites since the psalmist identified with their suffering as a friend and brother. In this way friends were no different from enemies (41:9; 55:12-14).

35:15 The glee of these people toward the psalmist's troubles also put them in the same category as enemies who triumphed over the afflictions of God's people (see note at 30:1-2).

35:16 Gnashing the teeth was a sign of anger (37:12; 112:10; Jb 16:9; Lm 2:16), so this mockery was more than playful ridicule; it included a "malicious" intent (vv. 11,19).

35:17 How long is used to show how there is a perceived delay in God's acting on behalf of His suffering servant (see notes at 4:2 and 13:1-2). Enemies are often represented as vicious wild animals, especially lions (see note at 7:1-2).

35:20 Live peacefully (lit "quietly") in the land is a phrase that occurs only here in the OT, but it describes those who are faithful to Yahweh since God promised to give His people peace in the land when they obeyed Him (Lv 26:6). The usual word for peace (Hb shalom) is actually in the first line and is translated as friendly ways. The irony is that those who are not peaceful are plotting against those who are at peace.

35:21 Aha is used in contexts involving ridicule. It attempts to shame further those who have suffered some calamity (40:16; 70:4; Ezk 25:3; 26:2; 36:2).

35:22 You saw it is in contrast to "we saw it" in the previous verse. In that case it was the enemies who ridiculed the psalmist because they saw his affliction; here it is Yahweh who saw his suffering and was called upon to act on it.

35:23 Wake up is parallel to rise and probably has the same idea as other contexts calling for Yahweh to "rise up" for His people (see note at 7:6-8).

35:26 Clothing is a figure of speech often used with attributes such as majesty in the case of Yahweh (93:1; 104:1) or salvation in the case of priests (132:16). In this instance shame and reproach are negative attributes that are to be worn (as clothing) by the enemies.

35:27-28 God's righteousness is connected with the psalmist's vindication. The term for righteousness (Hb tsedaqah) can also mean "justice," so the call for vindication is actually a request for the execution of God's justice in the psalmist's situation.

36:1 The Hebrew word ne'um, translated here as oracle, is used by the prophets in a more formal sense to signify God's official declarations through the prophets to His people (note especially its use in Jeremiah; e.g., Jr 1:8,15,19). Its use here could also refer to an official prophetic oracle against the wicked. The difference between this and the prophets is that the message originated within the psalmist's heart and not from God's spoken word to him.

36:2 The Hebrew text is difficult here and literally reads, "for it is smooth to him in his eyes to find his sin to hate." The word for "smooth" (Hb chalaq) is sometimes used in the context of speech and associated with flattery (12:3; Dn 11:32). This concept makes sense here even though it is not directly related to speech. In his own eyes means in his own estimation; in other words, it is perception and not reality that prevents this wicked person from hating his sin.

36:4 The malicious plans are made in bed so they can be carried out during the daytime (Mc 2:1).

36:5-6 Heaven and clouds illustrate the extent of Yahweh's covenant faithfulness as do the extremes of highest mountain and deepest sea. There is no limit to God's love for His people (Rm 8:35-39) nor any place that is beyond His reach (Ps 139:7-12).

36:8 Abundance is literally "oil" and represents blessing (Is 55:2). The imagery of oil and refreshing stream bring together the same images as those in Psalm 23 (see notes at 23:2-3 and 23:5).

36:9 Life's fountain is used elsewhere to describe Yahweh as the source of life (Jr 2:13; 17:13). Light can refer to truth (43:3) or salvation (27:1). The combination of life and light is particularly significant in John's Gospel and is applied to Jesus Christ (Jn 1:4; 8:12).

36:10 Spread Your faithful love may relate to the image of a mother bird's "wings" in verse 7.

36:11 Victory in the ancient world was often represented by the victor's foot on the neck of the vanquished (110:1).

37:1 To envy the wicked is a temptation when one sees them prospering. Such an attitude is in essence doubting God's justice (73:3) and is prohibited here as well as in other texts (Pr 23:17; 24:1,19).

37:2 To refrain from envying the wicked is easier if we stop to consider their destiny (cp. 73:3,17-20). Grass and tender green plants are temporary and do not last (103:15; Jb 14:2; Is 40:6; Mt 6:30).

37:3 God's covenant promise to His people was that they would dwell in the land . . . securely if they obeyed His commands (see notes at 25:13 and 35:20). "The land" is significant in this psalm as the "inheritance" of those who were loyal to Yahweh (37:9,11,22,29,34).

37:4 When there is close fellowship with Yahweh, a person's heart's desires will match God's will and purposes (see note at 20:4; cp. Mt 6:33 and Lk 12:31).

37:6 The images of shine like the dawn and like the noonday could mean either that the psalmist's vindication (the demonstration of God's justice in his life) will be seen by all or that God's justice is as certain as the rising of the sun. In either case, there is comfort in the fact that God will answer His people's prayers for justice.

37:7 Be silent is a command similar to being "quiet" before the Lord (62:1,5). Sometimes it is the result of discipline (Lm 3:28), but here it means to wait on the Lord instead of acting on one's own (see note at 27:14).

37:8-9 The psalmist's anger was apparently caused by the observation that the wicked were prospering and God had not judged them (v. 1). The prohibition on anger and agitation is repeated, as is the reason—the promise of the destruction of evildoers.

37:10 Although from the human perspective God was delaying the execution of His justice, from His perspective it was only a little while (Jb 24:24; 2Pt 3:8-9).

37:11 The humble are similar to the "poor," "needy," and "afflicted" in other psalms. They are those who are "brokenhearted" before Yahweh (see note at 34:18).

37:12-13 On gnashing teeth, see note at 35:16. The combination of the schemes of the wicked and God's laughing at them in ridicule is reminiscent of 2:1-4.

37:14 The wicked are pictured as those who are poised with their weapons ready and aimed at the righteous (see note at 7:12-13).

37:16 Little is the same word used in verse 10 to describe the time before God dispenses His justice. Here it refers to the quantity of the possessions of the righteous in comparison to the abundance (wealth and prosperity) of many wicked people. This is perhaps a play on the word in order to emphasize that what was now the case would change shortly.

37:17 Arms often refer to power (89:10), so breaking one's arm means to render someone powerless (10:15; Jb 38:15; Jr 48:25; Ezk 30:21).

37:18 The promise of the inheritance of the land was forever, in the sense that it would go to their descendants (Jos 14:9; Ezr 9:12).

37:20 Pastures recalls the same image as "grass" in verse 2. The word smoke conveys the same notion of transience (68:2; 102:3; Is 51:6).

37:21 The generosity of the righteous comes from Yahweh's gracious acts toward them. God will provide for their needs to such an extent that they will be able to help others (Dt 15:6; 28:12,44). This idea is further developed in Ps 37:25-26 (cp. Ps 112).

37:23-24 Figuratively, established refers to security and stability, and steps are related to one's way of life, often represented as a path or road. Therefore, the Lord is the One who brings about a person's stability in life.

37:25-26 The principle of verse 21 is part of the psalmist's life experience and not just empty words.

37:28 Safety is sometimes related to the image of Yahweh as a strong fortress or tower (Pr 18:10).

37:31 Instruction is the Hebrew word torah (see note at 1:2). The idea of Yahweh's instruction being in the heart has theological significance in its relation to the new covenant (Jr 31:33; Ezk 36:27). Even before the benefits of that covenant occur, the people of God are known as those "in whose heart is My instruction" (Is 51:7). True devotion of God's people is evident in the heart and not just in outward actions.

37:32 On the wicked and the righteous, see note at verse 14.

37:35 I have seen is a common expression in Wisdom literature to indicate that what follows is from personal experience (Jb 5:3; Pr 7:6; 24:30; Ec 2:1). A flourishing . . . tree is an image generally referring to the righteous (see note at 1:3), but here the situation is different in that it seems the wicked have the stability (well-rooted) in life that only the righteous are supposed to have.

37:36 The appearance of stability in verse 35 was an illusion (v. 10).

37:37-38 Future is equivalent to "destiny," "end," or "fate" (73:17; Nm 23:10; Dt 32:29). This reinforces the idea that perception is not reality since the upright and transgressors have different fates.

37:39-40 The psalm ends with a statement of confidence and certainty, in contrast to the agitation and envy in verse 1.

Ps 38 title The word remembrance may refer to a memorial offering that was a part of the grain offering in Israel (Lv 2:2,9,16; 5:12). This title also appears in Psalm 70. The request for Yahweh to remember is another way of asking Him to act in a situation (see note at 25:6-7). Both this psalm and Psalm 70 are prayers and fit this concept.

38:1-2 God's anger and discipline are often mentioned in lament psalms, indicating the belief that sin is the reason for suffering. Although in some cases it may only be an assumption (see note at 6:1), in this psalm the language is much more certain and indicates that sin is the primary issue. The arrows recall weapon imagery used of enemies (11:2) and of Yahweh when He fights for His people (7:13; 18:14). However, this instance pictures Yahweh as an enemy of the psalmist because of his sin.

38:3-8 The relationship between psychological suffering and physical pain is common in lament psalms (see note at 6:2-3). Bones seem to be used most frequently in relation to the image of physical pain (see note at 22:17-18). While the language need not be literal, it conveys the idea of intense pain and suffering that is clearly connected to Yahweh's discipline. It is significant how many times the phrase because of is used in this context. Its objects are Your indignation . . . my sins . . . my foolishness, and the anguish of my heart. These make it clear why the psalmist was suffering.

38:9 The phrase known to You is literally "in front of You" (in Your presence). Sin cannot dwell in God's presence (see note at 5:4-5), but when there is a change in a person's attitude toward sin, represented here by my every desire (or "longing"), God accepts and acts on it (55:16).

38:10 Light in one's eyes is similar to "brightness" and represents vitality (see note at 13:3-4).

38:11-12 It is a common experience of a person who is suffering intensely that even friends reject him (88:8,18; Jb 19:14-15). Many scholars believe that the juxtaposition of friends in Ps 38:11 with enemies in verse 12 makes it possible that the friends had become like enemies (109:3-4; Lm 1:2; see note at Ps 31:11).

38:13-14 The psalmist was speechless and had no arguments (defense) because he knew that God was the One who was punishing him for his sins. This is much different from the suffering of the innocent where there is a plea for God to act based on His promises to the faithful (Pss 17; 26). In this instance the only thing Yahweh will hear is a confession of sin, which is also the only chance for relief from the suffering (32:3-5).

38:16 On the rejoicing of enemies over the psalmist's misfortune, see note at 30:1-2.

38:17 Fall in this case is not a moral fall—since the psalmist was already in sin—but defeat and perhaps death. It is a term often applied to the downfall of one's enemies (5:10; 35:8).

38:18 Guilt is parallel to sin and means a liability for punishment rather than a subjective feeling (see note at 32:5). Sin is why the psalmist was deserving of punishment.

38:19-22 Once the confession took place, the problem of the enemies still existed. In fact, it probably was more intense since the psalmist was now pursuing good, and his enemies were repaying evil for good. The big difference is that God would no longer be against him as well. Instead, the psalmist could legitimately ask for Yahweh not to abandon him; he could ask for His help and be confident that God would respond.

Ps 39 title Jeduthun (probably another name for Ethan) also appears in the titles of Psalms 62 and 77. According to 1Ch 16:41, he was one of David's chief musicians. If this is not a reference to Jeduthun himself, it may refer to his descendants or a group of musicians using his name (perhaps derived from his own musical style or school).

39:1 -2 The reason for the psalmist's silence was to keep from sinning by voicing his protest to God. The same idea occurs in 73:15, but in that text the protest is specifically identified as the belief that God is ignoring the prosperity of the wicked. In this psalm it could be a condition of suffering that caused these feelings to emerge.

39:3 A heart growing hot is an expression for exasperation (Dt 19:6; Jr 20:9). Fire can mean anger, but here it seems to refer to pent-up emotions waiting to escape.

39:4-6 This request for God to reveal to the psalmist that his days were short-lived shows that he knew his inner feelings must be held in check. He already knew this, but he wished for Yahweh to instruct him. Vapor (Hb hevel) is sometimes translated as "breath" (Jb 7:7). It denotes in its literal sense a small puff of air. Figuratively, it refers to a meaningless existence or futile activities (Ps 94:11; Ec 1:2). When used together with shadow, the word emphasizes the fleeting nature of life (see note at Ps 144:4). The lesson to be learned involves seeing everything as God sees it—from His perspective, rather than from the human perspective. Human accomplishments, however great they seem, fade away with the steady march of history. For those who trust in God, life has a meaning and significance that is not tied to earthly achievements.

39:8 Suffering for God's people often includes being taunted by enemies (see note at 22:6-8), who are here described as fools, which implies they are godless (14:1).

39:9 The psalmist was speechless because there was no point in complaining about what God was doing in his life.

39:10-11 The most severe suffering from the psalmist's perspective was God's torment, which was being used as a corrective measure to bring him to his senses and to help him learn the lesson in verses 4-6. One way that God uses suffering in the lives of His people is to discipline them as His children in a loving and corrective way (Heb 12:5-11).

39:12 Foreigner and temporary resident are terms for those who were not native inhabitants in the promised land. The Israelites were to consider themselves as foreigners and "temporary residents" in Yahweh's land (119:19; Lv 25:23; 1Ch 29:15). The use of the words here seems to indicate that the lesson of Ps 39:4-6 about the insignificance and fleeting nature of this earthly life had been learned.

40:1 Waited patiently shows faithfulness to Yahweh in refraining from taking things into one's own hands (see note at 27:14) or going to another source for help. Yahweh is the only source of help for those who trust in Him (40:17; 70:5).

40:2 Pit can refer to a deep well. Someone trapped in a well would probably sink down in the muddy clay and die if someone did not pull him out (Jr 38:6,10). Figuratively the term is related to Sheol, representing death (see note at Ps 28:1). To be brought . . . up means to be rescued from death (30:4).

40:3 The new song likely refers to the newness of life after being delivered from death (see note at 30:3).

40:4 On happy, see note at 1:1.

40:5 The shift from personal experience to identification with the community of Israel is significant in linking the psalmist to God's covenant promises to the nation (see note at 28:8-9). God's wonderful works are His saving acts on behalf of His people (see note at 9:1). The experience of the psalmist's personal deliverance is intricately connected with God's salvation of His people.

40:6-8 Some interpreters think this verse repudiates the act of sacrifice, even though God Himself had commanded it. However, the most important issue is delight in God's will. In other words, acts of sacrifice must be accompanied by cheerful obedience. This was precisely the problem with Israel when God said He was tired of their sacrifices because they were not offered with pure motives of love and faithfulness to Him (Is 1:11). The phrase open my ears to listen (lit "dig/hollow out ears for me") is a symbol of being attentive to Yahweh in order to obey Him (the opposite of closed or "uncircumcised" ears; see Jr 6:10). This emphasizes the importance of obedience over sacrifice (1Sm 15:22). See, I have come is similar to Isaiah's expression, "Here I am" (Is 6:8), showing submission to God's will. Jesus' sacrifice on the cross was the ultimate expression of submission (Heb 10:5-10). The meaning of the volume of the scroll is unclear. Some suggest it was the book where the deeds of people were recorded (51:1; 56:8; 87:6; 139:16), but in this context it may refer to God's will (His instruction) in general (note "will" in 40:8).

40:9-10 Personal experiences, especially those involving rescue by Yahweh, were to be related to those in the congregation of Israel in order to instruct the community (see note at 22:22-24).

40:12 Overtaken is used mostly with enemies as the subject (7:6; Jr 39:5; Lm 1:3), but here it is the psalmist's sins that have overtaken him. His troubles (apparently the result of his sins) surrounded him in the same way as enemies who were ready to attack.

40:14-15 It is a common request for the disgrace intended by enemies against the psalmist to be turned back on them (7:14-16; 35:4,26; 70:3). Aha is an expression often associated with ridicule (see note at 35:21).

40:16-17 All who seek You is equivalent to those who are faithful to Yahweh (see note at 9:9-10). The phrase afflicted and needy refers to those who are humble and dependent on Yahweh as their only help (see notes at 34:6 and 35:10).

41:1 On happy, see note at 1:1. Poor (Hb dal) has the basic idea of "low" in the sense that they are humbled or brought low by their own circumstances or by others. It could be used to mean those faithful to Yahweh, as do the terms "humble," "afflicted," or "needy" (72:13; see note at 34:18). However, the verb cares for might indicate that the idea is economic hardship. Those who are close to Yahweh will be generous to those in need (see note at 37:21).

41:2 To be blessed in the land was the hope of all those in Israel who were loyal to Yahweh and to His covenant with them (see note at 37:3).

41:3 Sustain is not quite identical to heal. It refers to God's support (v. 12) of someone during a time of adversity, whether it is an illness or some danger (18:38; 20:2; 94:18). Even when there is a delay in God's intervention, there is still His sustaining power that strengthens the person who is suffering. This is in fact when God's strength is most evident in those who trust Him (2Co 12:10).

41:4 Sin is mentioned but not specified or developed (in contrast to Pss 38 and 51). In some cases sin may be assumed, but it is not the main cause of the suffering (see note at 6:1). Evidence of this is that the psalmist considered himself as having "integrity" (41:12), indicating either that the sin was already confessed or that there was no specific sin involved. The primary issue seems to be physical illness, since there are references to "heal" (v. 3), "sickbed" (v. 3), and "poison" (v. 8), which is how his enemies described his condition (as if he were poisoned).

41:5-8 The enemies are vividly described, with their activities against the psalmist as the focal point. Their intentions were malicious, as demonstrated by their speech and their desire for his demise. To be forgotten is equivalent to dying (see 31:12). Stores up evil expresses the idea of harvesting it like one does grain. Some think this might be a reference to gossip, which in this case involved evil things said about someone. This idea is reinforced by their whispering about the psalmist (v. 7). Their intention was for him to die, so they spoke about his death as if it were a certainty (v. 8).

41:9 Some think the mention of friend here is synonymous with the enemies of verses 5-8. In instances of extreme suffering, friends can take on the role of enemies (see notes at 31:11; 35:11-14; and 38:11-12). Indeed there is the adversarial phrase raised his heel against me, so there appears to be more than just abandonment in this context.

41:11 Yahweh's delight in someone is not a mere emotion but involves actions and is equivalent to blessing or showing favor to someone (18:19; 22:8; 35:27).

41:12 To be in God's presence is the ultimate reward for the person who is faithful to Him (see note at 15:1).

41:13 This verse marks the close of Book 1 of the Psalms (1-41). It is a doxology including a call to praise followed by a congregational response (amen and amen). There are four psalms (41; 72; 89; 106) that end a book before the beginning of a new one; each has similar material. Such statements were most likely added at the time the Psalms were joined together in their canonical form. Some refer to these as "seam" psalms because of the way they pieced the books together to form the complete book of Psalms.

Ps 42 title On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title. The phrase sons of Korah appears in the titles of 11 psalms (42; 44-49; 84-85; 87-88). According to 1Ch 9:17-24 and 26:1-19, the Korahites were the gatekeepers in the temple. In 2Ch 20:19 they stood up in the congregation of Israel and praised Yahweh. Most scholars believe they became associated with musicians (perhaps a group of singers) who were involved in the worship of Yahweh. Many have argued that although Psalms 42 and 43 are separated in the Hebrew text, they might actually have been composed as one psalm. One reason is that there is no title for the latter. While this is not unusual in comparison to all the psalms, in the second book only Psalms 43 and 71 lack titles. The strongest evidence for connecting the two psalms is the occurrence of the same questions and response in 42:5,11 and 43:5. These verses seem to end each of the sections of the psalm consisting of three strophes or poetic divisions. Psalm 43 would be the third strophe if they were joined as one psalm.

42:1-2 Longing and thirsting pictures a prolonged drought where even the animals are dying (Jr 14:1-6; Jl 1:20). Streams of water recalls the blessings of God for the righteous who are often represented by flourishing trees (see note at 1:3). Also, in the shepherd image of 23:2 Yahweh leads His people to refreshing water. What the psalmist desired was to appear before God (lit "see the face of God"), which probably refers to receiving God's blessing and favor in His presence (84:7).

42:3 The profusion of tears from crying is pictured as drenching furniture in 6:6. In this context they were the psalmist's only food. This hyperbolic expression shows the depths of his grief (80:5).

42:4 The house of God means the sanctuary of God where Yahweh dwelt among His people (see note at 5:6-7). The house of God represents His presence, which for some reason was distant from the psalmist, and he longed to be back among God's people in the context of worship.

42:5 The questions and the response of verse 5 also appear in verse 11 and in 43:5 (perhaps because Ps 43 is part of this psalm; see note at Ps 42 title). The psalmist was speaking to himself (lit "my soul") in an attempt to bring comfort and security. In answer to the questions focusing on his depression, he literally commands himself to hope in God. This means waiting on God during a time of crisis, trusting that He will answer prayer (see note at 27:14). The point the psalmist seems to be making is that there was no reason for his depression if God was his Savior. The fact that he repeated this several times shows the difficulty of internalizing this truth.

42:6 The geographical descriptions could refer to the place where the psalmist was praying since he was distant from the sanctuary, according to verse 3. The land of Jordan could refer to the entire Jordan River Valley, but in connection with Mount Hermon, which was in the extreme north of Israel, it probably refers to the sources for the river in the mountains of northern Israel. Mount Mizar is not as easy to identify, but it was probably part of the same mountain range as Mount Hermon in the north.

42:7 This verse is perhaps related to the Jordan River in verse 6. Even if this is the case, the imagery goes beyond the physical and describes the depths of the psalmist's depression symbolized by deep waters churning around and sweeping over him. For similar imagery, see 18:4-5; 29:10-11; 32:6-7.

42:8 Song is parallel to prayer and might refer to a joyful song . . . in the night, as in Is 30:29.

42:10 The taunt is the same as in verse 3. This reflects a common belief by the enemies of the psalmist that Yahweh was not concerned about the plight of his servant and would not act (3:2; 22:7-8; 71:11).

42:11 See note at verse 5.

43:1 Vindication is a common request in psalms that assume the innocence and integrity of the psalmist (Pss 17 and 26). Ungodly nation is parallel to a deceitful and unjust man. It is difficult to determine whether these enemies were Gentiles who were not a part of Yahweh's covenant or Israelites who were disloyal to the covenant.

43:2 Rejection by God is a common assumption when one's prayers seem to go unanswered (see notes at 13:1-2 and 22:1).

43:3-4 Light and truth are placed together when they refer to Yahweh's instruction (or His will) for His people (Pr 6:23). The psalmist was requesting guidance in order once again to be in Yahweh's presence, represented here by the three descriptions: Your holy mountain . . . Your dwelling place, and the altar of God. If this is a continuation of Psalm 42, then the request in 42:2 is further specified.

43:5 See note at 42:5.

Ps 44 title On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title. On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

44:1-3 The psalm begins with a rehearsal of what Yahweh has done for Israel. This is similar to the "wonderful works," or God's saving acts on behalf of His people (9:1; Ex 3:20; 15:11). It is clear from the mention of ancestors and days long ago that this refers to an early time, specifically the time of conquest and settlement of the promised land. Being "planted" (80:8; 2Sm 7:10; Jr 11:17; 12:2) is the opposite of being "uprooted" (Dt 29:28) and serves to picture Yahweh's work as a farmer planting something like a tree on his land. The emphasis especially in verse 3 is that it was Yahweh's hand and arm that accomplished this rather than Israel's weaponry. The combination of hand and arm is used in contexts referring to God's power displayed in the deliverance of Israel from Egypt (Dt 4:34; 5:15; 7:19; 11:2; 26:8).

44:4 The terms King and Jacob recall the unique covenant relationship that Yahweh had with Israel (Dt 33:1-5).

44:5 When the people of Israel were faithful to Yahweh, He fought for them (v. 7; see note at 18:7-15). His name represents Yahweh Himself and is closely aligned with His reputation (see note at 20:1).

44:6 Human weaponry is of no use if God is not behind it (see note at 20:7-8).

44:8 Boasting in God is in contrast to boasting in one's own power or skill (see note at 34:2).

44:9 This perception is in stark contrast to Yahweh's past acts when He fought for His people (v. 5; cp. 60:10; 108:11).

44:11 The imagery of sheep that were handed over to be eaten is similar to verse 22 where they were "slaughtered." God was the shepherd of Israel (see note at 23:1), but to the psalmist it seemed He was not protecting His sheep but giving them to other nations to be killed.

44:12 Selling was a common way of describing God giving His people over to the power of their enemies (Dt 32:30; Jdg 2:14; 3:8; 4:2,9; 10:7). It occurs most often in the context of God's response to Israel's rebellion against Him.

44:13-16 Almost every Hebrew word for ridicule is used in these verses. The word for joke (Hb mashal) expresses the idea of a byword or proverbial saying. The shame of Israel was so extensive and had lasted so long that the nations were using them as the butt of jokes and sayings.

44:17-18 This is a declaration of innocence similar to those of individual lament psalms (Pss 17; 26), but here it expresses the innocence of the nation. The psalmist protested that they had done nothing to deserve this treatment. Turned back is similar to the idea of "turning aside" in reference to the proper path of God. It expresses the idea of rejecting God's commands (78:57; 119:51; Dt 5:32). The protest that people had not strayed from God's path is reminiscent of Job's protest (Jb 23:11) and also of the psalmist in Ps 17:5.

44:20 Spreading out hands was a gesture used in the context of prayer and worship (88:9; 141:2; 143:6; Ex 9:29,33; Ezr 9:5; Is 1:15).

44:21 The secrets of the heart are attitudes and motives. A person's integrity could be tested by God to determine if he was innocent of false motives (26:2; Jr 12:3).

44:23-26 Wake up calls God to act. Rise up is similar, but with military connotations (see note at 7:6-8). The dust is often used to represent humiliation in defeat at the hands of an enemy (7:5; 72:9; Is 49:23). It could also refer to humility before Yahweh either in worship or in prayer (Dt 9:18; 2Ch 20:18).

Ps 45 title The Lilies was apparently a known tune at the time of composition, similar to "The Deer of the Dawn" in Psalm 22. On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title. On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title. The psalm is further identified as a love song, a description that fits the context of this royal wedding psalm.

45:1-2 It was a common practice in the ancient Near East to compose songs in honor of kings to perpetuate their memory for later generations. Such hyperbolic designations as most handsome and grace flows from your lips are usually a part of these songs.

45:4 While truth and justice were common traits that were admired by kings and people in the ancient world, humility was something more specific to Israel. Kings of the ancient world were rarely humble, seeing humility as a sign of weakness. For a servant of Yahweh, this was a characteristic that signified a close relationship with Him (Pr 15:33; 18:12; Zph 2:3).

45:6 A scepter symbolized royal dominion. Its size and shape varied in different times and cultures, but it was often associated with military power. In some cases it was actually a military weapon. God's throne is linked with this king because Israel's king was to function as God's co-regent over His kingdom (2:6-9; 2Sm 7:14; 19:21; 1Ch 28:6).

45:7 The king of Israel was often referred to as God's anointed (see note at 20:6). Oil was a symbol of both joy and God's blessing (see notes at 23:5 and 36:8).

45:8 The phrase ivory palaces does not refer to palaces made completely of ivory but having their interior and perhaps furniture covered with ivory (1Kg 22:39; Am 3:15; 6:4).

45:9 Gold from Ophir is synonymous with the finest gold (Jb 28:16; Is 13:12). The exact location of Ophir is uncertain.

45:10-11 "Forgetting" then "bowing down" represent a change in loyalty from the bride's own people and country to the king whom she was marrying.

45:12 Tyre, a major trading center on the Mediterranean Sea, was known for its extravagance and wealth.

45:14 Virgins and companions were essentially maids who accompanied the bride (Est 2:9).

45:16-17 The final wish is for a permanent dynasty for this king that would exalt his name (his reputation and fame) beyond that of his ancestors.

Ps 46 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title. Alamoth* also occurs in 1Ch 15:20 and is used in the same way to designate a song. It is similar to at least part of the title in Psalm 9 that reads al-Muth-labben. Except for the labben the rest is essentially the same. However, what is the same would read something like "concerning death," which certainly does not fit the content of this psalm. Suggested renderings include "maidens" (Aquila and Jerome) and "hidden things" (LXX).

46:2-3 Trembling earth and quaking mountains represent unsettling motion in parts of nature that are supposed to be stable (see note at 18:7-15). The waters, which God restrained at creation, here threaten to become chaotic again (see notes at 29:3-4 and 29:10-11).

46:4 The river here is difficult to identify precisely. It does not appear to be a literal river in Jerusalem, unless it refers to something like Hezekiah's tunnel. Instead, it seems more likely to refer to God's presence and blessings that fill Jerusalem and flow to other nations (Zch 14:8).

46:5 The strength of Jerusalem was not in its fortified walls but in Yahweh who was its "stronghold" (vv. 7,11; Jl 3:17; Zph 3:15).

46:6 Nations rage is reminiscent of the rebellion of the nations against Yahweh and His anointed (2:1). However, the parallel of kingdoms topple indicates that it probably refers to the common experience of wars between nations and kingdoms rising and falling. But the final command in verse 10 may indicate that these wars were still an affront to God. The earth melts probably symbolizes fear at the voice of God (Ex 15:15; Is 14:31).

46:7 On LORD of Hosts, see note at 24:7-10.

46:8-10 Yahweh is in absolute control of all warfare as well as peace among nations. The final command, stop your fighting, is probably addressed to the nations to stop their hostilities, which were ultimately directed against God (2:10).

Ps 47 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

47:1 The clapping of hands is an expression of joy that is used elsewhere to praise a new king (98:8; 2Kg 11:12).

47:2-3 Most High is a title for God expressing His sovereignty over the earth (see note at 7:17; cp. 24:1; 95:4; 97:5). Subdues (Hb yadber) occurs only in this verbal form here and in 18:47 where it refers to Israel's military campaigns in which nations were subjugated. Under the feet is a place of submission; it is a concept further developed in Scripture as a picture of the dominion of God's kingdom (see note at 8:5-8).

47:4 Pride of Jacob is parallel to inheritance and refers to the promised land (Is 58:14; Am 8:7).

47:5 Ascends could refer to God going up into heaven (Gn 17:22; 35:13; Jdg 13:20) or to the ark of the covenant (representing Yahweh's presence) being carried up to the temple (2Sm 6:5,16-17). In this psalm it probably expresses the more general idea of Yahweh ascending His earthly throne.

47:7 Song of wisdom uses the word Maskil (see note at Ps 32 title).

47:9 Leaders is literally "shields" and is used to represent those who lead nations, usually kings (84:9; 89:18).

Ps 48 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

48:2 North can also be translated as Zaphon, a place name. According to Ugaritic myths, Zaphon was the place where the gods assembled. There might be a play on the word to say that Jerusalem is the place where the true God actually lives. However, there is also the reality that Israel was the kingdom in the north compared to some nations around them, such as Cush, Egypt, Edom, and Moab.

48:4-5 These verses recall the conquest of Canaan when Yahweh caused the people in the land to be terrified of the Israelites (Jos 2:9).

48:6 The image of a woman in labor is often used to represent fear (Is 13:8; 21:3; Jr 4:31). Perhaps it referred to the fear of death during the process of giving birth, something common in that time.

48:7 The destruction of the ships of Tarshish may refer to an actual event (1Kg 22:48), or this verse could use Tarshish as a representative of the enemies of God (Ps 72:10).

48:10 On name, see note at 20:1. The right hand often represented power and was especially significant in military contexts (see note at 16:8).

48:12-13 "Encircling" the city sounds like some sort of inspection, but in the context of a psalm and worship, it probably refers to a thanksgiving procession around the city (Neh 12:27-30).

Ps 49 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

49:1-4 The terms in these verses identify this psalm as a wisdom psalm, providing instruction for those who pay attention.

49:5 Usually the psalmist referred to enemies who surrounded him, but here the emphasis is on their iniquity.

49:6 Trusting in wealth is apparently the main issue in this psalm since this idea is developed in verses 10-12 and 16-20. As taught elsewhere in Wisdom literature, wealth is unstable (Pr 23:5).

49:7-9 Redeem and ransom fit the theme of money and what it can buy. To see the Pit is to experience death (7:15; 16:10; see note at 28:1). The point of 49:8 is that a person cannot buy life, so it is pointless to try. In Jesus' words, it is possible for someone to "gain the whole world" but still "lose his soul" (Mt 16:26; Lk 9:25). "Ransom" is an especially significant word in light of how it is used in the NT to describe Jesus' payment through His sacrifice (Mt 20:28).

49:10-12 This section as well as verses 16-20 are similar to the arguments in other Wisdom texts, especially Ecclesiastes, about the futility of wealth: it is left to others (39:6; Ec 2:18), graves are the eternal homes of the wealthy (Ec 12:5), they are like . . . animals that perish (Ec 3:19), they will take nothing with them (Jb 27:19; Ps 49:17), and they praise themselves (v. 18; Dt 29:18; Lk 12:19).

49:14 The sheep and shepherd imagery is used in positive contexts where God shepherds His people (see note at 23:1); it is used negatively when describing evil leaders who misdirect God's people and lead them into sin (Ezk 34:2-10). Here it is clearly a negative image personifying Death as the shepherd of those who trust in their wealth. It leads them into Sheol, Death's realm.

49:15 Redeem is used again as in verses 7-8, but here God does have the power to redeem His own.

49:16-20 On the wealthy and their destiny, see note at verses 10-12.

Ps 50 title Asaph was one of David's chief musicians (1Ch 6:39; 15:17,19; 16:5,7; 2Ch 5:12). He was also the ancestor of a group of temple musicians (Ezr 2:40-41). As in the case of Jeduthun (Ps 39), the name might have come to represent his descendants or the musicians who followed him rather than Asaph himself.

50:1 From east to west means all the people of the whole earth.

50:2 Perfection of beauty is associated with the glorification of Jerusalem as the city of God (48:2; Lm 2:15).

50:3 Fire and storm are both common in theophanies (visible manifestations of God; 18:12-13; 97:3).

50:4 Heaven and earth represent all of creation (69:34; 115:15; 121:2). They were witnesses to Yahweh's covenant with Israel (Dt 4:26; 30:19) and were personified as witnesses in a legal setting where Yahweh judged His people for their violations of the covenant (Is 1:2).

50:5 Sacrifice could refer to God's initial covenant with Abram (Gn 15:9-18) or Israel's acceptance of the Ten Commandments (Ex 24:3-8).

50:8-13 The practice of sacrifice was not Israel's main problem; it was that they did not serve Yahweh with the proper motives (see note at 40:6-8). The reason offered here is that God owned every kind of animal, so He did not need them. The issue in worship is not giving God something He needs but offering oneself fully and completely, which is what He desires (Dt 6:5; 10:16).

50:14-15 In contrast to the sacrifices in verses 8-13, something much more personal and "from the heart" should be offered. This included calling on Yahweh in a time of need followed by a thank offering, which was usually made with vows during the petition (see note at 22:25-26).

50:16 The wicked in this context were those within Israel who only pay lip service to God's commands.

50:17-20 Verse 17 is a summary accusation followed by a list of violations that prove the accusation. This is a common formula, particularly in prophetic material. The violations include participation in theft (v. 18; Ex 20:15), adultery (Ps 50:18; Ex 20:14), and false accusations against fellow Israelites (Ps 50:19-20; Ex 20:16).

50:21 God's silence (or delay in executing justice) is sometimes assumed to mean that He will not act. The wicked are especially characterized by this assumption (see notes at 10:3-6 and 10:11).

50:22 Tear you apart uses imagery of a wild animal and its prey. This is often used for enemies (see note at 7:1-2), but here God takes on the role of an enemy against those who violate His covenant (see note at 38:1-2).

50:23 Orders his conduct refers to obedience, which is preferable to sacrifice (1Sm 15:22; see note at Ps 40:6-8).

Ps 51 title This psalm has a clearly defined historical setting, which was David's confession of his sins after being confronted by Nathan the prophet (2Sm 12:1; the entire background of the sins is in 2Sm 11-12). As in other psalms with a specific setting (such as Ps 18), the language of the psalm is general enough to be applied in other contexts. This fits the purpose of the psalms and their various applications.

51:1-2 Blot out . . . wash away, and cleanse are terms for forgiveness, which is David's main plea (see note at 32:1-2 for similar terms). He relied completely on God's mercy, which is evident in the terms gracious . . . faithful love, and abundant compassion. In David's case, his sins were severe enough that sacrifice was not acceptable (v. 16). According to God's laws, deliberate and premeditated sins such as adultery and murder were referred to as sins of "the high hand" ("defiantly" in Nm 15:30-31). Their punishment was being "cut off" from the community, which in many cases meant death (see note at Ps 31:22).

51:3 Verses 3-5 include the recognition of sin without specifying the sins, allowing this psalm to be used in a variety of contexts (see note at title). My rebellion is in the emphatic position in the Hebrew text, showing that this is the main focus of attention in this confession.

51:4 The statement against You . . . alone does not mean that others were not involved in the effects of the sin, but that even in sinning against others the ultimate affront was against God Himself. This was clearly David's emphasis when he was confronted with this sin (2Sm 12:13).

51:5 This verse has prompted a variety of interpretations. Some have interpreted it to mean that marriage and childbearing are a curse; this is untenable in light of the rest of Scripture (127:3; Heb 13:4). Another interpretation is that this refers to a specific sin, perhaps adultery, committed by David's mother, but there is no evidence of this in the biblical texts. Others connect this verse with ceremonial uncleanness in childbirth (Lv 12:2,5; 15:18), but this is not the same as sin. Some say David is using rhetorical overstatement to describe his sinfulness. One of the most common interpretations in Christian history is that this verse teaches the doctrine of original sin. While not aiming to strictly identify the origin of human sinfulness with events at biological conception, David recognizes that sin pervades humankind as a universal condition from the very outset of our existence. Sin is everywhere and in everyone, and David confessed that it had been with him since birth. Far from forming the basis of an excuse (i.e., "Why should I be blamed for my sins when I was born this way?"), David's confession contrasts the "blameless" (Ps 51:4) ways of God with the innately evil ways of men.

51:6 God desires obedience to His commands from within (with integrity). Yahweh is the source of wisdom (Pr 2:6), but it must be communicated to a person's heart. This is similar to the idea of God's commands residing in the heart (see note at Ps 37:31).

51:8 Bones are often mentioned in the context of suffering (see note at 34:20).

51:9 Turning away the face implies forgiving and forgetting (vv. 1-2).

51:10 The renewal of one's heart and spirit are common images representing not only forgiveness (vv. 1-2,7-9) but also a change that enables a person to live in obedience to Yahweh's commands (1Sm 10:6,9; Jr 32:39; Ezk 36:26). Note also the use of "willing spirit" in Ps 51:12.

51:11 Holy Spirit is taken by some to mean Yahweh's presence. However, in the larger context of the biblical text, it seems to refer to God Himself (Is 63:10-14) in the same way that "heart" and "spirit" can refer to people. The division among the persons of the Godhead (the Trinity) is not a concept developed in the OT, although texts such as this allow for the establishment of the doctrine as God's revelation progresses through the NT (e.g., Mt 3:16-17, where Father, Son, and Spirit are all present yet distinct at Jesus' baptism).

51:13-15 Publicly praising God and teaching others about Him was part of the response of God's deliverance in a person's life (see note at 22:22-24).

51:16-17 God desires a broken spirit (or heart) rather than acts of sacrifice (see notes at 34:18 and 40:6-8).

51:18 Some think build the walls refers to Nehemiah's time, but this is not necessary if it is used figuratively. It simply refers to strengthening Zion, which is where Yahweh dwelt among His people (65:1).

51:19 Righteous sacrifices must be connected with verses 16-17, meaning those offered with the proper motives (see notes at 40:6-8 and 50:8-13).

Ps 52 title On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title. The historical setting specified in this psalm is when Doeg the Edomite, one of Saul's chief herdsmen, informed Saul that David had gone to Ahimelech's house (1Sm 22:9). He had also informed Saul of the help David received from the priests of Nob (1Sm 21:7), so he was the one responsible for the slaughter of 85 priests accused of treason against King Saul (1Sm 22:11-23). As in other psalms with a specific setting (such as Ps 18), the language of the psalm is general enough to be applied in other contexts.

52:1 To brag about evil is a much stronger denunciation than most passages dealing with boasting. People apart from God commonly boast about their abilities (Jr 9:23) or their wealth (Ps 49:6), but this person was boasting about his sins (10:3). Those who are faithful to Yahweh boast only in the fact that they know Him (see note at 34:2).

52:2 Razor symbolizes sharpness that could be used as a weapon of destruction. In other contexts, a sharpened tongue is a common image for destructive speech (57:4; 64:3; 140:3). Human speech, symbolized by the tongue, has the power of death (Pr 18:21).

52:4 The word for destroy is literally "swallow" (Hb bl‘), picturing destructive speech as devouring others (see note at 14:4).

52:5 Bring . . . down is commonly used for judgment on the wicked (147:6; 2Sm 22:48). Uproot is the most common description of a wicked person being removed from Yahweh's land (Dt 29:28; 2Ch 7:20; Pr 2:22).

52:6 This verse does not refer to the same malicious mocking since that is forbidden (Pr 24:17); it is part of a request for divine retribution (Dt 32:35; see note at Ps 28:3-5).

52:7 On dependence on riches, see note at 49:10-12.

52:8 The righteous are often pictured as a flourishing . . . tree (see note at 1:3).

Ps 53 title Mahalath may be related to a Hebrew word meaning "sickness." It is unclear whether it refers to a song tune or a musical form. On Maskil,* see note at Psalm 32 title.

53:1-4 These verses are essentially the same as 14:1-4 (see notes at 14:1, 2, 3, and 4).

53:5 This verse includes a more extended image of God's judgment on the wicked than 14:5-6. Scattering bones often pictures the dead on the battlefield (141:7; Jr 8:1-2; Ezk 6:5; 37:1-6).

53:6 On Israel's deliverance, see note at 14:7.

Ps 54 title The historical setting for this psalm relates to the Ziphites, who lived southeast of Hebron and informed Saul of David's hiding place (1Sm 23:19; 26:1). On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title.

54:1 For vindicate see notes at 17:1-2 and 35:27-28.

54:3 The word strangers (Hb zarim) denotes outsiders with regard to Yahweh's covenant and people (Is 1:7; 14:1; Eph 2:12). No regard for God is similar to descriptions of the wicked who think God will not execute His justice (see notes at 10:3-6 and 14:1).

54:5 Repay is a term used in contexts describing divine retribution (Dt 32:35).

54:6 Freewill offering is used instead of thank offering because there was no vow made in the request as in other cases (see note at 22:25-26). Instead, this is a voluntary and spontaneous offering that was not done out of obligation.

54:7 Looked down expresses the idea of triumph over one's enemies (58:10; 59:10; 92:11).

Ps 55 title On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title.

55:3 Harass is a rare word (Hb stm) that expresses the idea of animosity or hatred, often connected with hostility (Gn 49:23; Jb 30:21). This emphasizes malicious intent rather than playful mocking.

55:4-5 Sweep over and overwhelmed portray being overtaken by troubles as if by a flood (see note at 32:6-7).

55:6-8 The hope of escape is pictured as a bird flying away to safety. This is the reaction of an animal that has no hope of defending itself any other way (see note at 11:1).

55:9-11 These verses recall when God judged those who were building the tower of Babylon by confounding their speech (Gn 11:1-9). The terms city and walls and the description of the wickedness associated with them are further connections to Babylon. Since the main issue in this psalm is the "voice" of the enemy (v. 3), this is a most appropriate request.

55:12-14 The shift here is significant in demonstrating that the culprit was not some distant enemy but a close friend, a worship companion. This "friend" did not merely abandon the psalmist (see notes at 31:11 and 35:11-14), but actually participated in the malicious insults.

55:15 Going down to Sheol alive is reminiscent of the fate of those who followed Korah in his rebellion against God (Nm 16:31-33).

55:17 The phrase morning, noon, and night most likely implies constant prayer rather than specific times of prayer (22:2; 88:1; 119:164; 1Th 5:7).

55:19 Enthroned from long ago describes God's eternal rule beginning at creation (29:10; 45:6; Lm 5:19).

55:20 His covenant (Hb berith) in this context is not a reference to God's covenant with His people but is used in the more "secular" sense of a promise or oath made between people. Here it refers to one who does not fear God (v. 19) violating a friendship (vv. 12-14).

55:21 War . . . in his heart relates to the earlier term "harass" (v. 3), which refers to open hostility. The point here is that hostile speech comes from hostile intentions (Mt 12:34; Lk 6:45).

55:22 This verse is quoted in 1Pt 5:7. Similar constructions are used to describe committing one's way (Ps 37:5) and works (Pr 16:3) to Yahweh.

55:23 Pit is equivalent to "Sheol" (v. 15) and refers to death (see note at 28:1).

Ps 56 title A Silent Dove Far Away was probably a known song tune (see note at Ps 22 title). On Miktam, see note at Psalm 16 title. The historical setting for this psalm is the same as Psalm 34 (1Sm 21:10-11; see note at Ps 34 title).

56:1-2 Tramples (Hb sh'p) appears twice in these verses. There are two meanings for this Hebrew word: (1) "pant" or "long for" (Is 42:14; Jr 2:24) and (2) "crush" or "trample" (Ps 57:4; Am 8:4). Since the first of these is more common, some translations take that as the meaning here. However, the parallel terms fights and oppresses argue for the second meaning.

56:4 Man is literally "flesh" (Hb basar), which represents man's weakness and mortality (Is 2:22; 31:3; 40:6). This word is often used to contrast man's weakness with God's power (2Ch 32:8). The same words in verses 3-4 are repeated in verses 10-11.

56:5 Twist (Hb 'atsav) expresses the idea of "shape" or "fashion" (Jb 10:8). It portrays these enemies as shaping the psalmist's words into whatever they wanted for their own evil purposes.

56:6 Lurk describes the psalmist's enemies as predatory animals waiting to attack their prey (10:9; 17:12).

56:8 Tears probably refers to prayers or, more specifically, laments that involve crying. The bottle refers to God's storing of these prayers so He can act on them later. This is similar to the image of incense in Revelation to represent the prayers of the saints (Rv 5:8; 8:3-4). The records is similar to the "books of remembrance" referred to in Dn 7:10 and Mal 3:16.

56:12 Vows were commonly made during petition and fulfilled through thank offerings (see note at 22:25-26).

56:13 Light is used as a synonym for life (Jb 3:20) but also may represent joy (Is 9:2) and salvation (Is 58:8). See notes at Ps 27:1 and 36:9.

Ps 57 title Do Not Destroy was probably a known song tune of the time (see note at Ps 22 title). On Miktam, see note at Psalm 16 title. There are two possibilities for the historical setting of this psalm, both of which involved David fleeing from Saul and going into a cave (1Sm 22:1; 24:1-3; cp. Ps 142).

57:1 On shadow of Your wings, see notes at 17:8 and 27:5.

57:2 Most High emphasizes God's sovereignty over the whole earth (see note at 7:17).

57:3 On tramples, see note at 56:1-2.

57:4 Enemies are often portrayed as lions that devour people (see notes at 7:1-2 and 14:4). Tongues probably refers to their speech, which is often destructive (see note at 52:2).

57:5 Glory (Hb kavod) carries the idea of "heavy" or "weighty" in the sense of important (see word study at 24:7-10). God's glory can either be a physical manifestation, such as that which came down on the ark of the covenant (Ex 40:34-35), or used to represent His significance, perhaps connected with His reputation or "name" (Ps 29:2; 66:2). In this verse His significance is over the whole earth, meaning beyond anything on earth. Verse 11 repeats the same words as verse 5.

57:6 The desire for enemies to fall into their own traps is a common request in these types of prayers (see note at 7:14-16).

57:8 My soul here is literally "my glory" from the same Hebrew word (kavod) as verse 5. Here it represents the person but creates an interesting wordplay within the psalm.

57:9 The praise . . . among the peoples and nations demonstrates that Yahweh's authority is over all the nations of the earth (see notes at 18:49 and 22:27-31).

Ps 58 title On Do Not Destroy, see note at Psalm 57 title. On Miktam,* see note at Psalm 16 title.

58:1 The Hebrew word for mighty ones is 'elim. Sometimes it refers to angelic beings or the gods of the nations (see note at 29:1), but here it refers to people (note esp. the reference to birth in 58:3). The combination of righteously (referring to justice) and judge shows that they were most likely rulers or judges who were responsible for rendering justice. The designation "mighty ones" is sarcastic since this is how they viewed themselves.

58:2 Injustice in your hearts contrasts with the fact that they were responsible for judging fairly (v. 1). The "heart" was often used to depict the place of one's motives (see notes at 17:3-5 and 44:21) as well as the human will where decisions were made (1Sm 7:3; 1Kg 8:47-48).

58:3 This verse has been used to argue for the doctrine of original sin, but the subject is restrictive, having in view the wicked and liars rather than humanity in general. We know from elsewhere (e.g., Rm 3:23) that it is not just the wicked and liars who go astray and err. Speaking of the wicked and liars specifically, the psalmist traces their errant ways to the womb and birth not in a bid to argue that they are constituted differently from the general population, but rather to express the deep-rootedness of their sinfulness. See note at 51:5.

58:4-5 The comparison of these wicked rulers to a snake emphasizes their deadliness (their venom). The other main point of comparison is stopping up their ears and not listening to charmers. In the context of judging, it probably refers to not listening to someone's case and therefore not rendering justice fairly.

58:6 The imagery of lions is common for enemies (see note at 7:1-2). Since the power of predatory animals was in their teeth, the psalmist requested that they be knocked out.

58:7 The vanishing water here may be a reference to a wadi, a seasonal stream that flowed only during the rainy season. The rest of the time it was nothing more than a dry river bed (or valley).

58:8 The image of the slug and its slime seems to reflect a common perception in the ancient world that the slug was melting away as it moved along.

58:9 Thorns were often used as fuel to heat food in pots. Therefore, this implies the swiftness of God's judgment (see notes at 37:10 and 37:36).

58:10 Seeing retribution and washing one's feet in . . .
blood (spilled blood or death) are parallel concepts. Though the second image is more vivid, the point is the same—the righteous will witness God's judgment on these wicked rulers.

58:11 God's judgment on the wicked will be a lesson for all people. The lessons are that Yahweh is a God of justice, and He is not distant and removed but is involved in matters on earth (82:8; 94:2; Gn 18:25).

Ps 59 title On Do Not Destroy, see note at Psalm 57 title. On Miktam,* see note at Psalm 16 title. The "him" in the phrase kill him refers to David. The background for this setting is found in 1Sm 19:11.

59:2 Men of bloodshed is literally "men of blood." It refers to those who were known for their violence (5:6; 26:9; 55:23), in this case those who desired the death of the psalmist.

59:4 No fault of mine is a statement of innocence, meaning that the psalmist had done nothing to provoke the attacks of his enemies (see note at 7:3-5).

59:5 LORD God of Hosts is a military image that describes Yahweh as a warrior who fights for His people (see note at 24:7-10).

59:6-7 Dogs were not domesticated and had a negative connotation in the ancient Near East. They were viewed no differently than other wild and dangerous animals (see note at 22:20-21). Prowling is also characteristic of wild dogs foraging for food. Note the same image in verses 14-15. Spewing from their mouths perhaps pictures dogs slobbering or foaming at the mouth. Sharp words is a common description of vicious speech (see note at 52:2).

59:8 God's response to these wicked people was to laugh at them and ridicule them (see notes at 2:4 and 37:12-13).

59:9 Keep watch pictures the psalmist as a watchman, a common role for Israel's prophets (Is 21:11-12; Ezk 3:17; 33:2-9). The watchman warned people of foes, but also watched for the approach of friends (2Sm 18:27; Is 52:8).

59:11 Unlike other psalms that call for annihilation of the wicked, this psalm asks that Yahweh spare their lives so His people will not forget. This reinforces the image of the watchman in verse 9 since God's power and His punishment of them could no longer be used to warn people (Ex 9:16; 1Sm 17:46).

59:12 The request that the wicked be caught in their pride is reminiscent of enemies being caught in their own traps (see note at 7:14-16). The idea of pride (Gk hubris) as that which leads to one's demise became a common element in Greek tragedies of later centuries.

59:13 The wicked are often pictured as those who consume others (see note at 14:4). In a turn of poetic justice, Yahweh consumes them.

59:16 Praising Yahweh in the morning is common in the psalms (5:3; 30:5).

Ps 60 title The Lily of Testimony was perhaps a known song tune of the time (see note at Ps 22 title). On Miktam, see note at Psalm 16 title. The additional term teaching indicates that this psalm had the purpose of instruction, although it is not specifically a wisdom psalm according to its form. The historical setting is quite specific about an incident in David's life. This is found in 1Ch 18:3,12. As in other psalms with a specific setting (such as Ps 18), the language of the psalm is general enough to be applied in other contexts.

60:1 Rejected us indicates that this is a communal lament similar to Psalm 44.

60:2 The shaking of the land could refer to an actual earthquake, though it can also represent Yahweh's power. In this case it is in the context of judgment on His people (see note at 18:7-15).

60:3 Drinking wine that makes one stagger is an image related to God's judgment, usually represented by His "cup" (Is 51:17,22).

60:4 A signal flag is probably the same as a "banner," which was used primarily in military campaigns (see note at 20:5).

60:5 Yahweh's right hand refers to His power that was demonstrated in His actions against His enemies and on behalf of His people (see note at 16:8).

60:6-8 The place names in these verses are probably used to represent the whole territory of Canaan, which was owned by Yahweh and given to His people (see note at 10:16-18). Shechem was in the north (40 miles north of Jerusalem). Succoth was east of the Jordan River near the Jabbok River. Gilead and Manasseh were both on the eastern side of the Jordan, together extending from the south (the Arnon River) to the extreme north (the hill country of Ephraim) . . . Moab . . . Edom, and Philistia were never a permanent part of Israel but represented the outer extremes of Israel's territory to the east, south, and west, respectively. The helmet probably represents Ephraim's military strength (Dt 33:17). Judah received God's scepter, which was the right to rule over His kingdom (Gn 49:10).

60:10 Yahweh no longer seemed to fight for His people (see note at 44:9; cp. 108:11).

60:11-12 Only with God did Israel have any hope to conquer her enemies because human weaponry and armies without God were worthless (see note at 20:7-8).

61:2-3 The verb translated without strength (Hb 'tp) is used with other subjects such as "spirit" to describe exhaustion (77:3; 142:3; 143:4; Jnh 2:7). On rock and refuge, see notes at 18:1-2 and 31:1-4.

61:4 Your tent seems to be used in a way similar to "house" or "temple" as a figurative reference to Yahweh's presence. Being in Yahweh's presence is the hope of all the faithful (see note at 15:1). On shelter of Your wings, see notes at 17:8 and 27:5.

61:5 The vows here are most likely those made during a time of petition. They were to be fulfilled by a thank offering (see notes at 22:25-26 and 50:14-15). Note the same idea in 61:8.

61:6-7 The request of a long life for the king was sometimes used in the context of protection from harm, but in its broader sense it meant the longevity of a dynasty (see note at 21:4). The promise of being enthroned . . . forever and having God's faithful love is closely related to the language of the Davidic covenant (2Sm 7:13,15-16).

Ps 62 title On Jeduthun, see note at Psalm 39 title.

62:1 Rest (Hb dumiyah) expresses the idea of silence. In 22:2 it is used with a negative ("not silent") to describe the restlessness of actively praying for something. Here it most likely refers to rest in the sense of waiting on Yahweh and feeling secure that He will answer prayer and protect the psalmist. It appears as a command in 62:5.

62:2 On rock and other terms here and in verses 6-8, see notes at 18:1-2 and 31:1-4.

62:3 The enemies described here have the common characteristic of oppressing those who were weak or vulnerable, like a leaning wall and tottering . . . fence.

62:4 High position indicates that the person being attacked by these enemies was a person of some importance, perhaps a leader. It could refer to the king himself.

62:8 Pour out your hearts is an idiom for opening up to God with all one's requests (42:4; 102:1; 142:2). It is joined with the idea of trust to indicate that through prayer a person can rely on God to meet his needs.

62:9-10 Vapor (Hb hevel) represents lack of significance or the fleeting nature of life (see note at 39:4-6). It is parallel with exalted men, showing the contrast between human perception and reality. Since vapor literally refers to a small puff of air, the idea of weighing it on scales is absurd. All who think of themselves as prominent weigh less than a vapor. Trusting in anything other than God is futile. The mention of wealth in this way is developed elsewhere (see notes at 49:6 and 49:10-12).

62:11 Once . . . twice is used for emphasis to show that something has been repeated and is therefore significant (Jb 33:14; 40:5). In this case it is a lesson to be learned.

62:12 Repay refers to retribution (see note at 28:3-5).

Ps 63 title The historical setting for this psalm has less detail than other psalms and could refer to David's flight from Saul or from Absalom (1Sm 23:14; 24:2; 2Sm 16:14; 17:2,29).

63:1 On the connection between drought conditions and longing for Yahweh, see note at 42:1-2.

63:2 Gaze on You in the sanctuary is probably not a theophany but is similar to the idiom "looking to God" for help in the sense of trusting Him (see note at 34:5).

63:4 Lifting up hands is a gesture for praying (see note at 28:2).

63:5 Rich food is a combination of two Hebrew words for "fat," implying being satisfied beyond one's need. Fat represents prosperity in the OT (73:7; Dt 32:15; Jr 5:28).

63:6 On meditate (Hb hgh), see note at 1:2.

63:7 On shadow of Your wings, see notes at 17:8 and 27:5.

63:8 The right hand represented strength and the place from which Yahweh protected and helped His people (see note at 16:8).

63:9 The depths of the earth is another way of describing Sheol or death (86:13; Is 44:23; Ezk 26:20).

63:10 The first line is literally "they will be poured out on the hands of the sword," where "hands" refers to power. This is a more intensive way of expressing the idea of the psalmist's enemies receiving what was coming to them (Jr 18:21; Ezk 35:5).

63:11 Swear by Him is a way of saying that Yahweh is the only source of security. It is essentially another way of describing a person's trust in God. Yahweh's people are to boast only because they know Him (see notes at 34:2 and 52:1).

64:3 Sharpen is often used with tongues to describe destructive speech (55:21; 57:4; see note at 52:2).

64:4 Shooting from concealed places pictures the enemies hiding in ambush and waiting to strike without notice (10:8; 11:2). This was not open conflict but guerrilla warfare. Not afraid is perhaps an abbreviated way to say "no dread of God" (36:1).

64:5 The enemies did not believe God was paying attention (see notes at 10:3-6 and 14:1).

64:6 The heart is mysterious in the sense that it is full of concealed wickedness, as revealed in actions (Pr 12:20; Jr 17:9).

64:7 God takes on the role of warrior (7:12), with the picture of Him shooting arrows at the psalmist's enemies, even while they were hiding and waiting to shoot the innocent (v. 4).

64:8 The phrase tongues work against them may be a reference to the enemies' provoking God through their destructive speech. Shaking the head was a gesture often associated with mocking (see note at 22:6-8).

64:9 One of the purposes in God's punishment of the wicked is to teach others (see note at 59:11).

65:1 Vows were often used in the context of prayer and were fulfilled with thank offerings (see notes at 22:25-26 and 50:14-15).

65:2 All humanity is literally “all flesh” and refers to the eschatological hope of mankind as a whole trusting in Yahweh and coming to Him in prayer and worship (86:9; Is 2:2-4; see note at Ps 22:27-31).

65:3 The Hebrew word for atone (kpr) is difficult to define since its origin is uncertain. The two most likely options are “cover” and “cleanse.” When sin is its object (as it is here), it is probably another way of describing forgiveness. On other expressions for forgiveness, see note at 32:1-2.

65:4 On happy, see note at 1:1. In Your courts is equivalent to house and temple, all of which represent being in Yahweh’s presence. The goodness probably refers to spiritual refreshment that a person experiences in God’s presence. This is often pictured as a feast (23:5; 36:8) and may refer to a sacrificial meal.

65:5-8 The language here is reminiscent of other texts where Yahweh demonstrates His power over all . . . the earth because all of it is His by right of creation (see note at 24:1-2). The connection between roar of the seas and tumult of the nations is significant since the nations are often represented by the restless and chaotic sea (see note at 2:1).

65:9-10 Visit (Hb pqd) describes God’s grace and provision, especially in times of need (“paid attention” in Ru 1:6). Since water is the sustainer of life, God’s provision of water identifies Him as the source and sustainer of life.

65:11-13 Crown the year with Your goodness refers to a year “adorned” with blessings. The repetition of overflow symbolizes abundance of blessing. This also relates to the image of water flowing all over the land, not as a disastrous flood but as that which brings nourishment to everything.

66:1-4 All the earth signifies all mankind. Israel’s praise of Yahweh has the purpose of leading everyone to praise Him (see note at 22:27-31).

66:5-6 One example of God’s “works” (v. 3) is given here: Israel’s crossing of the Red Sea when God delivered them from Egypt. These acts benefited humanity; Israel would be the conduit through which God would redeem the world.

66:7 Although God rules over the earth by right of creation, His saving acts toward Israel represented His intervention in history and demonstrated His sovereignty over the world. His eye on the nations means that He pays close attention to what is happening and that He can act at any time (see note at 33:13-15).

66:9 The image of feet not slipping off the path of righteousness is connected with remaining physically and spiritually alive (19:10-11; Dt 30:20; Pr 10:30).

66:10 Refining was a process for testing and purification. It can describe the testing of motives and integrity (26:2; Pr 17:3; 27:21). It often depicts a time of severe trials meant to purify God's people (Is 1:25; 48:10; Jr 9:7; Zch 13:9; Mal 3:2-3).

66:11 Lured us into a trap indicates that the people were unaware of what God was doing. If this is related to the time of Egyptian bondage, there is a possible link to Joseph's situation of being caught in a trap and sold into slavery. This event led Israel into Egypt, and later burdens were placed on their backs.

66:12 Men riding over the heads is a description of oppression. There is also perhaps an allusion to the chariots of Egypt. Fire and water are used elsewhere in the context of trials (Is 43:2), but they may also allude to God's pillar of fire and the water of the Red Sea. Since they are transitional from the burdens (Ps 66:11-12) to the blessings (v. 12), it is possible that there is a double meaning here.

66:13-15 These offerings represent the fulfillment of vows made during a time of prayer (see notes at 22:25-26 and 50:14-15). Considering the quantity being offered, it is possible that this represents others who were joining in as a result of God's answer to prayer. This reinforces the connection between God's work in the life of a person and His work in the community.

66:16 Public testimony and praise is a responsibility of those who have experienced answered prayer (see note at 22:22-24).

66:18-19 Awareness of malice means that a person is conscious of wrong motives. Hypocrisy is a barrier in one's relationship with God and is reflected in God's refusal to listen to prayer (Is 59:2-4). The fact that God did answer proves there was no hypocrisy.

67:1-2 God's acts on behalf of His people have the greater purpose of bringing others into fellowship with Him (see note at 30:9).

67:3-5 The praise of the nations accomplishes the goal of bringing the whole world into the recognition of Yahweh's sovereignty (cp. "fear" in v. 7; see note at 22:27-31).

67:6 Harvest indicates the exact blessing that is the main point of this psalm. The blessing of one's crops was an outworking of God's covenant with His people as long as they were obedient to Him (Dt 28:4).

68:1-2 The image of Yahweh as a warrior who scatters the enemies of Israel is similar to Psalm 18. Smoke represents something insignificant that can easily be blown away (see note at 37:20). Melting wax recalls the image of Israel's enemies in the conquest of Canaan (Dt 20:8; Jos 2:11; 7:5).

68:4 Rides on the clouds overturns the common mythic imageries of Baal, the storm god of the Canaanites (19:1; 104:3; see note at 18:7-15).

68:5 Fatherless (see note at 10:12-15) and widows represented the weakest and most vulnerable members of society who were often the most oppressed (94:6). Yahweh Himself took on the role of their defender (Dt 10:18).

68:7-8 Went out before Your people perhaps alludes to the pillars of cloud and fire that led them in the desert (Ex 13:21) or to the ark of the covenant (Nm 10:35; Jos 3:14).

68:9 Rain is especially significant as that which allows crops to grow and feeds the people (see note at 65:9-10).

68:11-12 The women praise Yahweh for the spoils of war brought back by their husbands.

68:13 The image of a dove covered with silver and gold is especially difficult to interpret. Suggestions include prosperity, the glory of the Lord, plunder taken from enemies, and the women of verses 11-12 dressed in fine garments that were part of the plunder. Perhaps this last suggestion fits the context best, although it is uncertain.

68:14 Zalmon as a mountain is only mentioned one other place in the Bible (Jdg 9:48), but it is uncertain how snow relates to it here. It might be a reference to the scattered kings being tormented by bad weather from God.

68:15-16 Mount Bashan probably refers to the highest mountain in the region (Mount Hermon?). God's choice of the much smaller Zion made the higher mountains envious.

68:17 The repetition of thousands indicates that the armies under God's control cannot be counted (see note at 20:7-8).

68:21 Hairy head may refer to the ancient practice of wearing one's hair long as a symbol of power over others during a time of military campaigns. The biblical connections are the Nazirite vow (Nm 6:1-5) and the story of Samson (Jdg 13-16).

68:22-23 Bring them back is probably a reference to returning with enemies rather than the restoration of Israel, as some suggest. The enemies are brought to be executed (see note at 58:10).

68:24-26 This procession pictures the grand array of a king returning from battle. In this case it is Yahweh, the great King of Israel.

68:27 Benjamin, the youngest of Jacob's sons, is leading the procession. One interpretation is that this refers to Benjamin's dominion over the other tribes during Saul's reign, though it is difficult to say whether this psalm was written during that time. Another option is that Benjamin represents Jerusalem since it was technically in that tribe's territory. The southern kingdom was often called "Judah and Benjamin" (2Ch 11:1), and Zebulun and Naphtali might represent the north (1Ch 12:40). Perhaps the best option is that this procession mimics an earlier military campaign when Israel went to war against Sisera (Jdg 5:14).

68:29 Dominion over other peoples was often connected with the bringing of tribute to the dominant power. The dominion of God and His people over the other nations is part of the eschatological hope (see note at 22:27-31). Note also 68:31.

68:30 The beast in the reeds is perhaps a reference to Egypt (v. 31; Ezk 32:2), one of the greatest world powers of that time.

68:31 Stretching out hands is similar to spreading out one's hands in the context of worship (see note at 44:20), but in this case it probably pertains more to paying homage than to worshiping.

68:33-34 Rides in the . . . heavens along with the reference to clouds recalls the imagery of verse 4.

Ps 69 title On The Lilies, see note at Psalm 45 title.

69:1 -2 The imagery of being trapped in a well and sinking in mud was a common way to describe life-threatening danger (see note at 40:2). A flood is also used to represent disaster (see notes at 18:4-5 and 32:6-7).

69:3 Physical exhaustion and suffering are often the result of psychological pain (see note at 6:2-3).

69:4 The righteous being outnumbered by the wicked seems to run counter to the plan of God (see note at 3:1-2).

69:5 This amounts to a confession of sin so that there is no hypocrisy (nothing hidden) that becomes a barrier in the psalmist's relationship with God (17:1; 26:1; see note at 66:18-19).

69:6-7 Disgraced and humiliated because of me refers not to the psalmist's sins, which were "not hidden" (v. 5), but to his shame. The point is that others might lose their faith in Yahweh if the suffering of this psalmist is not relieved. This is the converse of the principle that a person's rescue by the Lord leads to the faith of others being strengthened (see notes at 22:22-24 and 30:4-5).

69:8 Stranger refers to an outsider (see note at 54:3). Alienation by friends and family members was a common experience of those who were suffering (see note at 31:11).

69:9 It is unclear how the psalmist's zeal for God's house (the sanctuary or temple) was expressed. Some suggest it refers to the rebuilding of the temple in the postexilic period, but this is not clear. It probably refers to his intense desire to be in Yahweh's presence, especially in the context of worship (27:4; 63:1-2; see notes at 42:1-2 and 42:4). The insults that were intended for Yahweh had fallen on the psalmist because of his close connection to God. He was identified with Yahweh, and therefore those who were against Yahweh were also against him. This is similar to the fact that God's enemies and those of His people are the same (139:21). In the NT, both halves of this verse are applied to Jesus and His humiliation (Jn 2:17; Rm 15:3).

69:10-12 On insults and joke (Hb mashal), see note at 44:13-16. On songs see

Jb 30:9 and Lm 3:13-14.

69:14-15 On the imagery in these verses, see note at verses 1-2. The deep and the Pit are parallel and represent death, which is personified as something that swallows its victims (see note at 28:1).

69:17 For God to hide His face implies rejection (see notes at 10:1-2 and 13:1-2).

69:20 The mention of comforters here is similar to Job's situation where his friends were unsympathetic (Jb 16:2).

69:21 Gall (essentially poison) and vinegar were by no means suitable for quenching thirst. These terms are used figuratively here, but in Jesus' suffering they were literal (Mt 27:34,48; Jn 19:28-29).

69:22 The set . . . table may refer to sacrificial meals rather than ordinary feasts. If that is the case, eating in Yahweh's presence with such "guilt" (v. 27) would be an affront to Him and a practice worthy of His wrath (vv. 23-25).

69:23-25 These requests are imprecations, calling down God's judgment on one's enemies (see note at 109:1-31). The request that their tents be made empty is a request that the enemies be annihilated.

69:26 The wicked were not willing to let Yahweh's discipline of the psalmist stand as correct and complete, but had added further insult and injury to it.

69:27 Guilt means liability for punishment (see note at 32:5). The psalmist's enemies were deserving of God's punishment.

69:28 The book of life should be distinguished from the book of remembrance with the prayers of those who suffer (see note at 56:8) and the book with a list of everyone's deeds (see note at 40:6-8). It is probably the book where the names of the righteous are listed (Ex 32:32; Dn 12:1; Rv 3:5; 13:8; 17:8; 20:12,15; 21:27).

69:30 This was most likely a vow made during petition that was fulfilled by a thank offering (see notes at 22:25-26 and 50:14-15).

69:31 God is more pleased with loving obedience than with sacrifice (see notes at 40:6-8 and 50:8-13). The horns indicate a bull in its prime, and the cloven hooves (Hb prs) designate a ceremonially acceptable animal.

69:32-33 On humble and needy, see notes at 34:6 and 35:10.

69:34-35 Creation is personified as a witness of God's workings with His people (see notes at 19:1 and 50:4). Here it voices its praise of God's saving work among His people.

Ps 70 title On remembrance, see note at Psalm 38 title.

70:1-5 See notes at 40:14-15 and 40:16-17; these verses are the same.

71:3 Rock . . . refuge, and fortress convey the idea of Yahweh's protection (see notes at 18:1-2 and 31:1-4).

71:5-6 The combination of youth . . . birth, and mother's womb shows that the psalmist had been loyal to Yahweh throughout his life. For always, note also verses 8 and 14.

71:7 Ominous sign (Hb mopheth) can refer to an extraordinary display of divine power to terrify enemies (Ex 7:3; 11:9; Dt 6:22) or an extraordinary sign that points to a future event (1Kg 13:3,5; Is 20:3). Here, the psalmist apparently displays evidence of suffering that many observers consider some kind of warning. It is similar to "I am dreaded" in 31:11.

71:9 Discard (Hb shlk) is a common word for "throw" or "cast." In this context it refers to God abandoning the psalmist (51:11), perhaps because of his loss of strength. Note also verse 12.

71:10-11 The psalmist's enemies assumed that God was no longer paying attention to him (Jb 19:13-21). No one to rescue him recalls similar texts that use the image of wild animals devouring their prey (7:2; 50:22).

71:13 On prayer for the disgrace of enemies, see notes at 35:26 and 40:14-15.

71:15-16 Righteousness and salvation are often paired in testimonies of God's mighty acts toward His people (40:10; 51:14). Public praise is the responsibility of a person who experiences deliverance by Yahweh (see note at 22:22-24).

71:17-18 The instruction of Yahweh in the psalmist's life is passed on to other generations. This was part of his vow to the Lord for delivering him from suffering.

71:19 Reaches heaven means "beyond comprehension" (36:5; 57:10) 71:20 On depths of the earth, see note at 63:9. The psalmist was brought up from the very edge of death.

71:22 Holy One of Israel is a favorite title for Yahweh in the book of Isaiah. Here it links the psalmist who is suffering with the nation of Israel and with Yahweh's covenant promises.

Ps 72 title Solomonic probably functions similarly to "Davidic" (Ps 127; see note at Ps 5 title). It could mean "authored by," "written for," or "in the style of."

72:1-4 Justice and righteousness are the dominant terms in these verses. They refer to the king's role of dispensing God's justice. The king of Israel was to function as Yahweh's royal representative and co-regent over His kingdom (see note at 45:6). When the king and the people were obedient, Yahweh would bring prosperity to the land (v. 16).

72:5 Continue may refer to a long reign or to a long dynasty, similar to the request that the king have a long life (see note at 21:4).

72:6-7 Rain symbolizes blessing (68:9; see note at 65:9-10) and is used here to request that the king's reign be blessed with prosperity.

72:8-11 This is a list of far distant places. Tarshish represents Phoenicia and Sheba represents Arabia. Seba could be somewhere in Africa; Josephus identified it with Ethiopia. The summary statement in verse 11 makes the point that these places represent all kings and all nations. On the dominion of Israel over all nations, see notes at 22:27-31 and 68:29.

72:12-14 The poor . . . helpless, and afflicted are the downtrodden in society. If a king rendered justice to the poor, his reign would be particularly blessed (Pr 29:14).

72:15 On the prayer for the king to live long, see note at 21:4.

72:16 These blessings recall those promised to Israel in God's covenant (Dt 28:2-14).

72:17-19 Name represents reputation and fame (see note at 20:1). It is significant that the name of the king and the name of Yahweh are intertwined in praise. Amen and amen probably form the end of a doxology used to close Book 2 of the Psalms (see note at 41:13).

72:20 These comments were probably added as part of the close of Book 2. This is similar in form to Jb 31:40 where "The words of Job are concluded." As in the case of Job, this does not mean that everything preceding the comment was from David. It seems to separate the previous psalms from the grouping of Asaph's psalms beginning with Psalm 73.

Ps 73 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

73:1 Indeed represents a certainty that the statement is true.

73:2 Feet almost slipped refers to slipping off the path of following Yahweh. This is the same as the path of life or righteousness (66:9; see note at 19:10-11). In this case "almost slipping" means almost losing faith in God.

73:3 Being envious of the prosperity of the wicked occurs elsewhere in the psalms. This is a common temptation when God's justice on the wicked is delayed (see note at 37:1).

73:4 Easy time and well fed refer to prosperity (v. 3). "Well fed" is literally "fat bellies," evidence of having more than a person needs (see notes at 17:10-12 and 63:5).

73:5 Like most people is an assessment from observation. From the psalmist's own experience, the degree of wickedness and prosperity seem to go together.

73:6 A necklace signified status and prominence (Dn 5:29); the wicked wore their pride as a status symbol. They also did not bother to hide their malicious violence.

73:7 Eyes and imaginations are parallel, representing the desires of the wicked in what they saw and thought. "Imagination" (Hb maskiyyoth) is also used of idols (Nm 33:52; Ezk 8:12). It has the connotation of "idols of the heart."

73:9 Heaven is a substitute for God Himself, so the mocking of the wicked is against God. The image of tongues strutting across the earth further emphasizes their brash arrogance.

73:10 His people could refer to those who were connected with these wicked people, but the shift from plural to singular is awkward. If "heaven" in verse 9 represents God, then it is the nearest singular antecedent. In this case the speech of the wicked even leads God's people astray, something this psalmist would not do with his words (v. 15).

73:11 It was a common belief among the wicked that God did not pay attention to them and would not punish them (Is 29:15; see notes at Ps 10:11 and 14:1). In fact, God does know everything (44:21; 139:1-12; Dn 2:2; Hs 7:2; Heb 4:13; 1Jn 3:20).

73:12 Always at ease means that the wicked did not seem to experience problems (v. 4).

73:13 Washing hands was part of an oath of innocence (see note at 26:6-7).

73:14 The psalmist's affliction was in stark contrast to the wicked's being "at ease" (v. 12).

73:15 In addition to the normal word for say (Hb 'mr), there is another word (Hb spr) meaning "recount" in the sense of something more developed. This is not just stating a fact but developing a story, which was obviously the psalmist's temptation. His "betrayal" would have been to undermine the faith of others.

73:16 Hopeless (Hb 'ml) is the same word as that in verse 5 translated "trouble." The wicked did not have trouble, but the psalmist's attempts to understand this phenomenon gave him nothing but trouble.

73:17 The phrase until I entered . . . then I understood has caused much speculation by scholars. Exactly what happened in the sanctuary? Suggestions include: the psalmist received an oracle from God, witnessed a theophany, or engaged in ritual acts. It is perhaps best to leave it unanswered and realize the main issue is that Yahweh's presence in the sanctuary enlightened the psalmist. This is what became the psalmist's hope later in verse 28 and seems to be reflective of the principle that nearness to Yahweh (close fellowship with Him) provides a change of perspective.

73:18 There is a contrast with the psalmist's feet "almost slipping" in verse 2 and the slippery places of the wicked.

73:19 Suddenly shows that, despite appearances, God's judgment on the wicked is sure and swift (see notes at 37:10 and 37:36).

73:20 The phrase waking from a dream could refer to the psalmist's own state before his change of perspective, but it probably refers to God's waking (arising, meaning "to act"; see notes at 7:6 and 35:23). The dream is equivalent to image and emphasizes as in verse 19 that the swift destruction of the wicked will make their former prosperity seem like a dream.

73:21-22 The psalmist's bitterness apparently blinded him and made him stupid like an animal (92:6).

73:23 Holding someone's right hand is used in some contexts to refer to honor (Is 45:1). Here it refers to protection (Ps 63:8; Is 41:10,13; 42:6; Jr 31:32).

73:24 Some argue that take me up in glory refers to being honored (similar to the image of the "right hand" in v. 23). However, there is no good reason to doubt that this could refer to life after death. The OT does not develop a thorough or consistent concept of life after death, but the afterlife could have been a belief in Israel, as it was among the other nations (Gn 5:24).

73:26 Flesh and heart probably refers to earthly existence, and they reinforce the idea of life after death from verse 24. A portion is another way of describing a person's inheritance (see note at 16:5-6).

73:28 The presence of Yahweh is the ultimate hope of those who trust Him (15:1; 21:6-7).

Ps 74 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

74:1 Sheep of Your pasture depicts Yahweh as the shepherd of Israel (100:3; see note at 23:1).

74:2 On remember, see note at 25:6-7. Purchased and possession denote Yahweh's ownership of Israel (see note at 28:8-9).

74:3 Everlasting ruins is used elsewhere to describe the annihilation of an enemy (9:6).

74:4 Roared depicts enemies as wild animals who have entered the sanctuary (22:13). Emblems are likely related to banners that were used in military campaigns to identify the armies (see note at 20:5).

74:5-6 The men with axes portrays highly energized destructive activity without thought or concern.

74:7 The dwelling place of Your name refers to the promise that Yahweh made to Israel about His presence among them (Dt 12:11). "Name" is sometimes used for Yahweh and often represents His presence among His people (see note at 20:1).

74:8 The allusion to multiple meeting places in the land probably does not refer to high places, which had been abolished by Josiah. Rather it probably includes the various locations in history where the sanctuary had been located—such as Shiloh (Jos 18:1; 1Sm 1:3), Mizpah (Jdg 20:1), Bethel (Gn 12:8; 1Sm 7:16), Gilgal (1Sm 10:8), and now Jerusalem.

74:9 Signs is parallel with prophet. It indicates that Yahweh was no longer speaking to His people—an indication of abandonment. The signs the people were apparently looking for were those that would answer their "why" (vv. 1,11) and “how long” (v. 10) questions.

74:10 How long emphasizes God’s delay in intervening (see note at 13:1-2). Enemies are often depicted as mocking and insulting those whom they oppress, who in this case was the nation of Israel (44:13-14).

74:11 The right hand was the place of Yahweh’s power (see note at 16:8).

74:12 God’s authority was demonstrated by His saving acts toward His people (see note at 66:7).

74:13 Sea monsters (Hb tanninim) is used elsewhere for serpents (91:13; Ex 7:10,12; Dt 32:33). It is parallel to “sea” in Jb 7:12 and to “Rahab” in Is 51:9. It probably refers to the great creatures of the sea that were untamable, but there could also be some connection to Canaanite beliefs. Baal was supposed to have defeated the seas, represented by seven-headed sea monsters, but in response to that mythology, Yahweh is depicted as the One who defeats these creatures by His power.

74:14 Leviathan also appears in other biblical texts (104:26; Jb 3:8; 41; Is 27:1). He represents the most fierce and powerful sea creature. Whether this creature can be linked to a specific animal in the known world is uncertain, although suggestions range from a crocodile to a dinosaur. There certainly is a connection in Canaanite mythology that links this creature with chaos. Therefore, God defeated chaos and fed him to the creatures of the desert, which could mean wild beasts.

74:15 Drying up ever-flowing rivers could be a reference to God’s saving acts at the Red Sea (Ex 14:21-22) or the Jordan River (Jos 3:15-17), the latter of which makes more sense for a river. Some have also suggested mythological imagery here, since Baal was supposed to have defeated the rivers by drying them up.

74:17 The boundaries of the earth could refer to the boundary between land and sea established at creation (Gn 1:9-10), but it is more likely the regularity of the seasons (Gn 1:14) since it is parallel to summer and winter.

74:19 Dove was a term of affection (Sg 6:9). It is used as a designation for Israel here.

74:20 Dark places of the land may be metaphorical for evil, or it could refer to places where enemies hid to attack the unsuspecting.

74:21 The words poor and needy often represent those who are faithful to Yahweh (see notes at 34:6 and 35:10).

74:22 Rise up is used to call God to act (see note at 7:6-8). Yahweh’s cause is the same as Israel’s, and He should act on behalf of His reputation.

Ps 75 title On Do Not Destroy, see note at Psalm 57 title. On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

75:1 Name represents Yahweh's presence among His people (see note at 20:1). Wonderful works can refer either to God's creative acts or to His saving acts on behalf of His people (see note at 9:1-2).

75:2 Choose a time refers to a "set" or "appointed" time, which in this case is God's time for judging. He is orderly in His actions and has appointed times for the seasons (Gn 1:14), the festivals of Israel (Lv 23:2), and a final time when He will bring His justice to the world (Dn 12:7).

75:3 "Shaking" probably refers to earthquakes that were regular occurrences in and around Israel. Pillars of the earth (1Sm 2:8; Jb 9:6) are equivalent to "foundations of the earth" (Jb 38:4; Ps 104:5; Pr 8:29; Is 51:13; Mc 6:2).

75:4 Horn was a symbol of power, often used in military contexts (see notes at 18:1-2 and 22:20-21). Lifting up a horn is parallel to boasting, probably about one's might. The only boasting appropriate for God's people is that they know Him (Jr 6:23-24; see note at Ps 34:2). Note also 75:10.

75:5 Against heaven means that this arrogance was directed against God Himself (see note at 73:9).

75:6 Exaltation is from the same Hebrew root (rum) as "lifting up" in verses 4-5, linking the two concepts together.

75:7 God is the Judge is a statement of His sovereignty and His right to bring down or exalt anyone He wants (147:6; 1Sm 2:6-7; Lk 1:52-53). This extends to the whole earth (Gn 18:25; see note at Ps 7:6-8).

75:8 Cup depicts God's judgment (60:3; Is 51:17; Jr 25:15,28; 49:12; 51:7). Since all the wicked of the earth are referred to, God's judgment will fall on all humanity.

75:9 On God of Jacob, see note at 20:1.

Ps 76 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

76:1 The ancient Near Eastern concept of the name reflects identity, reputation, and character. The combination of Judah and Israel in subsequent lines indicates all 12 tribes witnessed to God's name.

76:2 Salem is a shortened form of Jerusalem. Zion also refers to Jerusalem. The place where the name dwells is commonly associated with the divine presence of God. His tent should perhaps be rendered "booth" in this context. The Hebrew term sukkah refers to a hut built from intertwined tree branches. "Booth" nicely parallels dwelling place, a shelter protected by thick vegetation. "Booth" and "dwelling place" figuratively describe Yahweh's presence in the temple.

76:3 Flaming arrows, a metaphor for strength, can also mean "lightning bolts." The psalmist used imagery depicting Yahweh as a divine warrior who defeated the enemy (29:7; 78:48; Dt 32:24; Hab 3:5).

76:4 The psalmist addressed God directly, using the second person You. By calling God resplendent, he equated God's presence to "light," corresponding to verses 1-2. The Hebrew word min could indicate that God's majesty and strength exceed that of the mountains. The idea corresponds to the statement of victory in verse 3.

76:5 God's enemies do not show courage by challenging Him; instead, their actions demonstrate their stubborn nature (Is 46:12). They have slipped suggests that exhaustion eventually ended in permanent sleep, or death. Hand metaphorically refers to strength; the warriors could no longer find strength to fight.

76:6 Jacob refers to the 12 tribes descended from the patriarch. God's spoken word brings about miraculous events, causing waters to stand or divide (18:15; 104:7; Is 50:2) and people to perish (Ps 80:16). The rebuke of God, coupled with the mention of chariot and horse, alludes to the exodus event, a recurrent theme in the psalms of Asaph (Ex 15:1,4). The chariot and horse lay still, a term describing a comatose state or deep sleep. The metaphor for death (Ex 15:16) fits well with the imagery in Ps 76:5.

76:7 The repetition of You emphasizes the Lord. Fear of God is a combination of humility, obedience, awe, and respect. No creature that opposes God's righteous anger can endure in His presence (147:17; Nah 1:6).

76:8-9 The Hebrew term shaqat never denotes a silence or quietness derived from terror. So this is a reverent fear that stems from a sense of security and comfort as a result of God's correction of injustice and oppression. The Lord's righteousness produces hope, trust, and peace (Is 30:15; 32:17).

76:10 God uses all things to fulfill His divine will and purpose. Even human wrath serves to exalt God, perhaps because it is powerless to defy God or overthrow His justice.

76:11 A vow is a solemn promise or oath. God's people, encouraged to praise Him for deliverance from their enemies, bring sacrifices and offerings in gratitude. The faithful surround God to willingly bring worship, an ironic contrast to verse 10, where human wrath encompassed God but, despite contrary intentions, only managed to glorify Him.

Ps 77 title On Jeduthun, see note at Psalm 39 title. On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

77:1-3 This psalm begins with a lament, an intense longing to hear from God (see note at 22:1).

77:4-6 Pondering a time when the worship experience was better caused grief and sleeplessness.

77:7 Typical of Asaph psalms (74:1-2; 80:3-4; 83:1; 88:14), the psalmist characterized God's slow response as rejection and asked how long before the restoration of the Lord's favor.

77:8 Faithful love (Hb chesed) could be rendered as "covenant love" or "covenant loyalty" in this context (see word study at 136:1-26). The psalmist hoped an appeal to Yahweh's faithful love would persuade God to respond to the crisis. He used language normally associated with the exodus from Egypt and the appearance of God at Sinai.

77:9 Gracious and compassionate often occur together in poetic contexts. While grace parallels the idea of showing favor in verse 7, compassion derives from the Hebrew root meaning "womb," suggesting a filial relationship that parallels faithful love in verse 8. A literal rendering of the Hebrew text reads, "has He [God] closed up His womb in anger," a figurative expression denoting the absence of parental love and concern for His offspring.

77:10 God's right hand represents the power by which He works (60:5). God's immutability guarantees His unchangeable character. The psalmist was not claiming that God's nature had changed; instead, he was disappointed because God had responded differently than expected.

77:13 A hymn (vv. 13-20) immediately follows the end of the lament. God's way (Hb derek), the determination and exercise of His divine will, reflects His holy character. The rhetorical question What god is great like God often introduces incomparability statements in hymns emphasizing the Lord's sovereignty (18:31; Ex 15:11; 2Sm 22:32; Is 40:18), omnipotence (Ex 15:11; Dt 3:24; Ps 71:19; 89:8), omniscience (Is 44:7), stature (Ps 113:5; Is 40:25), and capacity for forgiveness (Mc 7:18).

77:14 God's strength, revealed through Israel's redemption from bondage, alludes to the exodus, which provided the paradigm against which Israel anticipated the Lord's deliverance from future enemies. The reference to "descendants of Jacob and Joseph" in verse 15 reinforces the exodus allusion.

77:15 With power is literally "by arm." By His powerful arm, God redeems, saves, and executes judgment (44:3; 89:13; 98:1; 118:15; Is 50:2; 51:5; 52:10; 59:1).

77:16-18 Using divine warrior imagery, the psalmist declared that cosmic upheaval accompanies God's presence (18:7-15; 114:3-5; Ex 19:16-19), and creation exults in worship before Him. The Lord's arrows (v. 17) refer to lightning bolts (29:7; 76:3). The storm language depicts His control over all of nature's forces.

77:19 Referring to Israel's procession through the parted waters of the Red Sea, the psalmist recalled the mysterious work of the Lord, who was unseen yet present.

77:20 The psalms of Asaph often use shepherd and flock imagery to emphasize the Lord's compassion and care.

Ps 78 title On Maskil, see note at Psalm 32 title. On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

78:1 The people are exhorted to listen to the Lord's instruction. Translating Hebrew torah as "law" obscures the essence of Torah as God's instructions for sustaining a relationship with Him (see note at 1:2).

78:2 The psalmist couched the epic psalm in terms of a riddle or paradox, describing Israel's inability to trust God despite God's repeated acts of faithfulness. The Hebrew word chiydoth means mysteries or "parables" (Nm 12:8; Jdg 14:12-19; Pr 1:6; cp. Mt 13:35).

78:5 A testimony or decree relates what is required of the Lord's people.

78:6-7 Reciting Israel's early history to future generations assures the perpetuation of the account. This would connect generations far removed from the original event to the promises and instructions governing Israel's relationship to God.

78:8 The goal was to educate the children so they did not become another stubborn and rebellious generation (66:7; Ex 17:1-7; Is 1:23; 30:1; 65:2). Israel continued to be disloyal to the Lord throughout the ages, despite His covenant loyalty and mercy.

78:9-10 The sons of Ephraim were well known for their military role as archers (Zch 9:13). They broke the covenant during the mutiny of the northern tribes.

78:12 God revealed Himself to Israel through His words and His ways. Zoan was a major Egyptian city that later became its capital (Is 19:11,13; 30:4; Ezk 30:14).

78:13 This verse describes the crossing of the Red Sea (Ex 14:21-22). The waters stood firm like a wall (lit "like a heap" 33:7; Ex 15:8; Jos 3:13,16).

78:14 Cloud and light refer to the pillars of cloud and fire representing the Lord's presence (Ex 14:19-20; 40:36-38).

78:15-16 Split rocks and stone describe water from the rock at Horeb and Meribah (Ex 17:1-7; Nm 20:7-11).

78:17 Compare verses 17-20 with verses 56-58. The Israelites continued to be rebellious (lit "bitter, strive") against Moses and the Lord. Compare the reversal of drought in Isaiah as a metaphor for the restoration of fertility in Israel following the exile (107:35; Is 53:2; Jr 2:6; 50:12; 51:43).

78:18-20 The Israelites tested God (see note at 95:8-9; cp. 1Co 10:8), presuming that He could not provide food (lit "prepare a table"; see note at 23:5).

78:21-22 The Lord sent fire in punishment (Nm 11:1-3) as the consequences of the Israelites' disbelief (Dt 9:23; Jnh 3:4-5).

78:23-25 Manna was the basic food that sustained Israel during the wilderness wanderings (Ex 16:4-5). This is the only place in the OT where the Hebrew word 'abbirim (lit "strong, powerful ones," "valiant ones") refers to angels (Jb 24:22; 34:20).

78:26-31 When Israel murmured against God and desired meat, the Lord sent quail (winged birds; Nm 11:18-20,31-35). Then God became angry that they had complained about their "hardship" (Nm 11:1) and punished them with a plague.

78:33 Israel's history was filled with conflict and oppression, and she spent her years in contention with foreign nations (2:5; 48:6; 83:16; 104:29; Ex 15:15; Is 13:8). The people's lives were short and marked by fear.

78:34-35 Following divine discipline, Israel sought God (Is 26:9; Hs 5:15). Rock and Redeemer refer to the power and salvation of the Lord (18:31; 19:14; Gn 49:24; Dt 32:4,15).

78:36-39 Israel's worship of the Lord was insincere and hypocritical. Their actions did not reflect their words (Ac 8:21). God consistently forgave Israel's sin and restrained His anger because of humanity's weakness and transitory nature (Ps 78:35,39,41).

78:42 Although the Lord remembered Israel by redeeming them from the enemy, they did not remember God (vv. 35,39,41).

78:44-51 The plagues described in these verses do not follow the sequence in Exodus (Ex 7-11). Egypt suffered rivers of blood (Ex 7:14-24), flies (Ex 8:20-32), locust (Ex 10:1-15), hail (Ex 9:13-26), and the death of the firstborn (Ex 11:1-11). The tents of Ham is a name for Egypt (105:23,27; Gn 10:6).

78:52-53 On leading Israel as a flock through the sea, see note at 77:20.

78:54 To His holy land is literally "the border of His holiness." This mountain cannot be Zion since the events at the sanctuary at Shiloh preceded Zion chronologically (v. 60).

78:55 The conquest and settlement of Canaan is recorded in Joshua 6-22.

78:58 The high places were separate sanctuaries and altars constructed for the worship of pagan gods.

78:60 The total rejection of Israel manifested itself by the departure of the Lord's presence from the sanctuary at Shiloh, an early shrine in Canaan where Joshua housed the ark in the tent of meeting.

78:61 His strength to captivity is a reference to the capture of the ark by the Philistines (1Sm 4-6). The ark symbolized the power and presence of the Lord among His people, and it often preceded Israel in battle (Jos 6:6-14).

78:62-64 These verses refer to the judgment suffered by Israel following the loss of the ark.

78:65 A figurative expression describing the Lord's delay, the waking of the Lord indicates His resumption of deliverance and the conclusion of His punishment (35:23; 44:24; 59:5-6). The imagery pictures rousing the divine warrior from sleep to do battle (1Kg 18:27; Is 42:13-16; 51:9-11).

78:67-68 The elevation of Judah over Ephraim as the location of the Lord's temple and the center of the Davidic monarchy resulted in part from Ephraim's failure to protect the ark when it was in Shiloh. The text reinforces the Lord's choice of Zion as His dwelling place.

78:70-71 David was selected from among the common shepherds of Israel to rule over Jacob. The Lord often uses those who are least important to serve in important leadership roles.

78:72 David served his kingly role with integrity and care, shepherding God's people and guiding them with wisdom (77:20).

Ps 79 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

79:1 The nations invaded Jerusalem in 586 B.C. and desecrated the temple. The cultic term "desecrated" or "defiled" means "to make ceremonially unclean." Verses 1-3 indicate the extensive nature of the devastation since the enemies destroyed Israel's place of worship and harmed the Lord's people.

79:2 Normal burial practices in Israel included wrapping the deceased carefully to preserve them and burying the bodies in family plots (cp. Dt 28:26). Consequently, leaving the bodies exposed to the elements where they were consumed by animals signifies humiliation and insult.

79:3 The life is in the blood (Gn 9:4-6), so blood was sacred for ritual but unfit for consumption. The violation of God's people consisted of illegal bloodshed and the outpouring (Hb shaphak) of blood for consumption by animals.

79:4 Jerusalem's inhabitants had become an object of reproach (lit "a taunt"), mocked, and "ridiculed" (lit "cursed" or "shamed"; see note at v. 12).

79:5 How long reflects the frustration of the psalmist, who connected the absence or abandonment of God with His failure to respond immediately to the plight of Jerusalem's citizens (see note at 13:1-2). By focusing on the duration of the Lord's anger, the psalmist presumed an end to judgment and eventual restoration.

79:6 The psalmist asked God to redirect His anger to the nations. Since Babylon poured out the blood of God's people, He should pour out His anger on the enemy. The ironic request in this verse is one of a number of wordplays in this psalm that appeal to God to invoke a reversal of vengeance (see notes at 7:14-16 and 79:12). Kingdoms that don't call on Your name is a common idiom distinguishing between the Lord's people and those who opposed Him.

79:7 As the birds and beasts consumed the corpses as food (Hb ma'akal; v. 2) and the nations made ruins of Jerusalem (v. 1), so the enemy has devoured (Hb 'akal) Jerusalem and devastated Judah's territory.

79:8 The cultic term translated hold is idiomatic and literally means "to remember." When the Lord ceased to remember sin, the transgression no longer existed.

79:9 The psalmist's appeal to the glory of God's name evokes all the Lord's previous saving activity on behalf of His people. Moses served as a mediator following the golden calf incident (Ex 32) and prayed for forgiveness for the people so the Lord's name and reputation among the nations would be glorified. The divine name, characterized by mercy and compassion coupled with holiness and judgment, provides the basis to atone ("wipe off, cleanse, cover"; see note at 65:3) Judah's iniquities (78:38).

79:10 The rhetorical question asked by the nations, Where is their God, echoes the response of Israel's enemies to her destruction (42:3; Jl 2:17; Mc 7:10). Calamity and oppression often represent the absence of God's protection. Vengeance refers to divine retribution, a privilege belonging to God alone. Be known among the nations could be translated "be poured out upon the nations," preserving the wordplay on the Hebrew root shophek , "pour out" in verses 3,6.

79:11 In a wordplay, the groans of the prisoners evoke God's "avenging of blood" (v. 10). Those condemned to die literally reads "sons of death."

79:12 Pay back sevenfold emphasizes the enduring nature of the vengeance God will inflict upon the nations (Gn 4:15,24; Lv 26:18,21,24). Just as Jacob became a taunt to her neighbors (see note at Ps 79:4), so the psalmist asked the Lord to return the reproach (lit "taunts") that they had hurled (lit "taunted") at the Lord.

Ps 80 title On The Lilies, see note at Psalm 45 title. On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

80:1 The imperative form for listen is a polite request, as from an inferior to his superior. Shepherd of Israel is a metaphor indicating God's intimate relationship with His people as protector and provider (23:1; 121:4). This metaphor connects this psalm with the concluding verse of Psalm 79. Joseph was a name for Israel normally associated with the northern tribes. Enthroned on the cherubim refers to the ark of the covenant upon which the presence of the Lord resided, emphasizing His kingship (18:10; 97:2; 99:1). The ark, sometimes referred to as the "footstool of the Lord," preceded Israel in holy battle. Rise up is meant in the sense that a star rises; it could mean "shine forth," reflecting the coming of the Lord in His glory (94:1; Dt 33:2).

80:2 Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh represent the tribes of Israel, settled in central Palestine. "Benjamin" means "son of the right hand," an allusion to verses 15,17. Rally is an allusion to Is 63:15,17 in language referring to God's inactivity.

80:3 The psalmist called on God to restore us, returning the people to their previous state of blessing. Look on us with favor is literally "let your face shine," a reference to the priestly blessing in Nm 6:25.

80:4 The psalmist appealed to the LORD God of Hosts. This evokes divine warrior language, typical imagery in ancient Near Eastern cultures. Since Israel's current circumstances were a direct result of God's judgment, the writer asked how long (cp. 79:5; 83:1; 88:14), focusing on the duration of God's wrath.

80:5 Grief (the bread of tears) was the only sustenance for the psalmist in the midst of persecution. Tears as a source of food or drink denotes the lack of God's intervention (42:3).

80:7 Repetition of the refrain from verse 3 (restore us) forms a natural break in the transition to the second part of the psalm.

80:8 Vine from Egypt alludes to the exodus (Ex 15:17). However, the metaphor extends as far back as Joseph (Gn 49:22), who is characterized as a fruitful vine. Early imagery of Israel as a sprout or branch planted by the Lord in Canaan reached full development in the prophets, particularly Jeremiah, who used the planting metaphor throughout his book (Jr 1:10; 12:10; Ezk 17:1-10; 19:10-14).

80:9-11 The expansion of the vine denotes the spread of territorial and political influence. The Davidic empire eventually occupied territory in Canaan extending from the Mediterranean Sea to the Euphrates River.

80:12-13 Linguistic and contextual similarities between verses 12-13 and imagery in Is 5:1-7 suggest an intentional allusion to the prophet. The vineyard walls protected the crop from wild animals. In Isaiah, the Lord planted a vineyard and tended it carefully, yet the plants produced bad fruit (Is 5:1-4). Consequently, the Lord removed the protective hedges surrounding the vineyard and compromised the walls (Is 5:5), rendering the land barren and useless (Is 5:6). The vineyard, representing Israel, belonged to the Lord of Hosts, and the plants corresponded to the people. Similarly, God permitted the break in the wall protecting the vineyard (Israel), giving boars (foreigners) access to the fruit (Israel).

80:14 In a sequential list of actions (return . . . look down . . . see; take care), the people's perceived absence of God relates to suffering, captivity, and oppression. The turning away of God's face (v. 3) indicates God's refusal to respond. The psalmist implored Yahweh to “turn” His attention back toward the nation and restore it (Is 63:15-18).

80:15 The right hand signifies a privileged position or serves as the instrument that executes divine action. Root (lit “stem or shoot”) occurs only here. Shoot is never used literally in an agricultural sense and always denotes a living being, in this case alluding to the “son of man” in verse 17.

80:16 The Lord Himself planted the root (Israel) and nurtured it, only to permit its destruction in judgment. At the rebuke of Your countenance signifies that sinful people could not survive in the presence of God.

80:17 Let your hand be denotes a request from a subordinate to a superior. The transfer of divine power flows through God’s hand and into his agent. The man at Your right hand is usually a king (110:1; cp. Is 45:1) who received divine appointment and approval. In the NT, Christ is seated at the right hand of God, identical with God in authority, power, and holiness (Heb 1:3).

Ps 81 title On Gittith see note at Psalm 8 title. On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

81:1 Jacob is a designation for the 12 tribes of Israel, who all serve one God.

81:3 The assembly blew the horn (Hb shophar) to herald the beginning of a cultic celebration or before entering into battle. A new moon marked the beginning of festivities, which concluded with the full moon. According to the Hebrew calendar, this time paralleled a series of cultic activities celebrated during two weeks of autumn.

81:4 A feast stipulated by the Torah indicates that the song accompanied one of three great cultic celebrations. Judgment means “ordinance” in this context.

81:5-6 Psalms of Asaph frequently mention Joseph as a designation for Israel (50; 73; 83). The song does not refer to the historical person Joseph, but to Israel as Joseph’s descendants. The formal establishment of the law occurred long after Joseph’s death and only after Israel departed from Egypt. The unfamiliar language (lit “a tongue I did not know”) does not refer to a divine oracle or prophetic utterance, but to direct communication between God and His people during the exodus. Israel heard and understood God. Although the psalmist was not present, the exodus events of the past were clearly understood by the present community. The Lord freed Israel from the burden of Egyptian bondage. During Israel’s slavery under Pharaoh, the workers used a basket to carry bricks and construction materials.

81:7 Along with verse 6, this verse recollects the exodus and the Lord’s faithful response to the suffering of His people. Yahweh spoke to Israel from the thundercloud (lit “from hidden thunder”) in the desert. The thundercloud evokes the appearance of God in Exodus 19. During the sojourn in the wilderness, Rephidim, renamed Meribah (see note at Ex 17:1-7), was the place where the Israelites tested Yahweh's faithfulness and ability to provide water. However, the psalmist depicted the event as one in which the Lord tested Israel's faithfulness and dependence on Him.

81:8 The Hebrew concept of hearing—shema—is the central theme of the psalm. Hearing involves obedience to instruction. Thus, a person does not truly hear God without a response of obedience. Admonish conveys the meaning of "warn" or "testify." If Israel had listened to the Lord, she would have experienced victory and prosperity (vv. 14-15).

81:9 The phrase there must not be a strange god recalls the first of the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:3-4; Dt 5:7-8). The current plight of the Lord's people resulted from idolatrous practices. God's resolution of Israel's situation presupposed their obedience.

81:10 A formulaic expression I am Yahweh your God (Ex 6:6-8; Dt 20:1; Jdg 6:13) recollects the revelation of God to Moses (Ex 3:14). Open your mouth wide, and I will fill it describes Yahweh's faithful provision.

81:11-12 Israel refused to listen to the Lord, as shown by her failure to respond. Did not obey expresses an unwillingness to yield to the leadership of Yahweh. Therefore, as a result of their covenant disobedience, Yahweh relinquished His people to their stubborn hearts (Dt 29:18; Jr 3:17; 7:24; 23:17). Israel demonstrated her arrogance by taking pride in her own reasoning faculties and ignoring the counsel of God.

81:15 Those who hate the LORD include any individual or nation who refused to hear Him and to follow His covenant stipulations.

81:16 Two phrases, the best wheat and honey from the rock, allude to Dt 32:13-14. In Deuteronomy 32, Moses recounted the history of Yahweh's relationship with Israel, noting Israel's frequent rebellion against Him. When Yahweh first established His people in Canaan, the nation enjoyed prosperity and peace. The people eventually became too comfortable in God's providence and failed to keep God's law. The passage from Deuteronomy provides the interpretive model for this psalm.

Ps 82 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

82:1 The phrase God has taken His place indicates sentencing or judgment in progress (74:22; 94:2; Is 3:13; 33:10) since judges normally sat (Ex 18:14; Jdg 4:5; Is 28:6). The divine assembly has its equivalents in Ugaritic, Mesopotamian, and Egyptian mythology, where it refers to "lesser gods" in a pantheon. In the OT, the designation either refers to heavenly servant beings (103:19) or judges and governors appointed by God as political leaders (Ex 21:6; 22:8; 2Ch 19:5-6). The Scriptures place God in the presence of a divine council consisting of good and evil spirits (1Kg 22:19-22), sometimes designated as “sons of God” (Jb 1:6-12; Ps 82:6). The emphasis on judgment (vv. 1-3,8) reinforces the failure of God’s servants.

82:2 God formally indicted the appointed officials for social injustice since their decisions favored those who were wicked.

82:5 The psalmist characterized the officials as those who did not know or understand, using language reminiscent of the impotent idols often depicted by the prophet Isaiah as blind, deaf, mute, and powerless (Is 44:9,18; 46:1-2,6-7; Jr 10:3-5). The distorted administration of justice disrupted the cosmic order as originally intended by God, threatening the foundations on which God had established the world.

82:6-7 Kings who failed to perform responsibly and ethically deserved death. The concept finds support in the book of Ezekiel (Ezk 28:1-19), where the Lord banished His divine servant, the king of Tyre, from His presence to die like a common man.

82:8 The Lord as Creator and King restores cosmic balance through the exercise of divine judgment on the nations.

Ps 83 title On Asaph, see note at Psalm 50 title.

83:1 A communal lament, this final psalm of Asaph makes three urgent requests of Yahweh. Using terms generally attributed to lifeless, false gods (81:9), the community seeks God's response to the current crisis.

83:2 In contrast to the Lord's silence and apparent inactivity (v. 1), the adversaries made an uproar, lifting their heads in a defiant gesture of independence.

83:3 The imagery in verses 3-5 echo 2:1-3, without the messianic emphasis. Nations "rebel" and "plot" (2:1), gathering together to challenge the Lord and His anointed (2:2-3). Similarly the enemies "make an uproar" (83:2), devise clever schemes, and conspire against God's treasured ones (lit "sheltered, protected ones"; Is 7:5-6; 17:12-13).

83:4 The rare Hebrew term for wipe . . . out denotes complete annihilation, making it as if it had never existed (9:4-6; Ex 23:23; 1Kg 13:34).

83:6-7 While the context implies that all 10 enemy nations originated from Lot (v. 9), only Moab and Ammon descended from him (Gn 19:36-38). The nations listed here divide into two separate groups. The Ishmaelites and the Hagrites are synonymous with Moab and Edom. The remaining nations make up a familiar list of all Israel's fiercest enemies, with the exception of Gebal, about which little is known.

83:8 Assyria, as the enemy par excellence, lent support (lit "arm"), a term figuratively denoting military resources and strength.

83:9-12 In an extended imprecation (see note at 109:1-31), the lament evokes memories of Yahweh's intervention in two major victories. Sisera and Jabin were defeated by Deborah and Barak (Jdg 4-5), and the nation of Midian—including Oreb . . . Zeeb . . . Zebah, and Zalmunna—was defeated by Gideon (Jdg 6:1-8:21).

83:13 The opposition will be like straw, separated from the grain and blown away by the evening wind, implying that the enemy's power lacked substance.

83:15 Storm imagery is associated with the execution of God's wrath (18:7-15; 50:3; 107:24-30; Jnh 1:4).

83:16-18 Three Hebrew terms for "shame" in these verses reinforce the extent of the Lord's judgment and His complete humiliation of the oppressors, culminating in the annihilation of hostile peoples. The fate the adversaries sought to inflict on God's people (v. 4) will be exacted on them (see note at 7:14-16). Only then would the nations recognize the Lord as sovereign King.

Ps 84 title On Gittith see note at Psalm 8 title. On Sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

84:2 The courts refers to the outer precincts of the temple where worshipers gathered.

84:4-5 On happy, see note at 1:1. These verses mirror the structure of the Beatitudes (Mt 5:3-12), setting forth some of the conditions of happiness. Whose hearts are set on pilgrimage is literally "the highways are on their hearts." This describes the minds of the godly, their thoughts focused on the ascent to Zion.

84:6 The Valley of Baca derives from the Hebrew term baka', "to weep." The joyful tears of the pilgrims transformed the source of sadness and grief into a spring of blessing, just as the early rains of autumn restored water to the valley.

84:9 God as a shield is a metaphorical reference to the protection provided by the king for his people.

84:10 The psalmist would rather stand outside at the entrance to the temple without shelter than to live in comfort among the wicked.

Ps 85 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

85:1 The perfect form of the Hebrew verbs, denoting completed action, supports a postexilic date for this psalm that celebrates Jacob's return from Babylonian captivity. The idiomatic expression "restore the fortunes" includes the concept of a release from imprisonment or debt combined with the return of the Lord's people to their homeland (14:7; 53:6; 126:4; Dt 30:3; Jr 29:14; 30:3,18; Am 9:14; Zph 2:7). As a key word of the psalm, the root shuv ("turn," "return," "restore") occurs five times (Ps 85:1,3,4,6,8).

85:2 The Hebrew term for covered, when combined with the word for sin, means "forgave," especially in context with "took away" in the previous line (32:1).

85:3 The Hebrew root 'avar ("anger, fury") functions as a wordplay with a second related Hebrew root 'avar, meaning "pass over, forgive" ("pardon" in Jb 7:21). The Lord has forgiven Israel's sins and turned (Hb shuv) His anger away from them.

85:4 If God had already forgiven, restored, and showed favor to the exiles, why did the psalmist call on Him to do so again? His request acknowledged that God's renewal of His wrath against the people remained a tangible reality.

85:5 On will You be angry with us forever, compare 79:5; 80:4; 88:14. To prolong . . . anger for all generations recalls Ex 34:7, where the Lord promised to punish descendants for the sins of their fathers. The nation of Israel experienced suffering as a consequence of previous sin, suggesting that all God's people shared responsibility for the welfare and moral condition of the nation.

85:6-7 Faithful love (Hb chesed; "covenant loyalty") is a cultic term indicating a unique relationship between the Lord and His people, a relationship built on loyalty by those not obligated to demonstrate that loyalty. Revive us again (lit "restore our lives") uses the Hebrew word shuv. Yahweh restores Israel's fortunes by turning His anger from them, thereby restoring Jacob's vitality. The salvation of the Lord results from a demonstration of His covenant loyalty.

85:8 Go back is the Hebrew word shuv (cp. vv. 1,3,6).

85:9-10 Reconciliation is characterized by renewal and the return of peace and prosperity to the land (119:151; 145:18; Is 50:8; 55:6; 62:2).

85:11-12 Personification of God's attributes as pastoral imagery reinforce the connection between material prosperity and the perfect state of fairness and righteousness operative under the Lord's kingship. Fertility and abundant rainfall affirm God's faithfulness (Is 30:23-25; 32:15-18; 45:8; 55:10; 61:11; Am 9:13).

85:13 Righteousness accompanies the Lord in His procession back to Jerusalem (43:3; 89:14; 96:6; Is 40:10; 58:8; 62:11), representing a reversal from when the land was overrun by injustice.

86:3 In many individual laments, the psalmist's unceasing prayers (all day long) continued until God delivered him.

86:4-5 An appeal to the Lord's kindness, forgiveness, and covenant loyalty (faithful love) is a variation of the formula that occurs again in verse 15. Psalm 103:8 associates forgiveness of sin with the Lord's covenant loyalty.

86:6 Hear requests a respondent who is fully alert. Plea for mercy is a supplication, the seeking of divine favor (28:2; 31:23; 130:2; 140:7).

86:7 God will answer (Hb 'anan) the prayer of the humble ("poor"; Hb 'ani); see verse 1 (see note at 34:6).

86:8-9 A statement about the incomparability of God often precedes a call for the universal recognition of His sovereignty (Ex 15:11; 2 Sam 7:22; 1Kg 8:23; Mc 7:18).

86:13 Sheol refers to the underworld (Is 14:9; Ezk 31:16) or a place of separation from God (Ps 6:5; Is 38:18) from which there is no praise. Figuratively, mention of Sheol may depict imminent death or the removal of a person from the divine presence (Jnh 2:3).

86:14 Arrogant people do not recognize or regard the Lord (19:13; 54:3).

86:15 The psalmist emphasized the positive attributes of the Lord as compassionate, merciful, slow to anger, and great in covenant loyalty and truth. Note the absence of the second half of the formula, which describes God's wrathful response to sin (Ex 34:6-7; see note at Ps 86:4-5).

86:16 Your female servant is figurative for Israel.

Ps 87 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title.

87:1 His foundation or "established city" (Jerusalem) renders the mountain holy.

87:2 Court proceedings, social interaction, and commercial transactions normally took place in the gates of a city (Ru 4:1-2; Jb 29:7-10; Pr 24:7). The Lord reinforced Jerusalem as the preferred location for His sanctuary.

87:3 City of God means belonging to God, as a possession.

87:4 The universal outlook of the psalm is evident as the psalmist recounted major powers of Mesopotamia, all once historical enemies of Israel. Rahab, the mythical dragon-like chaos monster, represented Egypt (Is 30:7). Babylon was known for its oppression while Philistia had a reputation for aggression. These, along with the wealthy of Tyre, and the Cushites, from the Nubian kingdom south of Egypt, would attain the status of naturalized citizens with full privileges though they were born in another country. From an eschatological perspective, these nations would be qualified to participate in Israel's feasts and Torah instruction since all national distinctions would be eliminated under the Lord's kingship (Is 2:2-4; 49:18-23; 56:3,6-7; Zch 14:16-18).

87:5-7 Despite the inclusion of Gentile nations, the Lord would appoint Israel to a special position of leadership in the eschatological kingdom because of her birthright (Is 60; 62:1-5).

Ps 88 title On sons of Korah, see note at Psalm 42 title. Heman the Ezrahite, a famous wise man during Solomon's reign, served as the king's seer. According to *Mahalath Leannoth may designate this as a psalm of penitence associated with purification from illness (see note at Ps 53 title).

88:3 I have had enough troubles means literally "my soul is sated with turmoil." The psalmist described his condition as grave, as his life drew near Sheol (see note at 86:13; cp. Jb 7:11-21; 13:18-28; 30:20-23).

88:4 The Pit is another name for Sheol. The psalmist compared himself to a weakened man, about to die.

88:5 The psalmist passed from memory since the dead were cut off from interaction with God and others (Is 53:8).

88:6 The lowest part of the Pit (cp. 86:13) is often portrayed as the roots of the mountains in the deep sea (Jnh 2:6; Mc 7:19).

88:8 The Hebrew word for "repulsive" (to'evah) often describes unethical practices such as child sacrifice or idolatry ("detestable" in Dt 12:31; 27:15). Those who committed such heinous acts were ceremonially unclean and were ostracized from the community.

88:9 The hands being spread out implies submission and helplessness.

88:10-12 A series of four rhetorical questions expect negative answers, typical of disputation speeches. The psalmist asked if God performed miracles on behalf of the dead in order to receive praise in the grave. On the contrary, God blesses the living to receive glory on earth and in heaven. Departed spirits could be translated as "shades," a figurative expression for "spirits of the dead" (Jb 26:5;

Is 14:9; 26:14,19). Abaddon, a place of destruction, is synonymous with Sheol or the Pit (Jb 26:6; 28:22; Pr 15:11).

88:13-14 Prayers were often answered in the morning (5:3; 90:14; 143:8), so the psalmist, feeling his prayer had been ignored, accused God of rejecting him as one who was unclean.

88:16 Terrors acted as the Lord's agents of destruction (Jb 6:4) against the psalmist. Typically, God exercised His "terror" against enemies (Dt 32:25; Jb 13:21).

Ps 89 title Ethan the Ezrahite was a Levitical musician (1Ch 15:17,19). The connections of this psalm with 2 Samuel 7 and 1 Chronicles 17 are unmistakable.

89:1 On faithful love, see note at 77:8.

89:2 The covenant significance of the verb built up is seen in 2Sm 7:5,13,27; 1Ch 17:4,10,12.

89:3 I have made a covenant implies obligation and binding responsibility. The Lord assumes responsibility while imposing obligations on Israel as part of the covenant. My chosen one may refer to David, or collectively, to his descendants.

89:4 As the Lord's covenant loyalty is "built up" (v. 2), so the Lord will establish David's throne. The longevity of David's dynasty is compared to the Lord's faithfulness; both have been established forever.

89:5 Heavens could be a metonymy for "heavenly beings" (see note at 82:1).

89:6 Skies refers metaphorically to the heavenly realm (Jb 37:18). The expression heavenly beings is part of a formulaic expression typical of statements describing the incomparability of the Lord (18:31; 82:1; Ex 15:11; Is 40:18; 44:7).

89:7 On council of the holy ones, see verse 5 and note at 82:1.

89:8 Hosts (Hb tseva'oth ; "armies") is military language describing the Lord as warrior.

89:9-10 Rahab, the name for an ancient Near Eastern mythological chaos monster, was associated with the chaotic sea (Jb 26:12; Is 51:9). In contrast with that myth, God created the ocean and continues to demonstrate His sovereignty over it (Ps 74:13-17).

89:12 North and south is a merism, the two extremes referring to everything between them. The Hebrew word for "create" (bara') is always used of God. Tabor and Hermon were noteworthy mountains in the north.

89:13 The Lord's right hand is lifted high (lit "exalted"), ready to exact judgment.

89:14 Righteousness and justice serve as the platform or pedestal on which the Lord builds His majesty. Ancient Near Eastern myths used figures of "righteousness" and "justice" as divine powers that function as throne supports. Combined with faithful love and truth, the four characteristics summarize the essential attributes of the Lord. The Lord's throne denotes the worldwide realm of His kingship (97:2).

89:15-17 God's people recognize the call to praise, and they are happy in His presence (see notes at 1:1 and 15:1). When the Lord's right hand is exalted (89:13), His people are exalted. Israel receives esteem, honor, and recognition through God's gracious favor. Horn, a figurative term for power or strength (75:4), reappears in 89:24, where the Lord raises David's horn through the divine name.

89:18 The shield of Israel was their king, who with God's help protected and defended the people. The king was given by God and was the servant of God (vv. 19-20), and therefore belonged to Him.

89:19 The vision refers to verses 3 and 4 and the larger context of the oracle of Nathan to David in 2Sm 7:1-17. The warrior selected from the people refers to David as the Lord's anointed and divinely empowered warrior. The Lord's right hand was exalted (v. 13). As a result, God's people were exalted (v. 16) and their horn of victory was exalted (v. 17); now the Lord has exalted the king.

89:20-38 This passage is similar to 2Sm 7:14-17 and 1Ch 17:3-15, suggesting a conceptual and literary relationship between them.

89:20 Kings and priests were anointed with oil in a formal inauguration ceremony, figuratively denoting divine approval, a close association with the Lord, and endowment with the Holy Spirit (Lv 4:3-4,16; Jdg 9:8; 1Kg 19:16; Is 61:1).

89:21 The hand of God establishes His faithfulness (v. 2), the Davidic dynasty (v. 4), and divine power (v. 21). As the Lord's arm is empowered with strength, so His divinely appointed agents will be empowered.

89:23 The promise in 2Sm 7:10 is here applied to David alone.

89:24 On horn, see note at verse 17; on exalted, see notes at verses 13, 15-17, and 19.

89:25 David will act with divine authority, which will extend from the Mediterranean sea in the west to the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in the east. The right hand always denotes the actions of God and His representative with authority and dominion (see word study at vv. 12-13,25,42, and note at v. 13).

89:26 Father exemplifies the language of adoption. Near Eastern and Egyptian mythology appropriated this concept, in which the pharaoh or the divinely appointed king was considered a divine "son" of God. This psalm reached ideal fulfillment in Christ as a descendant of David and as the actual Son of God.

89:27 The father-son relationship in 2Sm 7:14 refers to David's son Solomon, while the idea in this psalm centers on David alone. The firstborn son usually received a special blessing from the father and a double inheritance. Greatest is the same Hebrew word that describes God as the "Most High" (87:5; 91:1). While these words fit David, they were fulfilled in Christ.

89:28 The covenant promises of God to His people will be realized through the line of David.

89:29 The longevity of David's seed is guaranteed by the Lord, and the eternal rule of David's dynasty will continue as long as heaven lasts. Psalm 72:5,17 compares the king's enduring reign with the life of the sun. The concept reflects an expression common in ancient Near Eastern thought.

89:30-32 If David's descendants should fail to exemplify righteous living and the fear of God, the Lord would not hesitate to discipline them. He would punish the dynasty with a staff or rod, a symbol of His royalty and kingship, and by natural means, such as disease or plague.

89:33-34 Despite disobedience, corruption, and divine correction, the Lord's promises will not be invalidated (Lv 26:44; Jr 14:21; Zch 11:10). God's nature is unchangeable (Mal 3:6; Heb 13:8), so His promises are immutable (Ps 102:27-28; Is 51:6,8; 55:10-11).

89:35 Only the Lord can swear an oath by His holy nature. Because He is holy, He cannot lie (78:36; Is 57:11; Heb 6:18).

89:36-37 The stability of the Davidic throne is as reliable as the course of the sun and the moon (72:5,17), established forever. The language of the psalm resembles that of ancient royal grant covenants, unilateral in nature as a gift to those who show themselves faithful. The faithful witness in the sky could be the moon, God's throne, or the Lord Himself.

89:38-39 A tone of accusation in a series of charges toward Yahweh (vv. 38-45) suggests the psalmist saw his current circumstances as a breach of God's covenant agreement. Repudiated implies the removal of the Lord's covenant loyalty from His servant.

89:40-41 Jerusalem became vulnerable to enemies through a breach in her defenses and the destruction of her strongholds. On object of ridicule see note at 44:13-16.

89:42 In an ironic twist, the Lord had lifted high (lit "exalted") the hand of David's enemies. In verse 13 the Lord's hand was "lifted high" against Israel's enemies; Israel's horn was "exalted" through God's favor (vv. 16-17); God's anointed was "exalted" from among the people (v. 19); and the Anointed One's horn would be "exalted" (v. 24).

89:43 Not only did the Lord empower David's enemies, but He also removed David’s military power.

89:44 Splendor is literally “purity.” This cessation of purity connects the political downfall to a state of cultic defilement, eliminating access to God. As the king’s crown had been defiled by dust, so the king’s throne had been overturned, reinforcing his humiliation.

89:45 On the shortening of one’s days, see note at 102:23-24.

89:46 On how long, see notes at 13:1-2 and 79:5.

89:47 The psalmist questioned God’s motives in creating mankind and establishing a covenant with David that He later appeared to break. The inquiry underscores the psalmist’s frustration and his inability to understand the Lord’s actions.

89:49 Appealing to God’s promise to David, the psalmist called on the Lord to act faithfully, remembering that the continuation of the dynasty depended on God’s protection and providence.

89:50-51 The repetition of ridicule reinforces the continual torment experienced by the Lord’s Anointed (80:12-15). By repeating Your (servants, enemies, anointed), the psalmist calls on God to defend His people who represent His name.

89:52 See note at 41:13.

Ps 90 title No other psalm is labeled a prayer of Moses. The Hebrew preposition may identify Moses as the author, or it may just suggest the poem reflects a Mosaic perspective.

90:1 -2 Throughout Israel’s history, the Lord provided physical aid and spiritual sanctuary for His people. The psalmist emphasized God’s immutability as the basis for His faithfulness. The nuance of gave birth when referring to God always emphasizes His role as Creator and Almighty Father (Col 1:15-17).

90:3 The sovereignty of God over creation includes His authority over life and death. Descendants of Adam could also be translated “sons of man” (8:5). The psalm contrasts humanity’s limitations and God’s eternality.

90:4 The nature of God makes Him unconstrained by time. The expression a thousand years implies infinity.

90:5-6 You end their lives is literally “You interrupted them.” Grass is a favorite OT metaphor for mankind’s frailty and the brevity of human life (103:15-16; Is 40:6-8; Jms 1:9-11).

90:8 Secret sins are transgressions committed discreetly or unrecognized by the individual (19:13). But God is always aware of mankind’s unjust ways because He is omniscient.

90:10 Seventy or eighty years may represent the average lifespan of God’s people, since dietary restrictions and attention to purity promote longevity. Even the best of them alludes to the difficulties of daily life in temporal bodies, but see note at verses 14-15.

90:11 Who understands is literally "who knows" (2Sm 12:22; Pr 24:22; Ec 3:21; 6:12; Jnh 3:9). God's inscrutability troubled the psalmist since God's ways are unknowable.

90:12 The psalmist asked the Lord to teach us to take advantage of our short lives on earth in order to nurture a heart directed by wisdom (1Kg 3:12; Pr 16:23; Ec 8:5; 10:2).

90:13 The Lord "returns" (Hb shuv) all living things to dust (v. 3), but the psalmist implored God to turn to His people. On how long, see note at 13:1-2. The psalmist identified no specific enemy but perceived God as the agent of distress.

90:14-15 God's provision and answer to prayer traditionally occurred in the morning (88:13). The psalmist did not expect to live a life without adversity. Rather, he asked the Lord for an equal balance of blessing and adversity. A life without trials would lead to an attitude of self-sufficiency and independence from God.

90:16-17 The blessings of God's people are visual witnesses to His faithfulness. Establish . . . the work of our hands implies that Israel does have a role in provision, and also makes a direct connection between success and God's providence.

91:1 Under the protection (lit "hiding place") refers to the protection of the sanctuary (27:5; 31:20; 61:4; Jb 40:21). Shadow denotes protection or security (121:5; Is 30:2,3; 49:2; 51:16). The Almighty is a name for God describing His dual roles as nurturer and protector.

91:2 The psalmist's safety is guaranteed by the Lord's presence. On my refuge, see note at verse 4.

91:3 Destructive plague shows the psalmist's fear of physical illness (vv. 5-8).

91:4 The imagery of wings alludes to the cherubim surrounding the ark of the covenant. The Lord covers the psalmist, shutting him off from danger. "Wings," a figurative term for "cloak," denotes protection (17:8; 36:8; 57:2; 61:5; 63:8; Ru 2:12). Compare Is 40:28 for eagle imagery. Those who seek God's protection will be shielded by His faithfulness.

91:5 On terror of the night, compare 121:6.

91:6 The plague includes flood, famine, hail, fire, or anything that threatens livestock and human beings. Pestilence is often personified as a demon. The connection in ancient Near Eastern thought between an evil spirit and disease is well attested. The psalmist sought safe haven from thieves, wild animals, persecutors, and sickness, all threats that existed in the darkness.

91:7 If the petitioner were surrounded by illness to which his neighbors succumbed, he would experience preservation at the Lord's hand.

91:8 Though the psalmist would be spared, he witnessed the Lord's punishment (lit "repayment, retribution") of the wicked. God executes judgment in proportion to the measure of evil.

91:9 On refuge, see notes at verses 1 and 4. The Hebrew word for dwelling place implies a remote, protected place (71:3; 90:1).

91:10 The word plague (infection, hit, infestation) reinforces the concept of serious physical threat (Lv 13:2; 14:3,32,54).

91:11-12 The Lord's angels serve as His messengers and agents of His power outside the sanctuary (103:20; Gn 24:7; Heb 1:14). These divine beings have superior power, involving the ability to protect the Lord's people from harm (Gn 19:10-11; 24:40; Is 63:9; Dn 3:28). On strike . . . a stone, see 121:3,7-8.

91:13 The metaphors of the predatory lion and the poisonous cobra suggest creatures that stalked their prey or hid in wait. In the ancient Near East, gods were often depicted as creatures.

91:14-16 Those who know God's name are in covenant relationship with Him. The Lord delivers, protects, answers, honors, satisfies, and reveals His salvation through the preservation and blessing of Israel (95:7-11).

92:1 On Most High, see note at 47:2-3 (cp. 83:18; 91:9; 97:9).

92:2 Deuteronomy 6 teaches God's people to speak His word day and night, reflecting on His covenant love and faithfulness in the presence of the family and the community. The wise person finds delight in meditating on the Torah regularly (1:2). Creation testifies to God's constant care (19:1).

92:4 The chiastic structure of the Hebrew, which is not reflected in the English, emphasizes the Lord's works. I will shout for joy is the last element of the verse in Hebrew.

92:5 The term profound underscores the unfathomable and mysterious nature of God's thoughts (40:5; 139:17; Is 55:9-10).

92:6 Using wisdom terminology, the psalmist admonished the stupid ("uneducated, brutish") person and the fool. Both fail to sustain a close relationship to God, and they reject the wisdom necessary for right living. The prophet Isaiah depicted Israel as more stupid and foolish than brutish beasts (Is 1:3).

92:7 The vulnerability and temporal nature of the wicked compares to vegetation that sprouts temporarily, then withers and disappears, leaving no evidence of its existence (see note at 37:2). The psalmist took comfort in knowing that evildoers would experience eternal destruction.

92:8 The sovereignty and immutability of God contrast with the weakness and finitude of man.

92:10 Lifted up my horn is a figurative expression denoting restored vitality and power (89:17; 148:4; 1Sm 2:1). Being anointed with oil can mean consecration for service (Lv 8:10-12), but here probably refers to an act of hospitality that symbolizes favor (Ps 23:5).

92:12 The righteous blossom and grow strong like trees, whereas the wicked blossom then wither away like grass (v. 7). Lebanon was known for its abundant supply of cedar trees used in construction. Trees often refer figuratively to the characteristics of national leaders.

92:13-14 The house of the LORD refers to the temple. This is a pattern for paradise, representing the order of creation and a place of rest in the presence of the Lord. The righteous thrive as the result of God's providence (1:3; Jr 17:8). Old age will not take away their vitality.

92:15 The strength of the righteous demonstrates Yahweh's reliability and impartiality. The enemy prospers but is destroyed after attempting to present himself as genuine. Those who are truly the Lord's have no hypocrisy or deceit; their prosperity endures.

93:1-2 The Hebrew word for reigns is a verb form implying completed action or an established condition. Reference to the beginning and eternity means Yahweh's kingship is timeless. On robed in majesty, see note at 104:1 (cp. Is 51:9; 59:17). The Lord established ("measured, regulated") the world, and the order of the cosmos is not subject to disruptions. To be shaken often occurs in texts that describe the impotence of false gods (Is 54:10). The term reinforces the reliability of the Lord's character and His commitment to creation (Ps 96:10; 99:1; 104:5).

93:3-4 The psalmist personified primeval forces that threatened creation and then demonstrated the Lord's sovereignty over them. On on high, compare 7:7; 68:16; 144:7.

93:5 God's testimonies or decrees are as stable as His throne and the earth (19:8; 25:10; 99:7; 132:12; Dt 4:45; 6:17,20). Beauty refers to a suitable adornment (Sg 1:10).

94:1 Vengeance ("retribution, vindication") generally describes God's judgment on the nations; rarely does the term apply to Israel. The expression parallels Jr 51:56, in which the Lord executed final judgment on destructive peoples and powers (Is 35:4; 66:6). The psalmist requested an epiphany, the Lord's return to rescue His people.

94:2 Yahweh is Judge of the earth, especially the nations (7:8; 58:11; 76:8; 82:8; 96:10; 98:9).

94:3 On how long, see note at 13:1-2.

94:4 To pour out speech is figurative for the empty, incessant babbling of the arrogant and deceitful.

94:5-6 The enemy seeks to obliterate God's people (143:3). The evildoers target the most vulnerable groups in society, whom the Lord will defend (see note at 68:5; cp. 146:8; Ex 22:21-22).

94:12 God will discipline those He loves, correcting and instructing them to bring them back into relationship with Him (Heb 12:3-13). God recognizes humanity's inherent weaknesses.

94:14 Compare this verse with verse 5.

94:20 Corrupt rulers enact legislation that persecutes the righteous and enables wickedness, which is clearly contrary to God's will.

95:1 The rock of our salvation is a metaphorical expression denoting security and safety. The Hebrew word for "rock" describes the steadfast character of God (18:1-2,31; 73:26; 92:15; 144:1; Dt 32:15; 2Sm 22:47; Is 44:8).

95:3 The LORD is a great God is an expression prevalent in the psalms that celebrate the Lord's kingship (47:3,7-8; 48:2-3; 96:4; 97:9; 136:2; 149:2). On above all gods, see notes at 29:1 and 82:1.

95:4 God understands incomprehensible things such as the foundations of the earth (Jr 31:37), the depths of the ocean (Jb 38:16), or the depth of God Himself (Jb 11:7). The power of God extends from the bottom of the sea to the mountain peaks.

95:5 The sea and the dry land belong to God because He created them. In Jnh 1:9 the same phrase is part of the prophet's confessional statement about His identity.

95:6 The same God who created the world created humanity as well. Both the cosmos and humanity kneel before their Creator.

95:7 The Lord, who created the world, also created Israel. On people of His pasture, compare 79:13. He serves a dual role as Creator and Shepherd in Is 43:1,15. Those who truly belong to the Lord will hear His voice and respond to Him.

95:8-11 These verses recall Ex 17:1-7 and Nm 20:2-13. The psalm relies heavily on the covenantal associations and language of the two texts.

95:8-9 Do not harden warns against the self-reliance of God's people, who followed their own counsel and complained in the wilderness. The names Meribah (lit "contention, controversy") and Massah ("test") were given by Moses to the location where God provided water from a rock after the people tested God (Ex 17:7; Nm 20:13; Dt 6:16). The Lord tested Israel's faithfulness in the wilderness (Dt 8:2; 33:8). The Hebrew word for "tested" describes the refining of precious metals by smelting (Zch 13:9).

95:10 Although the original group that departed Egypt would not enter Canaan because of their sinfulness, Caleb and Joshua would lead the next generation into the promised land (Nm 14:30).

95:11 On enter My rest, compare Dt 12:9. A person may rest at home or rest through relief from enemies. God rested on the Sabbath (Gn 2:2) and rests among His people (2Ch 6:41-42). The concept of rest reaches its full development in Heb 4:3-11.

96:1-3 This new song was cosmic praise for Yahweh's reign over a universal kingdom comprising all peoples (98:1; 144:9; 149:1; Is 42:10; see note at Ps 33:1-3). Mention of the sanctuary (96:6) implies a preexilic origin for this psalm. A threefold repetition of "sing" followed by three imperatives —praise . . . proclaim, and declare—underscore the purpose of the song: to glorify the Lord's works of salvation.

96:4 On He is feared above all gods, see notes at 29:1 and 82:1.

96:5 The psalmist contrasted the impotence of idols with the creative power of the Lord, challenging all association between false gods and the natural forces of the cosmos. The gods of the peoples are worthless or powerless (97:7; Is 42:5,8,17).

96:6 Four descriptive nouns—splendor . . . majesty . . . strength, and beauty—are personified as divine escorts preceding the Lord's processional entrance into the temple.

96:7-9 These verses represent an expansion of 29:1-2, substituting families (lit "tribes, clans") of the people for "sons of God" (29:1), while adding bring an offering and enter His courts, and tremble before Him, all the earth. The modifications redirect the praise of the Lord from the heavenly realm to the earthly sphere, functioning as a polemic against other deities. To ascribe something to someone is to acknowledge they have that attribute.

96:10 With the phrase the LORD reigns, the psalmist reinforced the Lord's dual roles as King and Creator.

96:11-12 The personification of heaven . . . earth . . . the sea . . . fields, and trees in cosmic praise for the Lord recalls imagery from the prophet Isaiah (Is 44:23; 49:13).

The Huleh Basin in northern Israel is known for its farming and grazing fields (96:12).

97:1 The coasts and islands represent the farthest known habitable places, conveying the scope of the Lord's dominion and praise (Is 20:5,6; 41:1; 42:4,10,12,15).

97:2 Clouds and thick darkness recollect the storm imagery on Mount Sinai, where the thick clouds hid God, and from which He spoke. In prophetic texts these Hebrew words usually describe a state of judgment (Is 60:2; Jl 2:2). On righteousness . . . His throne, see note at 89:14.

97:3-5 Fire combined with lightning, earthquakes, and volcanic activity typify the cosmic upheaval experienced at the approach of God (77:16-18; Ex 19:16; Mc 1:3-4). Even the created order responds to the Creator.

97:6 Cosmic disturbances and defeat of the Lord's enemies demonstrate the Lord's righteousness and glory to all the earth's inhabitants (19:1). The saving power of God demonstrated by divine acts of victory magnify His sovereignty so that the whole world recognizes His glory.

97:7 The Hebrew word for "worthless gods" always refers to the impotence of carved images and pagan gods. All the gods must worship Him could be translated "all the gods humble themselves before Him," conveying the irony of the psalm.

97:9 While idol worshipers are ashamed and pagan deities are subjugated before God (v. 7), Yahweh is the Most High, raised to a superior rank and appropriating the authority of these impotent gods.

97:10 Those who love God should share His hatred of evil (15:4; 139:21; Pr 8:13; Am 5:15; Zch 8:17; Rm 12:9).

97:11 The psalmist equated light with joy and righteousness, a connection developed further in Isaiah (Is 10:17; 30:29; 42:6; 49:6; 58:10; 60:1-3,19-20), who described the Lord's return to Jerusalem. Zion as the Lord's dwelling place shines forth, Yahweh's glory is described as light, and the restored nation of Israel reflects the light of God's presence. All nations will be drawn from the darkness to the light of Jerusalem (Is 60:2-3).

98:1 The Lord's right hand and His holy arm refer to His immeasurable power (see note at 16:8). In this psalm, victory implies judgment on the nations and salvation for Israel.

98:3 A reference to God's covenantal faithfulness combined with the house of Israel places this psalm in the preexilic period.

98:4 Be jubilant or "break forth" always occurs in combination with shout for joy or "ring out" (Is 14:7; 44:23; 49:13; 52:9; 54:1; 55:12).

98:6 The second part of this verse is literally "shout before King Yahweh." The LXX rendering, "Shout before the king, O Lord," assumes the poem was performed before a human king, but a reference to an earthly ruler seems out of place in a text that lauds the attributes of the Lord.

98:7 Compare this verse with 96:11.

98:8 The only other place mountains shout is in Isaiah's prophecies (Is 44:23; 49:13).

98:9 Compare this verse with 96:13.

99:1 On He is enthroned above the cherubim, see note at 80:1. The ark of the covenant was regarded as the throne of the invisible God, or His footstool (132:7-8; Jr 3:16-17). Because the ark of the covenant was the central symbol of God's presence with His people Israel, its mysteries remained appropriately veiled within the inner sanctuary of the living God. Let the earth quake, as though knocked off balance (Is 6:1-4).

99:3 Awe-inspiring (lit "to be feared") denotes both respect and worship. The psalmist declared God's holiness three times (vv. 3,5,9) as in Is 6:3.

99:4 Righteousness characterizes God's people (85:10-12; Is 62:1-3) as an extension of the Lord Himself (Ps 96:13; Is 42:1-4).

99:5 At His footstool associates the Lord's presence with the ark of the covenant (1Ch 28:2) or a central place of worship (Ps 132:7). In the days preceding Solomon's temple, King David instructed the priests to bring the ark, symbolizing the Lord's presence (2Sm 6:12). Isaiah equated the ark with the sanctuary (Is 60:13), later describing heaven as the Lord's throne and the earth as His footstool (Is 66:1). Enemies become Christ's footstool, showing subjugation (Heb 1:13; 9:5).

99:6 Moses . . . Aaron, and Samuel served intercessory roles as priests, administering God's justice. They communicated closely with God, obeying His commands.

99:7 The Lord showed His presence to the Israelites in the form of a pillar of cloud and fire, from which He communicated His divine will to Israel's leaders during the wilderness experience (Ex 14:19; 16:10; 33:9; 40:36).

99:8 Even after God forgave sins, actions had consequences. The Lord punished Moses and Aaron for their sinful actions (Nm 20:12).

100:1-2 Praising the Lord and serving Him joyfully were two conditions for entering the sanctuary or presence of God (40:8; 42:2; 43:4; 66:13; 86:9; 118:19-20).

100:3 The combined roles of the Lord as Creator and Shepherd occur in 95:7 (see note at that verse).

101:1 The king's responsibilities toward his people consisted of faithful love (Hb chesed ; "covenant loyalty") and justice, prompting his promise to live with integrity and to eradicate God's enemies.

101:2 Integrity is a cultic term denoting the lack of imperfections or blemishes. It refers to purity of thought or behavior (78:72). Integrity governs private life as well as public life (Dt 5:32-33; 6:5-7). The wisdom overtones of this verse establish a connection between wisdom and the royal court.

101:3 The eyes of the king is a metaphor for his jurisdiction. Transgression is a covenantal term denoting anyone or anything opposed to God and His law. It will not cling means the king will not permit evil to remain in his kingdom for any amount of time.

101:4 Saying that a heart is devious acknowledges humanity's tendency to sin.

101:5-8 These verses focus on the king's promotion of righteousness in the community. The wise ruler rejects slanderers and the arrogant but surrounds himself with those who are blameless (see note at v. 2) and faithful (Dt 10:8; 17:12; 21:5). The moral standards of the king should be reflected by those who serve him; therefore, the ruler will remove from his palace anyone who deceives and tells lies. The evildoers would be exiled from the precincts of Jerusalem (48:2,9; 87:3; Is 60:14).

102:2 Do not hide Your face is a figurative expression used by the psalmist, who thought God had forsaken him (10:11; 13:1-2; 69:17; Is 28:21; 33:10). God's face represents the blessing of His presence (see note at Ps 4:6).

102:3 My days vanish like smoke, which immediately dissipates into the air (37:20; 68:2; Hs 13:3). Life passed quickly as the psalmist suffered physical pain (Ps 69:18; Is 33:14). The furnace could be a hearth or brazier (Jr 36:23).

102:4-5 The heart, or seat of morale, has been afflicted as if by disease. Withered like grass shows the discouragement of the psalmist. He longed for death as the ultimate deliverance from a life of persecution and oppression (Pss 39; 90).

102:6 An owl among the ruins denotes the psalmist's loneliness resulting from ostracism.

102:7-8 The psalmist suffered abuse, ridicule, and false accusations day and night. Taunt is a common term describing unrelenting torment (see notes at 79:4 and 79:12).

102:9-10 On mingle my drinks with tears, compare Is 30:20, and "bread of tears" in note at Ps 80:5. The psalmist perceived his circumstances as a direct result of God's casting him out of His presence (Jb 27:21; 30:19,22; Is 64:5).

102:11 A metaphorical expression for imminent death, the phrase like a lengthening shadow associates the setting sun with the end of life. On wither away like grass, see note at verses 4-5.

102:12 The psalmist began a new section of the psalm by contrasting the frailty and vulnerability of humanity with the eternal and immutable nature of the Lord. While God's name endures throughout the generations, man is remembered no more after he dies (9:6; 103:16).

102:13 The rising of the Lord signifies judgment (see notes at 7:6-8 and 80:1). The psalmist anticipated the imminent restoration of Zion and the return of the Lord's presence to the Holy City. The Lord's attributes of righteousness, mercy, and compassion are revealed through His mighty acts of deliverance from the enemy.

102:14 Your servants, the members of a unified community (79:2,10; 89:5; 90:13), took delight in Jerusalem even after it was reduced to stones and dust (see note at Mc 1:6). The value of Zion to her people did not diminish in spite of the Babylonian invasion (Ezk 26:12).

102:15 The return of the Lord has cosmological implications. All the nations and their leaders will recognize and worship the God of Israel (Is 2:1-5; 49:7-23; 60-62; Zch 14).

102:16-17 The glory and omnipotence of the Lord will be revealed through the rebuilding of Jerusalem and His abiding presence among His people (51:18; 147:2; Is 52:10; 60:1,10; Mc 7:11).

102:18 The later generation consists of a newly created people not yet in existence. The psalmist anticipated the Lord's immediate future response.

102:19 When the Lord looked down and gazed at the earth below, He heard the cries of the exiles, acknowledged the plight of His people, and brought deliverance (Dt 26:15; Is 63:15). Hundreds of years earlier, God had also heard the Israelites in Egypt and looked upon them with great concern (Ex 2:24).

102:20 The prisoner's groaning may also be rendered "groans" (79:11; Mal 2:13). Those condemned to die (lit "sons of death") describes the hopelessness of the captives (Ps 79:11; 146:7; Is 49:9).

102:21 God's faithful deliverance of His remnant from Babylon testifies to His holy name. In the ancient Near East, a person's name reflected his nature and character. The emphasis on Zion and Jerusalem reinforces the association of the divine name with the capital city.

102:22 The assembly of nations for universal worship occurs at the Lord's return to Zion (Is 2:1-5; 66:23-24; Zch 14:16-21).

102:23-24 The psalmist acknowledged God as the Creator and sustainer of life, and he pleaded for God not to take his life prematurely. The eternality of God contrasts with the temporal nature of humanity.

102:25 By right of creation, Yahweh earned the authority to rule and reign over the cosmos (24:1-2,7-10; 89:6-15; Jb 38:4; Is 40:21-23; 48:13; 51:13-16).

102:26-27 The unchanging nature of God extends beyond the course of history. Although the heavens and earth will wear out like clothing (Is 50:9; 51:6,8; cp. Heb 1:10-12), they will undergo transformation at the return of Christ (Rv 21:1).

102:28 The psalmist trusted that God would protect his descendants for many generations.

103:1-2 The threefold repetition of praise represents the highest form of worship (Is 6:3). The Hebrew word translated benefits (gemul , from gamal) means paying back what is deserved (28:4; 94:2; 116:12; 142:7). It most often describes God's divine wrath and retribution toward the enemy (Is 59:18), but here it describes the Lord's blessings enumerated in verses 3-5.

103:3 Forgives (Hb soleach), a cultic expression common in Leviticus and Numbers, finds fuller development in Is 33:24; 43:25, although only Is 55:7 includes the expressed condition of repentance. God heals Israel physically and spiritually, yet we should not associate all physical distress with sin. The Lord heals both body and spirit through forgiveness, providing a sense of wholeness (147:3; Is 53:5).

103:4-5 The word redeems denotes the payment of a ransom price. The Israelite redeemed his firstborn (Ex 13:1-16). The family redeemer exacted revenge for wrongful death of a near relative, and he adopted the responsibility of raising a son to carry on a dead brother's lineage (Dt 19:1-13; 25:5-10; Ru 3:8-9). Pit refers to Sheol, the place of the dead. The people of God are adorned with covenant loyalty and mercy, like a wreath of honor or esteem presented to a dignitary or king. These verses convey a sense of divine providence and peace, so that youthful strength is renewed (lit "renews itself") like an eagle (Is 40:31; 57:10).

103:6-7 Righteousness and justice toward the poor and needy in society reflect the ethical integrity of the king as God's representative. The Lord's revealing His ways to Moses refers to the divine formula describing God's character (Ex 34:6-7). God demonstrated His compassion through His mighty works of victory and the sustenance of His people in the wilderness.

103:8-9 In this allusion to Ex 34:6-7, the psalmist used the divine formula as the basis on which Israel experienced the Lord's forgiveness (cp. Is 57:16 for parallel expressions and terms).

103:10 While God's holiness demands payment for sin, God's mercy and compassion restrain His discipline. The Hebrew word gamal, rendered repaid, forms a wordplay with verse 2. The Lord's people enjoy His "benefits" (gemul) because He does not pay them back (gamal) for their sins.

103:11-12 The extent of the Lord's covenant loyalty is incomprehensible, and His capacity for removing transgression is immeasurable. Once the Lord forgives sin it no longer exists (Is 43:25), and the sinner is delivered from the Pit (Is 38:17). The language alludes to Is 55:6-9.

103:13 A godly father disciplines his child not out of malice, but because he loves him (Heb 12:3-13). The Lord demonstrates mercy and compassion toward His children through forgiveness of sin and blessing, in spite of their weaknesses.

103:14 The Hebrew word yetser (what we are made of; "our formation") comes from the verb yatsar , which denotes the shaping of clay by a craftsman into an acceptable vessel. God's intimate knowledge of His created beings affirms their origin and frailty.

103:15-16 The temporary nature of life is compared to the brief blossoming of grass and a flower, easily wilted by the elements. The same metaphor in Isaiah contrasts the power of God's word and the impotence of humanity (Is 40:6-8).

103:17-18 Although God's people struggle with unfaithfulness, the Lord's covenant loyalty endures for those who fear Him (v. 11). The Hebrew word yara' ("fear") combines obedience and respect with humility before a sovereign God.

103:20 Angels of great strength, or "His angels, warriors of strength," act on God's behalf and minister to His people (91:11; 104:4; 148:2).

103:21 God's armies (or "hosts") refer to divine beings who dwell with God and serve Him.

103:22 The saving works of the Lord toward His people testify to His majesty and power (98:3; Is 40:5).

104:1-35 This psalm is a companion hymn to Psalm 103. It begins with the same words that end that psalm. This psalm alludes to the Noahic covenant and the six days of creation. It resembles ancient Near Eastern texts in form and content. The psalm is an argument against sun worship.

104:1 To be clothed with majesty and splendor represents royal language typically associated with kingship (96:6; 111:3; 145:5-12; Jb 40:10; Is 2:10,19-20; 35:2).

104:2 God is identified with light (Gn 15:17; 1Jn 1:5), and light signifies the Lord's presence in Jerusalem (Ps 89:15; Is 60:1; Ezk 43:1-2). Light, the first created element, dispels darkness and reveals evil (Jn 3:20; 8:12; 2Co 4:5-6; 1Jn 2:8). On spreading out the sky, compare Is 40:22; Zch 12:1.

104:3 The palace (or "chamber") refers to God's dwelling place, which contains rain (v. 13; Am 9:6). The Lord rides the clouds (Ps 68:4,17). To walk on the wings of the wind refers to God's dominion (18:10).

104:4 The winds and rain, controlled by God, are agents of judgment and blessing. Flames of fire refers to lightning (29:7; 148:8; cp. Heb 1:7). In the ancient Near East, the heavenly bodies and natural elements were worshiped as deities, but in this psalm all of these "deities" fall under the Lord's authority as Creator.

104:5 While verses 1-4 describe the Lord's sovereignty over natural forces, the emphasis in this verse shifts to the Lord as King over the earth. By divine command, God established the earth on its axis. It will never be shaken could be rendered as "it will never totter," based on the nuance of the Hebrew verb mut ("to tip over, fall off balance"; 82:5; 93:1; 96:10; Is 24:19; 40:20; 41:7).

104:6-8 God covered the earth with the deep and the waters stood above the mountains. The imagery is consistent with the cosmic flood in Genesis (Gn 7:18-20). At God's rebuke, the waters fled like warriors fleeing from battle (114:3-6) and hurried away (i.e., in alarm) at the sound of God's voice. The floodwaters receded, uncovering the mountains and redefining the valleys, restoring the earth to its natural state. Just as the Lord established the earth (v. 5), so the mountains and valleys remained in the places God established for them.

104:9 As sovereign Creator, God appointed a boundary that the waters could not transcend, so that they will never cover the earth again (Jb 37:8-11). This expression recalls the Lord's covenant with Noah, when He promised never to destroy the earth by flood again (Gn 9:11).

104:10-11 The psalmist transformed the destructive role of water into a constructive role—the provision of water for sustaining the life of His creatures.

104:13 On palace see note at verse 3.

104:14 Vegetation provides food for cattle and mankind alike. Humanity stands at the center of the psalm, representative of God's finest creature and the crowning achievement of His creation (Ps 8).

104:15 To make a man's face shine with oil figuratively describes the abundance of God's provision and the satisfaction of rich foods. Bread denotes any type of food.

104:16 Flourish is literally "are satisfied."

104:19-20 The solar and lunar cycles regulate the seasons, reflecting God's dependability and sovereignty over creation. God controls the darkness and the light and the life cycles of night and day creatures.

104:25 Vast and wide is literally "great and broad its hands."

104:26 Leviathan (Jb 3:8; Is 27:1) refers to a large sea creature that would play in the water (Zch 8:5).

104:27 God's faithfulness to His creation allows His creatures to anticipate His future provision (145:5; 146:5; Is 38:18).

104:28 The Hebrew word for satisfied (sb') is a key term in the psalm. The earth is "satisfied" (v. 13), the trees are satisfied ("flourish" v. 16), and all of the earth's inhabitants are "satisfied" (v. 28).

104:29-30 The hiding of God's face refers to abandonment. The term terrified denotes a state of chaos, and it may also be translated "confused." Only God has power over life and death (Gn 2:7; 6:17). When man dies, he returns to dust (Gn 3:19), and when God sends forth His breath (Hb ruach; "spirit"), He creates life.

104:32 The focused attention of God causes the earth to tremble (2:11; 55:5; Jb 4:14; Is 33:14). The presence of the omnipotent God causes mountains to smoke (18:8; 144:5; 2Sm 22:9; Is 4:5; 6:4), often as part of an appearance of the Lord (Ex 19:18; 20:18).

104:35 In the LXX, Hallelujah begins Psalm 105; thus Psalms 103-106 each end with the same phrase they begin with—"My soul, praise Yahweh!" in 103 and 104, and "Hallelujah!" in 105 and 106. "Hallelujah" is literally "praise Yah." Yah is a shortened form of Yahweh. The psalmist was inviting his audience to join him in praising Yahweh.

105:1-45 This psalm, an epic poem, resembles Psalms 78 and 106 in form and content. Verses 1-15 recur in 1Ch 16:8-22, a song associated with the Davidic procession ushering the ark of the covenant into Jerusalem.

105:3 Honor denotes continuous praise.

105:4 Strength is figurative for the ark (78:61) that symbolized the Lord's presence and preceded Israel in battle (Jos 6:6-7; 1Sm 4:3).

105:5 As long as Israel remembered God's miraculous works, the Lord remembered His covenant promises (v. 8). God's judgments are His ordinances (119:13; Ex 24:3).

105:6 The threefold covenant promise made to the patriarchs (seed, land, blessing) was realized by Israel as God's chosen ones. The descendants of Abraham and Isaac were God's "elect" people (v. 43), who enjoyed the blessings of prosperity in the land designated by the Lord.

105:7-11 As sovereign God, the Lord affirmed the covenant with Israel (Gn 35:10-15), focusing specifically on the land as their inheritance.

105:12-13 The psalmist outlined the birth and growth of the nation of Israel, beginning with the time of the patriarchs, a nomadic people (Gn 12:1; 13:1; 20:1) traveling throughout Canaan.

105:14 The word allowed derives from the Hebrew noach ("leave untouched, settle securely, repose"). The verb serves a dual role, since God's refusal to permit oppression allowed the patriarchs to dwell safely. He rebuked kings refers to the divine protection of Sarah from Pharaoh (Gn 12:17) and Sarah and Rebekah from Abimelech (Gn 20:13; 26:11).

105:15 God's anointed ones would include kings, priests, and prophets, all of whom received anointing in a dedication ceremony.

105:16 The famine in the land of Canaan (Gn 41:53-57) eventually brought Jacob and his sons to Egypt. The entire food supply is literally "every staff of bread." The staff could refer to a rod on which bread, shaped in rings, was hung up to protect it from rodents, or it could be speaking figuratively of bread as the staff of life.

105:17 Jacob's son Joseph, sold by his brothers to nomads, entered the land of Egypt and was providentially raised to a high office in Pharaoh's court (Gn 37:12-26; 45:5).

105:18 Joseph was unjustly imprisoned in Egypt following accusations by Potiphar's wife (Gn 39:20).

105:19-22 Tested describes the smelting process that removed dross from fine metal. Joseph's imprisonment increased his trust in the Lord. Pharaoh eventually released him because of his prophetic dreams and interpretations and he installed Joseph over his house, all his possessions, and all other officials (Gn 41:39-42).

105:23 The designation Israel refers to Jacob and his sons (Gn 46). The land of Ham is another name for Egypt (78:51; 106:22; Gn 10:6).

105:24 The Hebrew word translated as more numerous implies "stronger," with the nuance of physical power.

105:25 This psalm emphasizes God's sovereign control of all people and events in Israel's history, including those that seemed bad at the time (cp. v. 16).

105:28 The psalmist listed the plague of darkness out of order because it was the first sign that resulted in Egypt's acknowledgment of the Lord's power (Ex 10:21ff).

105:29-36 The psalmist recounted some of the plagues in Egypt that enabled the Lord's people to escape. The plagues were water into blood (Ex 7:14-24), frogs (Ex 8:5-15), gnats (Ex 8:16-19), hail (Ex 9:13-35), locusts that consumed all the vegetation (Ex 10:1-20), culminating in the death of the firstborn of Egypt (Ex 11:1-10). The firstborn represented the virility and strength of the family. In Egyptian culture, Pharaoh and his firstborn son claimed to have the status of deity.

105:39 The cloud and fire refer to the pillar of cloud and fire (Ex 13:20-22; 14:19-20; 40:36-37) that guided the Israelites throughout their journey in the wilderness.

105:40-42 The Lord provided quail when the Israelites complained about the manna from heaven (78:25; Ex 16:4; Nm 11:4-35), and He also gave them water from a rock (Ex 17:1-7; Nm 20:9-11). God's provision for His people reflects His faithfulness to the covenant first initiated with Abraham.

105:44-45 The lands of the nations refers to Canaan, which contained wicked peoples deserving judgment. Israel conquered the peoples and inhabited their cities, consumed their harvests, and possessed their flocks. The purpose of the Lord's protection and provision was to motivate Israel to maintain a relationship with Him through their obedience.

106:1-48 While Psalm 105 focuses on trust, Psalm 106 emphasizes repentance. The absence of conflict between the northern and southern kingdoms suggests a setting for this psalm during the monarchy. It consists of a historical chronology of the exodus and conquest.

106:2 God's incomparable works reveal His glory (19:1-2).

106:3 The consequences of the Lord's relationship with Israel include community peace and the integrity of its individual members who practiced righteousness.

106:7 Israel stubbornly refused to recognize God's miraculous works (Ex 4:1,8; 6:9; 14:11) and rebelled instead.

106:9 The parting of the Red Sea occurred during Israel's departure from Egypt (104:7; 114:3; Ex 14:21-22; Is 63:13).

106:10 The adversary is literally "the one who hated."

106:11-12 Compare these verses with Ex 14:28-15:1.

106:13 In verse 4 the psalmist asked God to "remember" him, yet Israel continually forgot God (Dt 4:9,23,31; 6:12; 9:7; 25:19; 32:18). Although the Lord supplied all their needs, they grew impatient in the wilderness.

106:14 Israel became greedy in the wilderness (Nm 11:31-34). On tested God, see note at 95:8-9 (cp. Ex 17; Dt 6:16).

106:15 God granted Israel's request, only to send a plague (possibly consumption) as a response to their rebellious attitude.

106:16-18 The Israelites grew envious (Hb qana') of Moses and Aaron (Nm 16:1-14,31-39). The Hebrew word often refers to God's righteous jealousy on behalf of His name (Ex 20:5; 34:14; Ezk 39:25). As the LORD's holy one, Aaron served a unique role as the first anointed high priest.

106:19-20 Israel replaced God's glory with a manmade image (Ex 32; Dt

9:12). The unique relationship that God had shared with the Israelites had served as a testimony to the other nations. Israel eliminated the one thing that distinguished them from all other peoples. The sin of idolatry is cited in this psalm as the single most significant breach of covenant fidelity.

106:23 Moses stood before God in the breach, mediating on behalf of the wayward people in the wilderness and offering his life to prevent their destruction (105:26; Ex 32:10-11,31). Compare Ps 106:19-23 with Dt 9:8-21.

106:24-27 Following the reports of Joshua and Caleb about the inhabitants of the land of Canaan, Israel showed a lack of trust and rejected the promised land (78:59,67; Nm 11:20; 14:11). Consequently, Israel's descendants experienced exile and dispersion (Lv 26:33; Dt 4:26-27; 28:64-65; Ezk 20:23). Compare Ps 106:24-27 with Nm 13:25-14:45; Dt 1:21-33.

106:28-31 Israel participated in a fertility cult at Peor in Moab, further endangering their relationship with the Lord. Over 24,000 died from the plague that resulted (Nm 25:1-9). In later Scripture, Baal of Peor symbolizes apostasy (Hs 9:10). Phinehas demonstrated faith by his zeal for God, and God counted it as righteousness to him and all who follow his example (cp. Gn 15:6).

106:32-33 The rebellion at Meribah (81:7; 95:8; Ex 17:1-7; Nm 20:2-13) provided the catalyst for Moses' sin of presumption (Nm 8-13). As a result, he did not enter Canaan.

106:34-38 The Israelites were instructed to annihilate all the inhabitants of the cities they conquered (Ex 34:11; Dt 7:1; 20:16; Jdg 1:21; 2:3), but they failed to do so. Consequently they intermarried with foreigners and adopted many of their idolatrous practices, including infant sacrifice (cp. Lv 18:21; 2Kg 16:3; 21:6; 23:10). God's faithfulness to His divine promise and covenant was met with infidelity by Israel (Ex 23:32).

106:39-40 Israel's abominations rendered the people and the land of Canaan ritually and ethically unclean, thus unacceptable to the Lord.

106:41-44 The Lord allowed the oppression of Israel by other nations as divine judgment. The goal was discipline and restoration to divine favor (Jdg 2:14; 3:1). The book of Judges recounts the repeated cycle of disobedience, oppression, entreaty, and restoration.

106:45-46 The Lord remembered (v. 4; see note at 25:6-7) the Abrahamic covenant and exercised compassion on the basis of His covenant love and mercy (105:8,42; Jdg 2:18; Jl 2:13; Jnh 4:2). In His sovereignty, He caused the captors to show compassion toward His people (2Kg 25:27-30).

106:47-48 The psalmist appealed to God's saving acts toward Israel as the grounds for imploring the Lord to gather and restore the nation once again (cp. 1Ch 16:35-36; Is 61:7-14). Every book of the Psalms ends with praise (see note at 41:13).

107:1 Faithful love (Hb chesed; "covenant loyalty") is a key word in this psalm, reinforcing the Lord's unconditional love, the basis on which He intervened on behalf of His people.

107:2 The concept of redemption (Hb go'el; "redeem") relates to blood vengeance exercised by the Lord upon the enemy. The idea is rooted in Levitical law (Nm 35:12,19-27; Dt 19:6-12).

107:3 This verse refers to the return of Israel from exile (Is 42:10-13; 43:5-7).

107:4 While the wilderness normally implies the wanderings following the exodus, the context suggests the exiles journeyed through the Syrian-Arabic desert. The exiles were unable to assimilate into the culture and lifestyle of their captors, anticipating the Lord's rescue at any time.

107:5 Hungry and thirsty is a dual reference to physical hunger and thirst as well as the absence of organized worship and cultic practice (Am 8:11).

107:6 This sentence is repeated in verses 13,19,28. God's people continually sought the Lord's intervention from adversity and danger (Is 51:13-16).

107:7 The psalmist envisioned a homeward procession led by the Lord (Is 35:8-10; 40:9-11; 42:10-12; 49:5,9-12,22-24; 52:7-12; 59:9-12).

107:8 This sentence is repeated in verses 15,21,31. Salvation should result in testimony and praise (see note at 22:22-24). God's wonderful works on behalf of Israel ultimately benefitted all humanity in Christ (Gn 12:3).

107:9 This verse expresses God's response to the hunger and thirst of the exiles (v. 5).

107:10-14 Those who dwelt in darkness and gloom—prisoners in cruel chains recounts the terrible fate of those who were removed from social interaction with the community. When they repented, He saved them (cp. Is 42:7; 58:6; Jr 30:8).

107:16 The Lord rescued those who were restrained with chains and irons (v. 10). See Is 45:1-22, especially verse 2 for a literary connection.

107:17-18 These verses summarize the fate of those who suffered debilitating illness as a result of their disobedience and guilt.

107:20 The Lord's word healed the diseased and saved those who were close to death (Is 25:7-8; 35:5-6; 54:1; 57:18; 65:19-20).

107:23-32 The OT does not elaborate on the maritime activity of Israel, and commercial seafaring is rarely mentioned (Gn 49:13; 2Ch 9:21; 20:36).

107:23-26 The terminology and rhythm of this section mimic the up-and-down movement of the waves. The Lord exercises sovereign control over the fierce sea (Jb 38:8-11; Jnh 1:4-16; Mt 8:26-27). God's powerful word brings all things to pass (Jb 37:6-13; Ps 147:15-20; Is 40:6-8; 55:8-11).

107:27 The sailors' actions are compared to those of drunken men (Pr 23:29-

35). The Hebrew term hagag (reeled) normally describes celebration and dancing. Their skill was useless could be translated "their wisdom was confounded."

107:29-30 The psalmist recounted the Lord's deliverance of the sailors described in verses 23-28.

107:33-35 Many of those exiled in Babylon became comfortable and were not anxious to return to Judah, so the psalmist, in an effort to encourage native Judeans to return to Jerusalem, reminded them that God could bring about a reversal in natural resources. The rivers of Babylon could fail, while the desert areas of Judah could flourish (Is 41:17-18).

107:36-38 The destruction of hunger and homelessness reflects a reversal of verses 4-5,7. The hungry will become agriculturally independent, producing crops and cattle.

107:39-41 In an ironic twist, those who suffered oppression, grief, and misfortune will enjoy prosperity, while those who inflicted misery will be frustrated (7:14-16; Jb 12:21,24).

107:43 The psalm concludes with a wisdom saying centering on God's covenant loyalty.

108:1-13 This psalm is a combination of 57:7-11 (vv. 1-5) and 60:5-12 (vv. 6-13).

108:1 The whole of my being is literally "my glory."

108:2 The Hebrew word shachar (dawn) refers to the first light of morning. The psalmist began the day with praise (Jb 38:12).

108:7 God's promises are certain, sworn on His immutable character. In His sovereignty He allotted the tribes of Jacob portions of land.

108:8 Judah was the location of the king, symbolized by the scepter.

108:9 Moab . . . Edom, and Philistia were three long-standing enemies of Israel. They are symbolically assigned denigrating roles.

108:11-13 The psalmist sought reassurance of the Lord's presence (cp. 44:9; 60:10). The community needed divine help; it could not attain victory without God's intervention (44:6; Is 41:25; 63:6; Zch 10:5).

109:1-31 This is called an imprecatory psalm, in which the psalmist pronounced curses in relation to the covenant (Dt 27:15-26; 28:15-46). This plays a significant role in certain psalms (note esp. 7:6-10; 35:8-11; 69:6-7,22-29; 83:9-18). These curses do not convey petty personal anger; they reflect curses against those who had mistreated God's people. They also express a firm belief in the righteousness of God and a hatred for sin.

109:1-2 God's silence is contrasted with the deceitful speech of the persecutors (see notes at 28:1; 50:21; 83:2). Lying tongues reflects legal terminology—false testimony (10:4,6-7; 12:3-5; 59:7,12; cp. Ex 20:16).

109:3-4 The psalmist had been maligned without cause by those he was close to (vv. 9-10,13-14,17-18). Friends had become adversaries (see note at 38:11-12). Despite their accusations, the psalmist continued to pray.

109:6 The psalmist asked God to set (or "appoint") a wicked person against his adversary. In some situations the defense attorney stood at the right hand of the defendant (v. 31; cp. 16:8). Those who testified for the prosecution also stood in that place (Zch 3:1). In either case, the psalmist wanted an accuser (Hb satan) there.

109:8-11 After the adversary was tried and convicted, the psalmist called on the Lord to shorten his life. He deserved death because he had inflicted death on others (vv. 16,31). The loss of property and posterity was the worst punishment Israel could imagine, so the psalmist wished poverty and homelessness on the adversary's family.

109:12 Just as the oppressors did not show kindness toward the afflicted, so they deserved no demonstration of covenant loyalty or compassion.

109:13 See note at verses 8-11.

109:14-15 Children often suffer for the sins of their fathers and mothers (Ex 34:7). While the Lord blotted out the sins of His people (Ps 51:2,9; Is 43:25; 44:22), the psalmist prayed that the sins of the adversaries would remain before the LORD , and that their names would be erased as if they had never existed.

109:16 The psalmist was poor and needy and his heart was pierced (v. 22), much like those whom the adversaries pursued.

109:17 The law of (Lat) lex talionis required that all injustices be remedied by an equal punishment of the perpetrator (Ex 21:23-25). The psalmist prayed that the oppressor would be cursed, just as he had cursed others.

109:18-19 While God clothed Himself in glory and light (104:1-2), the adversaries would clothe themselves with cursing. Using metaphorical language, the psalmist asked that the adversary would fall under the power and influence of their own curses.

109:20 Through the adversary's punishment, the people of God and the psalmist in particular would receive vindication and justice (vv. 4,6,29; see Is 65:7).

109:21 The Lord's faithfulness to rescue and deliver His wronged people reflects positively on His reputation (name) among the nations.

109:22 See note at verse 16.

109:23 The weakness of the psalmist is compared to the lengthening of his shadow, a figurative expression denoting nearness of death (102:11). He also experienced alienation as a result of his sufferings (102:10).

109:24-25 The psalmist was concerned that his prolonged fasting and prayer had gone unnoticed, while his accusers mocked him with impunity.

109:26-28 The Lord's intervention and salvation would demonstrate the sovereign power and righteousness of God.

109:29 Not only would the false witnesses be clothed with curses (v. 18), but they would suffer dishonor and shame similar to that experienced by the accused. The sin of the accusers would be evident to the entire community.

109:30 It is appropriate for deliverance to be followed by public praise (see note at 22:22-24).

109:31 The Lord stands at the right hand of those who rely on Him to defend them (cp. v. 6). He oversees the fair execution of justice for those who are weak and vulnerable (see note at 68:5).

110:1-7 This is a royal psalm with messianic implications that culminate in the person of Jesus Christ. As a psalm of messianic promise, the poem is the most frequently cited psalm in the NT (Ac 2:34-35; 1Co 15:25; Eph 1:20; Col 3:1; Heb 1:3; 7:17,21; 1Pt 3:22). Although the psalm seems to address the Davidic dynasty, the ideal is never realized except in the Messiah.

110:1 The Lord addresses the Davidic king as His divinely appointed representative. The right hand denotes a place of strength, honor, and privilege (45:9). The king as God's co-regent derives his authority from God (see note at 80:17; cp. Heb 1:3). The expression make Your enemies Your footstool conveys the idea of being victorious and forcing submission (Jos 10:24).

110:2 To extend the scepter meant to establish a person's authority and power over the land (45:6). Genesis 49:10 describes Judah as the Lord's scepter, a metaphorical reference to divinely ordained regal authority.

110:3 This verse is often characterized as the most obscure in the entire book of Psalms. The first line is literally, "Your people (will be) freewill offerings in the day of Your strength." Some interpreters emend in holy splendor (Hb behaderey-qodesh) to "on the holy mountains" (beharerey-qodesh) , referring to Zion. From the womb of the dawn denotes the young men's eagerness to do battle for the Lord. The young men are descendants of the king, and thereby, of the Lord.

110:4 The reference to Melchizedek derives from Gn 14:17-24. The concept of a priestly kingship seems unusual, yet kings served as priests on special occasions or in exceptional circumstances. God promised an eternal dynasty to David (2Sm 7:14-17; see Ps 89:29). Jesus Christ, as a descendant of David and as the Son of God, fulfills the dual roles of king and priest forever (Heb 7:17,21).

110:5-6 The right hand denotes protection. The Lord will judge (Is 42:1-7)

among the nations and destroy their wicked leaders (Ezk 32:5; 35:8).

110:7 Drinking from the brook by the road possibly relates to the rite of drinking from the Gihon Spring as part of an enthronement ceremony (1Kg 1:38), or to pausing to refresh oneself before continuing the pursuit of the vanquished foe (Jdg 8:4).

111:1-10 This psalm is an acrostic, the first letter of each half verse following the order of the Hebrew alphabet (vv. 9 and 10 are three lines each). This psalm provides the theological basis for Psalm 112.

111:1 On Hallelujah see note at 104:35. The psalmist praised the Lord both privately and publicly.

111:5 Food is from the Hebrew word for "prey" (tereph) , possibly implying provision in the wilderness (Ex 16; Nm 11:31-32; Jb 24:5). On those who fear Him, see note at 112:8.

111:6 The two lines of verse 6 form the center of the psalm, with 10 lines on either side. To give the inheritance of the nations reinforces the Lord's gift of land to Israel during the conquest of Canaan. The Lord handed over the heritage inhabited by other nations to His chosen people.

111:9 Redemption (Hb padah) denotes the exchange of a payment price for liberation (Dt 7:8; Is 35:10; 50:2; 51:11) and it occurs in this noun form only three other times (Ex 8:23 "distinction"; Ps 130:7; Is 50:2). The phrase His name is . . . awe-inspiring (lit "to be feared") implies a covenantal relationship (68:35; 89:7; 99:3; Ex 34:10; Dt 7:21; 28:58).

111:10 The beginning of wisdom is a wisdom expression (112:1; Jb 28:28; Pr 1:7; 15:33).

112:1-10 This psalm contains wisdom features and vocabulary, and it shares language and acrostic form with Psalm 111. It applies the theology expressed in Psalm 111.

112:2 Descendants (lit "seed") will serve as a conduit of the Lord's strength—not powerful in themselves, but through God's blessing.

112:4 On light, see notes at 18:28 and 27:1.

112:5 The upright mirror the character of the Lord. Conducts (Hb kul) expresses the idea of consistent behavior. The upright do not commit usury or charge interest (Lv 25:35-36; Dt 15:7-11).

112:6 Just as the foundations of the world will not be shaken (82:5; 96:10; 99:1; 104:5), so nothing will ever make the righteous person slip or fall.

112:8 Trust in the Lord prevents fear (vv. 1,7). The assured . . . heart conveys the idea of support (111:8).

112:9 The righteousness of the generous person endures, just as God's instructions (111:8) and praise (111:10) last forever. The horn is symbolic of power (see notes at 18:1-2; 89:15-17).

112:10 Those who are evil will witness the elevation of the righteous. The term angry can be rendered "confused" or "troubled" (Hb qa'as). Those who desire anything other than God will ultimately be frustrated.

113:1 This psalm is one of a set of songs recited during Passover. The phrase servants of Yahweh refers to the priests (134:1; 135:1). Yahweh's name in the ancient Near East represented the revelation of His powerful presence and impeccable character (Ex 34:5-7; see note at Ps 20:1).

113:2 The praising of God's name means the recognition of His position of power and authority.

113:3 This verse forms a chiasm with verse 2, centering on God's eternality. The travel of the sun across the sky is described in 19:4-6 as indicating God's omniscience, and in 72:5,17 it is associated with the longevity of the kingly reign.

113:4 On the concept of God's glory in heaven, see 99:2; 138:5; Is 57:15; Eph 3:10.

113:5 The statement who is like Yahweh (cp. Ex 15:11) introduces a hymn praising the Lord. His enthronement on high denotes superiority and sovereignty (103:11; Is 7:11; 55:9).

113:6 The word for stoops down generally means to "humble or abase" (2:4; 18:16; 104:3). God lowers Himself from above the cosmos to consider His creation (33:13).

113:7 Just as the Lord lowers Himself to gaze at His creation, so He lifts (lit "raises") the poor and needy from the dust of the street and the garbage pile, or ash heap—an unsanitary place where rubbish and filth were dumped (Jb 2:8; Lm 4:5).

113:8 In a role reversal, the Lord confers royal status to the humble, affirming the equal value of all human beings.

113:9 Barrenness often resulted in shame since the status of a woman was determined by her ability to bear children.

114:1 This psalm resembles Psalm 29, which celebrates God's revelation. Israel here refers to the 12 tribes, not just the northern kingdom.

114:2 The reference to Judah as a sanctuary seems anachronistic since the central sanctuary was not established until the Davidic kingship, but this could simply mean that Judah was God's metaphorical "holy place." The reference to Israel as the Lord's political domain indicates the psalmist had Israel's election as the Lord's people in view.

114:3 The sea looked and fled draws on mythological imagery to describe the parting of the Red Sea (Ex 14:21-22; 15:4-12). The course reversal of the Jordan River occurred when Joshua and the people entered Canaan (Jos 3-5). See Ps 66:6 for a similar combination of the Red Sea and Jordan events.

114:4 The mountains skipped refers to the shaking of Mount Sinai (Ex 19:16). The cosmos responds to God's presence (Ps 29:2,8; Is 40:4; 64:1; Hab 3:6-7; Zch 14:4).

114:5-8 Introducing a rhetorical question, the psalmist reflected on the might and majesty of the Lord who caused such phenomena.

115:1-18 This psalm contains a number of lines that are identical to those in Psalm 135.

115:2 The nations questioned the presence of Israel's God in light of her dire circumstances. The setting may be exilic, prompting the question, or the question may be a general remark on the absence of any visible manifestation of Israel's God.

115:3 This phrase expresses God's sovereignty (135:6; Pr 21:1; cp. Ec 8:3).

115:4-8 Compare these verses with 135:15-18. Idols, created by humans, are lifeless. The nations' gods are impotent. The prophet Isaiah also declared the weakness of idols (Is 6:10; 40:19-20; 41:7; 46:1-7). While the molten images appear to have human characteristics, they are unable to act under their own power. Those who create idols and place their trust in them will be just like them —powerless and ineffective.

115:9-13 Verses 12-13 list the consequences of verses 9-11; Israel trusts God, and God blesses Israel.

115:14 Increased descendants is a sign of the Lord's favor and blessing.

115:15 The Lord created all things; He is not created by human hands (v. 4). This expression occurs frequently in poetical texts that herald the Lord's superiority.

115:17-18 Those who have descended into silence is a figure for those who are dead—lifeless idols and their makers. Conversely, those who trust in God are alive, and they bless His name forever.

116:1-19 This psalm shares a number of words and ideas with Jnh 2:2-9, pointing to a literary relationship between these two inspired writings.

116:1 "Love" (Hb 'ahav) here implies love associated with a covenantal relationship. The concept is used in ancient Near Eastern covenants between the victorious and the vanquished. Compare 119:47-48,97,113; Dt 6:5; 11:1; 13:3, all of which restrict the use of "love" to a disciple's love for God's word and will.

116:2 When the Lord turns His ear, the petitioner is granted his request. The Lord's faithfulness led the psalmist to continue to call upon Him.

116:3 The psalmist compared the threat of immanent death to lethal ropes that would pull him down to Sheol (18:4-5; Jnh 2:2,5-6).

116:5 On gracious and compassionate, compare 103:8; Ex 34:6-7.

116:6 The Lord guards the inexperienced, or "simple ones" (see note at Pr 1:4). God dispenses mercy without prejudice and apart from social status. The Hebrew word for helpless (dll) means "lowly" or "weak."

116:8-11 Deliverance from death brought a resolve and transformation in the life of the psalmist, who promised to walk . . . in the land of the living (cp. 27:3; Jnh 2:6-7). Faith enabled him to prevail through adversity and his perception that everyone was out to deceive him.

116:12 The Hebrew word translated good comes from a root (gml) that means "payback," here in the good sense of "reward" or "benefit" (see note at 103:1-2; cp. Pr 12:14; 19:17).

116:13 Giving someone a "cup" normally denoted forcing something negative on someone, such as "fury" and "staggering" (Is 51:17,22). Here the psalmist received salvation from God. Alternatively, it could refer to a libation or drink offering from the psalmist (Ex 29:40-41; Nm 15:5,7; cp. Mt 26:26-29; 1Co 10:16).

116:15 Those in service to the Lord who are threatened with death are valuable to God, and are thus saved (72:14; Is 43:4). Though they may not escape physical death, they will experience eternal life (Mt 10:29-31; Lk 21:16-18; Jn 10:28-29).

116:17-18 Compare these verses to Jnh 2:9.

116:19 The psalmist intended to fulfill his vow publicly in the temple precincts (see note at 22:22-24). In the LXX, Hallelujah begins Psalm 117 (see note at 104:35).

117:1 The worship of the Lord by all nations and all peoples conveys a universal outlook consistent with the return of Christ (22:27; 63:4; 113:1; 135:1; 145:4; 147:12; Rv 19-21). Glorify (Hb shibbach) occurs only seven other times in the Old Testament.

117:2 Faithful love denotes the enduring qualities of the Lord's chesed (Hb for "covenant loyalty"; 25:10; 57:4; 85:10; 89:15; see word study at 136:1-26). Hallelujah is literally "Praise Yah" (104:35; 105:45; 106:1).

118:1-29 This psalm describes the triumphal entry of the king in terms of humiliation and glory.

118:1 His faithful love endures forever, a standard liturgical formula, recurs in verses 2, 3, and 4 (cp. 100:5; 105:1; 106:1; 136).

118:2 Compare this verse with 115:9-11; 135:19.

118:3 House of Aaron refers to priests—descendants of the first high priest (Nm 26:59-60).

118:4 The obligation of all believers is to fear the LORD (cp. 22:23,25; 34:7; 112:1; 145:19).

118:5 Distress (Hb metsar) is a rare term (116:3; Lm 1:3) from a related word that suggests confinement or restriction. The Lord's remedy is a spacious place.

118:6 On what can man do to me, compare 23:4; 56:4,11.

118:7 The term helper applies to Eve in Gn 2:18 and frequently describes God and His actions on behalf of people (Ex 18:4; Dt 33:7,29; 1Sm 7:12; Ps 20:2; 115:9-11; 121:2; 124:8; Is 41:10-13). To look in triumph is to overcome, as if in war.

118:8-9 The proverbial expressions in these verses are introduced by better to. This formulaic wisdom saying occurs several times in Proverbs (Pr 15:16-17; 16:32; 19:1,22), while the concept of taking refuge in the LORD also enjoys wider usage (61:4; 64:10; 71:1; 141:8; 143:9; 144:2; Dt 32:37; 2Sm 22:3,31; Is 14:32; 57:13). Nobles were those who distributed wealth willingly (see note at 146:3). People should prefer God over common men as well as over those in authority and power.

118:10-12 To act in the name of Yahweh could mean the king served as His regent and acted on His behalf, or that the king fought the nations relying on the strength of the Lord (v. 14).

118:13 Here the psalmist probably addressed the nations, who had pushed him when he was surrounded (vv. 10-12).

118:14 On my strength and my salvation, compare Ex 15:2; Is 12:2.

118:15-16 The Lord's right hand executes judgment, renders justice, and accomplishes salvation (see note at 16:8). Performs valiantly has a military tone. The raising of the Lord's right hand depicts judgment (89:13; 102:13).

118:18 The king acknowledged the discipline of Yahweh. The king's current circumstances reflected the Lord's rebuke, but his life would be spared (v. 17).

118:19 The plural form of gates refers to the Eastern Gate of the temple, a gate with two sections (24:7-10). On enter . . . and give thanks, compare 96:8.

118:22 The cornerstone bears the weight of a building and serves as the standard for leveling the rest of the structure. The rejected king has been restored to a place of prominence. The imagery of a cornerstone representing the character of the Lord (Zch 4:7) is further developed in the NT (Mt 21:42; Ac 4:11; Eph 2:20-21; 1Pt 2:4-8).

118:25-29 The last section of the psalm consists of a series of praises to the Lord motivated by the desire of the psalmist for rescue. The Hebrew word na', a particle of entreaty, occurs twice in this verse, emphasizing the desperate pleas of the psalmist. This was part of the expression "Hosanna" (please save) in the triumphal entry (Mt 21:9), where the crowd alluded to verses 25-26 of this psalm. The phrase Bind the festival sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar is unusual since there is no evidence that a sacrifice was ever tied to the altar. However, this concept was fulfilled when Christ was nailed to the cross.

119:1-176 Psalm 119 is an acrostic par excellence. The eight-verse sections are arranged according to the order of the Hebrew alphabet. Nearly every verse contains one of eight words for God's revelation: "instruction," "decree," "precept," "statute," "command," "judgment," "promise," and "word."

119:1-8 To be blameless derives from the Hebrew word for "perfect, unblemished." The psalmist prayed for total commitment to obedience. His conscience reminded him of his weaknesses (vv. 5-6). The Hebrew word for sincere (yshr; v. 7) means "upright," or "straight."

119:9-16 A young man is one who lacks experience and wisdom. He is easily tempted by worldly desires (Pr 1:8-19; 2:1-22) and enticed away from God. The loyalty of the righteous is maintained by the value they place on God's word. To meditate is not to empty one's mind, but to fill it with the Torah in order to internalize it.

119:17-24 Deal generously translates the Hebrew word for "recompense" or "benefit" (see note at 103:1-2). Contemplate means "consider carefully" ("think about" in v. 15). The psalmist characterized himself as a stranger, a resident alien living on God's earth and dependent on Him. The purpose of rebuke is to correct and bring God's people back into relationship with Him (Mt 18:15).

119:25-32 The Lord is the source of all life. Only He can rejuvenate those who are bowed down. The psalmist sought clarity, relying on God to help him understand and apply the Torah to his life. The righteous person rejects the way of deceivers (1:6; 16:11; 32:8), and depends on the Lord to keep him on the path of righteousness.

119:33-40 This section focuses on God's reward for obedience. The pursuit of material gain leads to sin, but life is found in the ways of the Lord. On with all my heart, compare Dt 6:5.

119:41-48 The psalmist longed for expressions of God's chesed (Hb for "covenant loyalty, faithful love"; see word study at 136:1-26) in light of the persecution and hostility against him. He sought God's salvation from oppression. The freedom offered the person who walks according to God's word enables him to remain strong through adversity and to maintain his focus on God's decrees. The righteous person is courageous enough to speak of the Lord, and he will not be ashamed (vv. 6,31,42).

119:49-56 The righteous person is comforted by the Lord's judgments, certain that He will execute justice with integrity (v. 52). As the Lord rescued Israel in the past through His miraculous intervention, so the expectations of the psalmist were based on the testimony of God's works. The psalmist expressed righteous indignation against the arrogant and the wicked who neglected the instructions of God (see notes at 15:4 and 109:1-31).

119:57-64 Just as the Levites received no allotment of land during the settlement of Canaan and thus relied on God, so the psalmist depended on God alone for his livelihood. The threat of the wicked endangered the psalmist's life, but he remained focused on God's righteous judgments.

119:65-72 The psalmist's past affliction was the direct result of the Lord's discipline. In retrospect, he acknowledged his moral weaknesses (v. 67), and realized God's rebuke served him well (v. 71). The rebellious ones smeared him with lies. The court language suggests false accusations. The value of God's instructions is beyond measure (19:7-10).

119:73-80 The psalmist did not want to be ashamed, but he prayed that the arrogant would be put to shame and reiterated his request to be blameless.

119:81-88 This section consists of a lament, in which the psalmist asked when the Lord would bring relief. Although near death, he remained loyal to God's precepts, putting his hope in God for life itself (vv. 87-88).

119:89-96 The word of God is the central theme of these verses. The Lord's judgments that maintain order in the cosmos provide order for human life as well. Verse 96 could be a summary of the book of Ecclesiastes (Ec 12:8-14).

119:97-104 An intimate acquaintance with God's word results in wise and discerning behavior (Dt 4:5-6; Jr 15:16; Ezk 3:3). Just as those with God's word are wiser than those without (vv. 98-100), so also the gospel is understood by "infants" but hidden from the worldly wise (Lk 10:21; 1Co 1:18-21; 2:8).

119:105-112 The lighted path is not whatever we want it to be, but righteous judgments and God's precepts; on such a path there is no danger or trap but a heritage and joy. Thus the guidance of the Lord's instruction enabled the psalmist to negotiate right and wrong (19:11-13; Pr 6:23; Jn 8:16).

119:113-120 The upright life surrenders to God's divine instruction for maintaining a relationship with Him. The presence of the wicked and deceitful remains pervasive in this section, suggesting the severe hostility that threatened the psalmist.

119:121-128 The upright are loyal, showing righteous anger toward God's enemies (v. 126; cp. v. 53). The frustration of the psalmist is apparent, as he called on the Lord to intervene.

119:129-136 The revelation is literally the "door" or "opening" (v. 130). Like a hungry and thirsty animal, the psalmist longed for God's instruction (v. 131). Though sometimes the psalmist expressed righteous indignation at those who did not obey God (vv. 53,126,139,158), here he expressed sorrow (v. 136; cp. Mt 23:37; Lk 19:41; Ac 20:31; Rm 9:2-3; Php 3:18).

119:137-144 On verse 138, compare 19:7; on verse 140, compare 19:9. The psalmist reinforced God's role as Judge.

119:145-152 The psalmist called on the Lord, seeking His help in overcoming those who devised evil plans against him. He expressed trust and assurance in the Lord's faithfulness. While his enemies were physically near, they were spiritually far from the commands that protected the psalmist because the Lord was near (vv. 150-151).

119:153-160 Realizing his utter dependence on God, the psalmist prayed that God would give him life (vv. 154,156, 159). The psalmist despised the way of the wicked (vv. 155, 158; cp. v. 53).

119:161-168 Peace fills the lives of those who trust in God's instruction. The goal is not to obey God's precepts for the sake of obedience, but in order to enjoy abundant life in God's presence (v. 168).

119:169-176 The psalmist concluded the psalm with words of praise, an affirmation of his faithfulness to the Torah, and a final, heartfelt plea for intervention.

120 title This is the first of 15 psalms of ascents (Pss 120-134). These psalms were designed for pilgrimage processions to celebrate seasonal feasts in Jerusalem. The hymns contain numerous references to Jerusalem or Zion, the temple, Israel, peace, and adversity. The 15 songs, adapted from ancient hymns heralding the blessings and salvation of Zion, may have been sung on the 15 steps leading up to the temple.

120:2 Metaphorically, lying lips and a deceitful tongue denote the spread of gossip and baseless rumors (109:2).

120:3-4 Those who spoke lies—possibly while swearing by God that they were not lying—would face severe judgment. Burning charcoal is literally "coals of broom," that is, charcoal derived from a hard-stemmed plant called a broom tree (1Kg 19:4-5; Jb 30:4).

120:5 Meshech was located southeast of the Black Sea. Kedar was an eastern plain located at the northern fringe of the Syrian-Arabian desert. It was normally inhabited by Arab tribes. Together they represent places far and near where Israelites lived as aliens.

121 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

121:1-8 In this psalm the writer exploited the broad semantic range of the Hebrew verb shamar ("guard, keep, protect, observe") using the term six times (vv. 3,4,5,7[2x],8). The HCSB consistently translates it as "protect" or "Protector" in this psalm.

121:1 The mountains may have seemed like a potential place to hide (11:1), a symbol of God's stability and deliverance (31:2; 125:2; Nah 1:15), or a looming menace (Jnh 2:6). Any of these could prompt the question concerning the source of help.

121:2 The Creator is the faithful source of help and blessing (124:8; 134:3; 146:6).

121:5-8 God protects His people from the perils of the road by day or by night.

122 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

122:1-9 Sharing terminology and imagery with Is 2:2-4, this psalm may be an adaptation of that prophetic passage. The focus of the psalm is on the features of the city: house (vv. 1,5,9), gates (v. 2), thrones (v. 5), walls (v. 7), and fortresses (v. 7).

122:1 On go to the house of the LORD , compare Is 2:3; Jr 31:6.

122:2 Standing within the gates means entering the Lord's presence.

122:4 The tribes are the 12 tribes of Israel. Yahweh's tribes occurs only here in the Bible. Attendance at the three yearly festivals was mandatory. These were Passover, the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), and the Festival of Booths (Ex 23:14-17; Lv 23; Dt 16).

122:5 The phrase thrones for judgment refers to the judicial function of the central sanctuary (Dt 17:8-13; 2Sm 8:15; 15:2-6), while the thrones of the house of David refers to kings of Davidic descent. Solomon's temple contained a "hall of thrones" (1Kg 7:7).

122:6-7 Peace permits the pursuit of prosperity (1Kg 4:20-25; 1Tm 2:1-2).

122:8-9 The pilgrimage to the temple prompted the psalmist to seek . . . good for everyone in the community.

123 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

123:2 A servant might watch his master's hand intently for a gesture that would signify approval.

123:3 The Hebrew term for contempt (buz) is related to the verb "despise" (31:18; 107:40; Is 37:22).

124 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

124:2 The men attacked us is literally "men stood up against us" (3:1; 86:14; 92:11).

124:4-5 Fast-moving waters and floods would have washed away all evidence of Israel's existence (69:2,15; Is 30:28; 66:12). The Hebrew term translated raging is related to a word that means "arrogant" (Dt 17:13; Neh 9:10,29), characterizing the destructive waters and the oppressive enemy.

124:6 Hostile people are depicted as devouring, unrestrained monsters (79:7; Is 9:12; Jr 51:34).

124:7 The mouth of a bird trap (Pr 7:23; Am 3:5) has been torn and the captured bird has escaped, as if from prison. The setting of a fowler's trap suggests premeditation by the opposition, who lay in wait to capture God's people.

Psalm 125 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

125:1 For Israel, Zion represented the center of the earth and the place where the Lord dwelt. The Hebrew word mut (shaken) functions as a wordplay with Hebrew hammattiym; "turn aside" (v. 5). Those who trust Yahweh will remain stable, while those who depend on evil ways will be turned aside.

125:2 The psalm emphasizes the protection of Zion and her inhabitants as the Lord's chosen nation.

125:3 An unusual expression, the scepter of the wicked refers to the authority of evildoers (Ezk 19:11-14), which would not continue to dominate the land of the righteous. On Judah as the "scepter of righteousness," see Gn 49:10. Those who lived in the land of their inheritance would conduct themselves as God's people, avoiding evil and injustice (Ps 82:2; 107:42).

125:4 The actions and motives of the righteous coincide.

125:5 On those who turn aside, see note at verse 1. The Lord will banish evildoers (lit "lead them away"; cp. Jb 12:17,19).

Psalm 126 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

126:1 Restored the fortunes refers to the return of the Babylonian exiles to Jerusalem as an event that had already taken place (84:6; 85:1). The appeal in 126:4 to "restore our fortunes" is difficult since the verb assumes that the action has not yet occurred. While verse 1 refers to the return of Israel, verse 4 may refer to the restoration of prosperity and peace in the land (122:6-7). Like those who dream refers to those who eagerly anticipate the future.

126:2 God's intervention on Israel's behalf testifies to His omnipotence and superiority (96:3; 113:4; Is 61:9; 66:19; Jr 31:10; Ezk 36:23).

126:4-6 In verse 1 Yahweh restores Zion as the political and religious center, but verses 4-6 focus on the productivity of the land. The watercourses in the Negev refer to seasonal streams or wadis, which occasionally blessed the land with a sudden overabundance of water. Along with sudden bounty like a wadi, God also made use of methodical processes and hard labor like agriculture. The person who remains humble before God will surely enjoy God's blessings in the land.

Psalm 127 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

127:1 No task succeeds apart from God's will. While building a dwelling is the literal meaning here, a house could also refer to a household or family, connecting this verse to verses 3-5.

127:2 Humanity struggles to provide for its needs, working hard to have enough food (lit "eating the bread of toil"; 80:5; 102:9; Gn 3:17; Is 30:20). The Lord provides rest by blessing the work of the godly.

127:3 While food generally came from hard work, amid the uncertainties of the ancient Near Eastern life, children came from God (Gn 30:2; Dt 7:14). The psalmist focused specifically on sons, who could continue the family lineage.

127:4-5 A full quiver of arrows represented prestige and protection. Like arrows for a warrior, children were useful in the agricultural society. The man who had many children also enjoyed respect in Near Eastern society (on gate, see note at 87:2).

Psalm 128 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

128:1-6 This is a companion psalm to Psalm 127. The psalmist affirmed the significance of descendants, revisiting the original promise God made to Abraham in Gn 12:1-3.

128:3 Just as Joseph was described as a fruitful vine (Gn 49:22), so a wife who is blessed with children expands the family. Olive trees were known for vitality, strength, productivity, and longevity.

128:5-6 In the ancient Near East, the ultimate earthly blessing would be prosperity for one's nation, long life, healthy offspring, and peace.

Psalm 129 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

129:1 Israel often suffered affliction from enemies in her early days (106:41-43). On let Israel say, compare 118:2-4; 124:1.

129:3 Slaves were often beaten by overseers and owners, creating stripes on their backs (Ex 5:14; Is 50:6; 53:4-6).

129:4 The Lord will prevent the wicked from harming His people by eliminating the weapons used to force submission (46:9; Jb 39:10).

129:5-7 The psalmist prayed an imprecation or curse upon those who hated the Lord and His people (see note at 109:1-31). Those who oppose the Lord will be like grass that sprouts briefly only to become scorched and withered, not living long enough to bear fruit. This is the opposite of 126:6, where the righteous person rejoiced in his harvest.

129:8 Those who hate Zion (v. 5) will suffer God's curse on their harvest. No one who sees them will offer a cheerful greeting (cp. Ru 2:4).

Psalm 130 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

130:3-4 To consider sins is literally to "watch over" or "guard" them (Hb shamar). All would be lost if God made no provision to let sins go. The penitent person relies on the mercy and compassion of the Lord to forgive (103:3); otherwise, the Lord would not acknowledge his worship (Ezr 9:15). Revered brings out the dual connotation of "fear" and "worship," depicting God's mercy in forgiveness and His judgment of unrighteousness.

130:5 Hope in adversity anticipates God's response on the basis of His word (119:42,49,74,81).

130:7 While Israel's hope of forgiveness is generated by the Lord's faithful love (Hb chesed), her redemption (Hb paha'; "deliverance from an obligation through a payment") depicts the visible result of that forgiveness (Neh 1:10; Is 50:2).

Psalm 131 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

131:1 Humility characterizes the faithful, who depend on the Lord and exalt Him.

131:2-3 Israel should adopt the attitude of an infant, depending on the LORD for protection and nurture (Mt 18:3).

Psalm 132 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title. This royal psalm must have been written after David's time, since it looks back at King David's plan to build a temple for the ark (vv. 5-8). Also, another anointed king appeals to God's grace in David's name (v. 10).

132:1 The hardships David endured probably refer to his longing to bring the ark to Jerusalem and his anguish over the incident with Uzzah (2Sm 6:6-8).

132:2 Mighty One of Jacob alludes to Israel's heritage in God (Gn 49:24).

132:3-4 David's promise is revisited in verses 3-5, while verses 6-8 recall its fulfillment. The Hebrew grammar in these verses shows determination or will, reinforcing David's commitment to bring the ark of the covenant to Jerusalem and install it in a permanent structure.

132:6 The psalmist summarized the history of the installation of the ark in a tabernacle in Jerusalem (1Sm 5-6; 2Sm 6-7). Ephrathah was an area near Bethlehem where David received news about the ark. Jaar, otherwise known as Kiriath-jearim (1Sm 6:21-7:2), was where the ark was recovered from the Philistines.

132:7 Remembering the ceremonial procession that accompanied the ark to Jerusalem, the psalmist appealed to the congregation to enter the temple (1Ch 15-16). His footstool is a term referring to the ark (see note at 99:5; cp. 1Ch 16; Is 66; Heb 1:13).

132:8 Verses 8-10 recur in 2Ch 6:41. The ark denotes the Lord's resting place (Nm 10:33-35), serving as a visible representation of God's presence (1Sm 4:4; Is 6:1) and playing a pivotal role in holy war (Jos 6:6-7; 1Sm 4:3-8).

132:9 The priests were clothed with righteousness, bound to obedience and ethical behavior (v. 16; cp. Is 11:5; 61:10). Your godly people derives from the Hebrew term for "covenant love."

132:10 Reject is literally "turn one's face from" (cp. Ezk 14:6). The anointed one is the king.

132:11 Just as David swore an oath to the Lord (v. 2), so the LORD swore an oath of fidelity to David (89:35; 110:4). The Lord promised to sustain the Davidic monarchy by keeping one of his descendants on the throne (89:3-4,28-29; 2Sm 7).

132:12 Conditionality was always implicit in this promise (89:38-39; 2Sm 7:14). God's divinely ordained leader was expected to obey His law, serving as a role model to the community.

132:13 The designation of Zion as the Lord's eternal resting place (68:16; 78:68; 87:2) brought a false sense of security to Israel; they believed the Lord would never allow Jerusalem to be captured or destroyed (Jr 7:3-12; Mc 3:11).

132:16 Just as the priests were expected to exhibit integrity in behavior (v. 9), so they were entrusted with salvation. This expressed their responsibility as divine mediators for the spiritual welfare of the people (Ezk 3:18).

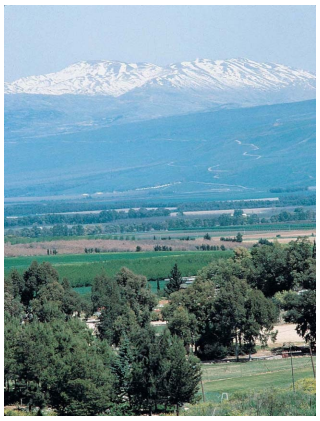
132:17 The horn represents victory and salvation. The Hebrew word for grow (89:17; 148:14) is sometimes associated with a future Messiah, often figuratively referred to as a "branch" or "sprout" (Jr 23:5; 33:15; Ezk 29:21; Zch 3:8; 6:12). To prepare a lamp describes metaphorically the permanence of the dynasty and God's visible presence on the throne (18:28; 2Sm 21:17; 22:29; 1Kg 11:36; Jb 18:6).

132:18 God's priests will display righteousness and salvation (vv. 9,16), but the unrighteous will reflect shame. The divinely ordained king will stand out among the nations as the Lord's anointed.

Psalm 133 title On ascents, see note at Psalm 120 title.

133:1 Brothers can denote any fellow Israelite. The psalmist holds up unity as an ideal.

133:2-3 Unity in a society is compared to extravagant blessing of consecrating oil (see notes at 23:5; 36:8; 89:20; and 92:10) or dewfall on dry ground (Gn 27:28; Pr 19:12). Zion was the epitome of blessing because there God commanded (appointed) eternal life—possibly alluding to what Christ accomplished in Jerusalem.



A view of the snow-capped peaks of Mount Hermon, mentioned in several psalms (42:6; 89:12; 133:3) Psalm 134 title This is the last of the 15 Psalms of Ascents (see note at Ps 120 title).

134:1 Praise and "bless" are the same word in Hebrew (brk). To bless a person is to speak well of him. When people speak well of God, it is praise. When God speaks well of a person, that person is blessed (Gn 24:35; Jb 42:12). After the exile, servants designated the faithful community that exemplified an attitude of service (19:11,13; 79:2,10; 86:4,16; 90:13). Congregational singing at the temple often occurred in the evening.

134:2 On praise, see note at verse 1.

134:3 The "blessing" of the Lord represents divine attention (see note at v. 1; cp. 128:5; Nm 6:24; Dt 14:29). Maker of heaven and earth differentiates God the Creator from all false gods.

135:1-21 Nearly every verse of this psalm quotes or is quoted by other Scripture, such as Psalm 115.

135:1 On Hallelujah see note at 104:35.

135:2 People stood in the temple to worship (134:1; Neh 9:3), pray (2Ch 20:9), and serve (Dt 10:8; Ezk 44:15).

135:3 The Lord's name is His character or reputation (see v. 13; see note at 20:1).

135:4 God's treasured possession (Hb segullah) always referred to Israel (Ex 19:5; Dt 7:6; 14:2; 26:18; Mal 3:17).

135:5 On greater than all gods, see notes at 29:1 and 82:1.

135:6 Compare this verse with 115:3. The Lord's decree accomplishes His purposes (Is 55:11). The depths (24:2; Ex 20:4) and the seas (Is 24:15-16; 42:10) illustrate the Lord's authority over all creation.

135:7 An identical verse occurs in Jr 10:13; 51:16 (cp. Jb 38:22). God controls the weather. The Hebrew word 'otser (storehouses) is also used for a temple treasury or royal storeroom.

135:8-9 Verses 8-12 are similar to Psalm 136. The God-ordained death of the firstborn in Egypt was virtually equivalent to killing their gods, since Pharaoh and his offspring were considered divine. The plagues were Yahweh's polemic against false Egyptian gods. The direct address against you, Egypt could be translated "in the midst of Egypt."

135:11-12 Sihon and Og were kings who denied Israel passage through their lands (Nm 21:33-35; cp. Ps 136:19-20). During the conquest of Canaan, the Lord gave Israel the land that had belonged to these kings.

135:15-18 See note at 115:4-8.

135:19-20 Each sector is called upon to bless and acknowledge Yahweh as their God, beginning with the nation (Israel), the high priest (Aaron), the priesthood (Levi), and concluding with the community (cp. 115:9-11).

136:1-26 This psalm recollects events from creation to Israel's conquest of Canaan. Each verse concludes with the refrain, His love is eternal (cp. 118:1-4), which may have been sung by the congregation in response to the priests. On love see word study on chesed.

136:1 -2 Compare these verses with 135:3.

136:4 On wonders, see 72:18; 75:1; 78:4; 96:3; 98:1; 105:5; 106:7,22; 107:8.

136:5 Skillfully is literally "through understanding" (78:72; Jb 26:12; Is 44:19; Jr 10:12; 51:15).

136:6-9 The psalmist summarized creation in terms of the separation of land and waters and the appointment of the sun . . . moon, and stars to regulate seasons and times (Gn 1:3-8,14-19). Noticeably absent are references to living creatures.

136:10 On firstborn of the Egyptians, see note at 135:8-9.

136:11-15 Strong hand and outstretched arm always refers to God's power and the deliverance of Israel (Dt 4:34; 5:15; 26:8; Jr 32:21), but especially to Israel's crossing of the Red Sea (Ex 14:2).

136:16 The wilderness refers to the 40 years of wandering by the Israelites (Dt 8:2; 29:4-5).

136:17-22 Compare this with 135:10-11. These kings were famous for their military power. On Sihon and Og, see note at 135:11-12.

136:23-25 The Lord encouraged the Israelites in the land of Canaan, providing abundant resources for their livelihood (104:14-15,27-28; 145:15-16; 146:7; 147:9).

137:1 The rivers of Babylon were a series of canals running through the southern plain (Ezk 1:1; Dn 8:2). During the exile, the assembled community grieved there.

137:2 The trees of Babylon were not the familiar olive and cedar trees of the promised land.

137:3 By asking the community to sing songs of Zion, Israel's captors were tormenting and mocking them (42:3,10; 79:10).

137:4 The Israelites could not engage in worship since the land of Babylon was unclean and Israel had no temple.

137:5 The psalmist took an oath to stay loyal to Jerusalem, which represented the city, the land, and the temple, symbols of God's promise to Israel.

137:7 Remember reflects the theme of the psalm. Israel "remembered" Zion (v. 1), made a pledge to remember Jerusalem (vv. 5-6), and asked the Lord to "remember" Jerusalem's devastation by the Edomites (v. 7). The Edomites descended from Esau, the twin brother of Jacob, and served as Babylon's allies in the destruction of Jerusalem (Ezk 25:12; 36:5). Destroy it is literally "strip it down," that is, "raze it."

137:8 Who pays you back what you have done to us reinforces the concept of (Lat) lex talionis, or receiving a punishment equal to the crime (Ex 21:23-25; Mt 5:38-42). God pays back those who reject Him (Dt 7:10; 32:35; Is 65:6), and He specifically promised to repay Babylon for their crimes against His people (Jr 51:56).

137:9 This imprecation (see note at 109:1-31) is startling. Out of the psalmist's intense emotional state, seething with righteous anger, he called for the execution of just vengeance against the wicked who had perhaps done the described acts (takes . . . and dashes) to Israel's little ones (see note at Is 13:16).

138:1 On before the heavenly beings, or "before the gods," see note at 82:1.

138:2 Constant love translates the Hebrew word chesed (see word study at 136:1-26). The fulfillment of God's promises surpasses all previous revelation.

138:4-5 The universal outlook of the psalmist reflects a fairly new understanding for David—that all the kings on earth would someday worship the Lord (22:27-28). Solomon came to know it (72:11; 2Ch 6:33), and it was spoken through the prophets (Is 2:1-4; Rv 21:24).

138:6 From heaven (14:2; 33:13; 34:15; 102:19; 113:5; Is 57:15), God stoops to act on behalf of the downtrodden (humble; see note at 113:6), but He withholds assistance from those who are haughty or arrogant.

139:1-24 This psalm celebrates the attributes of God.

139:1-4 The Hebrew verbs can be interpreted as timeless truth: "You search me and You know me." God's attributes are not restricted to time. The words know . . . understand . . . observe, and are aware speak of God's omniscience. The word "observe" comes from the Hebrew root zarah , which means "measure." The Hebrew word for ways does not necessarily denote literal walking but daily behavior.

139:5 God's omnipresence guarantees protection. The first line is literally, “Back and front, You enclosed me.” Your hand on me denotes absolute control over the psalmist, who was subject to the Lord’s loving care and discipline.

139:6 God’s attributes of omniscience and omnipresence are beyond human comprehension.

139:7 The psalmist could not remove himself from the realm of God’s transcendence, nor could he run from God’s immanent and personal engagement with him (Jr 23:24; Am 9:2-4; Heb 4:13). The concept is both frightening and comforting.

139:8 The notion of escaping to heaven and hell finds its roots in ancient Near Eastern mythology. The OT acknowledges God’s ability to access Sheol because He is sovereign (Jb 26:6; Am 9:2), but banishment to the underworld removes a person from God’s blessing (Ps 6:5; Ec 9:10).

139:9 Live at the eastern horizon is literally “take up the wings of the dawn” (see textual footnote). The LXX renders the phrase, “if I lift my wings to the dawn,” reinforcing the concept of flying a long distance to avoid God’s presence.

139:10 The Lord’s authority extends beyond the cosmos, and His sovereignty recognizes no limits. Every human being is under the power, protection, and authority of God.

139:11 Evildoers cannot conceal their deeds from God (Jb 22:11-14; 34:22).

139:12 Light and darkness are artificial distinctions for the Lord, who transcends creation.

139:13 Humankind is the Lord’s possession and His creation (Gn 14:19,22; Dt 32:6). Inward parts (lit “kidneys”) often denote the seat of emotion or affection (16:7; 73:21; Jb 19:27).

139:14 The expression wonderfully made is a forceful rendering of the text. God’s creation testifies to His power and majesty (Rm 1:20).

139:15 The phrase depths of the earth is normally associated with death (63:9; Ezk 26:20), but here it is figurative for the concealment of the womb.

139:16 The concept of the Lord’s book that records the existence of all human beings reinforces God’s sovereignty over life and death (69:28; Ex 32:32-33).

139:17 How vast their sum denotes the superiority of God’s knowledge in quality and quantity.

139:18 The sum of everything God knows is immeasurable (Is 55:8). When I wake up could refer to having pondered God’s knowledge all night, or to the resurrection.

139:19-22 On hate for enemies, see notes at 15:4 and 109:1-31. The psalmist wished to escape the influence of wicked liars. His zeal for God and righteousness gave him a single-minded determination. Such zeal is commendable (Jn 2:17; 2Co 7:11), but in calmer times it is directed toward love and mercy (Gl 1:14-16; Php 3:6-7).

139:23-24 Concluding with an appeal for God to search me (cp. v. 1), the psalmist submitted his thoughts and motives (concerns) to the Lord's scrutiny. He asked God to reveal any offensive way (lit "way of hardship") in him. The Scriptures speak of two opposite ways: that of the upright and that of the wicked (Ps 1; Pr 12:28; Mt 7:13-14).

140:1 On violent men, compare verses 4 and 11.

140:2-3 The metaphor of battle terminology refers to verbal attacks on the psalmist by his enemies. The reference to their tongues further supports verbal contention or litigation (58:5; 64:4; 120:4). Those who oppose God are often characterized as poisonous vipers or snakes (10:7; 55:21; 57:4; cp. Rm 3:13).

140:4 Clutches is a figurative expression denoting influence or control. Violent men were making false accusations and trying to trap the psalmist (v. 1).

140:5 Those who were proud believed their plans were beyond discovery. The psalms often describe the deceitful actions of wicked men in terms of traps and snares (9:15-16; 10:8-9; 31:4; 57:6; 119:110; 124:7; 141:9).

140:6 The psalmist sought the Lord's favorable response to the persecution he faced (28:2; 31:22; 86:6; 130:2).

140:9 The psalmist asked God to bring the lies of his attackers back down on their heads (7:15-16; 40:14-15; Pr 26:27).

140:10 Based on Aramaic and Ugaritic usage, the Hebrew word for abyss probably means "watery pits."

140:12 The Lord defends the most vulnerable people in society (10:18; 68:5; 146:7-9; Dt 10:18).

140:13 To live in Your presence is literally "dwell before You." To stand, walk, or live in God's presence implies a good relationship with God (16:11; 41:12; 56:13; Gn 17:1; 1Kg 2:4; 3:6; 8:23).

141:2 Offerings of incense were prescribed for both morning and evening (Ex 30:7-8; 2Kg 16:15). These represented prayers rising to God in heaven (Neh 13:5,9; Is 1:13; Jr 41:5). The lifting of hands was a common practice in worship (28:2; 63:4; 134:2).

141:3 The phrase door of my lips, figurative for exercising prudent speech, occurs only here.

141:4 The delicacies probably refer metaphorically to illicit sacrificial offerings and pleasurable acts of sin.

141:5 Pouring oil on the head was considered refreshing in that culture (23:5; 45:7; 133:2; Is 61:3; Jms 5:14). Constructive criticism from a righteous one is desirable; it would be foolish to refuse it (Pr 8:33-36; 15:32). The psalmist remains resolute in his opposition to evil.

141:6 The psalmist will be vindicated. When the wicked rulers are deposed, their followers will come to see that the psalmist has been right.

141:7 The psalmist feels as though his people had been slaughtered and then not provided a proper burial (79:2-4).

141:8 The psalmist affirms his trust in God (2:12; 5:12; 57:1; 64:10; 71:1; 118:8; Is 14:32; 57:13).

141:9-10 While the evildoers sought to trap the psalmist, he asked God to cause the wicked to fall into their own snares (7:16; 9:16; 35:8; 69:22; 106:36; 140:9-11; Pr 26:27).

Ps 142 title The cave referred to here could be Adullam (1Sm 22:1) or En-gedi (1Sm 24:3-4; cp. Ps 57).

142:1-3 Turning to God when in distress showed that David trusted Him. David referred to his spirit as weak, denoting spiritual or physical collapse (77:3; 102 title; 143:4).

142:4 An advocate or defender normally stood on a person's right (16:8; 109:6; 110:5; 121:5). No one stands up for me is literally "no one recognizes me." No one cares about me is literally "no one seeks my soul." The psalmist lacked support.

142:5 A portion is another way of describing a person's inheritance (see note at 16:5-6).

142:6 In asking God to listen, David also wants God to act (55:2).

142:7 Being hunted and having to hide was like being in prison. It is appropriate for deliverance to be followed by public praise (see note at 22:22-24). You deal generously with me is literally "You pay back (Hb gamal) on my behalf," which could have double meaning: God would reward David and punish his false accusers (see note at 103:1-2).

143:1-12 In this psalm, David asked God, in His faithful love, to do what He had promised in His covenant.

143:2 Bring Your servant into judgment uses legal courtroom terminology typical of a covenant lawsuit (Jb 9:32; 14:3; Ec 11:9). As the psalmist began praying, he became self-conscious of his sinfulness. He acknowledged humanity's weaknesses (no one . . . is righteous) as a basis for a positive response from the Lord. The covenant relationship depended on the Lord's willingness to forgive (130:3-4; Jb 4:17; 9:2; 25:4; Rm 3:20; Gl 2:16).

143:4 As a result of being pursued, the psalmist was physically and spiritually exhausted (142:3).

143:5-6 The work of God's hands probably refers to all of His acts of creation and sustenance (8:6; 19:1; 28:5; 102:26; Is 5:12). When David looked back on what God had done in the past, he deeply desired God.

143:7 The Pit, like Sheol, meant death or the grave (30:3; 88:3-4; Is 14:11).

143:8 Based on the faithful love of the Lord, the psalmist asked for God's guidance in avoiding the traps set by the enemy (142:3).

143:10 In his weakness (v. 2), David recognized he needed God to teach him and lead him (cp. "Rescue" and "deliver" in vv. 9,11). Level ground refers to a path with nothing that would cause one to slip or stumble.

143:12 David appealed to God's faithful love when asking Him to destroy his enemies.

144:1-15 This psalm has a number of similarities with portions of Psalms 8 and 18. Isaiah developed some of these same themes.

144:1 Compare this verse with 18:34. On the Lord as a rock, see note at 18:1-2.

144:2 Compare this verse with 18:2,46-50.

144:3 On son of man, see note at 8:3-4. The emphasis of this verse is on God's concentrated attention on and His intimate knowledge of humanity.

144:4 The life of man is compared to a mere breath, reinforcing the fleeting nature of human existence (103:14-15; Is 40:6-8). On like a passing shadow, see note at 102:11.

144:5 Compare this verse with 18:9. The metaphorical imagery is consistent with the language of Psalm 18 and descriptions of the divine warrior (Am 9:5). Mountains tremble, smoke appears, and lightning accompanies the presence of the Lord.

144:6 The Lord scatters lightning bolts over the earth, directing them like arrows (18:14; Ezk 5:16; Zch 9:14).

144:7-8 Foreigners probably refer to those who worship false gods (18:44). Lies is literally "emptiness" (Is 59:4). Whose right hands are deceptive refers to those who swore falsely with a raised right hand (Dt 32:40) or while shaking hands (Pr 6:1).

144:9 On new song, see note at 33:1-3.

144:11 See note at verses 7-8.

144:12 On sons . . . like plants, see notes at 80:8 and 80:9-11. The OT often refers to God's people in agrarian terms (44:2; Ex 15:17; Is 5:7; Hs 10:1).

144:14 Some interpreters believe the phrases breach in the walls and going into captivity look back on Jerusalem's destruction and Judah's exile, proving that this psalm was written after the exile. Others say it is a prophetic warning similar to that in Deuteronomy (Dt 28:52,63-64).

144:15 On happy, see note at 1:1.

145:1-21 This is an acrostic psalm. Each verse begins with a different letter of the Hebrew alphabet, and it has marked similarities with Psalm 111. The MT has no line beginning with the Hebrew letter nun.

145:1 The introduction places this psalm with other poems that herald the Lord as King (Pss 47; 93; 96-99).

145:3 Compare this verse with 96:4. God's superiority goes beyond comprehension (cp. 139:6; Is 40:28).

145:4 One generation . . . to the next is literally "generation to generation." The construction resembles "day after day" and "night after night" in 19:2. Both passages emphasize continuous praise of the Lord.

145:5 The Hebrew word siyach (speak) could be translated "meditate" (77:3,6,12).

145:7 They will give a testimony is literally "they will pour out a memory" (cp. 19:2).

145:8 The language of this verse exemplifies God's covenant love toward His people (103:4; 111:4; Ex 34:6-7).

145:9 God's benevolence extends to all His creatures (Mt 5:45). Often called "common grace," the concept is contrasted with God's particular grace, extended only to His chosen people, believers (Ps 145:18-20; Mt 24:31; Rm 11:5; 2Th 2:13).

145:10-12 All people will recognize God's sovereignty and dominion.

145:14 The Hebrew term samak (help) suggests sustenance and support (146:8).

145:16 Compare this verse with 104:28.

145:18-19 For those who trust Him, God is near like a friend and ready to help (cp. 138:6; Is 55:6; Jn 14:14).

145:21 Yahweh's name represents the revelation of His powerful presence and impeccable character (see note at 20:1).

146:1 The last five psalms each begin and end with Hallelujah! (see note at 104:35).

146:3 Nobles were the best of men—generous, giving freely (the "willing" in Ex 35:5,22). Such a person could help immensely in this life but could not bestow eternal life (Ps 118:9; cp. "ruler" in Pr 19:6).

146:4 The fleeting nature of life affects everyone, and every man (Hb 'adam in v. 3) eventually returns to the ground (Hb 'adamah), reversing creation (Gn 2:7; 3:19). Kings and leaders suffer the same fate (Ps 39:5-6; 90:3-6; 102:11).

146:5 The phrase God of Jacob recalls Israel's early history before it became an established nation (20:1; 46:7,11; 84:8; cp. Ex 3:15).

146:6 The formula Maker of heaven and earth . . . and everything in them often occurs as a polemic, underscoring the omnipotence of the Lord and contrasting His power with impotent gods and leaders (96:5; Neh 9:6; Is 37:16; 44:24; 45:18). The Lord's integrity is guaranteed by His holy nature.

146:7-9 The psalmist emphasized God's faithful provision and His role as deliverer (68:6; 82:3-4; Is 42:7). He defends the cause of Israel's most vulnerable citizens (see note at Ps 68:5). This practice is based in cultic law that was established early in Israel's history (Ex 22:21-22; Dt 24:17).

146:10 The Lord, as Israel's King, will reign forever, rendering the help earthly kings cannot provide (cp. vv. 3-4).

147:1 On Hallelujah! see note at 146:1.

147:2-3 The restoration and return of Israel to the land is expressed as spiritual and physical healing. Isaiah 61:1 uses some of the same words—to bind up the brokenhearted—which Jesus the Messiah fulfilled (Lk 4:18-21).

147:4-5 While the Lord counts (Hb mispar) the stars (Is 40:26), humanity is unable to measure (Hb mispar) the Lord's understanding.

147:6 God rights wrongs and reverses fortunes (7:14-16; 18:27; 113:8; 1Pt 5:5).

147:7 On sing to the LORD and lyre, see note at 33:1-3.

147:8 Three lines trace the progression from clouds, to rain, to vegetation. The Lord attends to every aspect of the cosmos, and nothing escapes His attention (72:6; 85:11; 104:14; Is 45:8; 61:11).

147:9 Compare the imagery of this verse with Jb 38:41.

147:10-11 God determines the outcome of any situation, and when He evaluates the participants, strength and power do not impress Him (33:16-17). Rather, He seeks to intervene on behalf of those who fear and trust Him (2Ch 16:9).

147:13 In a clever wordplay, the psalmist described the Lord as strengthening the bars (Hb beriychey) of Jerusalem's gates and blessing (Hb barak) her children (Hb beniyk; "sons") in her midst (Hb beqirbek). The Lord will restore Judah's protection and offspring.

147:14 The sovereign Lord controls the productivity of the land. His blessing is described in terms of the abundance that Israel will enjoy.

147:15 In a progressive development of the word of God, the Lord sends (Hb shalach) forth His command. His spoken word accomplishes all that He declares (v. 18; Is 55:10-11).

147:16-17 Compare these verses with Job 37-38 for God's sovereignty over the weather. Nothing is unaffected by the Lord's cold, which permeates creation.

147:18 The psalmist reinforced the association between the Lord's creative word and His spoken word. The Hebrew word for winds (ruach) could also be translated "breath."

147:19-20 Describing the Lord's word as revelatory, the psalmist alluded to Dt 4:7-8, a text characterizing Israel as unique, with divinely ordained standards to regulate her relationship with God.

148:1 On Hallelujah! see note at 146:1. Compare this verse with 19:1; 29:1.

148:2-3 A military term denoting armies, hosts often refers to the stars and other heavenly bodies (1Kg 22:19; 2Kg 23:5; Jr 31:35; cp. 1Sm 17:45).

148:4 Waters above the heavens is figurative for celestial waters, the reservoirs from which God is said to have brought rain (104:3; Gn 1:6-7; 7:11).

148:5 The powerful word of the Lord (33:9) spoke the world into existence (Gn 1). The Hebrew word bara' ("create") is only used in reference to God.

148:6 God established creation and set boundaries, exercising sovereign control over the cosmos (104:9; Gn 1:6-10; 9:11; Jb 28:26; 38:8-10).

148:7 The psalmist contrasted the three levels of heaven (vv. 5-6) with three levels of the earth. Even sea monsters (Hb tannin) are called on to praise God (69:34).

148:8 The elements of nature perform at God's command (103:20; 104:4).

148:9-10 The psalmist hinted at the creation account in these verses, using peculiar expressions typical of Genesis 1.

148:11-12 The list of people represents descending social status. All people are united in worship (Rm 10:12; Gl 3:28; Col 3:11). Prophets, priests, and other temple personnel were not mentioned, perhaps because they were the ones who were calling all others to praise God.

148:14 To raise a horn signifies strength (see notes at 18:1-2; 75:4; 89:15-17).

149:1 On Hallelujah! see note at 146:1. This introduction sing . . . a new song usually denotes dynamic intervention not previously experienced by the writer (33:1-3; 96:1; 98:1; Is 42:10; 61:1). The godly (see note at 132:9) is a designation for Israel.

149:2 The Hebrew for its Maker (be'osayw) is a plural of majesty (Jb 35:10; Is 54:5). Israel is doubly obligated to honor God since He is both their Creator and their King.

149:3 Dancing and music were typical modes of worship in the temple (30:11; 87:7; 150:4).

149:4-5 Just as Israel glorified God, so the Lord adorned Israel by saving them and giving them glory (Is 60:9; 61:1-3).

149:6 The Hebrew word for double-edged consists of a variation on the word peh ("mouth"), an archaic form of the plural (piphiyyoth) meaning "multi-mouthed." Isaiah 41:15 has the same word, translated "many teeth." In Pr 5:4 "double-edged" is the plural "mouths" and in Jdg 3:16 it is literally "two mouths."

149:7-9 God will put the sword (v. 6) in Israel's hand to execute retaliation for wrongdoing (18:47; 58:11; 79:10; 94:1; cp. Est 9:5; Is 13:3; Rm 13:4). Just as God's people were captured and imprisoned, so the Lord will bind kings with chains and shackles (Is 45:14). Submission of world powers to God's people will bring honor to Israel.

150:1 On Hallelujah! see note at 146:1.

150:3-5 The sophistication of ancient sacred music is clear from the wide range of instruments used in temple worship. All three classifications—wind instruments, strings, and percussion—are represented.

150:6 It is only logical that everything that has been given the breath of life from the Creator ought to praise Him (149:2).

Word Studies 'ashrey Hebrew Pronunciation [ash RAY]

HCSB Translation happy, blessed Uses in Psalms 26
Uses in the OT 44
Focus Passage Psalm 1:1

'Ashrey, an interjection especially frequent in Psalms, means happy (Ps 1:1) and implies blessed twice (Ec 10:17; Dn 12:12). It is similar to baruk ("blessed") but probably more secular. 'Ashrey is never used of or by God. Though it announces a happy condition (2Ch 9:7), it often requires that people do things like waiting (Dn 12:12), obeying divine decrees (Ps 119:2), or showing kindness (Pr 14:21). 'Ashrey may have produced the verb 'ashar (10x), which would mean to "say 'ashrey" to someone. 'Ashar in intensive forms signifies consider or declare fortunate (Sg 6:9; Mal 3:12), and call blessed (Ps 72:17). It can be bless (Jb 29:11). The passive is be blessed (Ps 41:2); the passive participle indicates happy (Pr 3:18). Scholars disagree whether it is the same verb as the 'ashar meaning "proceed" (7x: Pr 4:14). The noun 'osher (Gn 30:13) and interjection 'esher (Pr 29:18) are translated as happy.

chalaq Hebrew Pronunciation [khah LAHK]
HCSB Translation smooth, flattering Uses in Psalms 3
Uses in the OT 12
Focus Passage Psalm 12:2-3

Chalaq refers to what is smooth, whether oil (Pr 5:3), skin (Gn 27:11), or stones (Is 57:6). "Mount Halak" (Jos 11:17) indicates "Smooth Mountain." Chalaq can imply slippery places (Ps 73:18) but usually suggests dangerous flattery (Dn 11:32) or flattering lips (Ps 12:3). Flattering things is complimentary once (Is 30:10), but in the context is false prophecy. Chalaq connotes deceit and ulterior motives. The verb chalaq (9x) means be smooth (Ps 55:21) or devious (Hs 10:2). Its derivation is probably different from that of chalaq meaning "divide." The causative describes flattening metal (Is 41:7) or flattering people (Ps 5:9). Chalaqlaqqoth (4x) means slippery (Ps 35:6) and slippery paths (Jr 23:12). It appears as intrigue and insincerely (Dn 11:21,34). Cheleq signifies seductive flattery (Pr 7:21). Chelqah denotes the smooth part of the neck (Gn 27:16) and a flattering tongue (Pr 6:24). Challuq portrays smooth stones (1Sm 17:40).

shevet Hebrew Pronunciation [SHAY vet]
HCSB Translation scepter, rod, tribe Uses in Judges 16
Uses in the OT 190
Focus Passage Psalm 23:4

Shevet means rod. It indicates shepherds' rods (Ezk 20:37), used for counting (Lv 27:32) or protection (Ps 23:4). Shevet is also associated with applying discipline (Pr 13:24). Used symbolically of fury's power (Pr 22:8), shevet connotes discipline (Is 11:4) or punishment (Jb 37:13). Assyria was the rod of God's anger against Israel (Is 10:5). Shevet can be a military weapon, a club (2Sm 23:21) or spear (2Sm 18:14). Shevet as a symbol of power meant scepter (Gn 49:10) or staff (Jdg 5:14) of rule. It could represent one kingdom's destructive power over another (Is 14:29). A scepter of justice implies righteous rule (Ps 45:6). Shevet apparently became identified with those ruled in the most common denotation, tribe. The phrase "tribes of Israel" occurs 48x (Gn 49:28). Israel as a whole can be a shevet (Jr 10:16).

kavod Hebrew Pronunciation [kah VOHD]

Focus Passage Psalm 24:7-10

Kavod relates to verbal kaved and adjectival kaved, which indicate heaviness. Kavod describes God's glory (Ex 16:7). The King of glory (Ps 24:10) is Israel's Glory (Jr 2:11), manifesting glory (Ex 24:17). The ark of the covenant represents Israel's glory (1Sm 4:22). People give glory to God (Jr 13:16). Earthly kings (Is 8:7) and thrones (Jr 17:12) have kavod. It is associated with natural (Is 60:13) or manufactured (Ex 28:2) beauty. Especially in Proverbs, kavod signifies honor (Pr 3:35). An antonym is disgrace (Hab 2:16). Kavod means wealth (Gn 31:1), riches (Is 61:6), abundance (Nah 2:9), splendor (Is 14:18), or reward (Nm 24:11). It implies burden (Is 22:24). A nation's kavod is its nobility (Mc 1:15) or dignitaries (Is 5:13). Kavod indicates the self, translated as I (Gn 49:6), soul (Ps 57:8), spirit (Ps 16:9), strength (Jb 29:20), or whole being (Ps 108:1). The phrase po'aley ("doers of") 'awen (22x) is normally translated evildoers (Ps 36:12). 'Awen names a valley Aven (Am 1:5) and once seems a shortened form of Beth-aven (Hs 10:8; cp. v. 5). 'Awen is part of the place name Beth-aven (7x). Beth-aven might derogatorily substitute for Bethel (Hs 4:15; cp. Am 5:5).

selah Hebrew Pronunciation [see LAH]
HCSB Translation Selah Uses in Psalms 71
Uses in the OT 74
Focus Passage Psalm 46:3,7,11

Selah, an expression found in Psalms and Hab 3:3,9,13, remains obscure. Always occurring with "choir director" or mizmor ("psalm"), selah may specify musical or recitation style. It could be a later addition, for the Septuagint translation diapsalma , possibly a new word representing selah and indicating musical pause, appears 81 times. Selah might derive from salal ("lift up, exalt") and call worshipers to lift their eyes to heaven and repeat the psalm, or raise their voices and repeat a refrain. Alternatively, musicians might lift their instruments to perform a musical interlude. An ancient theory suggests that selah , read and pronounced netsah ("forever"), called worshipers to respond with a praise refrain. If from the root sl ("bow, pray"), selah could ask worshipers to bow in prayer. Selah could indicate the sound of the strings if related to a Persian word for song. Selah could abbreviate a phrase signaling a change in voice.

qawah Hebrew Pronunciation [kah WAH]

Qawah describes waiting for pay (Jb 7:2), expecting good grapes (Is 5:2), or hoping for peace (Jr 8:15). Showers wait for nobody (Mc 5:7). Qawah stands parallel with "seeking" (Lm 3:25) and "looking for" (Jb 6:19); it connotes looking for (Is 5:7). God is often the object (22x). Waiting for (Is 26:8) or putting hope in (Ps 69:6) Him involves trusting (Is 40:31). God is good to those who wait for Him (Lm 3:25); they will inherit the land, not evildoers (Ps 37:9). Qawah need not imply godly hoping ; the wicked hope to destroy the righteous (Ps 119:95). One motif concerns hoping for something that does not come (Jr 8:15). Qawah has a homonym meaning "gather" (Gn 1:9) that occurs twice. The noun tiqwah (32x) indicates hope except twice when translated expectation because of another word for "hope" (Pr 10:28; 11:7). Miqweh (5x; Jr 17:13) signifies hope .

bachan Hebrew Pronunciation [bah KHAN]
HCSB Translation test Uses in Psalms 9

Focus Passage Psalm 66:10

Bachan means test (Jr 9:7) or put to the test (Jb 7:18). One assays (Jr 6:27), examines (Ps 11:4), or tries (Ps 95:9). The intensive passive suggests something is a trial (Ezk 21:13). Bachan indicates spiritual testing twice with nasah ("test"; Ps 95:9) and five times with tsaraph ("refine, try"; Ps 17:3). Tsaraph usually retains its primary association with refining metals, nasah never describes testing metals, and bachan may be in between. Bachan has about seven clear associations with metal refining, and related bachon signifies an assayer of metals (Jr 6:27). Bachan connotes experiential testing (Jb 12:11), sometimes aimed at producing desired results (Jb 23:10). God is usually the subject of bachan, with the object often human hearts (1Ch 29:17) or minds (Jr 11:20). Several ancient translations render bochan as tested (Is 28:16), but some Dead Sea Scrolls saw a homonym meaning "fortress," indicating a large stone used in fortresses.

yamiyn Hebrew Pronunciation [yah MEEN]
HCSB Translation right hand, right, south Uses in Psalms 42
Uses in the OT 141
Focus Passage Psalm 89:12-13,25,42

Yamiyn signifies right hand (Is 41:10) and right as opposed to left (Gn 13:9). People oriented themselves by looking toward the sunrise, so yamiyn signifies south, the right side when facing eastward (Ezk 16:46). "To the right or to the left" connotes elsewhere (Gn 24:49). It suggests deviation from paths of moral integrity (Pr 4:27) or covenant obedience (Jos 1:7). The ancients viewed the right hand as the hand of action and power, whether for God or the wicked (Ps 21:8; 26:10). One phrase for left-handed means "restricted in one's right hand" (Jdg 3:15). The place of honor was at someone's right hand (Ps 45:9; 110:1). One giving assistance is pictured at the right hand of the one helped (Ps 109:31; 110:5). Courtroom accusers stood at the defendant's right hand (Zch 3:1). Distinguishing right and left shows maturity (Jnh 4:11). Right symbolizes uprightness in contrast with the left (Ec 10:2).

PROVERBS

The Purpose of Proverbs

1 The proverbs of Solomon [a] son of David, king of Israel:
2 For learning what wisdom and discipline are;
for understanding insightful sayings;
3 for receiving wise instruction in righteousness, justice, and integrity; [b] 4 for teaching shrewdness to the inexperienced, [A, c] knowledge and discretion [d] to a young man — 5 a wise man will listen and increase his learning, [e] and a discerning man will obtain guidance — 6 for understanding a proverb or a parable, [B]
the words of the wise, and their riddles. [f]

7 The •fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge; [g]
fools despise wisdom and discipline. [h]

Avoid the Path of the Violent

8 Listen, my son, to your father's instruction, and don't reject your mother's teaching, [i] 9 for they will be a garland [j] of grace on your head and a gold chain around your neck. [k] 10 My son, if sinners entice you, [l]
don't be persuaded. [m] 11 If they say — "Come with us!
Let's set an ambush [n] and kill someone. [C]
Let's attack some innocent person [o] just for fun! [D]
12 Let's swallow them alive, [p] like •Sheol , still healthy as they go down to the •Pit . [q] 13 We'll find all kinds of valuable property and fill our houses with plunder. [r] 14 Throw in your lot with us, and we'll all share our money" [E] — 15 my son, don't travel that road with them [s] or set foot on their path, [t] 16 because their feet run toward trouble and they hurry to commit murder. [F, u]

17 It is foolish to spread a net
where any bird can see it, 18 but they set an ambush to kill themselves; G
they attack their own lives.
19 Such are the paths of all who make profit dishonestly; v it takes the lives of those who receive it. H

Wisdom's Plea

20 Wisdom calls out in the street;
she raises her voice in the public squares. w 21 She cries out above I the commotion;
she speaks at the entrance of the city •gates :
22 "How long, foolish ones, will you love ignorance?
How long will you mockers x enjoy mocking and you fools hate knowledge? y 23 If you respond to my warning, J, z then I will pour out my spirit on you a and teach you my words.
24 Since I called out and you refused, b extended my hand and no one paid attention, c 25 since you neglected all my counsel d and did not accept my correction,
26 I, in turn, will laugh at your calamity. e
I will mock when terror strikes you, 27 when terror strikes you like a storm and your calamity comes like a whirlwind, when trouble and stress overcome you.
28 Then they will call me, but I won't answer;
they will search for me, but won't find me. f 29 Because they hated knowledge, didn't choose to fear the LORD, g 30 were not interested in my counsel, and rejected all my correction, h 31 they will eat the fruit of their way i and be glutted with their own schemes. j 32 For the turning away of the inexperienced will kill them, k and the complacency of fools will destroy them.

33 But whoever listens to me will live securely and be free from the fear of danger.” l

Wisdom's Worth

2 My son, if you accept my words [a]
and store up my commands within you, 2 listening closely [A] to wisdom and directing your heart to understanding; 3 furthermore, if you call out to insight and lift your voice to understanding, 4 if you seek it like silver and search for it like hidden treasure, [b] 5 then you will understand the •fear of the LORD and discover the knowledge of God.
6 For the LORD gives wisdom;
from His mouth come knowledge and understanding. [c]
7 He stores up success [B] for the upright;
He is a shield for those who live with integrity [d]
8 so that He may guard the paths of justice and protect the way of His loyal followers. [e] 9 Then you will understand righteousness, justice, and integrity — every good path.
10 For wisdom will enter your mind,
and knowledge will delight your heart.
11 Discretion will watch over you,
and understanding will guard you, [f] 12 rescuing you from the way of evil — from the one who says perverse things, 13 from those who abandon the right paths to walk in ways of darkness, [g] 14 from those who enjoy doing evil [h]
and celebrate perversion, 15 whose paths are crooked, [i]
and whose ways are devious. [j] 16 It will rescue you from a forbidden woman, [k]
from a stranger [C] with her flattering talk, [l] 17 who abandons the companion of her youth [m]
and forgets the covenant of her God; 18 for her house sinks down to death and her ways to the land of the departed spirits. [n]

19 None return who go to her;
none reach the paths of life. [o] 20 So follow the way of good people, [p]
and keep to the paths of the righteous.
21 For the upright will inhabit the land,
and those of integrity will remain in it; [q] 22 but the wicked will be cut off from the land, [r] and the treacherous uprooted from it. [s]

Trust the LORD

3 My son, don’t forget my teaching, but let your heart keep my commands; [a] 2 for they will bring you many days, a full life, [A, b] and well-being. [c] 3 Never let loyalty and faithfulness leave you.
Tie them around your neck;
write them on the tablet of your heart. [d] 4 Then you will find favor and high regard in the sight of God and man. [e]

5 Trust in the LORD with all your heart, [f]
and do not rely on your own understanding; [g] 6 think about Him in all your ways, and He will guide you on the right paths. [B, h]
7 Don’t consider yourself to be wise; [i] •fear the LORD and turn away from evil. [j]
8 This will be healing for your body [C, k]
and strengthening for your bones. [l] 9 Honor the LORD with your possessions and with the first produce of your entire harvest; [m] 10 then your barns will be completely filled, and your vats will overflow with new wine. [n] 11 Do not despise the LORD’s instruction, my son, and do not loathe His discipline; [o] 12 for the LORD disciplines the one He loves, just as a father, the son he delights in. [p]

Wisdom Brings Happiness

13 Happy is a man who finds wisdom [q]
and who acquires understanding, 14 for she is more profitable than silver,
and her revenue is better than gold. [r] 15 She is more precious than jewels; [s]
nothing you desire compares with her. [t] 16 Long life [D] is in her right hand;
in her left, riches and honor. [u] 17 Her ways are pleasant, [v]
and all her paths, peaceful.
18 She is a tree of life [w] to those who embrace her,
and those who hold on to her are happy.

19 The LORD founded the earth by wisdom [x]
and established the heavens by understanding.
20 By His knowledge the watery depths broke open, [y]
and the clouds dripped with dew. [z]

21 Maintain your competence and discretion.
My son, don't lose sight of them. [a] 22 They will be life for you [E, b] , [c] and adornment [F] for your neck.
23 Then you will go safely on your way;
your foot will not stumble. [d]
24 When you lie [e] down, you will not be afraid; [f]
you will lie down, and your sleep will be pleasant.
25 Don't fear sudden danger or the ruin of the wicked when it comes, [g] 26 for the LORD will be your confidence [G]
and will keep your foot from a snare. [h]

Treat Others Fairly

27 When it is in your power, [H]
don't withhold good [i] from the one it belongs to.
28 Don't say to your neighbor, "Go away! Come back later.
I'll give it tomorrow" — when it is there with you. [j]
29 Don't plan any harm against your neighbor, [k] for he trusts you and lives near you.
30 Don't accuse anyone without cause, [l]
when he has done you no harm.
31 Don't envy a violent man [m]
or choose any of his ways;
32 for the devious are detestable to the LORD,
but He is a friend [I] to the upright. [n] 33 The LORD's curse is on the household of the wicked, [o]
but He blesses the home of the righteous; 34 He mocks those who mock,
but gives grace to the humble. [p] 35 The wise will inherit honor, but He holds up fools to dishonor. [J]

A Father's Example

4 Listen, my sons, to a father’s discipline, [a]
and pay attention so that you may gain understanding, 2 for I am giving you good instruction. [b]
Don’t abandon my teaching.
3 When I was a son with my father, tender and precious to my mother,
4 he taught me and said:
“Your heart must hold on to my words.
Keep my commands and live. [c]
5 Get wisdom, get understanding; [d]
don’t forget or turn away from the words of my mouth.
6 Don’t abandon wisdom, and she will watch over you;
love her, [e] and she will guard you.
7 Wisdom is supreme — so get wisdom.
And whatever else you get, get understanding. [f]
8 Cherish her, and she will exalt you;
if you embrace her, she will honor you. [g] 9 She will place a garland of grace on your head;
she will give you a crown of beauty.” [h]

Two Ways of Life

10 Listen, my son. Accept my words, [i] and you will live many years. [j]
11 I am teaching you the way of wisdom;
I am guiding you on straight paths. [k]
12 When you walk, your steps will not be hindered; [l]
when you run, you will not stumble. [m]
13 Hold on to instruction; don’t let go. [n]
Guard it, for it is your life.
14 Don’t set foot on the path of the wicked; [o]
don’t proceed in the way of evil ones.
15 Avoid it; don’t travel on it.
Turn away from it, and pass it by.
16 For they can’t sleep
unless they have done what is evil;
they are robbed of sleep
unless they make someone stumble. [p] 17 They eat the bread of wickedness and drink the wine of violence.
18 The path of the righteous is like the light of dawn, [q] shining brighter and brighter until midday.
19 But the way of the wicked is like the darkest gloom; [r]
they don’t know what makes them stumble. [s]

The Straight Path

20 My son, pay attention to my words;
listen closely to my sayings. [t] 21 Don’t lose sight of them; [u]
keep them within your heart.
22 For they are life to those who find them,
and health to one’s whole body.
23 Guard your heart above all else, [A]
for it is the source of life. [v] 24 Don’t let your mouth speak dishonestly, [w]
and don’t let your lips talk deviously.
25 Let your eyes look forward;
fix your gaze [B] straight ahead. [x] 26 Carefully consider the path [C] for your feet, [y]
and all your ways will be established.
27 Don’t turn to the right or to the left; [z]
keep your feet away from evil.

Avoid Seduction

5 My son, pay attention to my wisdom;
listen closely [A] to my understanding [a] 2 so that you may maintain discretion and your lips safeguard knowledge. [b] 3 Though the lips of the forbidden woman drip honey and her words are [B] smoother than oil, 4 in the end she's as bitter as •wormwood [c]
and as sharp as a double-edged sword. [d] 5 Her feet go down to death;
her steps head straight for •Sheol . [e] 6 She doesn't consider the path of life;
she doesn't know that her ways are unstable.

7 So now, my sons, listen to me,
and don't turn away from the words of my mouth. [f]
8 Keep your way far from her.
Don't go near the door of her house. [g]
9 Otherwise, you will give up your vitality to others and your years to someone cruel;
10 strangers will drain your resources,
and your earnings will end up in a foreigner's house.
11 At the end of your life, you will lament
when your physical body has been consumed, 12 and you will say, "How I hated discipline, and how my heart despised correction. [h] 13 I didn't obey my teachers or listen closely [C] to my mentors.
14 I am on the verge of complete ruin before the entire community."

Enjoy Marriage

15 Drink water from your own cistern, water flowing from your own well. [i] 16 Should your springs flow in the streets, streams of water in the public squares? [j] 17 They should be for you alone and not for you to share with strangers.
18 Let your fountain be blessed,
and take pleasure in the wife of your youth. [k] 19 A loving doe, a graceful fawn — let her breasts always satisfy you; [l]
be lost in her love forever.
20 Why, my son, would you be infatuated with a forbidden woman or embrace the breast of a stranger? [m] 21 For a man's ways are before the LORD's eyes, [n]
and He considers all his paths. [o] 22 A wicked man's iniquities entrap him; [p]
he is entangled in the ropes of his own sin. [q] 23 He will die because there is no discipline, [r] and be lost because of his great stupidity.

Financial Entanglements

6 My son, if you have put up security for your neighbor [A] or entered into an agreement with [B] a stranger, [a, b] 2 you have been trapped by the words of your lips [C] — ensnared by the words of your mouth.
3 Do this, then, my son, and free yourself,
for you have put yourself in your neighbor's power:
Go, humble yourself, and plead with your neighbor.
4 Don't give sleep to your eyes or slumber to your eyelids. [c] 5 Escape like a gazelle from a hunter, [D] like a bird from a fowler's trap. [E, d]

Laziness

6 Go to the ant, [e] you slacker! [f]
Observe its ways and become wise.
7 Without leader, administrator, or ruler,
8 it prepares its provisions in summer;
it gathers its food during harvest. [g]
9 How long will you stay in bed, you slacker?
When will you get up from your sleep?
10 A little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest, [h] 11 and your poverty will come like a robber,
your need, like a bandit. [i]

The Malicious Man

12 A worthless person, [j] a wicked man goes around speaking dishonestly, [k] 13 winking [l] his eyes, signaling with his feet, and gesturing with his fingers.
14 He always plots evil [m] with perversity in his heart —
he stirs up trouble. [n]
15 Therefore calamity will strike him suddenly;
he will be shattered instantly — beyond recovery. [o]

What the LORD Hates

16 The LORD hates six things;
in fact, seven are detestable to Him:
17 arrogant eyes, [p] a lying tongue, [q]
hands that shed innocent blood, [r] 18 a heart that plots wicked schemes, [s] feet eager to run to evil, [t] 19 a lying witness who gives false testimony, [u] and one who stirs up trouble among brothers. [v]

Warning against Adultery

20 My son, keep your father’s command, and don’t reject your mother’s teaching. [w] 21 Always bind them to your heart;
tie them around your neck. [x]
22 When you walk here and there, they will guide you;
when you lie down, they will watch over you;
when you wake up, they will talk to you.
23 For a command is a lamp, teaching is a light, [y]
and corrective discipline is the way to life. [z] 24 They will protect you from an evil woman, [a] from the flattering [F] tongue of a stranger. [b] 25 Don’t lust in your heart for her beauty [c] or let her captivate you with her eyelashes. [d] 26 For a prostitute’s fee is only a loaf of bread, [G]
but an adulteress [H] goes after a precious life. [e] 27 Can a man embrace fire [I] and his clothes not be burned?
28 Can a man walk on burning coals without scorching his feet?
29 So it is with the one who sleeps with another man’s wife;
no one who touches her will go unpunished. [f] 30 People don’t despise the thief if he steals to satisfy himself when he is hungry. [g] 31 Still, if caught, he must pay seven times as much; [h]
he must give up all the wealth in his house.
32 The one who commits adultery [J] lacks sense;
whoever does so destroys himself. [i] 33 He will get a beating [K] and dishonor, and his disgrace will never be removed.
34 For jealousy enrages a husband, [j]
and he will show no mercy when he takes revenge.
35 He will not be appeased by anything or be persuaded by lavish gifts.

7 My son, obey my words, and treasure my commands. [a] 2 Keep my commands and live; [b] protect my teachings
as the pupil of your eye. [c] 3 Tie them to your fingers;
write them on the tablet of your heart. [d]
4 Say to wisdom, “You are my sister,” [e]
and call understanding your relative.
5 She will keep you from a forbidden woman,
a stranger with her flattering talk. [f]

A Story of Seduction

6 At the window of my house
I looked through my lattice. g
7 I saw among the inexperienced, A
I noticed among the youths,
a young man lacking sense.
8 Crossing the street near her corner,
he strolled down the road to her house 9 at twilight, in the evening, in the dark of the night. h 10 A woman came to meet him dressed like a prostitute, i having a hidden agenda. B 11 She is loud and defiant; j her feet do not stay at home. k 12 Now in the street, now in the squares, l
she lurks at every corner. m 13 She grabs him and kisses him;
she brazenly says C to him, 14 "I've made •fellowship offerings; n
today I've fulfilled my vows. o 15 So I came out to meet you,
to search for you, and I've found you.
16 I've spread coverings on my bed p — richly colored linen from Egypt. q 17 I've perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. r
18 Come, let's drink deeply of lovemaking until morning. s
Let's feast on each other's love!
19 My husband isn't home;
he went on a long journey.
20 He took a bag of money with him and will come home at the time of the full moon."
21 She seduces him with her persistent pleading;
she lures with her flattering D talk.

22 He follows her impulsively like an ox going to the slaughter, like a deer bounding toward a trap [t]
23 until an arrow pierces its [E] liver, [u] like a bird darting into a snare [v] — he doesn’t know it will cost him his life.

24 Now, my sons, listen to me,
and pay attention to the words of my mouth.
25 Don’t let your heart turn aside to her ways;
don’t stray onto her paths. [w] 26 For she has brought many down to death;
her victims are countless. [F] 27 Her house is the road to •Sheol , descending to the chambers of death. [x]

Wisdom's Appeal

8 Doesn’t Wisdom [a] call out?
Doesn’t Understanding make her voice heard?
2 At the heights overlooking the road,
at the crossroads, she takes her stand.
3 Beside the gates [b] at the entry to [A] the city,
at the main entrance, she cries out:
4 “People, I call out to you;
my cry is to mankind.
5 Learn to be shrewd, you who are inexperienced;
develop common sense, you who are foolish.
6 Listen, for I speak of noble things,
and what my lips say is right.
7 For my mouth tells the truth, [c]
and wickedness is detestable to my lips.
8 All the words of my mouth are righteous;
none of them are deceptive or perverse. [d] 9 All of them are clear to the perceptive, [e]
and right to the discover knowledge.
10 Accept my instruction instead of silver,
and knowledge rather than pure gold. [f]
11 For wisdom is better than jewels, [g]
and nothing desirable can compare with it. [h] 12 I, Wisdom, share a home with shrewdness and have knowledge and discretion. [i] 13 To •fear the LORD is to hate evil. [j]
I hate arrogant pride, evil conduct, and perverse speech.
14 I possess good advice and competence; [B]
I have understanding and strength. [k]
15 It is by me that kings reign [l] and rulers enact just law;
16 by me, princes lead,
as do nobles and all righteous judges. [m] 17 I love those who love me, [n]
and those who search for me find me. [o] 18 With me are riches and honor, [p]

lasting wealth and righteousness. [q] 19 My fruit is better than solid gold, and my harvest than pure silver. [r] 20 I walk in the way of righteousness, along the paths of justice, 21 giving wealth as an inheritance to those who love me,
and filling their treasuries.

22 The LORD made [C] me at the beginning of His creation, [D]
before His works of long ago. [s] 23 I was formed before ancient times, from the beginning, before the earth began. [t] 24 I was born
when there were no watery depths [u]
and no springs filled with water.
25 I was delivered
before the mountains and hills were established, [v] 26 before He made the land, the fields, or the first soil on earth.
27 I was there when He established the heavens, [w] when He laid out the horizon on the surface of the ocean, [x] 28 when He placed the skies above,
when the fountains of the ocean gushed out, 29 when He set a limit for the sea
so that the waters would not violate His command, [y]
when He laid out the foundations of the earth. [z]
30 I was a skilled craftsman [E] beside Him. [a]
I was His [b] delight every day, always rejoicing before Him.
31 I was rejoicing in His inhabited world, [c] delighting in the •human race. [d]

32 And now, my sons, listen to me;
those who keep my ways are happy. [e] 33 Listen to instruction and be wise; [f]
don’t ignore it.

34 Anyone who listens to me is happy, [g] watching at my doors every day, waiting by the posts of my doorway.
35 For the one who finds me finds life [h] and obtains favor from the LORD, [i] 36 but the one who misses me [F] harms himself; [j]
all who hate me love death.” [k]

Wisdom versus Foolishness

9 Wisdom has built her house; [a] she has carved out her seven pillars.
2 She has prepared her meat; [b] she has mixed her wine; [c]
she has also set her table. [d]
3 She has sent out her female servants; [e]
she calls out from the highest points of the city: [f]
4 “Whoever is inexperienced, enter here! ”
To the one who lacks sense, [g] she says,
5 “Come, eat my bread, [h]
and drink the wine I have mixed.
6 Leave inexperience behind, and you will live;
pursue the way of understanding.
7 The one who corrects a mocker will bring dishonor on himself;
the one who rebukes a wicked man will get hurt. [A] 8 Don’t rebuke a mocker, or he will hate you; [i] rebuke a wise man, and he will love you. [j] 9 Instruct a wise man, and he will be wiser still;
teach a righteous man, and he will learn more. [k]

10 “The •fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom, [l] and the knowledge of the Holy One [m] is understanding.
11 For by Wisdom your days will be many,
and years will be added to your life.
12 If you are wise, you are wise for your own benefit; [n]
if you mock, you alone will bear the consequences.”
13 The woman Folly is rowdy; [o]
she is gullible and knows nothing. [p] 14 She sits by the doorway of her house,
on a seat at the highest point of the city, 15 calling to those who pass by,
who go straight ahead on their paths: [q]
16 “Whoever is inexperienced, enter here! ”
To the one who lacks sense, she says, 17 “Stolen water is sweet,
and bread eaten secretly is tasty! ” [r]

18 But he doesn’t know that the departed spirits are there, [s] that her guests are in the depths of •Sheol . [t]

A Collection of Solomon's Proverbs

10 Solomon’s proverbs: [a]

A wise son brings joy to his father,
but a foolish son, heartache to his mother. [b]

2 Ill-gotten gains do not profit anyone, but righteousness rescues from death. [c]

3 The LORD will not let the righteous go hungry, [d]
but He denies the wicked what they crave. [e]

4 Idle hands make one poor,
but diligent hands bring riches. [f]

5 The son who gathers during summer is prudent;
the son who sleeps during harvest is disgraceful. [g]

6 Blessings are on the head of the righteous,
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence. [h]

7 The remembrance of the righteous is a blessing, but the name of the wicked will rot. [i]

8 A wise heart accepts commands, [j]
but foolish lips will be destroyed.

9 The one who lives with integrity lives securely, [k]
but whoever perverts his ways will be found out. [l]

10 A sly wink of the eye [m] causes grief, and foolish lips will be destroyed.

11 The mouth of the righteous is a fountain of life, [n]
but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence. [o]

12 Hatred stirs up conflicts,
but love covers all offenses. [p]

13 Wisdom is found on the lips of the discerning,
but a rod is for the back of the one who lacks sense. [q]

14 The wise store up knowledge, but the mouth of the fool hastens destruction. [r]

15 A rich man’s wealth is his fortified city; [s]

the poverty of the poor is their destruction.

16 The labor of the righteous leads to life;
the activity of the wicked leads to sin. [t]

17 The one who follows instruction is on the path to life, but the one who rejects correction goes astray. [u]

18 The one who conceals hatred has lying lips, and whoever spreads slander is a fool. [v]

19 When there are many words, sin is unavoidable, but the one who controls his lips is wise. [w]

20 The tongue of the righteous is pure silver;
the heart of the wicked is of little value. [x]

21 The lips of the righteous feed many,
but fools die for lack of sense. [y]

22 The LORD's blessing enriches, [z] and struggle adds nothing to it. [A, a]

23 As shameful conduct is pleasure for a fool, [b]
so wisdom is for a man of understanding.

24 What the wicked dreads will come to him, [c]
but what the righteous desire will be given to them. [d]

25 When the whirlwind passes, the wicked are no more, [e]
but the righteous are secure forever. [f]

26 Like vinegar to the teeth and smoke to the eyes, [g]
so the slacker is to the one who sends him on an errand.

27 The •fear of the LORD prolongs life, [B, h]
but the years of the wicked are cut short. [i]

28 The hope of the righteous is joy, [j]
but the expectation of the wicked comes to nothing. [k]

29 The way of the LORD is a stronghold for the honorable,

I am cleansed from my sin"? [k]

10 Differing weights and varying measures [D] — both are detestable to the LORD. [l]

11 Even a young man is known by his actions —
if his behavior is pure and upright. [m]

12 The hearing ear and the seeing eye —
the LORD made them both. [n]

13 Don't love sleep, or you will become poor;
open your eyes, and you'll have enough to eat. [o]

14 "It's worthless, it's worthless! " the buyer says, but after he is on his way, he gloats.

15 There is gold and a multitude of jewels,
but knowledgeable lips are a rare treasure. [p]

16 Take his garment, [q]
for he has put up security for a stranger;
get collateral if it is for foreigners. [r]

17 Food gained by fraud is sweet to a man, [s]
but afterward his mouth is full of gravel.

18 Finalize plans with counsel, [t]
and wage war with sound guidance. [u]

19 The one who reveals secrets is a constant gossip; [v]
avoid someone with a big mouth. [w]

20 Whoever curses his father or mother [x] — his lamp will go out in deep darkness. [y]

21 An inheritance gained prematurely will not be blessed ultimately. [z]

22 Don't say, "I will avenge this evil! " [a] Wait on the LORD, [b] and He will rescue you. [c]

23 Differing weights [E] are detestable to the LORD, [d]
and dishonest scales [e] are unfair.

24 A man's steps are determined by the LORD, [f]
so how can anyone understand his own way?

25 It is a trap for anyone to dedicate something rashly and later to reconsider his vows. [g]

26 A wise king separates out the wicked [h] and drives the threshing wheel [i] over them.

27 The LORD's lamp sheds light on a person's life, [F]
searching the innermost parts. [G, j]

28 Loyalty and faithfulness deliver a king;
through loyalty he maintains his throne.

29 The glory of young men is their strength, and the splendor of old men is gray hair. [k]

30 Lashes and wounds purge away evil, [l] and beatings cleanse the innermost parts. [H]

21 A king’s heart is like streams of water in the LORD’s hand:
He directs it wherever He chooses. [a]

2 All a man’s ways seem right to him,
but the LORD evaluates the motives. [A, b]

3 Doing what is righteous and just is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice. [c]

4 The lamp [d] that guides the wicked — haughty eyes and an arrogant heart [e] — is sin.

5 The plans of the diligent certainly lead to profit,
but anyone who is reckless certainly becomes poor. [f]

6 Making a fortune through a lying tongue is a vanishing mist, [B] a pursuit of death. [g, C, h]

7 The violence of the wicked sweeps them away because they refuse to act justly.

8 A •guilty man’s conduct is crooked, [i]
but the behavior of the innocent is upright. [j]

9 Better to live on the corner of a roof
than to share a house with a nagging wife. [k]

10 A wicked person desires evil;
he has no consideration [D] for his neighbor. [l]

11 When a mocker is punished,
the inexperienced become wiser;
when one teaches a wise man,
he acquires knowledge. [m]

12 The Righteous One considers the house of the wicked;
He brings the wicked to ruin.

13 The one who shuts his ears to the cry of the poor will himself also call out and not be answered. [n]

14 A secret gift soothes anger, and a covert bribe, [E] fierce rage. [o]

15 Justice executed is a joy to the righteous
but a terror to those who practice iniquity. [p]

16 The man who strays from the way of wisdom will come to rest
in the assembly of the departed spirits. [q]

17 The one who loves pleasure will become a poor man;
whoever loves wine and oil will not get rich. [r]

18 The wicked are a ransom for the righteous, and the treacherous, for [F] the upright. [s]

19 Better to live in a wilderness than with a nagging and hot-tempered wife. [t]

20 Precious treasure and oil are in the dwelling of a wise person, but a foolish man consumes them. [G, u]

21 The one who pursues righteousness and faithful love will find life, righteousness, and honor. [v]

22 A wise person went up against a city of warriors and brought down its secure fortress. [w]

23 The one who guards his mouth and tongue keeps himself out of trouble. [x]

24 The proud and arrogant person, named “Mocker,” acts with excessive pride. [y]

25 A slacker’s craving will kill him because his hands refuse to work. [z] 26 He is filled with craving [H] all day long,
but the righteous give and don’t hold back. [a]

27 The sacrifice of a wicked person is detestable — how much more so when he brings it with ulterior motives! [b]

28 A lying witness will perish, [c]
but the one who listens will speak successfully.

29 A wicked man puts on a bold face, [d]

but the upright man considers his way.

30 No wisdom, no understanding, and no counsel will prevail against the LORD. [e]

31 A horse is prepared for the day of battle, [f]
but victory comes from the LORD. [g]

22 A good name is to be chosen over great wealth;
favor is better than silver and gold. [a]

2 The rich and the poor have this in common: [A]
the LORD made them both. [B, b]

3 A sensible person sees danger and takes cover,
but the inexperienced keep going and are punished. [c]

4 The result of humility is •fear of the LORD, along with wealth, honor, and life. [d]

5 There are thorns and snares on the path of the crooked; [e]
the one who guards himself stays far from them.

6 Teach a youth about the way he should go; [f]
even when he is old he will not depart from it.

7 The rich rule over the poor, [g]
and the borrower is a slave to the lender. [h]

8 The one who sows injustice will reap disaster, [i] and the rod of his fury will be destroyed.

9 A generous person [C] will be blessed, [j]
for he shares his food with the poor. [k]

10 Drive out a mocker, [l] and conflict goes too;
then quarreling and dishonor will cease. [m]

11 The one who loves a pure heart and gracious lips — the king is his friend. [n]

12 The LORD's eyes keep watch over knowledge, but He overthrows the words of the treacherous.

13 The slacker says, "There's a lion outside!
I'll be killed in the public square! " [o]

14 The mouth of the forbidden woman is a deep pit;
a man cursed by the LORD will fall into it. [p]

15 Foolishness is tangled up in the heart of a youth;
the rod of discipline will drive it away from him. [q]

16 Oppressing the poor to enrich oneself, and giving to the rich — both lead only to poverty. [r]

Words of the Wise

17 Listen closely, [D] pay attention to the words of the wise, [s] and apply your mind to my knowledge.
18 For it is pleasing if you keep them within you and if [E] they are constantly on your lips.
19 I have instructed you today — even you — so that your confidence may be in the LORD.
20 Haven't I written for you thirty sayings [t]
about counsel and knowledge, 21 in order to teach you true and reliable words, so that you may give a dependable report [F, u]
to those who sent you? [v]

22 Don't rob a poor man because he is poor, and don't crush the oppressed [w] at the •gate , [x]
23 for the LORD will take up their case [y]
and will plunder those who plunder them.

24 Don't make friends with an angry man, [G]
and don't be a companion of a hot-tempered man, [z] 25 or you will learn his ways [a] and entangle yourself in a snare.

26 Don't be one of those who enter agreements, [H] who put up security for loans. [b] 27 If you have no money to pay,
even your bed will be taken from under you. [c]

28 Don't move an ancient boundary marker, that your fathers set up. [d]

29 Do you see a man skilled in his work?
He will stand in the presence of kings.
He will not stand in the presence of unknown men. [e]

23 When you sit down to dine with a ruler, consider carefully what [A] is before you,
2 and put a knife to your throat
if you have a big [B] appetite;
3 don't desire his choice food, [a]
for that food is deceptive.

4 Don't wear yourself out to get rich; [b]
stop giving your attention to it.
5 As soon as your eyes fly to it, it disappears, [c]
for it makes wings for itself and flies like an eagle to the sky.

6 Don't eat a stingy person's bread, [C, d]
and don't desire his choice food, [e]
7 for it's like someone calculating inwardly. [f, g]
"Eat and drink," he says to you,
but his heart is not with you. [h]
8 You will vomit the little you've eaten and waste your pleasant words.

9 Don't speak to [D] a fool,
for he will despise the insight of your words. [i]

10 Don't move an ancient boundary marker, [j]
and don't encroach on the fields of the fatherless, 11 for their Redeemer is strong, [k]
and He will take up their case against you. [l]

12 Apply yourself to discipline and listen to words of knowledge.

13 Don't withhold discipline from a youth;
if you beat him with a rod, he will not die. [m] 14 Strike him with a rod, and you will rescue his life from •Sheol . [n]

15 My son, if your heart is wise,
my heart will indeed rejoice. [o]
16 My innermost being will cheer

when your lips say what is right. [p]

17 Don't let your heart envy sinners; [q]
instead, always •fear the LORD. [r] 18 For then you will have a future,
and your hope will never fade. [s]

19 Listen, my son, and be wise;
keep your mind on the right course.
20 Don't associate with those who drink too much wine [t] or with those who gorge themselves on meat. [u] 21 For the drunkard and the glutton will become poor, and grogginess will clothe them in rags. [v]

22 Listen to your father who gave you life, and don't despise your mother when [E] she is old. [w] 23 Buy — and do not sell — truth, wisdom, instruction, and understanding. [x] 24 The father of a righteous son will rejoice greatly, and one who fathers a wise son will delight in him. [y] 25 Let your father and mother have joy, [z]
and let her who gave birth to you rejoice.

26 My son, give me your heart,
and let your eyes observe my ways.
27 For a prostitute is a deep pit, [a]
and a stranger is a narrow well;
28 indeed, she sets an ambush like a robber [b] and increases those among men who are unfaithful.

29 Who has woe? Who has sorrow?
Who has conflicts? Who has complaints?
Who has wounds for no reason? [c]
Who has red eyes?
30 Those who linger over wine,
those who go looking for mixed wine. [d] 31 Don't gaze at wine because it is red, [e]
when it gleams in the cup and goes down smoothly. [f]

32 In the end it bites like a snake and stings like a viper.
33 Your eyes will see strange things,
and you will say absurd things. [F, g] 34 You'll be like someone sleeping out at sea or lying down on the top of a ship's mast.
35 "They struck me, but [h] I feel no pain!
They beat me, but I didn't know it! [i]
When will I wake up?
I'll look for another drink." [j]

24 Don’t envy evil men [a] or desire to be with them, [b] 2 for their hearts plan violence, and their words stir up trouble. [c]

3 A house is built by wisdom, [d]
and it is established by understanding; 4 by knowledge the rooms are filled with every precious and beautiful treasure.

5 A wise warrior is better than a strong one, [e]
and a man of knowledge than one of strength; [f, g] 6 for you should wage war with sound guidance — victory comes with many counselors. [h]

7 Wisdom is inaccessible to [A] a fool; [i]
he does not open his mouth at the •gate . [j]

8 The one who plots evil [k]
will be called a schemer.
9 A foolish scheme is sin,
and a mocker is detestable to people.

10 If you do nothing in a difficult time,
your strength is limited.
11 Rescue those being taken off to death,
and save those stumbling toward slaughter. [l] 12 If you say, “But we didn’t know about this,” won’t He who weighs hearts [m] consider it?
Won’t He who protects your life [n] know?
Won’t He repay a person according to his work? [o]

13 Eat honey, [p] my son, for it is good,
and the honeycomb is sweet to your palate; [q]
14 realize that wisdom is the same for you. [r]
If you find it, you will have a future,
and your hope will never fade. [s]

15 Wicked man, don’t set an ambush, at the camp of the righteous man; [t]

don’t destroy his dwelling.
16 Though a righteous man falls seven times,
he will get up, [u]
but the wicked will stumble into ruin. [v]

17 Don’t gloat when your enemy falls, and don’t let your heart rejoice when he stumbles, [w] 18 or the LORD will see, be displeased, and turn His wrath away from him.

19 Don’t be agitated by evildoers, and don’t envy the wicked. [x] 20 For the evil have no future; [y]
the lamp of the wicked will be put out. [z]

21 My son, •fear the LORD, as well as the king, [a] and don’t associate with rebels, [B] 22 for destruction from them will come suddenly;
who knows what distress these two can bring?

23 These sayings also belong to the wise: [b]

It is not good to show partiality in judgment. [c]
24 Whoever says to the •guilty , “You are innocent” [d] — people will curse him, [e] and tribes will denounce him; 25 but it will go well with those who convict the guilty,
and a generous blessing will come to them.

26 He who gives an honest answer gives a kiss on the lips.

27 Complete your outdoor work, and prepare your field; [f] afterward, build your house.

28 Don’t testify against your neighbor without cause. [g]
Don’t deceive with your lips.
29 Don’t say, “I’ll do to him what he did to me;
I’ll repay the man for what he has done.” [h]

30 I went by the field of a slacker
and by the vineyard of a man lacking sense.
31 Thistles had come up everywhere, weeds covered the ground, [i]

and the stone wall was ruined.
32 I saw, and took it to heart;
I looked, and received instruction:
33 a little sleep, a little slumber,
a little folding of the arms to rest, 34 and your poverty will come like a robber,
your need, like a bandit. [j]

Hezekiah’s Collection

25 These too are proverbs of Solomon, [a] which the men of Hezekiah, [b] king of Judah, copied.

2 It is the glory of God to conceal a matter [c]
and the glory of kings to investigate a matter.
3 As the heaven is high and the earth is deep,
so the hearts of kings cannot be investigated.

4 Remove impurities from silver, [d]
and a vessel will be produced [A] for a silversmith. [e] 5 Remove the wicked from the king's presence, [f]
and his throne will be established in righteousness. [g]

6 Don't brag about yourself before the king, and don't stand in the place of the great;
7 for it is better for him to say to you, "Come up here! "
than to demote you in plain view of a noble. [B, h]

8 Don't take a matter to court hastily. [i] Otherwise, what will you do afterward
if your opponent [C] humiliates you?
9 Make your case with your opponent [D] without revealing another's secret; [j] 10 otherwise, the one who hears will disgrace you, and you'll never live it down. [E]

11 A word spoken at the right time is like gold apples on a silver tray. [F, k] 12 A wise correction to a receptive ear [l] is like a gold ring or an ornament of gold.

13 To those who send him, a trustworthy messenger is like the coolness of snow on a harvest day;
he refreshes the life of his masters. [m]

14 The man who boasts about a gift that does not exist is like clouds and wind without rain. [n] 15 A ruler can be persuaded through patience, and a gentle tongue can break a bone. [o] 16 If you find honey, [p] eat only what you need;

otherwise, you'll get sick from it and vomit. [q] 17 Seldom set foot in your neighbor's house;
otherwise, he'll get sick of you and hate you.

18 A man giving false testimony against his neighbor [r] is like a club, a sword, or a sharp arrow. [s] 19 Trusting an unreliable person in a difficult time is like a rotten tooth or a faltering foot. [t]

20 Singing songs to a troubled heart is like taking off clothing on a cold day or like pouring vinegar on soda. [G, u]

21 If your enemy is hungry, give him food to eat, and if he is thirsty, give him water to drink; [v] 22 for you will heap burning coals on his head, and the LORD will reward you. [w]

23 The north wind produces rain, and a backbiting tongue, angry looks.
24 Better to live on the corner of a roof
than to share a house with a nagging wife. [x] 25 Good news from a distant land is like cold water to a parched throat. [H, y] 26 A righteous person who yields to the wicked [z] is like a muddied spring or a polluted well. [a] 27 It is not good to eat too much honey [b] or to seek glory after glory. [I, c] 28 A man who does not control his temper [d] is like a city whose wall is broken down. [e]

26 Like snow in summer and rain at harvest, [a] honor is inappropriate for a fool. [b] 2 Like a flitting sparrow or a fluttering swallow, [c] an undeserved curse goes nowhere. [d] 3 A whip for the horse, a bridle for the donkey, [e]
and a rod for the backs of fools. [f] 4 Don’t answer a fool according to his foolishness [g] or you’ll be like him yourself.
5 Answer a fool according to his foolishness [h] or he’ll become wise in his own eyes. [i] 6 The one who sends a message by a fool’s hand [j] cuts off his own feet and drinks violence. [k]
7 A proverb in the mouth of a fool is like lame legs that hang limp.
8 Giving honor to a fool
is like binding a stone in a sling. [l]
9 A proverb in the mouth of a fool
is like a stick with thorns, brandished by [A] the hand of a drunkard.
10 The one who hires a fool or who hires those passing by is like an archer who wounds everyone.
11 As a dog returns to its vomit,
so a fool repeats his foolishness. [m]
12 Do you see a man who is wise in his own eyes? [n]
There is more hope for a fool than for him. [o]

13 The slacker says, “There’s a lion in the road —
a lion in the public square! ” [p] 14 A door turns on its hinges, and a slacker, on his bed. [q]
15 The slacker buries his hand in the bowl;
he is too weary to bring it to his mouth. [r] 16 In his own eyes, a slacker is wiser [s] than seven men who can answer sensibly.

17 A person who is passing by and meddles in a quarrel that’s not his is like one who grabs a dog by the ears.

18 Like a madman who throws flaming darts and deadly arrows, [t]
19 so is the man who deceives his neighbor and says, “I was only joking! ”

20 Without wood, fire goes out;
without a gossip, conflict dies down. [u] 21 As charcoal for embers and wood for fire, so is a quarrelsome man for kindling strife. [v] 22 A gossip’s words are like choice food that goes down to one’s innermost being. [B, w]

23 Smooth [x] lips with an evil heart are like glaze on an earthen vessel. [y] 24 A hateful person disguises himself with his speech and harbors deceit within.
25 When he speaks graciously, don’t believe him,
for there are seven abominations in his heart. [z] 26 Though his hatred is concealed by deception, his evil will be revealed in the assembly.
27 The one who digs a pit will fall into it,
and whoever rolls a stone —
it will come back on him. [a] 28 A lying tongue hates those it crushes, and a flattering mouth causes ruin.

27 Don’t boast about tomorrow, for you don’t know what a day might bring. [a]

2 Let another praise you, and not your own mouth —
a stranger, and not your own lips. [b]

3 A stone is heavy and sand, a burden, but aggravation from a fool outweighs them both.

4 Fury is cruel, and anger a flood,
but who can withstand jealousy? [c]

5 Better an open reprimand than concealed love. [d]

6 The wounds of a friend are trustworthy, [e]
but the kisses of an enemy are excessive. [f]

7 A person who is full tramples on a honeycomb, [g]
but to a hungry person, any bitter thing is sweet.

8 A man wandering from his home is like a bird wandering from its nest. [h]

9 Oil [i] and incense bring joy to the heart, and the sweetness of a friend is better than self-counsel. [j]

10 Don’t abandon your friend or your father’s friend, [k] and don’t go to your brother’s house
in your time of calamity;
better a neighbor nearby than a brother far away. [l]

11 Be wise, my son, and bring my heart joy, [m]
so that I can answer anyone who taunts me. [n]

12 A sensible person sees danger and takes cover;
the inexperienced keep going and are punished. [o]

13 Take his garment, [p]
for he has put up security for a stranger;
get collateral if it is for foreigners. [A, q]

14 If one blesses his neighbor with a loud voice early in the morning,

it will be counted as a curse to him.

15 An endless dripping on a rainy day and a nagging wife are alike. [r] 16 The one who controls her controls the wind and grasps oil with his right hand.

17 Iron sharpens iron,
and one man sharpens another. [B]

18 Whoever tends a fig tree [s] will eat its fruit, [t] and whoever looks after his master will be honored.

19 As water reflects the face,
so the heart reflects the person.

20 •Sheol and •Abaddon [u] are never satisfied, [v]
and people's eyes are never satisfied. [w]

21 A crucible for silver, and a smelter for gold, and a man for the words of his praise. [C, x]

22 Though you grind a fool
in a mortar with a pestle along with grain,
you will not separate his foolishness from him. [y]

23 Know well the condition of your flock, [z]
and pay attention to your herds, 24 for wealth is not forever; [a]
not even a crown lasts for all time.
25 When hay is removed and new growth appears and the grain from the hills is gathered in, 26 lambs will provide your clothing,
and goats, the price of a field;
27 there will be enough goat's milk for your food —
food for your household and nourishment for your female servants. [b]

28 The wicked flee when no one is pursuing them, [a] but the righteous are as bold as a lion. [b]

2 When a land is in rebellion, it has many rulers, [c]
but with a discerning and knowledgeable person, it endures.

3 A destitute leader [d] who oppresses the poor is like a driving rain that leaves no food. [e]

4 Those who reject the law praise the wicked, [f]
but those who keep the law battle against them. [g]

5 Evil men do not understand justice, [h]
but those who seek the LORD understand everything. [i]

6 Better a poor man who lives with integrity [j] than a rich man who distorts right and wrong. [A, k]

7 A discerning son keeps the law,
but a companion of gluttons humiliates his father. [l]

8 Whoever increases his wealth through excessive interest [m] collects it for one who is kind to the poor. [n]

9 Anyone who turns his ear away from hearing the law —
even his prayer is detestable. [o]

10 The one who leads the upright into an evil way will fall into his own pit, [p]
but the blameless will inherit what is good. [q]

11 A rich man is wise in his own eyes, but a poor man who has discernment sees through him.

12 When the righteous triumph,
there is great rejoicing, [B]
but when the wicked come to power, people hide themselves. [r]

13 The one who conceals his sins will not prosper, [s]
but whoever confesses and renounces them will find mercy. [t]

14 Happy is the one who is always reverent, [u]
but one who hardens his heart falls into trouble. [v]

15 A wicked ruler over a helpless people [w] is like a roaring lion or a charging bear. [x]

16 A leader who lacks understanding is very oppressive,
but one who hates dishonest profit
prolongs his life. [y]

17 A man burdened by bloodguilt [C] will be a fugitive until death. [z]
Let no one help him. [a]

18 The one who lives with integrity will be helped, but one who distorts right and wrong [D]
will suddenly fall. [b]

19 The one who works his land will have plenty of food, [c]
but whoever chases fantasies will have his fill of poverty. [d]

20 A faithful man will have many blessings, [e] but one in a hurry to get rich [f] will not go unpunished.

21 It is not good to show partiality [g] — yet a man may sin for a piece of bread. [h]

22 A greedy man [E] is in a hurry for wealth;
he doesn't know that poverty will come to him. [i]

23 One who rebukes a person will later find more favor [j] than one who flatters [F] with his tongue. [k]

24 The one who robs his father or mother [l] and says, "That's no sin," [m] is a companion to a man who destroys. [n]

25 A greedy person provokes conflict, [o]

but whoever trusts in the LORD will prosper. [p]

26 The one who trusts in himself [G] is a fool, but one who walks in wisdom will be safe. [q]

27 The one who gives to the poor will not be in need,
but one who turns his eyes away [H]
will receive many curses. [r]

28 When the wicked come to power, people hide,
but when they are destroyed,
the righteous flourish. [s]

29 One who becomes stiff-necked,
after many reprimands will be shattered instantly —
beyond recovery. [a]

2 When the righteous flourish, the people rejoice, but when the wicked rule, people groan. [b]

3 A man who loves wisdom brings joy to his father, [c]
but one who consorts with prostitutes destroys his wealth. [d]

4 By justice a king brings stability to a land, [e] but a man who demands “contributions” [f] demolishes it. [g]

5 A man who flatters [A] his neighbor spreads a net for his feet. [h]

6 An evil man is caught by sin, [i] but the righteous one sings and rejoices. [j]

7 The righteous person knows the rights [B] of the poor, [k] but the wicked one does not understand these concerns.

8 Mockers inflame a city, [l]
but the wise turn away anger.

9 If a wise man goes to court with a fool,
there will be ranting and raving but no resolution. [C, m]

10 Bloodthirsty men hate an honest person, [n]
but the upright care about him. [D]

11 A fool gives full vent to his anger, [E, o]
but a wise man holds it in check. [p]

12 If a ruler listens to lies, [q]
all his officials will be wicked.

13 The poor and the oppressor have this in common: [F]
the Lord gives light to the eyes of both. [r]

14 A king who judges the poor with fairness —

his throne will be established forever. [s]

15 A rod of correction imparts wisdom, [t]
but a youth left to himself [G] is a disgrace to his mother. [u]

16 When the wicked increase, rebellion increases, but the righteous will see their downfall. [v]

17 Discipline your son, and it will bring you peace of mind [w] and give you delight.

18 Without revelation [H, x] people run wild, [y]
but one who listens to instruction will be happy. [z]

19 A slave cannot be disciplined by words;
though he understands, he doesn't respond. [a]

20 Do you see a man who speaks too soon? [b]
There is more hope for a fool than for him. [c]

21 A slave pampered from his youth will become arrogant [I] later on.

22 An angry man stirs up conflict, and a hot-tempered man [J] increases rebellion. [d]

23 A person's pride will humble him, [e]
but a humble spirit will gain honor. [f]

24 To be a thief's partner is to hate oneself;
he hears the curse but will not testify. [g, h]

25 The fear of man is a snare, [i] but the one who trusts in the LORD is protected. [K, j]

26 Many seek a ruler's favor, [k]
but a man receives justice from the LORD. [l]

27 An unjust man is detestable to the righteous, and one whose way is upright is detestable to the wicked. [m]

The Words of Agur

30 The words of Agur son of Jakeh. The oracle. [A] [a]
The man's oration to Ithiel, to Ithiel and Ucal: [b]

2 I am more stupid than any other man, [B] and I lack man's ability to understand. [c] 3 I have not gained wisdom, and I have no knowledge of the Holy One. [d] 4 Who has gone up to heaven and come down? [e]
Who has gathered the wind in His hands?
Who has bound up the waters in a cloak? [f]
Who has established all the ends of the earth? [g]
What is His name, and what is the name of His Son —
if you know? [h]
5 Every word of God is pure; [C] [i]
He is a shield to those who take refuge in Him. [j]
6 Don't add to His words, [k] or He will rebuke you, and you will be proved a liar. [l]

7 Two things I ask of You;
don't deny them to me before I die:
8 Keep falsehood and deceitful words far from me.
Give me neither poverty nor wealth;
feed me with the food I need. [m] 9 Otherwise, I might have too much [n] and deny You, [o] saying, "Who is the LORD? " [p] or I might have nothing and steal, [q]
profaning [D] the name of my God. [r]

10 Don't slander a servant to his master or he will curse you, [s] and you will become •guilty .

11 There is a generation that curses its father and does not bless its mother. [t] 12 There is a generation that is pure in its own eyes, [u] yet is not washed from its filth.
13 There is a generation — how haughty its eyes and pretentious its looks. [E]

14 There is a generation whose teeth are swords, [v] whose fangs are knives, [w] devouring the oppressed from the land [x]
and the needy from among mankind.

15 The leech has two daughters: “Give, Give!”
Three things [y] are never satisfied;
four never say, “Enough! ”:
16 •Sheol ; [z] a childless womb; [a] earth, which is never satisfied with water;
and fire, which never says, “Enough! ”

17 As for the eye that ridicules a father [b] and despises obedience to a mother, may ravens of the valley pluck it out and young vultures eat it. [c]

18 Three things are beyond me;
four I can’t understand:
19 the way of an eagle in the sky,
the way of a snake on a rock,
the way of a ship at sea,
and the way of a man with a young woman.

20 This is the way of an adulteress:
she eats and wipes her mouth and says, “I’ve done nothing wrong.” [d]

21 The earth trembles under three things;
it cannot bear up under four:
22 a servant when he becomes king, [e]
a fool when he is stuffed with food, 23 an unloved woman when she marries, [f]
and a servant girl when she ousts her queen.

24 Four things on earth are small,
yet they are extremely wise:
25 the ants are not a strong people,
yet they store up their food in the summer; [g] 26 hyraxes are not a mighty people, yet they make their homes in the cliffs; [h] 27 locusts have no king,

yet all of them march in ranks; [i] 28 a lizard [F] can be caught in your hands, yet it lives in kings' palaces.

29 Three things are stately in their stride,
even four are stately in their walk:
30 a lion, which is mightiest among beasts and doesn't retreat before anything, 31 a strutting rooster, [G] a goat,
and a king at the head of his army. [j]

32 If you have been foolish by exalting yourself or if you've been scheming, put your hand over your mouth. [k] 33 For the churning of milk produces butter, and twisting a nose draws blood,
and stirring up anger produces strife. [l]

The Words of Lemuel

31 The words of King Lemuel,
an oracle [A, a] that his mother taught him:

2 What should I say, my son?
What, son of my womb? [b]
What, son of my vows?
3 Don’t spend your energy [c] on women or your efforts on those who destroy kings. [d] 4 It is not for kings, Lemuel, it is not for kings [e] to drink wine [f] or for rulers to desire beer.
5 Otherwise, they [B] will drink, forget what is decreed, [g]
and pervert justice for all the oppressed. [C, h] 6 Give beer to one who is dying and wine to one whose life is bitter. [i] 7 Let him drink so that he can forget his poverty and remember his trouble no more. [j] 8 Speak up [D] for those who have no voice, [E, k] for the justice of all who are dispossessed. [F] 9 Speak up, [G] judge righteously, [l] and defend the cause of [H] the oppressed and needy. [m]

In Praise of a Capable Wife

10 Who can find a capable wife? [I, n]
She is far more precious than jewels. [o] 11 The heart of her husband trusts in her,
and he will not lack anything good.
12 She rewards him with good, not evil,
all the days of her life.
13 She selects wool and flax and works with willing hands.
14 She is like the merchant ships, bringing her food from far away. [p] 15 She rises while it is still night [q]
and provides food for her household and portions [J] for her female servants. [r] 16 She evaluates a field and buys it;

she plants a vineyard with her earnings. [K, s] 17 She draws on her strength [L] and reveals that her arms are strong. [t] 18 She sees that her profits are good,
and her lamp never goes out at night. [u] 19 She extends her hands to the spinning staff,
and her hands hold the spindle. [v] 20 Her hands reach [M] out to the poor, and she extends her hands to the needy. [w] 21 She is not afraid for her household when it snows, for all in her household are doubly clothed. [x] 22 She makes her own bed coverings; [y] her clothing is fine linen [z] and purple. [a] 23 Her husband is known at the city •gates , where he sits among the elders of the land. [b] 24 She makes and sells linen garments;
she delivers belts [N] to the merchants.
25 Strength [c] and honor are her clothing, [d]
and she can laugh at the time to come. [e] 26 She opens her mouth with wisdom and loving instruction [O] is on her tongue.
27 She watches over the activities of her household [f]
and is never idle. [P]
28 Her sons rise up and call her blessed.
Her husband also praises her:
29 "Many women [Q] are capable,
but you surpass them all! " [g]
30 Charm is deceptive and beauty is fleeting, [h]
but a woman who •fears the LORD will be praised.
31 Give her the reward of her labor, [R] and let her works praise her at the city gates.

Introduction

"Wisdom calls out in the street; she raises her voice in the public squares. She cries out above the commotion; she speaks at the entrance of the city gates: 'How long, foolish ones, will you love ignorance?' " (1:20-22a).

What is a proverb? A secular proverb seeks to state a general (not absolute) truth, such as "a fool and his money are soon parted." It is typically pithy, that is, it is brief but rich in meaning: "No pain, no gain." A proverb is practical; it gives advice that is useful in the real world: "A stitch in time saves nine." It should be applied; the reader should consider what changes he should make in his own life in light of the proverb: "Charity begins at home." A proverb is derived from astute observations about how life usually works; the creator of a proverb shows himself very knowledgeable and perceptive, able to see what is generally true and to draw conclusions from it: "The pen is mightier than the sword."

In addition to all this, the proverbs in the book of Proverbs are also divinely inspired. Since they come from God, we know they are true and we can be certain they are beneficial: "The one who understands a matter finds success, and the one who trusts in the Lord will be happy" (16:20). Biblical proverbs not only offer practical advice for this life but also guide the reader to eternal life: "For the discerning the path of life leads upward, so that he may avoid going down to Sheol" (15:24).

Circumstances of Writing Author: Solomon is credited with the proverbs in chapters 1-29 of the book of Proverbs (1:1; 10:1). There is biblical evidence that Solomon was wise and a collector of wise sayings (1Kg 3:5-14; 4:29-34; 5:7,12; 10:2-3,23-24; 11:41). Chapters 1-24 may have been written down during his reign, 970-931 B.C. The proverbs in chapters 25-29 were Solomon's proverbs collected by King Hezekiah, who reigned 716-687 b.c. (25:1). The last two chapters are credited to Agur and Lemuel (30:1; 31:1), about whom nothing else is known. An editor was inspired to collect the proverbs of Solomon, Agur, and Lemuel into the book that we now have.

Background: The reign of Solomon represented the peak of prosperity for the nation of Israel. The period saw the greatest extent of the territory, and there was peace and international trade (1Kg 4:20-25; 10:21-29). It is likely that Solomon knew about the ancient tradition of wisdom in Egypt (1Kg 3:1), but through inspiration and God's gift he composed even better sayings (1Kg 3:12; 10:6-7,23). Solomon addressed his teaching to his son or sons, but these inspired wise sayings are applicable to all people. The book of Proverbs, like the rest of the Bible, contains stories, teaching, and examples. People should make appropriate application of these truths to their own situation (1Co 10:11).

Message and Purpose Because these proverbs are in the Bible, they do not just entertain; they exhort, encourage, and offer hope. Solomon called readers, especially youth, to pursue wisdom rather than foolishness. He encouraged the inexperienced to become wise rather than mockers, to be teachable rather than incorrigible, to live rather than to die. He predicted that people who pursued wisdom would generally find success and happiness in this life, but he promised that they would absolutely find joy and blessing in eternity.

There is a close connection between wisdom and God. For example, both prescribe obedience and morality and both promise success and eternal life. They are connected because wisdom presupposes the fear of God; because God is the source of this inspired, godly advice; and because God is the One who guarantees the blessings that wisdom promises. The benefits of wisdom and of God are the same. What wisdom promises is what God grants (4:4-8).

Structure The book of Proverbs is in the wisdom genre. Wisdom books consist of the intelligent author's observations on the world and the people in it. However, without an inspired godly perspective, the world would be depressing and hopeless, as parts of Job and Ecclesiastes show. Ultimately, biblical wisdom is informed by and founded on faith in God.

The process of observation, contemplation, and inspiration can be seen in Pr

24:30-34. After observing the deteriorated condition of “the field of a slacker” and “the vineyard of a man lacking sense,” Solomon contemplated what he was seeing and was inspired: “I saw, and took it to heart; I looked, and received instruction” (v. 32). He either composed a new proverb or applied a familiar proverb to the situation: “a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the arms to rest, and your poverty will come like a robber, your need, like a bandit” (vv. 33-34).

Proverbs is written as Hebrew poetry. Hebrew poetry is terse and concise, it uses a lot of imagery, and generally the second line complements or contrasts the thought of the first. Contemplating how the second line relates to the first is a profitable way to meditate on a proverb.

In chapters 1-9 Solomon used imagery and sustained arguments to teach about the value of wisdom and the seduction of evil. In 22:17-24:34 there are “sayings” made up of several verses each, and in chapters 30-31 there are more sayings, including numerical sayings and an alphabetic acrostic in praise of a capable wife. In the rest of the book, each proverb is generally one verse. Some scholars argue that these individual proverbs are carefully arranged in groups and each should be interpreted in the context of its group. Other scholars view the collection as unsystematic and argue that the immediate context seldom has any bearing on interpretation.

In either case, it is important to interpret any single proverb in the context of the book of Proverbs and the Bible as a whole. For example, while 21:14 may seem to encourage bribery, the rest of the book of Proverbs is clearly against it (15:27), as is the rest of Scripture (Ex 23:8; Ec 7:7).

Timeline
Study Notes 1:1 A proverb is a pithy allusion or parable that is rich in truth and meaning. King of Israel here refers to Solomon, who was the last king of united Israel (1Kg 1-11).

1:2 Wisdom is having mastery of a subject of knowledge; it encompasses discipline, knowledge, prudence, and other virtues. It is the ability to apply knowledge to overcome any problem in life. Biblical "wisdom," which is a gift from God (2:6), includes morality and the knowledge of God. Discipline has to do with warnings about the consequences of errant behavior, or loving correction to those who have failed to heed such warnings. It can involve physical punishment. The Hebrew word is often translated "instruction" (v. 3) because the goal is always edification and education, not just punishment. Understanding means internalizing knowledge so that it directs action. Insightful sayings are those that reveal truth.

1:3 Wise instruction is literally "the discipline (see note at v. 2) of prudence." Prudence is skill or cleverness; a talent for insight, observation, or scrutiny; practical wisdom that leads to success. The word is translated "wise/wiser/wisdom" (v. 3; 14:35; 16:23; 17:2; 21:11,16), "prudent" (10:5), "discerning" (15:24), "understands" (16:20), "succeeds" (17:8), "sensible" (19:14), and "considers" (21:12). This cleverness is morally guided by righteousness (agreement with God's directives), justice (restoration of what is right), and integrity (what is straight, right, and fair).

1:4 The inexperienced are naive people, usually young (7:7), who are still uncommitted. They generally lack shrewdness (8:5) or common sense (9:4,16; 22:3; 27:12). They have neither chosen wisdom nor become entrenched in folly like the mocker (1:22), but they are willing to believe anything (14:15,18). Those who try to remain uncommitted are condemned because they have not set out on the way of righteousness (1:32; 9:6). They should take warning from those who have chosen the wrong way (19:25; 21:11). The Hebrew word for shrewdness always has a positive connotation in the book of Proverbs (the adjective is translated "shrewd" in 12:23 and "sensible" in 12:16; 13:16; 14:8,15,18; 15:5; 22:3; 27:12). Such a person foresees and deals with difficulties (22:3). However, in other books it usually means "cunning" or "craftiness" that is in direct defiance of God's will (Gn 3:1; Jb 5:12). Knowledge is collected, memorized information (Hb da'ath; see word study at 8:9). Knowledge is the tool; wisdom is the workman. Without wisdom to apply it, knowledge is ineffective. Discretion is the ability to ponder and plan, to think independently. The negative side is scheming (12:2; 14:17; 24:8). In Proverbs a young man is one who is on the verge of maturity; he is making decisions about the course of his life (22:6).

1:5 A discerning man has the capacity to understand what he hears and sees and to internalize knowledge so that it directs his actions.

1:6 The words proverb and parable are synonyms (v. 1). The words of the wise may refer to sayings that are more than two lines long; two sections are introduced as such (22:17; 24:23; cp. 30:1; 31:1; Ec 9:17; 12:11). A riddle is a proverb that is tricky or difficult to understand (Jdg 14:12; 1Kg 10:1).

1:7 The fear of the LORD involves awe, reverence, love, and trust in God. It accompanies knowledge, humility, obedience, and blessing (8:13; 10:27; 14:26-27; 16:6; 19:23; 22:4). The beginning is what must come first, the prerequisite; it is also the chief or supreme principle (4:7). All three kinds of "fool" are obstinately immoral (1:22; 17:7). This fool (Hb 'ewiyl; see word study at 10:8) is self-sufficient and detests wisdom or any advice or correction.

1:8 On instruction, see "discipline" in note at verse 2. Teaching implies a person of authority passing on moral guidelines; in other contexts the same word means "law" (28:4,7,9; cp. Dt 4:44). The reader should not make too much of the pairing of instruction with the father and teaching with the mother. Splitting them is merely an aspect of Hebrew poetry (Pr 4:3; 6:20; 19:26; 23:22; 30:11,17). Both parents participated in this homeschooling.

1:9 The garland and chain were symbols of honor, guidance, and protection.

1:10 The Hebrew word for entice is related to the word for "inexperienced"

(see note at v. 4).

1:11 Just for fun is literally "for nothing" ("foolish" in v. 17; "without cause" in 3:30 and 24:28; "for no reason" in 23:29; "undeserved" in 26:2). Attack is literally "hide away," a synonym for "ambush."

1:12 Sheol is the grave, and the Pit pictures the opening to a grave; both are symbols of death. Sheol is the destiny of the wicked, but the righteous will be rescued from it (15:11). The victim was alive and still healthy, not expecting death.

1:14 One's lot can mean one's destiny (Is 17:14). There may be a pun here: "Choose our way as your 'destiny' and join us in casting 'lots' to divide up the plunder."

1:15 The book of Proverbs frequently warns the reader to avoid the road . . . path, or way of wickedness and instead choose the way of righteousness (4:13-15). The lifestyle a person chooses leads to a certain destiny. A person should not try the wicked lifestyle even for a moment.

1:16 Trouble comes from the common Hebrew word for "evil" (ra'a' ; see word study at 24:8,18-19). "Evil" is the concept (2:12), the intention is "harm" (3:29), the consequence is "trouble" or "misery" (12:21; 15:15), and the ultimate result is "ruin" or "disaster" (5:14; 21:12)—the same Hebrew word. In 20:14 the buyer uses the word to claim that something is "worthless" or contemptible.

1:17-18 An animal that sees a net has the sense to avoid it, but the wicked who know their lifestyle is self-destructive don't have the sense to turn away.

1:19 The gang described in verses 10-19 is summarized as those who make profit dishonestly (15:27; 28:16; Jr 6:13; 8:10; Ezk 22:27; Hab 2:9). The practice is self-destructive (Pr 1:18,31-32; 2:19; 8:36; 29:6,24).

1:20-33 Wisdom is personified as a woman who calls out a warning in public. Those who reject her guidance will suffer disaster. What she offers is success in practical matters in this life but eternal life as well (3:22).

1:20-21 The public square was the marketplace, and the city gate was where civic debate and official business were carried out (see note at 24:7).

1:22 On foolish and ignorance, see "inexperienced" in note at verse 4. A mocker is obnoxiously obstinate in his folly and not willing to change. He treats righteousness with ridicule and contempt (17:5). He is proud (21:24), a source of conflict (22:10), and unpopular (24:9). Because he is not open to correction (9:7-8; 13:1; 15:12), he is unable to learn (14:6) and is thus condemned (3:34; 9:12; 19:29). He is suitable only as a negative example for the inexperienced (19:25; 21:11). This kind of fool (Hb kesiyl ; see word study at 17:10) is a close synonym to ewiyl (1:7; cp. 17:7). Along with being obstinately immoral, he perhaps adds a smug overconfidence that increases his pigheadedness. Because he delights in evil conduct, he is dangerous to be around.

1:23 To warn is to call someone to account; it includes an implicit threat of physical punishment.

1:24 Extending the hand could be a threatening (Ex 7:5) or a friendly (Is 65:2) gesture.

1:26-27 A calamity is the sudden onset of severe destruction (Dt 32:35; Jr 48:16). Terror is intense fear that causes uncontrollable trembling. Wisdom rejoices that through calamity the world is set right—the wicked are punished and the righteous are rewarded. The storm and whirlwind leave only devastation (10:25; Hs 8:7). The basic idea behind the Hebrew words for trouble and stress is confinement or being squeezed (24:10).

1:28 This Hebrew word for search implies eager seeking under stress (Ps 63:1; 78:34; Hs 5:15). God patiently permits Himself to be found (Pr 8:17; cp. Dt 4:29; 2Ch 7:14; Jr 29:13), but He doesn't respond to insincere seekers (Is 1:15; 59:2-3), and eventually it becomes too late (Jr 11:11; 14:12; Ezk 8:17-19; Hs 5:6; 2Pt 3:9-10).

1:31 On glutted, see "satisfied" in note at 18:20; compare 28:19.

1:32 The Hebrew word for turning away from God (Hs 11:7) can also be translated "unfaithfulness, apostasy, or rebellion." Complacency is a false sense of security in which some people trust (Ps 30:6; Jr 22:21; Ezk 16:49).

1:33 This Hebrew word translated securely generally involves false security if the object of trust is not God (11:28; 28:26). Lady Wisdom promises true security because there is a close connection between wisdom and God (2:6).

2:1-22 The first four verses of this chapter are a condition (if), followed by two results (then) in verses 5-8 and 9-11. Verses 12-15 and 16-19 describe the benefits of the results—being rescued from the way of evil and from the forbidden woman. Verses 20-22 are the conclusion.

2:1-5 Rather than just learning about wisdom, the student is first told to accept (rather than despise or reject; 1:7,30) and internalize wisdom, then to call out to and passionately seek it. The result is a reverent (that is, with appropriate fear) relationship (knowledge) with God, which is a prerequisite of true wisdom (1:7).

2:7 As we store up God's commands (v. 1), He stores up success as our reward. Success is competence (3:21; 8:14) or sound judgment (18:10). Upright means "corresponding to God's ethical instruction" (Hb yashar ; see word study at 21:2). The Hebrew word for integrity implies genuineness and reliability; it is also translated "honorable" (10:29) and "honest" (29:10).

2:8 On protect, see "keep" in note at 4:4,6.

2:9-10 Understanding is a further result (then; cp. v. 5) of seeking wisdom. A person can live ethically when he has wisdom in his mind (lit "heart"; see note at 4:23) and heart (Hb nephesh ; see note at 13:2-4). God's wisdom entering a person and making him delight in godly knowledge is regeneration (Jr 31:31-33; Ezk 36:27; 1Co 1:18). On path, see note at 1:15.

2:11 Having discretion (see note at 1:4) and understanding (see note at 1:2) will prevent self-destructive behavior (1:19).

2:12 On evil, see note at 1:16. Perverse is literally "turned over" (Jdg 7:13; 2Kg 21:13), making something into something else (Dt 23:5; Is 29:16; Jr 2:21; Am 5:7)—in this case, turning truth into a lie (Jr 23:36).

2:14 To do evil is to undermine society and applaud its overthrow.

2:15 Crooked is the opposite of "upright" (v. 7); it means "twisted" (11:20) or "distorted" (28:6). On paths and ways, see note at 1:15.

2:16 The forbidden woman has turned away from her husband (v. 17) and wants to destroy society (5:3,20; 7:5; 22:14). The stranger has allegiance to a different community and has no interest in preserving the community of the faithful (5:20; 6:24; 7:5; 23:27). Flattering (lit "smooth") speech always has an agenda that includes the destruction of others (5:3; 7:5,21; 26:28; 28:23; 29:5; Ps 55:21). This warning applies to any person who appeals to base instincts with ulterior motives.

2:18-19 Joining the forbidden woman/stranger is self-destructive (1:19). The Hebrew word for departed spirits is the same as the Rephaim, a Canaanite people (Dt 2:20-21), but in Hebrew poetry it refers to the residents of the grave (Pr 9:18; 21:16; cp. Is 14:9).

2:20-22 These good people have moral excellence. Figuratively, to inhabit the land means to enjoy God's blessing through a relationship with Him (Ps 37:3; Jr 7:5-7). While the warning of Pr 2:16-19 is specifically against illicit sexual relations, this suggests a broader application. Those who choose the good will enjoy God's blessings eternally (Ps 37:29; Is 60:21; Mt 5:5), but the wicked (impious, evil, selfish, violently antisocial) will be eternally cut off from God's blessing. Treacherous people are unfaithful in relationships; here they have abandoned commitment to God.

3:1-12 In this section the odd-numbered verses give a command and the even-numbered verses a promised result (in vv. 5-6 the command spills over).

3:2 To have well-being is to be healthy, free from threat or need, and thus fulfilled, content, prosperous, and at peace in a way that only God can grant (Ps 4:8; 119:165).

3:3 Loyalty (Hb chesed ; see note at 19:22) and faithfulness summarize godliness in contrast to the selfish malice and infidelity of the wicked (14:22; 16:6; 20:28; cp. Mt 22:37-40). The son should make them his permanent characteristics, externally and internally.

3:5 To trust anything or anyone other than the L ORD results in disaster (11:28; 28:26; cp. Ps 52:7; 62:10; Is 30:12-13; Ezk 16:15). To rely on something —a synonym for "trust"—is to lean on it as if it were a crutch (2Sm 1:6; Jb 8:14-15; Is 50:10). Understanding is good (16:16), but only if it is from the Lord (9:10).

3:6 To think about God in all your ways is to invite His presence into all daily activities and decisions. Guide . . . on the right paths is literally "make straight" or "smooth." God will make righteousness attainable.

3:7 Turning away from evil and worshiping the L ORD is the gist of repentance (Ac 8:22; 26:20), which requires humility (Jr 31:19).

3:8 Body (lit "navel"; Sg 7:2) and bones stand for the entire person.

3:9-10 Possessions is the word for abundant "wealth" (8:18; 10:15; 11:4; 12:27; 13:7,11; 18:11; 19:4,14; 28:8,22; 29:3) or sufficiency (see "enough" in 30:15-16), the stored resources that are ready for use. The first produce was the earliest and best of the crop (Dt 18:4). Those who honor God with their wealth will receive more with which to honor Him (Mal 3:10; Lk 19:17,26).

3:11-12 To ask God to refrain from giving us discipline would be to ask Him to love us less (Jb 7:17-19; 10:10).

3:13-18 This poem praising wisdom begins and ends with the word happy. To be happy is to discover the good life that the Creator intended (8:32,34; 14:21; 16:20; 20:7; 28:14; Ps 1:1; 32:1; 144:15; Is 30:18). This Hebrew word is associated with the Greek word in Mt 5:3-12 that describes the present and future blessings enjoyed by the godly person. Godly wisdom is better than silver . . . gold, or jewels because she (where "she" is a personification of wisdom) gives enduring riches along with honor, inner peace, and eternal life.

3:14 This could be the profit gained in trading up to wisdom (4:7) or the subsequent profit made by applying wisdom (8:18-21; 21:20; 24:4).

3:16 The Hebrew word for honor is literally "weightiness" ("heavy" in 27:3; "burden" in Is 22:24); it implies ascribing value or esteem to something or taking it seriously (Ps 50:15; Pr 3:9; Mal 1:6). It is also translated "glory," especially when describing God (Ex 40:34; Ps 96:7; Pr 25:2).

3:18 A tree of life is a source provided by God for healing and eternal life (11:30; 13:12; 15:4; cp. Gn 2:9; 3:22; Rv 2:7; 22:2). Thus godly wisdom functions symbolically to replace what was lost in the garden of Eden. Jesus Christ fulfilled wisdom's promise.

3:19 God established and sustains creation through wisdom. Solomon offered this same wisdom to his son to firmly establish and sustain his life (4:26; 12:3; 16:3; 24:3).

3:20 In Palestine dew was an important source of moisture.

3:21 Maintain is literally “guard.” On discretion, see note at 1:4.

3:22 Wisdom is the key to life—a full life now and eternal life in the future—because it is anchored in the fear of the Lord and it includes practical advice (vv. 2,18; 1:33; 4:13,22-23; 6:23; 8:35; 10:16-17; 11:19; 12:28; 14:27; 16:22; 19:23; 21:21; 22:4; cp. Mk 10:30; 1Tm 4:8).

3:23-26 On safely, see “securely” in note at 1:33. Though the wicked will suddenly come to ruin at their ending (Ps 35:8; Is 10:3; 47:11; 1Th 5:3), those who maintain wisdom (Pr 3:21) will never be in such danger—whether up and about or sleeping—because the L ORD will protect them.

3:29-30 Harm is literally “evil” (see note at 1:16). The mention of one who lives near you emphasizes the trust inherent in community. It does not mean that treachery is permissible against distant strangers; it is always wrong (Jdg 18:7,27; 2Sm 3:27; 20:9-10; Ps 55:12-14; Mt 26:14). Without cause (see note at 1:11; cp. 24:28; 1Kg 2:31; Ps 35:7; 119:161) is literally “for nothing” (Gn 29:15; 2Sm 24:24) or “for no reason” (1Sm 19:5; Lm 3:52). Bringing accusations without just cause is malicious betrayal of community trust.

3:31 A violent man is one who, out of greed and hate, commits crimes against society such as oppression and exploitation (10:6,11; 13:2; 16:29).

3:32 The devious, those who turn aside from what is right, are detestable to God, offensive, abhorrent, an abomination; they virtually turn His stomach. He will not pay them any attention except to punish them (15:8; 16:5; 21:27; 28:9). But with the upright God is a friend, an intimate counselor (15:22; Jb 29:4; Ps 25:14; 55:14).

3:33 God’s curse is the removal of His sustaining presence. A household includes all a person’s family, possessions, and property. Individual members of the family can be redeemed from the curse (Ezk 18:17,20).

3:34 God will treat with contempt those who ridicule Him (see note at 1:22). The humble (16:19) are those who are poor (14:21; 31:20) not from laziness but because they are exploited or oppressed (15:15; 22:22; 30:14; 31:5,9).

3:35 An inheritance is a permanent possession. On honor, see note at 3:16. Fools (Hb kesiyl; see note at 1:22) are “exalted” to a state of dishonor—a sarcastic statement.

4:3 Being a true son implies obedience, not merely being a male child. A tender child is delicate as well as teachable. Precious means to be treated as if an only child (Jr 6:26; Am 8:10; Zch 12:10).

4:4 , 6 To keep . . . commands is to listen attentively, retain, and obey; it could also be translated “guard.” Those who keep their way in godly wisdom (v. 21; 2:20; 5:2; 7:1-2; 8:32; 10:17; 16:17; 19:16; 22:5) will in turn be watched over and guarded by wisdom or the Lord (2:8,11; 3:26; 6:22,24; 7:5; 14:3).

4:5-8 Get translates a common Hebrew word for "purchase." There is a great emphasis here that wisdom and understanding are the most important acquisitions (16:16; 18:15; 23:23; cp. 17:16)—literally "in all your purchasing, purchase understanding" (4:7), that is, spend all your assets on understanding. Supreme could also mean the beginning (1:7), the first thing to get. As with salvation, the cost of godly wisdom is not silver and gold. Rather, a person must stop desiring anything else and love . . . cherish, and embrace only the one thing—that's part of what it means to give up one's life for something. Paradoxically, the cost is both nothing and everything (Is 55:1; Mt 13:44-46; 16:24; 19:21,27; Lk 5:11,28; Php 3:8).

4:9 The garland and crown are symbolic of God's grace and favor being visible in one's life.

4:10-19 The wicked are addicted to doing evil—it is their refreshment and their nourishment (vv. 16-17). The son is exhorted to hold on to the good and warned not even to try the bad (vv. 13-15; cp. 1:15). Quantity and quality of life are the incentives (vv. 10,13,22; 8:35 see note at 3:22). The righteous increase in light while the wicked stumble in gloom (vv.18-19; cp. Jb 29:2-3; 1Pt 2:9; Rv 21:23-24). The foolish wicked don't know that there is a connection between sin and punishment (5:6; 7:23; 9:18; 28:22).

4:22 On life, see note at 3:22.

4:23 Above all else is literally "more than all guarding." To guard something is to make sure that it doesn't get away and that it is safe from attack. In Hebrew the heart is the location of knowledge and also the preconscious source of decisions (27:19; Mt 15:18). Your heart is who you are, the "true you" that directs all your thoughts and emotions. You can educate your heart (Pr 24:32)—consciously form and modify a worldview—after which decisions and actions flow from it (16:9,23; Lk 6:45; Rm 10:10; 2Co 9:7). This education can be worldly, carried out by yourself, or godly, carried out by the Holy Spirit (Pr 2:6; Jr 24:7; Ezk 36:26-27; Ac 16:14; Rm 2:29). The inclination of your heart directs your mortal life and determines whether you enter eternal life (3:22).

4:25-27 Undivided attention to the right path (cp. 17:24; 27:20) and a determination not to even sample evil (cp. vv. 13-15; 1:15) assure that your ways will be established. The passive voice implies that it is God who does it. "Established" is fixed and firm, secure, not subject to change or to destruction (12:3; "achieved" in 16:3; 24:3; 25:5). Right or . . . left expresses the whole range of evil paths. That is not to say that a middle road, a compromise, is the good way, but that it is important not to leave the only good way.

5:2 To maintain and safeguard wisdom includes the responsibility to pass it along (Mal 2:7).

5:3-6 The forbidden woman with her smooth words (see note at 2:16) seems attractive, but she is in fact deadly. On in the end, see note at verse 11. Wormwood was a shrub that produced a bitter flavor (Lm 3:15,19). In Hebrew double-edged is literally "with mouths," a pun on the way she devours people (Is 1:20). She is headed for eternal death (see note at 1:12), along with anyone she can entice to join her, because she does not focus her eyes on the path of life (4:25). She is unstable—wandering (Gn 4:12; Nm 32:13; 2Sm 15:20; Ps 59:11; 109:10; Lm 4:15), staggering (Ps 107:27; Is 24:20; Am 4:8)—and she doesn't even know it (see note at Pr 4:10-19).

5:9-10 The unwise son gives up his vitality; he is not overpowered and robbed (1:11). The others to whom he gives his resources may be the family of the adulteress (6:29-35). Vitality could also be translated "authority" (Nm 27:20) or "splendor" (Hs 14:6); it describes a man in his prime. A cruel person shows no mercy (Jr 6:23).

5:11 At the end describes the outcome of a course of action—what happens later, the ultimate result (v. 4; 14:12; 19:20; 20:21; 23:32; 29:21).

5:12-14 How introduces an expression of grief (Gn 44:34). To hate discipline, despise correction, and not obey or listen are characteristics of a fool (see notes at 1:7 and 1:22), which the son was on the verge of becoming, despite his father's warnings (1:30-31; 3:11; cp. 12:1; 15:10). These are not school teachers but parents (1:8) or sages (1:6; 30:1; 31:1; Ec 12:9). The destiny of a fool is ruin (see "trouble" in note at 1:16) before the . . . community, convened as if for a trial (26:26; cp. Jr 26:7-11).

5:15-19 The many figurative references to water—cistern, flowing, well, springs, streams, fountain—are interpreted as one's wife. The allusion is to quenching one's sexual thirst (9:17; Sg 5:1). Many houses had their own private cisterns to store rain water. Wells, springs, and streams supplied sweet, refreshing water. The father prayed that God would bless his son's wife, with the result that the son would always take pleasure in her since something that is blessed is by definition able to satisfy (3:33; 22:9). The wife of your youth is the first wife (2:17; Is 54:6; Mal 2:14-15); a man should not seek another wife or a different woman. Loving implies sexual love (7:18; Hs 8:9). "Satisfy" (Jr 31:25) also means "drench" or "watered" (Is 16:9; 58:11; cp. Pr 7:18). In this context, to be lost is to drift unconsciously in pleasure. In other contexts it is used of intoxication (20:1; Sg 5:1) or straying from righteousness (Pr 19:27; cp. 5:23).

5:20 Why suggests the action is inexcusable. To be infatuated is literally to "stray" (19:27; Ps 119:118; Ezk 34:6) or to "err, sin" (Lv 4:13; Jb 19:4); it is translated "be lost" in Pr 5:19,23. On forbidden woman and stranger, see note at 2:16. The breast is the part of the body involved in an embrace, also translated “in one’s arms” (6:27; cp. 2Sm 12:8; Mc 7:5).

5:23 The wicked man (v. 22) will be lost (vv. 19-20) to eternal death because he didn’t let discipline replace his stupidity with wisdom (6:23; 15:10). “Stupidity” comes from Hb ewiyl (see note at 1:7; cp. 12:23; 13:16; 14:8).

6:1 To put up security is “to pledge oneself as a guarantee for another’s debts”; if the debtor defaulted, the son would have to pay or be liable to seizure. Entered into an agreement is literally “struck your palm,” probably referring to a gesture that made it official (Ru 4:7-8), an ancient equivalent of shaking hands or signing a contract. To risk one’s assets and reputation for a neighbor or friend is inadvisable (17:18), much less for a stranger (11:15; 20:16; 27:13; cp. 22:26).

6:3 The son is in his neighbor’s power (lit “palm”; see v. 2) because if the neighbor defaults, the son must pay. He should plead (lit “assault” his neighbor) incessantly to be released from the security agreement. The word translated humble yourself could also be translated “weary yourself.”

6:4 Sleep and slumber when a person should be working leads to ruin (vv. 9-11).

6:5 A “fowler” is one who hunts birds (Ps 91:3; Jr 5:26; Hs 9:8).

The Rhorr gazelle (6:5) is one species of antelope found in Israel.

6:6 A slacker is a lazy person (26:14) who hopes to sustain his life without actually working (20:4; 21:25)—he literally refuses to lift a hand (19:24). He makes excuses not to work (22:13). Unlike the oppressed (31:9), the slacker has brought his poverty on himself and is not an object of pity. His opposite is a diligent person (13:4). As the son listens to his father admonishing the slacker, he himself is warned against laziness (19:25). A wise person learns from observation (24:32; 30:24-28; see “prudence” in note at 1:3).

6:8 This verse describes harvester ants that store grain in their nests.

6:9 Asking how long generally implies that something bad has been going on for too long (1:22; cp. Ex 10:3; Ps 74:10).

6:10 On sleep and slumber, see note at verse 4.

6:11 Poverty in this context is destitution brought on oneself (13:18; 28:19). It is not the same as oppressed people who are poor because of circumstances beyond their control, and who deserve pity (19:17). The robber is literally a "traveler," perhaps a vagabond or drifter. The bandit is literally a "man with a shield," an armed man. His attack is sudden and unexpected.

6:12 The Hebrew word beliyya'al (worthless) identifies a troublemaker who rebels against all good and godly authority (16:27; 19:28; 2Ch 13:7; Jb 34:18). It is translated "perverted" in Judges (Jdg 19:22; 20:13) and "wicked" in many places (Dt 13:13; 1Sm 2:12; 2Sm 20:1). He is described in Pr 6:12-14. "Belial" became a synonym for Satan (2Co 6:15).

6:13 This body language was apparently conspiratorial or deceptive (16:30; Is 58:9). He literally "compresses" his eyes, "shuffles" his feet, and "throws in" his fingers.

6:14 On perversity, see note at 2:12. To stir up trouble is to spread dissension and strife (6:19; 16:28; Jr 15:10).

6:15 Suddenly implies surprise (24:22; Jos 10:9; Ec 9:12; Is 47:11). Instantly further emphasizes the speed of the destruction (Is 29:5-6; 30:13; cp. Jr 4:20). The last words are literally "there is no healing."

6:16 On detestable, see note at 3:32.

6:17 Arrogant is literally "raised high." It describes proud people who deny God's authority (21:4; 30:13; cp. 2Kg 19:22; Ps 18:27; 131:1; Is 10:12; 37:23).

6:19 To be a lying witness and to give false testimony are the same; the two expressions are used for clarity (14:5; 19:5). On trouble, see note at verse 14.

6:20-24 Instruction that has been internalized sustains the person who faces moral challenges (Ps 119:11). While verse 21 refers to them, verse 22 literally says "she" will guide you, perhaps referring to the command or the teaching in verse 20 or to Lady Wisdom, a common personification of wisdom. The word for "guide" is the same as "leads" in Ps 23:3. Walking, lying down, and waking up covers all aspects of daily life (Dt 6:7; Ps 139:2). On life, see note at 3:22; on stranger and flattering, see note at 2:16.

6:26 This is not to excuse prostitution (1Co 6:15-20) but to illustrate the terrible penalty of adultery by way of comparison; the adulteress will destroy someone's life.

6:27-29 These verses illustrate the inevitability of punishment. To go unpunished is a legal term meaning to be acquitted, declared innocent, pardoned, or released; to be set free from guilt, liability, or punishment (Ex 21:19; Nm 5:31). The basic meaning of the word is to be pure, clean, or free. To say that someone will not go unpunished is more emphatic than simply saying he will be punished (Pr 11:21; 16:5; 17:5; 19:5,9; 28:20; cp. Ex 34:7; 1Kg 2:9; Jr 25:29; 49:12).

6:30-33 A thief is guilty of a crime and must pay a severe penalty, but if there are mitigating circumstances he does not totally lose the respect of the community. Seven times is not literal here but is an expression that implies he must pay the full penalty, from twice to five times what he stole (Ex 22:1,7,9; cp. Lk 19:8); a repeat offender could go broke. An adulterer, on the other hand, suffers punishment plus complete, permanent disgrace. The person who brings this on himself lacks sense (lit "has no heart"; see note at 4:23; cp. 8:5)—he is brainless.

6:34-35 While a court can be satisfied when a fine is paid (v. 31), a jealous husband can never be satisfied (27:4; cp. Sg 8:6). On appeased, see "show partiality" in note at 18:5. Verse 35a can be translated, "He will not look favorably on any kind of ransom." The gifts are literally a "bribe" to subvert justice (17:8,23; 21:14).

7:1-5 This section may connect with 6:20-24 to conclude the speech begun there, or it may introduce 7:6-27. The origin of the Hebrew word translated pupil is "little man," the tiny reflection one sees in another person's eye. Because the eye is sensitive yet indispensable, it is closely guarded (Dt 32:10; Zch 2:8). To write something on the heart is to internalize it so that it directs one's actions (2:1-4; 6:20-24; Jr 17:1; 31:31-34). On forbidden woman . . . stranger, and flattering talk, see note at 2:16.

7:6 In ancient times a window had a lattice that let in light and air (Jdg 5:28; 2Kg 1:2; Sg 2:9).

7:7 The young man whom Solomon observed had not yet acquired protection by committing himself to wisdom and discretion (1:4; 2:11; 4:6). Youths is literally "sons." On inexperienced, see note at 1:4; on lacking sense, see note at 6:30-33.

7:11 The word translated loud implies restless movement as well as noise—commotion (1:21); uproar (1Kg 1:41).

7:12 Lurks is literally "ambush" (1:11; 23:28; 24:15; Dt 19:11).

7:13 To speak brazenly is to lie with arrogance (21:29).

7:14-15 She includes religion in her lie. Her flattery includes the lie that she searched specifically for him. In reality she was on the hunt for any vulnerable young man.

7:16-17 She seduces him by describing her bed (cp. 31:22) with its luxurious and suggestive perfumes (cp. Sg 4:14).

7:18 Drink deeply is the same Hebrew word as "satisfy" in 5:19; she claims to offer what only a wife should give (Sg 5:1). This is not true love but lust (2Sm 13:1; Hs 8:9; cp. Sg 8:6-7).

7:19-20 She promises they won't get caught, ignoring the eternal consequences of their sin (v. 23). The length of the husband's business trip is indicated by the amount of money he took with him.

7:22 Impulsively is literally "suddenly" (see note at 6:15).

7:23 The liver was considered the reservoir of life-blood. A snare seems attractive but is deadly (22:5; Jos 23:13; Am 3:5; cp. Pr 1:17-18). On he doesn't know, see note at 4:10-19.

7:26 Brought many down to death and victims are military terms.

7:27 On Sheol, see note at 1:12. She lures youths to eternal death (2:18; 5:5,23).

8:1-3 Like the forbidden woman (7:5), Wisdom—again personified as a lady (1:20-21)—extends an invitation to the inexperienced (8:5; cp. 7:7). Unlike the forbidden woman, Wisdom's invitation is very public in broad daylight, her appeal is spiritual not sexual, and her promise is life not death. Wisdom and Understanding are two names for the same "lady."

8:4 Her appeal to people and mankind (lit "sons of Adam") may emphasize her broad appeal (Ps 49:1-2) or the mortality of her audience (2Ch 14:11; Ps 39:5; 90:3; Is 51:12).

8:5 On shrewd and inexperienced, see note at 1:4. Common sense is literally an "understanding heart"—a mind that functions as it should (4:23; cp. 6:32). On foolish, see "fool" in note at 1:22.

8:6 The word translated noble might also mean "morally straight" (v. 9).

8:7 On detestable, see note at 3:32.

8:8 On perverse, see "crooked" in note at 2:15.

8:9 Both clear and right relate to what is straight in front of a person, not twisted, crooked, or off to the side. A perceptive person is insightful, intelligent, and discerning (1:5). Those who seek knowledge diligently will discover it (2:1-5).

8:10 One must choose to pursue either godly wisdom or riches; there is no third way (4:27; Mt 6:24). Yet there is often monetary reward with wisdom (Pr 8:18-21; cp. 1Kg 3:11-13).

8:11 Lady Wisdom is speaking (v v. 1,4,12), commending wisdom.

8:12-14 The point of Wisdom sharing a home with or possessing the other virtues is that if you find one you find the others. Those who fear the LORD have the mind of Christ and therefore view evil the same way that God does (1Co 2:15-16). Arrogant pride translates two Hebrew words for pride; the first is found in 15:25 and 16:19, the second in 16:18. Pride and arrogance are characteristics of those who refuse to acknowledge God's rule. Good advice and competence implies counsel that brings success (19:20; 20:18; Is 28:29). These kinds of qualities belong to God (Jb 12:13). The Spirit (Is 11:2) and the Son (1Co 1:30) mediate wisdom's qualities to godly people.

8:16 A "noble" was a powerful and respected royal courtier (17:7,26; 19:6; 25:7), the opposite of the boorish fool (Is 32:5,8); the same Hebrew word describes those who have a generous and willing spirit (Ex 35:5,22; 2Ch 29:31; Ps 51:12).

8:17 To love and to search imply emotional passion and diligence.

8:18 Riches and honor involve wealth granted by Lady Wisdom without social stigma (3:16; 11:16; 22:4; Jms 2:6; 5:1). Ironically, those who pursue riches get dishonor (Jr 17:11; 1Tm 6:10). Lasting wealth is wealth in this life that does not evaporate (11:7; 13:11; 27:23-24; 28:22), and it includes treasures in heaven as well (Mt 6:20; 1Tm 6:17-18).

8:19 Pure is literally "choice," meaning "desired, precious" (Ps 132:13).

8:20-21 Where Wisdom "walks" is where she can be found and where she will lead her followers so they will be rewarded. The reward of her way contrasts with the disastrous way of the wicked and fools (2:15; 4:14; 5:8-10; 22:5; see note at 1:15). On inheritance, see note at 3:35.

8:22-29 Wisdom was made by God before the earth began. Wisdom witnessed all the rest of God's creative activity, and Wisdom was a craftsman in creation. Therefore, Wisdom is in a unique position to explain creation to mortals (Jb 38:2-4). Since wisdom is a skill dependent on knowledge, it is not really an entity that can be created. So this is a figurative way to say that God is its source. Thus true wisdom can only come from Him. The concept that God created wisdom also conveys that all God created and all He does are the products of His infinite wisdom. Because Wisdom existed before creation and was involved in creation (Pr 3:19-20; 8:22,30) and because the same is said of Christ (Jn 1:3; 1Co 8:6; Col 1:15-16), Wisdom has been identified with Christ. However, the NT never cites Proverbs or the Hebrew word for "wisdom" (sophia) with regard to the preexistence of Christ. Also, Pr 8:22-25 declare that Wisdom was made, formed, and born, but Christ is coeternal with the Father. Wisdom was a spectator during creation, but Christ is the Creator (Jn 1:3; Col 1:16). Christ displays God's wisdom in atonement (1Co 1:20-25,30), in which Wisdom had no role. Christ is similar to Wisdom in some ways but far superior (Mt 12:42); He is Wisdom's source and consummate expression.

8:30-31 Wisdom was beside God, but only God was the Creator. Wisdom was rejoicing in God's creation; it would be sinful to celebrate creation without acknowledging God. Within creation, Wisdom's ultimate object of rejoicing and delighting is humankind.

8:32-34 And now draws a logical conclusion from what was just said. Because Wisdom is ancient and was with God in creation and delights in humanity, she can teach people how to be truly happy (see note at 3:13-18). The key is to listen to her, not ignore instruction (1:25; 13:18; 15:32), and desire her so much as to hang around her doors in order not to miss her invitation (9:4).

8:35-36 On life, see note at 3:22. To obtain favor is to become someone in whom the LORD delights (11:20; 12:2,22; 15:8; 18:22) and whom He blesses. This word for sin is literally "miss the mark" or "fall short" (Is 65:20), an apt contrast to finds. Harm refers to violence (Lm 2:6; Ezk 22:26; Zph 3:4) or brutality (Jr 22:3). Rejecting Wisdom is self-destructive (Pr 1:18-19,31-32; 2:18-19; 26:6; 29:6,24).

9:1-2 Lady Wisdom is preparing a banquet to dedicate her house (cp. 1Kg 8:62-66). The seven pillars, the number of perfection, suggest that it was a large, durable house. Mixed . . . wine contained honey or spices (Ps 75:8; Sg 8:2). Symbolically, she is ready to share her enjoyable and beneficial instruction.

9:3 Through her . . . servants, she calls out; the messengers speak in the name of the sender (Nm 22:5). Her servants are sages, teachers, pastors, and parents. Her invitation is very public (Pr 1:21; 8:1-4).

9:4-6 Enter is literally "turn"; it implies leaving one path in favor of another (3:7; 4:27; 5:7; 11:22; 13:14,19; 14:16,27; 16:6; 22:6). She invites the inexperienced (see note at 1:4), who lacks sense (see note at 6:30-33), to leave his path and pursue her way (see note at 1:15) that leads to life (Jn 6:27,51-58). There is no middle road (see note at Pr 4:25-27); if he does not choose Wisdom, he will end up a mocker (1:22).

9:7-9 The teacher is warned to avoid the unteachable (Mt 7:6). Dishonor could also be translated "insults" (12:16). Indirectly, this encourages the inexperienced not to become the obstinate, malevolent mocker (1:22) or the hostile wicked person (2:22), but instead the benevolent wise and righteous person who continues to learn more. The wise never reach the point where they can't become wiser still (1:5; 4:18; 12:1; 13:1; 19:25; 21:11; Mt 13:12).

9:10 The wise are teachable (10:9) because they are humble and they fear . . . the LORD (see note at 1:7).

9:11 These phrases imply both a long life and eternal life (see note at 3:22).

9:12 This verse emphasizes the individual nature of rewards and consequences (see Ezk 18), but a person's family (Pr 20:7; 23:25) and a leader's followers (11:10; 29:2,4) are also affected.

9:13 On Folly, see "fool" in note at 1:22; on rowdy, see "loud" in note at 7:11. Lady Folly is gullible (the same Hebrew word as "inexperienced"—see note at 1:4—but in her case she has chosen a path) and ignorant of morality and the consequences of choosing against it (v. 18; 4:19; 5:6; 23:35; 28:22).

9:14 While Wisdom is industrious (vv. 1-3), Folly sits. Chairs were rare in ancient times. Only kings and honored teachers sat (2Sm 19:8; 1Kg 2:12,19; Est 5:1; Ps 29:10; Mt 5:1; 23:2; Lk 4:20)—so her seat (lit "throne") was her pretentious claim of authority to rule or teach.

9:15-16 The inexperienced person (see note at 1:4) was going straight ahead, but he lacked the resolve and ability to resist the temptation to turn aside (v. 4; 4:10-19,25-27; 1Jn 2:19). Folly tempts vulnerable people (Pr 1:11; Mt 23:14-15).

9:17 Lady Wisdom offers a feast (vv. 2,5), Folly only water and bread, but her appeal is the attraction that sin has for fallen man (Ps 52:3; Jr 14:10; Mc 3:2; Jn 3:19; 1Pt 4:3).

9:18 Neither Folly (v. 13) nor fallen man knows that death is the outcome of this path (4:19; 5:3-5; 8:36; 14:12). On departed spirits, see note at 2:18-19; on Sheol, see note at 1:12.

10:1 Chapters 1-9 contain discourses on wisdom. From here to the end of the book the sayings are proverbs proper.

10:2 Ill-gotten gains are literally "treasures of wickedness," wealth obtained by harming another person.

10:3 This proverb should not be taken as a universal promise that the righteous will never go hungry in this life, but it is certainly true that the life of wisdom and righteousness tends to promote a healthy and secure lifestyle. This lifetime is destined to have its struggles. God's care for His children has its ultimate application in eternity. On the characteristics of proverbs, see the Introduction.

10:4-5 Hard work and prudence (see note at 1:3) are rewarded.

10:7 It was considered a curse to have no one remember you (Ex 17:14) or to fail to pass down your name to the next generation (Ps 109:13; cp. Ps 45:17).

10:9 On integrity, see notes at 2:7 and 11:20.

10:10 A wink was apparently some kind of signal used by dishonest people (6:13).

10:11 The things that righteous people say tend to promote eternal life (see note at 3:22).

10:12 Loving people, unlike hateful ones, are willing to put up with insults or slander and to forgive those who wrong them.

10:13-14 This is a case where two verses clarify each other, though each could stand on its own. The one who lacks sense is likely to spout off and hasten destruction, while wise and discerning people store up knowledge and speak wisely, avoiding public condemnation in this life and eternal destruction as well.

10:15 This is an observation about the way things look from an earthly perspective. Other proverbs, including the next verse, teach long-term and eternal principles about wealth and poverty (11:28; 18:10-11).

10:18 This verse does not mean a person should display hatred. Rather, the person who has hatred concealed within himself inevitably tells lies.

10:21 The righteous produce life-giving nourishment (v. 11), while fools cannot even keep themselves alive.

10:22 If wealth is gained apart from acknowledgment of God's blessing, often all kinds of struggle accompany it—greedy "friends," legal trouble, fear of loss (Mt 6:19), and the temptation of pride (Dt 8:17-18).

10:24 This observation on the wicked is often valid in this life and always true in eternity.

10:26 Vinegar, or soured wine, had an astringent quality that irritated the teeth.

10:27 On life, see note at 3:22.

10:29 The honorable do not dread the imposition of truth (Rm 13:3), but when God's kingdom comes (Mt 6:10) and every knee bows to Christ (Php 2:10), the way of the L ORD will be destruction, in the ultimate sense, for the malicious (Am 5:18-20; 7:7-9).

10:30 This proverb uses promised-land terminology (cp. 2:22). Just as disobedient Israel was sent into exile, so the wicked will not remain in God's grace.

10:31 The person who speaks what is perverse (see note at 2:12) will be excluded from the community and ultimately from God's presence (Lv 18:29).

10:32 The Hebrew word translated what is appropriate also means "favor, delight" (8:35).

11:1 On dishonest scales, see Dt 25:13-16.

11:2 Pride makes a person an obstinate fool or mocker (see note at 1:22) who will be disgraced (13:18). Wisdom comes from the fear of the Lord (9:10), which comes from faith and presupposes humility—giving up pride and self-sufficiency.

11:3 Integrity implies genuineness and reliability. Perversity implies subversion and deceit, treachery (see note at 2:20-22) and destructiveness.

11:5 To clear a path is literally to make it straight, to improve it so it is easy to walk on. A blameless person will not grow weary or fall on such a path and so will reach his destination.

11:7 This verse implies that when a righteous person dies, his hope does not vanish. The book of Proverbs supports this implication of eternal rewards, including verses 6 and 8 here (see note at 3:22).

11:9 Though the ungodly spread slander, the righteous are rescued through their own knowledge and that of their acquaintances. Those who know them realize the slander is untrue.

11:12 On lacks sense, see note at 6:30-33.

11:13 A gossip spreads slander (Lv 19:16; Jr 6:28; 9:4; Ezk 22:9).

11:16 This proverb teaches that there is something more important than riches (cp. v. 28; 22:1). It is also significant that one gracious woman might obtain a greater reward than many violent men.

11:17 The kind man is one who acts with faithful love (Hb chesed ; see note at 19:22). He looks out for others. Conversely, the cruel man is merciless and unfaithful, having no concern for others.

11:18 The empty wage is insubstantial, deceptive—its appearance differs from reality. The true reward is dependable. There is a Hebrew pun in this verse. The word for "empty" is sheqer and the word for "reward" is seker .

11:19 On life, see note at 3:22.

11:20 This proverb has connections to 10:9; 19:1; and 28:6. The word blameless here is related to the word "integrity" in those three verses above (see note at 2:7); twisted here is related to "perverts" in 10:9, "deceitful" in 19:1, and "distorted" in 28:6 (see "crooked" in note at 2:15); and conduct is related to "his ways" in 10:9 and "right and wrong" in 28:6. So a poor man with integrity (19:1; 28:6), and whose conduct is blameless, is well off because the Lord delights in him. Conversely, the person with a twisted mind or deceitful lips (19:1), who perverts his ways (10:9) and distorts right and wrong (28:6), is at a great disadvantage, even if he is rich, because he will be found out (10:9) and is detestable to the LORD . If he persists, he's a fool (Hb kesiyl ; 19:1).

11:21 Be assured is literally "hand to hand." It may mean that it is as sure as a contract solemnized by a handshake (6:1). On not go unpunished, see note at 6:27-29. Righteousness is so powerful that even the next generation of the righteous is likely to escape eternal death due to the influence a parent's righteousness has on their offspring (Ex 20:6; cp. Ezk 18).

11:22 The pig was an unclean animal; no amount of adornment could make up for this fundamental defect.

11:23 The righteous . . . desire to do good to others, and this turns out well for them. The wicked intend wrath for others, but their only hope for the future is wrath upon themselves.

11:24 To give freely is literally to "scatter"—to be generous without worrying about where the blessings fall.

11:26 The king of Moab refused to sell grain to the traveling Israelites and came under God's curse (Dt 2:26-31), while Joseph sold grain during a famine and was blessed (Gn 41:56; 47:13-20).

11:29 To inherit the wind is to end up with nothing.

11:30 The second part of this verse is difficult. The Hebrew reads literally "the one taking lives is wise." Elsewhere in the Bible the phrase "to take a life" is always negative (1:19; 1Sm 24:11; 1Kg 19:10,14; Ps 31:13; Ezk 33:6); it never means "to win a soul." But it doesn't fit with the rest of Scripture to say that the person who kills people is wise, so there must be another explanation. The LXX implies that the original Hebrew might have read "violence" (chamas) instead of "wise" (chakam) . That is how the HCSB has translated it.

11:31 How much more argues from the lesser to the greater (15:11; 17:7; 19:7,10; 21:27). This is not to say that the punishment of the wicked is more certain than the blessing of the righteous. But if God's impartial judgment begins with the righteous, then the sinful will not escape (1Pt 4:18).

12:1 Obviously the stupid person is one without average human intelligence (30:2). But something more is in view here. The "stupid" person is more like a brutish, irrational animal (Ps 73:22). That he hates correction reveals a heart problem more than a head problem.

12:2 On schemes, see "discretion" in note at 1:4.

12:4 This is the same Hebrew phrase as that in the portrayal of the capable wife in 31:10 and the description of Ruth as "a woman of noble character" (Ru 3:11). Rottenness in the bones implies loss of joy and strength.

12:8 The Hebrew word for insight is related to prudence (see "wise instruction" in note at 1:3).

12:9 On better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17. To have one servant signified a modest standard of living in ancient times.

12:10 What the wicked person thinks is merciful is still cruel.

12:11 The opposite of productive works is the pursuit of fantasies or delusions, such as get-rich-quick schemes, gambling, or idly "waiting for my ship to come in."

12:14 After a person accomplishes good things through his words, good in turn will provide a reward for him (8:10; 13:2,21; 18:20).

12:17 This is courtroom terminology. The person who speaks the truth is the opposite of the false witness who has first-hand knowledge but utters lies (6:19; 14:5,25; 19:5,9). To declare what is right is to provide the necessary information for a correct verdict, which could literally save the life of an innocent person (14:25).

12:18 Speaking rashly, without thinking, could involve either saying something inconsiderate (Nm 20:10; Ps 106:33) or making reckless vows (Lv 5:4).

12:20 Peace is the opposite of evil in the sense that success or welfare is the opposite of disaster (Is 45:7; Jr 29:11).

12:22 On detestable, see note at 3:32.

12:23 On shrewd, see note at 1:4. The shrewd person holds his tongue unless the situation is right. What he has is knowledge. The foolish (Hb kesiyl) person does not restrain himself. What's worse, his speech is pure stupidity (see note at 5:23).

12:24 For examples of forced labor, see Ex 1:11; Jdg 1:28; 1Kg 5:13-14; 12:18; Lm 1:1.

12:26 The righteous man literally "spies out" (Nm 13:2) or "investigates" (Ec 7:25) his neighbor to make sure he will not mislead him.

12:27 The lazy man (v. 24; 10:4; 19:15; cp. "slacker" in note at 6:6) has failed to put in the time it takes to obtain any game, but the diligent man has obtained precious . . . wealth. This proverb may also imply that the lazy man does not finish what he started and roast what he has brought home, so it goes to waste, but the diligent man takes care of what God has given him.

12:28 On life, see note at 3:22.

13:2-4 These three verses have the Hebrew multipurpose word nephesh ("soul, self, appetite, throat, or mouth"; see note at v. 19). Treacherous people (see note at 2:20-22) will not receive good things and in fact have no appetite (nephesh) for them. Instead, their treachery will backfire as violence (4:17), that is, fierceness, ruthlessness, or malice. In 13:3 the wise man guards his mouth (nephesh). In verse 4 nephesh is implied. The slacker . . . has nothing for his mouth (Hb nephesh), but the mouth (nephesh) of the diligent is fully satisfied.

13:5 Act disgustingly is literally "stink" (Gn 34:30; Ex 5:21).

13:6 Undermines is literally "overturns," but it implies being frustrated or subverted (Ex 23:8; Dt 16:19; Jb 12:19) and brought to ruin (Pr 19:3; 21:12; 22:12).

13:7 One person pretends to have the blessings that are reserved for the wise and righteous and demands social status that he does not deserve. The other covers up his blessings—perhaps so he doesn't have to share with the needy—and does not give God the glory.

13:8 No one should trust in riches (11:28), and you cannot buy eternal life (Ps 49:5-9). However, it is an accurate observation that a rich man can pay a ransom to save his earthly life. The poor man doesn't have to worry because no gangster would typically bother with him. Another possible meaning is that the rich man is able to respond to the rebuke (another meaning of threat) of those whom he has wronged and is willing to give all his money to make his life right. However, if a poor person is rebuked for his guilt, he is forced to ignore the rebuke and endure the guilt.

13:9 On lamp, see note at 20:20.

13:11 The Hebrew word for fraud here is hevel, the word translated "futility" in Ecclesiastes. It is literally "breath" or "vapor," something with no substance. Here it means "ill-gotten" or "rashly" (10:2; 12:11). The same word is used to say that wealth is a "vanishing mist" (21:6) and beauty is "fleeting" (31:30).

13:13 To have contempt for instruction is to despise the Lord's word. Such a person is always condemned (Nm 15:31; 2Sm 12:9; 2Ch 36:16; cp. 1Sm 2:17). Pay the penalty is literally "pledge collateral to it," in other words, be in debt to it.

13:15 Good sense is literally "insight of good" (see "insight" in note at 1:3). Sensible people can advance by winning the favor of God and men, while the treacherous cannot improve the way they go.

13:17 Accurate news and effective diplomacy benefited the officials and communities served by a good courier.

13:19 The Hebrew word for taste is nephesh (see note at vv. 2-4). The desires of the righteous will be fulfilled (v. 25; 10:24; 11:23) because they fear God and turn from evil (3:7; 14:16). Fools (Hb kesiyl) refuse to turn from evil because good disgusts them (29:27); therefore, their desires will not be fulfilled.

13:22 The Hebrew word for wealth can stand for "strength" as well. The sinner's possessions along with all his capabilities and resources are granted to the righteous.

13:23 The field that went uncultivated could refer to the marginal lands that the poor were forced to live on, or to the fields that were supposed to be left fallow on the Sabbatical Year for the sake of the poor (Ex 23:10-11; Lv 25:1-7). In the latter case, the lack of justice was the failure to observe the command (Lv 26:34-35,43; 2Ch 36:21).

13:24 Parents who love their children seek diligently to apply the best and most appropriate method of discipline (Heb 12:5-11). In some cases that is the rod (22:15; 23:13-14; 29:15), which is appropriate punishment for the fool (10:3; 26:3). Only a parent who hates his child would withhold discipline and permit him to remain a fool, knowing that foolishness leads to misery, shame, and ultimately death.

14:1 This wise woman is not wisdom personified, as in chapters 8-9, but a flesh-and-blood woman. Solomon is urging his son (1:8) to look for a wise woman (31:10) to build up a house (the word can also mean "household"; see note at 3:33). Women in turn are encouraged to be the kind who build rather than tear down.

Replica of an open courtyard of a typical Old Testament dwelling (14:1). Shown are mortar and pestle, storage pot, ladder to a sleeping loft, and an oven with a cooking pot.

14:4 Empty could also be translated “clean” in the sense of “pure.” You don’t have to worry about having feed on hand and cleaning up after oxen if you don’t have any, but you also won’t have an abundant harvest. Sometimes the benefits of an investment outweigh the costs and inconveniences involved.

14:5 A person can tell the quality of testimony by considering the character of the witness (cp. 6:19; 27:21).

14:6 Because of the pride of a mocker (21:24; see note at 1:22), God does not respond to his seeking (3:34); humility must precede wisdom (15:33). Mockers are skeptical and therefore do not take in knowledge. The perceptive person, while not naive, is still open to learning (vv. 15,18; 8:9).

14:8 This verse says literally the stupidity (Hb ewiyl ; see notes at 1:7 and 5:23) of fools (Hb kesiyl ; see note at 1:22) is deceit. This could mean that they deceive themselves through their own stupidity, or that their stupidity is evident in the deceit they practice on others.

14:9 It is safe to conclude that the upright respect the need for restitution, and fools enjoy no goodwill.

14:10 No one can completely know what another person’s heart is feeling.

While it is good to try to empathize (Rm 12:15), God alone knows our hearts fully (1Kg 8:39; Ps 44:21; Pr 15:11; Lk 9:47; 16:15; Ac 1:24; 15:8), and He sympathizes with our trials (Heb 4:15).

14:11 Stand is literally "sprout"—it grows with new life.

14:12 On end, see note at 5:11.

14:14 Although things don't always look fair in this life, in eternity everyone will get (lit "be satiated with") what they deserve. A disloyal person is literally "one whose heart turned back." He set out on the good way but then turned back (Heb 6:4-6).

14:15 While the mocker rejects everything (see note at v. 6), the inexperienced person accepts anything. He will inevitably be led astray. The sensible person is guided by godly wisdom to "watch" (lit "understand") his own steps—to practice discretion.

14:16 The Hebrew word translated is cautious is literally "fears." This could imply that a wise man fears the Lord and turns from evil (3:7; 16:6). In contrast, the fool's (Hb kesiyl) hot temper gets him into trouble. He is careless or self-confident because he thinks he is secure (see note at 1:33), but he is wrong.

14:17 A quick-tempered man does bad things impetuously because he doesn't think first. A schemer (see "discretion" in note at 1:4) does bad things purposely because he is malicious (24:8). Neither thrives. The former squanders his life in foolishness (14:29), and the latter is hated and condemned (12:2).

14:18 Inexperienced people (see note at 1:4) who refuse to seek wisdom remain naive and gullible and thus inherit (see note at 3:35) foolishness.

14:19 It is implied that the wicked will bow down to the righteous. The gates of cities were where judgment took place, suggesting that the righteous person will have a prominent place in the city (31:23) and stand in judgment of the wicked. This does not always prove to be true in this life, but it will certainly be true in eternity.

14:20 This is not a promise or endorsement (see the next verse); it is an astute observation of human nature.

14:21 On happy, see note at 3:13-18.

14:22 On loyalty and faithfulness, see note at 3:3.

14:23 Endless talk is literally "words of the lips"; it could also be translated "mere words" (2Kg 18:20). Hard work is labor that is physically or emotionally draining. Outside of the Lord's blessing, it is vain (10:22; Ps 127:1-2). But diligent work (Pr 6:6-11) is better than recklessness (21:5), idleness (10:4), fraud (13:11), or get-rich-quick schemes (28:20).

14:24 On crown, see note at 4:9. Fools (Hb kesiyl) end up where they started.

14:25 On truthful and utters lies, see note at 12:17.

14:26 On strong confidence, see note at 21:22.

14:27 This proverb is the same as 13:14 except that the fear of the L ORD is in place of "a wise man's instruction." The two ideas are nearly interchangeable because wisdom presupposes the fear of the Lord (9:10; 15:33).

14:28 When a ruler's followers desert him, he can be devastated or terrified (1Sm 13:11-12; 30:6; 1Kg 12:1-20).

14:29 Patient is literally "slow at becoming angry." Outside of Proverbs, the phrase is always used of God in the OT (Ex 34:6; Nm 14:18; Neh 9:17; Ps 86:15; 103:8; 145:8; Is 48:9; Jr 15:15; Jl 2:13; Jnh 4:2; Nah 1:3).

14:30 It is not wrong to be passionate or zealous for a proper cause (Nm 25:11; 1Kg 19:10; Ps 69:9), but a person should not be envious or jealous of sinners (Pr 3:31; 23:17; 24:1,19) or of the assignment God has given to others (Ps 106:16; Ec 4:4; Jms 3:16).

14:32 Even while he is dying or after his death (the Hebrew is ambiguous), the righteous person looks for and finds refuge in the Lord.

14:33 Wisdom among fools (Hb kesiyl) is merely known; among the discerning, she literally "comes to rest."

14:34 While many proverbs promote personal ethics, this proverb takes ethics to a national level.

14:35 Servant of a king probably refers to a royal official, not a household slave.

15:1 The Hebrew word used to describe a gentle answer is related to that used to describe Josiah's "tender heart" in 2Kg 22:19. He demonstrated humility, not obstinacy. The word also describes how a wound is "soothed" or softened with oil (Is 1:6). A soothing answer is not ineffective (Pr 25:15). Harsh word is literally "word of pain."

15:3 The Hebrew word for observing or being vigilant implies that proper action will be taken with regard to what is observed. It is used of the capable wife who watches over her household (31:27), of the watchman in Ezekiel who is obligated to sound the alarm (Ezk 33:6), and of God Himself who watches and judges the nations (Ps 66:7).

15:4 Heals could also be translated "is tranquil." The author may have intended both meanings. A tranquil tongue heals, and a healing tongue must surely be tranquil (v. 1). Both concepts are also the opposite of fracturing the spirit.

15:6 This Hebrew word for wealth includes produce, possessions, and treasures. The trouble could refer to the destruction that a wicked person causes others in order to gain income, but in Proverbs it usually refers to the ruin he brings on himself (v. 27; 11:17,29).

15:8 God hates the sacrifice of those who do not honor Him because they take an occasion for confession and reduce it to magic—the attempt to manipulate a god through ritual (1Sm 15:22; Is 1:10-17; Jr 7:22-23; Hs 6:6; Am 5:21-24; Mt 23:23). The prayer of the upright is offered in faith and worship (Heb 11:6).

15:10 This verse refers to the path of life (v. 24; 5:6; 10:17), the path of the righteous (4:18; 8:20; 12:28), or the right path (3:6). The person who leaves the path is the same as the one who hates correction; such people are condemned to eternal death (2:11-19).

15:11 Sheol is the grave (see note at 1:12), and Abaddon (Jb 26:6; 28:22; 31:12; Ps 88:11) is the "place of destruction." Sheol is the realm of both the righteous and the unrighteous dead. It is generally observed that one cannot see God from Sheol (Ps 6:5) and can never hope to get out (Jb 7:9; Ps 89:48; cp. Lk 16:26), but God can see into Sheol and He can bring His elect out (Ps 16:10; 30:3; 49:15; 86:13; Hs 13:14). If God can see into the obscure depths of the grave, how much more (see note at 11:31) can He see the recesses of human hearts.

15:12 On mocker, see note at 1:22.

15:13 In this proverb sadness seems to affect a person more deeply than joy since the heart is more profound than the face. Perhaps Solomon wanted to scare his readers away from a lifestyle that might lead to such despair.

15:14 On discerning, see note at 1:5.

15:15 The parallelism in this verse suggests that even if a person is oppressed and miserable, if he has a cheerful heart he can experience a virtual continual feast.

15:16-17 These are typical examples of better . . . than proverbs (12:9; 16:8,19; 17:1; 19:1; 27:5,10; 28:6; cp. 3:14; 8:11,19). In each proverb of this type, two categories are considered. Having little or none of one and a lot of the other is compared with the other way around. In 15:16 one category is wealth and the other is a good relationship with God. A little wealth and a very good relationship with God (characterized by fear) are better than a lot of wealth and little relationship with God (which brings turmoil). In verse 17 one category is lavish food and the other is family love. Having no lavish food and a lot of love is better than having the best food and no love. That a person who fears the Lord may have little speaks to the fact that righteousness is not always immediately rewarded in this life.

A meal is a daily allowance, like that given a traveler (Jr 40:5). Vegetables were the normal, everyday food. A fattened ox was a great luxury (Lk 15:23). While normally an ox would be worked during its life then slaughtered when it was old and tough, a fattened ox was kept in a stall and carefully fed, then slaughtered in its prime. The result was moist and tender meat, but the profit from the labor of the animal was forfeited.

15:18 The Hebrew word translated strife here is also used for a lawsuit or court case (18:17; 22:23; 23:11; 25:9; see Ex 23:2; Hs 4:1), but it often has a nonlegal sense of a dispute or quarrel (Pr 17:1,14; 18:6; 20:3; 26:17,21; 30:33). On hot-tempered, see note at 14:17; on conflict, see "trouble" in note at 6:14; on slow to anger, see note at 14:29.

15:19 A hedge made from thorns was a painful obstacle (Is 5:5; cp. Mc 7:4). A highway was an efficient road built up and cleared of obstacles.

15:20 The fool (Hb kesiyl) despises his mother because she offers wisdom (1:8; 31:1) and requires obedience (30:17)—both of which the fool hates (1:7).

15:21 Foolishness implies moral waywardness. The person who lacks sense (see note at 6:30-33) actually finds pleasure in sinning (10:23; Heb 11:25). The man with understanding knows that even if he does not receive a reward in this life, there is a great reward in heaven (Lk 16:25; Heb 12:2).

15:22 On plans, see "schemes" in note at 16:9. Counsel is private, personal advice from intimate friends. In 3:32 God is a "friend" (same Hb word) "to the upright." Independent, selfish fools don't seek out advice (13:10; 18:1) and fail. Advisers (see "counselors" in 11:14) are generally advantageous, but those who speak contrary to the Lord's will bring failure (19:21; cp. Dt 13:1-3; 1Kg 12:13-15; 22:1-37).

15:23 This Hebrew word for answer means the most appropriate and effective thing to say in the given circumstance (v. 1; 16:1). The failure of Job's friends to answer his speeches angered Elihu (Jb 32:3,5).

15:24 On discerning, see "wise/prudent" in note at 1:3. Solomon understood God's revelation about eternal life. The discerning person is on the path of life because he trusts in the Lord (3:22; 16:20) and thereby avoids going to Sheol.

15:25 The widow represents those who were vulnerable to wicked, greedy people. God Himself protects the widow's territory (lit her "boundary") from those who might move the boundary markers (22:28; 23:10).

15:26 On detests (v. 8; 21:27; 28:9), see note at 3:32. Pure is "ceremonially clean," acceptable to offer to God.

15:27 On profits dishonestly, see note at 1:19. There are two Hebrew words for a bribe (21:14 has both words). This one, mattan/mattanah, often is simply a "gift" (18:16; 19:6), but in the context of dishonest profit it clearly represents a bribe. The other word, shochad (17:8,23), is never a gift without strings attached. God hates bribes because they subvert justice (17:23; cp. 18:5; Dt 16:19; Ps 15:5; Ec 7:7; Is 5:23). Therefore, the person who hates bribes agrees with God, and the one who totally agrees with God—that is, who has the mind of Christ—will live (Rm 7:16; 1Co 2:16; 1Tm 6:3).

15:29 To say that the Lord is far from somebody is not a limit on His omnipresence, but refers to losing out on His communion, favor, and help (Gn 3:8,23; Ps 22:12,19; 35:22; 38:21; 71:12). Sometimes God moved away from Israel (Ezk 8:6), but sometimes Israel moved away from God (Jr 2:5). In both cases the cause was sin. It is impossible for God and sin to dwell together (Ps 5:4).

15:30 The phrase bright eyes implies spiritual vitality (29:13; cp. Ezr 9:8; Ps 13:3; 19:8; 38:10). Bones represent the inner core, the seat of health (3:8; cp. Jb 20:11; 21:24). To strengthen the bones is literally to "make them fat," to satiate them. Thus good news refreshes and strengthens a person (25:25).

15:31-32 To be at home is literally "to spend the night." To ignore or neglect the Lord's counsel and discipline is not just harmful (13:18), it is ultimately fatal (1:25,32). To do so is to despise or reject one's very self. To acquire good sense is literally to "buy a heart" (19:8; cp. "lacks sense" at 6:32).

15:33 The phrase what wisdom teaches probably means "the instruction that results in wisdom." Humility and the fear of the LORD are prerequisites for gaining wisdom and honor (see notes at 1:7; 3:16; 14:6; 18:12; cp. 9:10).

16:1 The Hebrew word translated reflections has to do with arranging things in an orderly manner. On answer, see note at 15:23.

16:2 To evaluate something is to compare it with a standard. If a man's ways are not compared to God's standards, it will all seem right or pure (20:11; cp. Jb 11:4; 33:9). But the LORD evaluates the inner motives (lit the "spirit") of a man (cp. "hearts" in 24:12 and "actions" in 1Sm 2:3).

16:3 On achieved, see "established" in note at 4:25-27.

16:4 Prepared could also be translated "created"; either way God is sovereign. A day of disaster is literally an "evil day."

16:5 Proud is literally "high" (cp. 18:12). The same word describes "haughty" eyes (Ps 101:5) or a "proud" spirit (Ec 7:8). All of these imply arrogance, thinking oneself better than anyone, including God. On detestable, see note at 3:32; on be assured, see note at 11:21; on not go unpunished, see note at 6:27-29.

16:6 The fear of the LORD (see note at 1:7) represents faith, and loyalty and faithfulness (see note at 3:3) represent good works that demonstrate faith (Jms 2:14-26). Such works of faith atone (see Lv 23:27; Is 6:7) for wickedness in the past and turn a person away from following an evil path in the future.

16:7 The Hebrew is ambiguous whether it is a man or God that transforms his enemies. Often those who have a right relationship with God are respected (Gn 26:28; 33:4; 1Sm 2:26; 2Ch 17:10; Lk 2:52; Ac 2:46-47; Rm 12:18). However, there are also cases where the righteous are persecuted (2Tm 3:12).

16:8 Choosing righteousness or injustice in this life determines where a person spends eternity. On better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17.

16:9 This word for plans in Proverbs usually involves wicked schemes (v. 30; 24:8; cp. Ps 140:2; Nah 1:9), but it can also refer to good strategies and tactics (Pr 12:5; 16:3; 21:5) or thinking deeply about something (Ps 73:16; 119:59). Even good plans can only be established by the sovereign Lord (Pr 16:3; 19:21). On determines, see "established" in note at 4:25-27.

16:10 God's verdict is literally "divination," which is usually condemned, but the Hebrew word can refer to seeking God legitimately (Ps 27:4). In this context it refers to a king seeking God's mind when passing judgment. Because God expects a king to be just (v. 12; cp. 1Kg 10:9; Is 16:5; Jr 22:15; 23:5), and because his subjects look at a king's verdict as if it came from God Himself (1Sm 29:9; 2Sm 14:17,20; 19:27), the king has a great responsibility to judge fairly. Ultimately, God causes the king to fulfill His will (Pr 21:1).

16:12 A wise king will find wicked behavior . . . detestable because he knows that nothing is established apart from God's will (vv. 3,9; 4:26), and only those kings who rule with righteousness will gain God's favor (20:28; 25:5; 29:4,14; Dt 17:18-20).

16:13 A wise king knows that dishonest counselors can be disastrous (1Kg 12; 22).

16:14-15 A king of ancient times held the power of life and death. Thus unlike a jealous but powerless husband's rage (6:35), a king's fury could be appeased (the same Hb word as "atoned" in v. 6). Spring rain symbolized life because it gave a boost to the grain and fruit crops before harvest.

16:16 On get, see note at 4:5-8; cp. 23:23.

16:19 It is better to avoid the proud who are destined for destruction (v. 18) and those pursuing plunder who are self-destructive (1:13,18). Furthermore, the humble will receive grace from God (3:34) and gain honor (29:23). On "better . . . than" proverbs, see note at 15:16-17.

16:20 The person who understands a matter could also be translated "the one who attends to business" or "the one who pays attention to the way" (Ps 101:2). The Hebrew for "understands" implies prudence (see note at Pr 1:3). On happy, see note at 3:13-18.

16:21 On discerning, see note at 1:5. Pleasant speech is literally "sweetness of lips." "Sweetness" is used literally for honey (24:13; Jdg 14:18; Ps 19:10; Ezk 3:3) and metaphorically for something that is revitalizing or encouraging (Pr 16:24).

16:22 The internal fountain of life that insight (see note at 12:8) provides to its possessor is comparable to what Christ is for Christians (Jn 4:14). It is possible that the discipline (see note at 1:2) of fools is referring to the teaching that fools try to do, which results in mere folly, but more likely it means that through their own folly, fools are disciplined. They reap the punishment of their errant lifestyle (6:33; 14:14,24; 19:3).

16:24 One expects anything medicinal to be bitter and anything sweet to be harmful, but pleasant words—morally uplifting speech—are both sweet and health-giving.

16:26 This worker is one who struggles in miserable labor (Ec 2:18,22). On appetite, see note at 13:2-4. The slacker is not similarly motivated (21:25).

16:27 The Hebrew word translated digs up could also be translated "purchases" or "cooks up." However he gets it, the worthless man (see note at 6:12) is intent on using evil destructively.

16:28 A contrary man is one who distorts speech, who turns things upside down, who "says perverse things" (see notes at 2:12 and 10:31). It may be that he speaks his own lies or that he subverts others' speech by the way he spins it. A gossip is someone who grumbles (Dt 1:27; Ps 106:25; Is 29:24) or finds fault but avoids open discussion or confrontation.

16:29 On violent, see note at 3:31. Sinners often want to lure others to join them in sin (see "entice" in notes at 1:4 and 1:10) to excuse their own sinfulness. Misbehavior, like misery, loves company.

16:30 Narrowing one's eyes and compressing one's lips might refer to subtle nonverbal cues that the wise person should be aware of, or they could refer to gestures made by those planning deceptions to signal their accomplices (6:12-14; 10:10).

16:31 The person who stays on the way of righteousness is likely to live to a ripe old age (12:28; 13:6) and attain the respect that elders deserve (Lv 19:32).

16:32 On patience, see note at 14:29. A person who does not let his passions control him is better than a powerful military hero who lacks such control.

16:33 The lot was a stone the ancient Israelites used to make decisions the same way we might roll dice or flip a coin. The lap was a fold or pocket in one's garment. Perhaps the lot was dropped into the pocket for storage, or it was shaken in the pocket, or else the pocket area was where the lot was revealed for its decision.

17:1 On better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17. Bread that is dry means either that it is old (Jos 9:5) or that there is no oil or sauce to dip it in (Ru 2:14). Peace implies security; strife is human conflict. The feasting was a communion sacrifice, which was supposed to make peace between God and the people in the house.

17:2 This is probably metaphor or hyperbole. There was no provision in the law for a servant to displace a disgraceful son, though a "rebellious" son could be stoned (Dt 21:18-21).

17:3 The crucible and smelter were small clay vessels in which metals were melted at very high temperatures to refine them. To be tested is to be evaluated to see if something is genuine. The process of testing can bring about purification (Jb 23:10). God cannot be deceived when He evaluates hearts (1Ch 29:17; Ps 7:9; 26:2; Jr 11:20; 12:3).

17:4 A wicked . . . liar makes his situation worse by listening to more of the same.

17:5 To mock someone is to treat him with ridicule and contempt (1:22). Since God made the poor (14:31), to mock them is an insult to God. God protects the disadvantaged (14:21; 15:25; 22:16,22-23). On calamity, see note at 1:26-27; on not go unpunished, see note at 6:27-29.

17:6 The crown is the celebrated symbol of status. The eldery's reward is the pride their sons and grandchildren take in them. To obtain such blessing a person needs to pursue wisdom.

17:7 Nabal, the Hebrew word used here for fool (see Nabal in 1Sm 25:25), connotes the most irreligious of fools. It is one who curses God (Jb 2:9-10) and denies His existence (Ps 14:1; cp. Is 32:6). On the other kinds of "fool," see notes at Pr 1:7 and 1:22. If it is bad for this kind of fool to chatter, even though his words will be ignored, how much more important (see note at 11:31) it is for a ruler (see "noble" in note at 8:16) to watch what he says since his words carry weight.

17:8 The magic stone is literally "a stone of favor"—a charm that makes people treat others favorably. Seems like . . . to its owner is literally "in the eyes of its master." The owner is the one who gives a bribe (see note at 15:27). He only apparently succeeds in this life; ultimately God, who hates bribes, will condemn him.

17:9 The person who conceals another person's offense is the one who literally "seeks" love. To overlook being offended (19:11), and to leave any vengeance to God, is to promote good relationships in the future.

17:10 Unlike the perceptive person, who is sensitive to a mere spoken rebuke, the fool (Hb kesiyl) is so obstinate that he does not respond to extreme discipline. A hundred lashes is hyperbole; only 40 were allowed by law (Dt 25:3).

17:11 Rebellion implies turning away from God defiantly (Dt 31:27). The word for messenger can also be translated "angel." The "cruel messenger" is God's angel of death (16:14; 1Ch 21:15; Ps 78:49).

17:12 The female Syrian brown bear had a reputation for fierceness (2Kg 2:24; Lm 3:10) that was intensified if she was robbed of her cubs (2Sm 17:8; Hs 13:8).

17:14 To stop a dispute is to "leave it alone" or drop it (26:20). On conflict, see "trouble" in note at 6:14.

17:15 Corrupt judges in Israel were acquitting the guilty and denying the innocent their day in court (Is 5:23). On detestable, see note at 3:32.

17:16 On buying wisdom, see note at 4:5-8. There is no better use for money than buying wisdom, but the fool (Hb kesiyl) is ignorant of that fact or obstinately against it (with no intention is lit "but there is no heart").

17:17 The purpose of a brother is to uphold a family member in a difficult time. The Hebrew word can be used generally of relatives (Gn 13:8; 29:15; Jdg 14:3). An unlikely but possible interpretation is that a friend is better because he loves at all times, not just in difficult times.

17:18 On enters an agreement and puts up security, see note at 6:1; on without sense, see note at 6:30-33.

17:19 It is necessary to step over the threshold to enter a house. A high threshold would be hard to step over, possibly causing injury to guests. Or a high threshold could indicate someone who arrogantly built his house on a mound or hill above his neighbors. Such a proud person invites the Lord's destruction on himself (16:5).

17:20 Twisted and deceitful are both literally "turned" around, like those who call evil good (28:6,18).

17:21 The first kind of fool (Hb kesiyl) is immoral, obstinate, and dangerous (see note at 1:22). The second kind (Hb nabal) is sacrilegious (see note at 17:7).

17:22 In 15:13 a joyful heart causes a good face; here it is a good cure. A sad heart produces a broken spirit (see note at 15:13). Dried-up bones represent people who have lost their vitality (Ezk 37:11). The opposite would be bones saturated with marrow or oil (Jb 21:24; Ps 109:18).

17:23 The word secretly is literally "from the bosom" (cp. "covert" in 21:14), which elsewhere means from inside the folds of one's cloak (Ex 4:7) or from being wrapped in one's arms (1Kg 17:19). On bribe, see note at 15:27.

17:24 Wisdom is literally "with the face of" the perceptive, that is, he is facing it. The ends of the earth is a place far from the chosen people of Israel, out where ungodly people are (Dt 13:7; 28:49). The "fool" (Hb kesiyl) looks for easy income, illegal profit, or ways to avoid hard work.

17:25 Bitterness is misery, not malice (Jr 6:26).

17:26 The innocent person is literally "righteous." On noble, see note at 8:16; on honesty, see "upright" in note at 2:7.

17:27-28 In Egyptian wisdom, which shared some concepts of Israelite wisdom, to be cool or dispassionate was the ideal personality type. Jesus was the ultimate example of restraint (Is 53:7; Mk 14:61). There is an implied a fortiori argument here: if even a fool (Hb ewiyl) is considered wise when . . . silent, how much more will an intelligent person be respected for restraint. On discerning, see note at 1:5.

18:1 Desires are cravings (21:25-26; cp. Nm 11:4; Ps 10:3). Sound judgment is competence (3:21; 8:14) that leads to success (see note at 2:7).

18:3 This is probably not teaching that a wicked man brings contempt, dishonor, and disgrace to others. Instead, society dishonors him.

18:4 This could be saying that good speech can be really deep and meaningful —a source of wisdom. Or it could mean that typical human speech is often useless (20:5), but wisdom's fountain is a useful, flowing river.

18:5 To show partiality is literally to "lift the face." It may refer to a superior lifting his own face and looking on an inferior with a smile and a favorable judgment (Nm 6:26; cp. Ps 4:6), or to the inferior who had been bowed and groveling on the ground having his face or head lifted by the superior in vindication (Gn 40:13; Jb 11:15). Besides partiality, it means that the inferior "appeases" the superior (Pr 6:35) and that the superior "accepts" (Jb 42:9) or "grants the request of" the inferior (Gn 19:21; 1Sm 25:35). To pervert justice is literally "to turn aside from judgment" (Is 29:21; Am 5:12; Mal 3:5).

18:6-7 Lips and mouth refer to what the fool (Hb kesiyl) says, which causes trouble, escalating from strife and a beating to devastation (or terror) and ultimately to death.

18:8 On gossip, see note at 16:28. Choice food is readily and greedily swallowed. The words go down to the hearer's innermost being (lit "chamber of the belly") where they infect his thinking and poison his heart.

18:9 To be truly lazy is to sink down, relax, and let go to the point of being slack, feeble, or ineffective. Brother implies solidarity—that he has the same characteristics (Jb 30:29) and supports the same causes (cp. "companion" in Pr 28:24). Vandal is literally "master (Hb ba'al) of destruction" (cp. "skilled at destruction" in Ezk 21:31).

18:10-11 These two proverbs illustrate a genuine and an imaginary refuge, respectively. A strong tower was a central place in a region or city to which people could run when threatened (Jdg 9:51). Yahweh's name implies His character as the eternal, powerful, faithful, covenant-keeping God (Ex 3:15; 6:6-7; Dt 7:9). The righteous people, who call on, rely upon, and have faith in the character of God, will be protected (lit "exalted" or lifted up so the enemy cannot reach them). A rich man relies on his wealth when he is threatened. To him it seems like a high (lit "exalted") wall around a fortified city (cp. 10:15), but that is only in his imagination. In reality, wealth cannot save (11:28; cp. Jb 31:24-28; 36:18-19; Ps 49; 52:5-7; Mt 16:26; Mk 10:24-25).

18:12 This proverb goes beyond 16:5,18 to teach that humility brings honor (see note at 3:16; cp. 15:33; 22:4; 29:23; see also "wisdom" in note at 11:2). This Hebrew word for "humility" implies being bowed down by affliction and then, when affliction shows that we are not self-sufficient, having a trusting relationship with God.

18:15 Unlike the fool who hates knowledge (1:22), refuses to listen (18:13), and does not intend to buy wisdom (17:16), the wise seek to hear knowledge (see note at 1:4), and the discerning (see note at 1:5) mind acquires (see note at 4:5-8) knowledge.

18:16 This gift is a bribe (see note at 15:27). It "makes room" or provides relief and brings . . . a man safely (the word is used of shepherds leading their sheep) into the presence of important people, such as kings and judges. This is an astute observation: bribery appears to work (17:8; 19:6; 21:14). However, only those who hate bribes will ultimately prosper (15:27).

18:17 To cross-examine is literally to "search," to diligently test or scrutinize to find what is hidden (25:2; 28:11).

18:18 On the lot, see note at 16:33. Flipping a coin can put an end to even the harshest argument. This is the only place in Proverbs where separates has a good sense (cp. v. 1; 16:28; 17:9; 19:4).

18:19 The brother is offended, having suffered a perceived loss or crime. Metal bars were used to reinforce the doors of a fortress. It was nearly impossible to get through in order to reconcile the situation.

18:20 Fruit is the harvest that results over time from what was initiated, as wheat comes from a sown field. Satisfied and filled are the same word in Hebrew. In a bad sense it can mean "glutted" (25:16-17). The approach a person takes in his speech will return to him. If his speech is wicked, he will get his fill of depravity (1:31); if his speech is honorable, he will get all the good things he needs (12:14; cp. 14:14; 28:19).

18:21 The tongue is powerful (Jms 3:1-12). Those who love the tongue and eat its fruit are those who choose to live or die under its power, like those who live by the sword (Gn 27:40; Mt 26:52), by the law (Neh 9:29; Ezk 20:11; Rm 10:5; Gl 3:12), or by faith (Hab 2:4; Rm 1:17; Gl 3:11). Prudent speech brings life (v. 20; 12:14; 13:2; 21:23), and wicked or excessive speech brings death (13:3; Mt 15:18-19).

18:22 The good thing is literally abstract "good"; in other contexts it is translated "success" (16:20; 17:20; 19:8). On favor, see note at 19:6.

18:24 The first friends are neighbors or companions, who may be attracted by money (19:4). The second kind of friend is literally "one who loves." Jesus is such a friend to His followers (Jn 15:13-14).

19:1 On poor and integrity, see note at 11:20; on better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17.

19:2 Zeal is literally "appetite, desire" (Hb nephesh; see note at 13:2-4). Romans 10:2 reinforces this proverb.

19:3 It is the fool's (Hb ewiyl) own fault when foolishness literally "undermines his way" (see note at 13:6), but because he is obstinate (see note at 1:7), he gets angry at God.

19:4 In both cases these are false friends (see note at 18:24; cp. 16:28; 17:9). On wealth, see "possessions" in note at 3:9-10.

19:5 On not go unpunished, see note at 6:27-29. God sees to it that liars will not escape judgment (v. 9; 11:21).

19:6 On "ruler," see "noble" in note at 8:16. To seek . . . favor is literally "to make the face pleasant" (18:5). It is used when an inferior is petitioning a superior, trying to get him to "smile" at him (Ex 32:11; 1Sm 13:12; Jb 11:19; see note at Pr 18:5). This is sometimes done through gifts or offerings (Ps 45:12), which may degenerate into bribery (Pr 15:27). It is better to wait on the Lord (29:26).

19:7 On how much more, see note at 11:31. These friends are like royal advisers (Gn 26:26) or a groom's attendants (Jdg 14:11,20; 15:2,6).

19:8 On acquires, see note at 4:5-8; on good sense, see notes at 6:30-33 and 8:5. Putting this proverb together with 15:32, if a person loves himself (1Sm 20:17; Mt 22:39; Eph 5:29) he should be open to discipline and should listen to correction so he can acquire good sense and ultimately find success (lit "good"; cp. 16:20). The alternative is to harm oneself and love death (8:36).

19:10 On how much less, see note at 11:31. Appropriate means "patently wrong"—not suitable or fitting, threatening to the social order (17:7; 26:1; 30:21). However, a wise slave may rightly supplant a wicked prince (see note at 17:2).

19:11 Virtue is literally a "beautiful adornment," translated "glory" in 20:29. When through insight (see notes at 1:3 and 12:8) a person gains patience (see note at 14:29), he gains the admirable capacity to overlook it when someone sins against him (10:12; 17:9; Mt 6:14-15).

19:12 A king in ancient times had great power over his subjects; he could order someone executed (2Sm 1:15; cp. Pr 16:14) or set him up for life (2Sm 9:7).

19:13 Both of these things irritate and frustrate a person. There is an Arabic word related to the Hebrew word for dripping that means "a leaky roof." Nagging is bitter conflict and discord, strife and dissension, contention and quarreling (21:9,19; 25:24; 27:15; cp. 5:18-19).

19:14 Many things are seen as arising from human activity, but a sensible wife (unlike a nagging wife, v. 13) is truly a gift from God (18:22; 31:10).

19:15 On the connection between laziness . . . sleep, and poverty, see notes at 6:4; 6:6; 6:11 and 24:30-34. In a deep sleep, a person is unaware of what is happening around him (Gn 2:21; 1Sm 26:12).

19:16 Keeps and preserves both come from the Hebrew word shamar . The commands are not just God's commandments, but instruction from any good source. Also, the mention of his ways probably does not refer directly to God's ways because God is not mentioned in context. Disregarding one's own ways has to do with not wanting to watch carefully what one is doing, not taking responsibility—the opposite of making sure that one's ways are God's ways (8:32).

19:17 God takes care of those who care for the poor (14:21,31; 22:9; 28:27). The reward (lit "repayment," related to shalom, "wholeness"; 13:13; 25:22) from God is not necessarily money and will not necessarily come in this life.

19:18 The son who is not disciplined will remain a slacker or a fool and will perish—physically and spiritually. The parent should strive not to let this happen (3:12; 5:23; 13:24; 22:15; 23:13-14; 29:15; Heb 12:5-11). As long as a son is alive, there is hope.

19:19 A person with a hot temper (see note at 14:17) should be left to pay the consequences—it is the only way he will learn.

19:20 On later in life, see "at the end" in note at 5:11.

19:21 Prevail is literally "stand" (cp. "succeed" in 15:22).

19:22 The Hebrew word chesed , translated "faithful love," can also mean fidelity (3:3; 20:6,28) or "kindness" (11:17). It is used of the faithful covenant love that God has for His people (Ex 20:6; Dt 7:9; 2Sm 7:15; Ps 23:6; Is 16:5; 54:8; Jr 31:3). There is a homonym chesed that means "shame." If every word in the first line is given a negative spin, it reads, "The craving of a human is his shame." It is better to be a faithful poor man than someone who craves what he does not have and lies to get it.

19:24 On bowl and slacker, see note at 26:15.

19:25 On inexperienced, see note at 1:4. The mocker (see note at 1:22) does not learn (13:1; 14:6; 15:12), but the discerning (see note at 1:5) is willing to learn from rebuke (9:8; 28:23).

19:27 The Hebrew does not have if; instead, it is sarcastic: "stop listening . . . in order to stray." To stray is to be lost, stagger, or be misled (5:23; 20:1; 28:10; cp. "disregard his ways" in 19:16). On correction, see "discipline" in note at 1:2.

19:28 The meaning of swallows iniquity is uncertain. Perhaps the wicked person considers sin a tasty morsel. Or perhaps the worthless (see note at 6:12) witness (see note at 12:17) will be forced to "swallow" the consequences of his lies (19:29).

19:29 Judgment is always God's final punishment; it is never meant for correction. Beatings are potentially corrective, but fools (Hb kesiyl ; see note at 1:22) are obstinate and do not change.

20:1 On mocker, see note at 1:22. A brawler is loud and rowdy (7:11; 9:13). To "stagger" is literally to "wander" into something (19:27) and "get lost" in it (5:19-20,23).

20:2 On king's . . . wrath, see note at 19:12. The last phrase could be literally translated either "he misses (fails to hit) his life" or "he sins against himself"; the essential meaning is the same.

20:4 The ground has to be plowed to prepare it for planting, but the slacker avoids work and does not think ahead (6:6-11). "During planting season" is literally "from winter," that is, starting in about November. He looks is literally "he asks," that is, he comes to the fields to inquire about his harvest.

20:5 Water in a deep well is useful but hard to draw up.

20:6 On loyalty, see "faithful love" in note at 19:22. It is easy for someone to proclaim it, but truly trustworthy (cp. 13:17) people, who will act in time of need, are rare. Who can find is a rhetorical question that assumes the answer, "no one."

20:7 On integrity, see note at 2:7; on happy, see note at 3:13-18. The promise of happiness for children must be balanced by Ezekiel 18.

20:8 Sifts out is to throw grain up in the wind with a winnowing shovel so that the chaff scatters (Ru 3:2; Ps 106:27; Is 30:24; 41:16; Ezk 5:10; cp. Pr 20:26).

20:9 The word for cleansed is used for being ritually clean and suitable for temple worship (Nm 8:6). This rhetorical question makes the point that no human being is perfect, and no human effort can remove sin (Jb 15:14; 25:4; Rm 3:23; 1Jn 1:8). Only God can forgive sin and cleanse a person (Is 55:7; Mk 2:5-11; 1Jn 1:7).

20:11 The Hebrew word for is known probably means to present oneself to be recognized. A young man is measured against purity and uprightness.

20:12 God can open the ear and eye to wisdom.

20:13 To become poor is literally to "be dispossessed" (Jos 3:10), or to be deprived of possessions (Gn 45:11; Zch 9:4; cp. Pr 23:21; 30:9).

20:14 This is a humorous look at bartering, but it also shows that many people are self-idolizing liars. He gloats is literally "he praises himself." On worthless, see "trouble" in note at 1:16.

20:15 These jewels were probably coral (Lm 4:7) or pearls (Jb 28:18).

20:16 Someone has been foolish enough to put up security for a stranger (see note at 6:1). A person might as well take the pledge and collateral from him now because it is as good as lost.

20:17 On gravel, compare Lm 3:16.

20:18 To finalize plans is to "establish" or "achieve" them, which ultimately only God can do (4:26; 16:3,9). Often God works through the counsel and guidance of wise, godly advisers.

20:19 On gossip, see note at 11:13.

20:20 To "curse" is literally to "declare inconsequential" or to treat with contempt (Gn 12:3; 2Sm 16:7; cp. "defiling" in 1Sm 3:13). One's lamp going out is metaphorical for untimely death (13:9; 24:20; 2Sm 21:17; cp. Ex 20:12; Eph 6:2-3).

20:21 This proverb is proved true in the parable of the lost son (Lk 15:11-13).

Oil lamp (20:20) from the late Iron Age II or the Persian period. Such an item would have been very common in an ancient Israelite home.

20:22 To avenge is to exact payment; God is in charge of payments and rewards (11:31; 19:17; 24:29; Dt 32:35). To wait implies hope (Ps 25:3; 27:14; 37:9,34; 39:7; 40:1; 130:5).

20:24 This word for "man" implies strength and virility (see "warrior" in 24:5). If God determines the conduct of even the strongest man, no one can claim absolute control over his own life.

20:25 A fool's mouth can be a trap (cp. 18:7; Jdg 11:29-40). To reconsider is to inquire into something carefully. The fool only later checks to see if he can fulfill his vows.

20:26 The process of threshing actually begins with the wheel, which removes the chaff from the grain. Then the chaff is separated by throwing it up in the wind (v. 8).

20:27-28 To be delivered is to be guarded or kept. On loyalty and faithfulness, see notes at 3:3 and 19:22.

20:29 These are “choice” or “select” young men (Jos 8:3). Gray hair represents the achievement of honorable old age; few wicked people reach it (10:27; 16:31).

20:30 Corporal punishment, when appropriate, is effective (13:24; 22:15; 23:14). To cleanse is to remove tarnish through rubbing or scouring (Lv 6:28; Jr 46:4). On innermost, see verse 27 and note at 18:8.

21:1 God is sovereign even over a king—and not just Israel’s kings (1Kg 11:23; Ezr 6:22; Is 44:28; Jr 25:9; Ac 4:27-28).

21:3 Sacrifice stands for the outward actions of religious observance, equivalent to “doing church.”

21:4 This Hebrew word for lamp that guides could also be translated “unplowed field of.” Just as an unplowed field produces weeds, haughty eyes (see “arrogant eyes” and note at 6:17) and an arrogant heart (immodesty and lack of restraint) produce sin. In contrast, a commandment and teaching guide the righteous (6:23).

21:5 The reckless person is literally “hasty” (19:2; cp. 29:20) or “in a hurry” (28:20); he lacks forethought and diligence.

21:6 On mist, see note at 13:11. It is literally “blown away” like smoke (cp. Ps 68:2). This fortune cannot save from eternal death (10:2; 20:21).

21:8 To be crooked is to be perverse or deceptive.

21:9 On better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17; on nagging, see note at 19:13. Houses in ancient Israel had flat roofs, and it was possible to build a shelter on them (2Kg 4:10) or to sleep there in the summer (1Sm 9:25-26). Normally, however, the inside of the house was “better.”

21:10 The Hebrew words for evil (ra‘) and neighbor (rea‘) look and sound similar.

21:11 A mocker’s only contribution is as a negative example (see note at 1:22). He in the second part of this verse could refer to the inexperienced (see note at 1:4), who first becomes wiser, then acquires knowledge.

21:12 On brings . . . to ruin, see “undermines” in note at 13:6.

21:13 God does not answer cries for help if they are insincere (1:28; Is 1:15; Jr 11:9-12; Ezk 8:16-18; Mc 3:4; Zch 7:13; 1Pt 3:7).

21:14 While it cannot be denied that a bribe is effective (see note at 15:27; cp. 17:8), God hates bribery. On covert, see “secretly” in note at 17:23.

21:15 Amos warned that justice on the day of the Lord would be terror to the wicked in Israel (Am 5:18), and Paul taught that rulers are only a terror to the wicked (Rm 13:3).

21:16 On strays, compare 7:25-27; on departed spirits, see note at 2:18-19.

21:17 Wine and oil were blessings from God (Dt 7:13; Ps 104:14-15), as was pleasure (lit “joy”; Ps 21:6), but when God’s blessings are pursued without God, they become vices.

21:18 One should not conclude from this proverb that sinners somehow pay the debt of the godly; in fact Christ, the sinless One, paid for the sins of all (Ps 49:7-9,15; Gl 3:13; 1Tm 2:6). While this doesn’t explain the means of salvation, it does express the outcome: the righteous go free and the treacherous will be punished.

21:19 On nagging . . . wife, see note at 19:13. A hot-tempered person vexes others, causes grief and aggravation, and expresses displeasure (12:16; 17:25; 27:3).

21:20 To “consume” is literally to “gulp down” (1:12; 19:28). The wise person accumulates valuable savings but the foolish man (Hb kesiyl) spends his income as fast as it is produced.

21:21 On faithful love, see note at 19:22. Those who pursue godliness also find God’s blessing (1Kg 3:10-14; Mt 6:33).

21:22 Secure fortress in this verse uses the same two Hebrew words as “strong confidence” in 14:26. However, those who trust in this mighty fortress have unfounded confidence. A wise person can overcome the most formidable obstacles.

21:24 On Mocker, see note at 1:22. Pride is the key to the mocker’s character.

21:25-26 The slacker (see note at 6:6) has selfish craving that is unfilled because he is too lazy; he will experience physical and spiritual death. Righteous people are generous yet contented (19:24).

21:27 God hates hypocrisy (15:8), but even more so (see note at 11:31) when there is a plan to harm others (2Sm 15:7-13; Mt 23:14).

21:28 The person who listens could be one who paid attention to the report of a crime so that he could give accurate second-hand testimony, or it could be the accused person who listened to a lying witness against him and then gave a good rebuttal.

21:29 To put on a bold face is to act brazenly (7:13) or arrogantly (Dn 11:12).

21:30-31 God is sovereign (19:21; Ps 33:10-11). A horse is an example of human understanding—military technology—that cannot succeed apart from God’s will (Ps 20:7; 33:17; Is 31:1; Jr 3:23).

22:1 A person’s name is his character in life (21:24) and the way he is remembered after death (10:7). Favor is respect from people and grace from God, a benefit of wisdom (3:1-4).

22:2 To have this in common is literally “meet” or “intersect” (cp. 29:13). There is no class structure in God’s eyes (Jb 34:19; Rm 10:12; Gl 3:28; Col 3:11).

22:3 On sensible, see "shrewd" in note at 1:4. The punishment here is literally a "fine" or "penalty" (17:26; 19:19), which implies financial consequences for remaining inexperienced (see note at 1:4; cp. 8:5; 9:6).

22:5 These are large thorns—big enough to drag prisoners with (Am 4:2; cp. Jb 5:5). On snares, see note at 7:23.

22:6 Teach is literally to "dedicate" something, such as a building—to have a celebration commemorating the first time it is put to its intended use (Dt 20:5; 1Kg 8:63). Here, the youth is consecrated to a life of godly wisdom (4:11). "Youth" typically refers to pre-teen to late-teen years. The Hebrew words translated about the way he should go speak of orienting the initiation to fit the challenges of young people. Youth are known for foolishness and lack of discretion or sense (v. 15; 1:4; 7:7); left to themselves, they fall into disgrace (29:15,21). Thus, if a youth is initiated in a manner that is appropriate to his age (1:4; 23:13), it is likely to stick with him. However, this is not a promise, and it does not make the teacher responsible for the student (Ezk 18:20).

22:8 God will avenge the arrogant use of power.

22:9 A generous person is literally "the good of eye"; the opposite is the "evil eye" of the "stingy" or "greedy" person (23:6; 28:22).

22:10 On mocker, see note at 1:22.

22:11 A good king is a friend of those who value genuine, godly purity (Ps 51:10) and elegant speech.

22:12 God overthrows (see "undermines" in note at 13:6) those who teach treachery (see note at 2:20-22).

22:13 This is a preposterous excuse.

22:14 The forbidden woman lures men with her words (see note at 2:16; cp. 7:21; 23:27-28; Jr 18:22). To be cursed by God is to experience His indignation (Ezk 22:31). The wicked will realize they are cursed when they fall (Ps 81:11-12; Rm 1:24-28).

22:15 Tangled up means both "tied to" and voluntarily "wrapped up" (Gn 44:30). Foolishness (from Hb ewiyl) is an innate quality that youth cling to (Gn 8:21; Ps 51:5). On rod, see note at 13:24.

22:16 The person who gives to the rich likely has ulterior motives (Lk 14:12).

22:17-21 This passage introduces a collection of proverbs that runs through 24:22. This is also the first of the thirty sayings. On words of the wise, see note at 1:6. These sayings were also probably Solomon's (10:1). There are three motivations given for gaining wisdom, two practical and one theological: to be pleasing, to have confidence . . . in the L ORD , and to be dependable when commissioned (v. 21; cp. 10:26; 25:13). True words promote justice.

Dependable report translates the same Hebrew words as reliable words.

22:22-23 The city gate was where legal proceedings took place (24:7). God is like the ultimate defense attorney (23:11; Ps 43:1; 119:154; Jr 50:34; Mc 7:9; 1Jn 2:1). Since God is also Judge, the accuser cannot prevail (Rv 12:10).

22:24-25 A hot-tempered man is constantly in trouble (15:18; 19:19; 29:22); his companion could get trapped (12:13; 18:7; 29:6).

22:26-27 On security for loans, see note at 6:1.

22:28 On boundary marker, see note at 23:10-11.

22:29 The wise learn from what they see (24:32). To be skilled is to be experienced, learned, efficient, and accurate in one's vocation (Ezr 7:6; Ps 45:1; "quick" in Is 16:5). To stand in a ruler's presence is to offer oneself to be recognized or commissioned (Ex 8:20; Dt 31:14; Jb 1:6; Zch 6:5).

23:1-3 A ruler could have ulterior motives to test or obligate his guest (cp. vv. 6-8). A big appetite, or lack of discipline, might annoy the ruler, which could be fatal (16:14). The admonition to put a knife to your throat is hyperbole (Mt 18:9); it calls for total abstinence if restraint is not possible. Choice food is the same as the "delicious food" that caused trouble between Jacob, Isaac, and Esau (Gn 27).

23:4-5 Diligence along with godliness and wisdom brings riches (8:18; 10:4; 22:4), but only if God blesses (10:22). It is futile to try to get rich easily, illegally, or quickly (13:11; 20:21; 28:20,22).

23:6-8 It is futile to try to please an unwilling host. Stingy person is literally "evil eye" (28:22; Dt 15:9; 28:54,56; contrast Pr 22:9). On choice food, see note at verses 1-3. Eventually the inner character of a person will show. A host in ancient times was obligated to offer food and drink to any person who visited, but it could be done insincerely. The guest of an insincere host gains nothing: the food is lost and compliments go to waste.

23:9 On the obstinacy of a fool, see note at 1:22; on insight, see note at 12:8.

23:10-11 Joshua established the boundaries of the tribes when Israel entered Canaan (22:28; Dt 19:14; Jos 14-19). Private property was marked off by pillars or cairns and was intended to be kept within a family forever (Lv 25:23-28; Nm 36:7; 1Kg 21:3). Moving a marker amounted to stealing land. God defends the oppressed (Dt 10:18; Pr 22:22-23). On Redeemer, see Lv 25:23-28,47-55; Nm 35:19 ("avenger of blood"); Ru 3:9-4:14; Ps 103:4; Is 59:20; Hs 13:14.

23:12 On discipline, see note at 1:2.

23:13-14 Corporal punishment, properly applied, will actually save a youth from death. He will as a rule escape physical death by avoiding dangerous situations and escape spiritual death (symbolized by Sheol) by learning to fear God (19:18). But corporal punishment must be administered out of love, not dominance (Hs 11:4; Col 3:21; Heb 12:9).

23:15-16 Innermost being is literally "kidneys" (18:8). It was seen as the seat of the strongest emotions (Ps 73:21).

23:17-18 A future is literally "what comes after" (see note at 5:11; cp. 14:12; 24:14,20). Those who treasure the LORD rather than sinners have hope for eternity (3:31-32; 24:19-20; Mt 6:19-21).

23:19-21 To listen is a prerequisite; to be wise and have a disciplined mind follow. To associate with the drunkard and the glutton runs the risk of becoming like them and sharing their fate (24:21; Jos 23:7; Ps 1:1; 26:4) or of implying approval (1Co 5:11). Grogginess is lack of vigilance (Ps 121:3-4; Is 5:27; 56:10).

23:22-25 To say something both positively and negatively—buy and do not sell—is a Hebrew method of emphasis (Gn 40:23). On despise, see note at 1:7; on "buy," see note at 4:5-8.

23:26-28 Heart and eyes are the key to sexual temptation; both should be given to the instructor in godly wisdom rather than the prostitute (5:1-23; 6:20-7:27; 9:13-18; 22:14; 1Co 6:15-18). Pit and ambush describe the prostitute's predatory nature (7:21-23; 30:20).

23:29-35 Woe and sorrow are exclamations of hopelessness and despair (Is 6:5). The Hebrew behind red eyes is unclear; it may mean "bloodshot" or "bleary" (cp. Gn 49:12). Wine could be mixed with spices (9:2; Sg 8:2; cp. mixed beer in Is 5:22). To go looking is to "investigate" wine by "sampling." We are called to flee tempting things (1Co 6:18; 10:14; 1Tm 6:11; 2Tm 2:22), not gaze at them. Gleams is literally "gives its eye," that is, to show luster. In the end (see note at 5:11), like the forbidden woman, wine destroys people (23:26-28). Absurd is literally "perverse" (2:12; 8:13; 10:31-32). These are the ramblings of an alcoholic who is physically and mentally out of touch.

24:1 -2 This warning is similar to that in 23:17-18. Involvement in violence and trouble will lead to a person's downfall.

24:3-4 Just as God established the world through wisdom . . . understanding, and knowledge (3:19-20), so a house is established by the same. Treasure represents both material and spiritual blessings. Sinners also hope to fill their houses, but their methods are self-destructive (1:13,18).

24:5-6 Verse 5 is difficult to translate; the second line might read, "a man of knowledge increases strength." In any case, wisdom and sound guidance are the keys to success in any situation.

24:7 Important and knowledgeable people oversaw legal and commercial business at the city gate (1:21; 22:22; 31:23; Dt 21:19; Jos 20:4; Ru 4:1; 2Sm 15:2).

24:8-9 What a person is called is his reputation (16:21; 21:24), which is difficult to overcome. On schemer, see "discretion" in note at 1:4. A scheme is a shameful, depraved act (Lv 18:17). On mocker, see note at 1:22; on detestable, see note at 3:32.

24:10-12 To do nothing is literally to go slack (see "truly lazy" in note at 18:9). A difficult time is literally a "time of restriction" (Hb tsarah). To be limited is literally to be "restricted" (Hb tsar). So to avoid losing strength, act. Death could be physical or spiritual death or any other misfortune, whether they are being taken off by others or they are stumbling toward disaster on their own (Ps 82:4; Is 58:6-7). Those who are not on the way of wisdom are on a path to disaster and need to be saved (Pr 10:17; 12:28; 14:12; 15:24). To deny knowledge is futile because God weighs hearts (21:12; Ps 44:21). Inactivity is complicity (Ezk 3:17-18). God can withdraw His protection to repay a person for his sin.

24:13-14 Wisdom, like honey, is beneficial as well as pleasant (16:24; but see 25:16,27). On future, see note at 23:17-18.

24:15-16 The malicious actions of a wicked man are futile. Seven is the number of completion (6:31; 9:1; 26:16,25; Mt 18:21). If the righteous falls until he is utterly down, maybe even dead, he will still get up . . . Into ruin could also be translated "by means of evil." The righteous and the wicked get their just rewards—sometimes in this life but certainly in eternity.

24:17-18 It is literally "evil in the eyes" of God when someone gloats over another person's misfortune (Jb 31:29; Ps 35:11-14; Lk 6:27,35; Rm 12:20-21).

24:19-20 To worry is to be agitated with anger (Ps 37:1,7-8). While it is right to be angry because evildoers are sinning, it is wrong to be angry because they are prospering. They don't have a future, but the righteous do (23:17-18). On lamp, see note at 20:20.

24:21-22 The king is God's agent for social justice (Rm 13:1-4; 1Pt 2:13-14). God and the king are the two who bring so much distress on evildoers that no one knows (cp. Ec 3:21; 6:12; 8:1) its potential magnitude. On suddenly, see note at 6:15.

24:23-34 These are miscellaneous sayings collected by Solomon (10:1) beyond the "thirty" (22:20).

24:23-25 To show partiality is literally "to take notice of a face" (28:21; Dt 16:19)—to treat people differently based on their status or position. A judge should treat "small and great alike" (Dt 1:17). People hate an unjust judge (17:15). That the phrase blessing will come is in the passive voice implies that the blessing comes from God.

24:26 A kiss symbolizes loyal love and solidarity in a family (Gn 33:4; 45:15) or among very close friends (1Sm 20:41). “Honesty” also demonstrates love.

24:27 A young man should first establish his means of income. Besides the structure, to build a house could include marrying, having children, and hiring servants (v. 3; 14:1).

24:28-29 To testify . . . without cause (see note at 3:29-30) might be to volunteer to give testimony without being called and without being an eyewitness. A person should not seek vengeance (20:22).

24:30-34 Whatever a slacker (see note at 6:6) who lacks sense (see note at 6:30-33) builds or inherits comes to ruin. Elsewhere thistles (Is 34:13; Hs 9:6) and weeds (Zph 2:9) are symbolic of God’s judgment. A wise person learns from observation. Verses 33-34 echo Pr 6:10-11; it fits both situations.

25:1 The proverbs in chapters 25-29 were collected by the men of Hezekiah (cp. 1:1; 10:1; 22:17; 24:23), who was a godly king until late in his life (2Kg 18-20).

25:2-3 Both God and kings are unfathomable; their respective subjects cannot entirely comprehend their knowledge and motives. A matter may include science and creation (1Kg 4:33), philosophy (Ec 1:13), and personal motives and legal testimony (Pr 18:17; 25:8; 28:11). God is glorious because His creation is so intricate (Jb 38-41). Kings gain glory by delving into things that improve their ability to rule.

25:5 The people in the king’s presence are his servants, officials, and advisers. For a throne to be established suggests at least uncontested rule, and possibly a dynasty (see note at 16:12; cp. 2Sm 5:9-12; 1Kg 2:46; 9:5).

25:6-7 Prideful self-promotion is not wise (11:2; 29:23; Rm 12:3). There may have been a specified order in which the officials were supposed to stand before the king; to stand in someone else’s place would be pretentious. On noble, see note at 8:16. It is possible that the last few words (translated in plain view) go with the next verse, which means: “That which your eyes have seen, don’t be hasty to take to court.”

25:8-10 Frivolous litigation and divulging confidences will ruin one’s reputation. You’ll never live it down is literally “a bad report will not return”—that is, the person who disgraces you will not have to eat his words. On afterward, see “at the end” in note at 5:11.

25:11-12 These decorative apples (or apricots; Sg 2:3,5; 7:8; 8:5) are not just golden in color, but are apparently made of gold. They could be spheres set on the tray or images inlaid into it. When a person is receptive to a wise rebuke, he is improved (9:8; 19:25).

25:13 Harvest time could be dangerously hot (2Kg 4:18-20). For snow to fall at harvest time could be disastrous, but the wealthy sometimes had it carried down from the mountains for refreshment.

25:14 This is literally a "lying" gift (cp. 6:17). Most rain in Palestine comes during windy thunderstorms.

25:15 A bone is the hardest part of a person; here it represents strong resistance to persuasion.

25:16-17 Too much of a good thing (v. 27; 16:24; 24:13) is bad, so even a good guest should exercise moderation. Seldom set foot is literally "make your foot precious (on account of its rarity)" (3:15; 20:15). To get sick is literally to be satisfied (12:14; 13:25; 18:20) or glutted (1:31).

25:19 Unreliable is literally "treacherous" (2:22; cp. 20:6). On difficult time, see note at 24:10-12 (cp. 17:17).

25:20 Here are some actions that make things worse. Cheery songs can make a troubled person worse (Ec 3:4; Rm 12:15; but see 1Sm 16:14-16). Pouring vinegar on soda makes the vinegar foam; it also neutralizes both and makes them worthless. The word translated "soda" could also be "a deep wound"; pouring vinegar on it would bring suffering with no benefit.

25:21-22 To heap . . . coals on his head does not imply vengeance because God does not reward vengeance (20:22; Lv 19:18; Rm 12:17-20). Rather, it may refer to the shame an enemy feels when his assaults are met with good deeds.

25:23 In Palestine rain actually comes from the west (1Kg 18:44; Lk 12:54). North may suggest the cold wind that accompanies rain. Also, "north" comes from a word that means "hidden," which is a pun on backbiting (lit "secret"). The second half is ambiguous in Hebrew and could be reversed: "and angry looks, a backbiting tongue."

25:24 On nagging wife, see note at 19:13.

25:25 On throat, see note at 13:2-4. It could take many months to receive news from a distant land.

25:26 Finding a well to be polluted could be disastrous to a traveler in Palestine. When a righteous person, a supposed "fountain of life" (10:11), betrays those who trust him, it can be disastrous (25:19).

25:27 The second line is difficult. It could mean, "and to investigate matters that are too weighty is not honorable" (cp. vv. 2-3; Ps 131).

26:1-12 The word fool (Hb kesiyl; see note at 1:22) occurs in every verse in this section except verse 2.

26:1 Snow in summer and rain at harvest would not only be unusual; they could be catastrophic, destroying the crops and endangering society.

26:2 On undeserved, see "just for fun" in note at 1:11. Ultimately, God determines whether a blessing or curse will be fulfilled (Nm 23:8; Dt 23:5; Ps 109:28).

26:3 Like an animal, fools must be prodded and directed.

26:4-5 A person should not answer a fool by resorting to foolish methods. Yet, someone needs to expose his foolishness, even if he won't listen (23:9).

26:6 To trust a fool as a messenger is as self-destructive as self-mutilation or taking poison (1:19).

26:7 A lame person has legs but can't use them.

26:8 A sling was a leather strap with a pouch in the middle. A stone would be placed in the pouch, then the slinger held both ends of the strap and swung it over his head two or three times. When he let go of one strap, the stone would be released. It would be ridiculous to tie the stone in the pouch. The weapon would be useless, and it could hurt the slinger.

26:9 A fool would give a proverb a wrong application, causing chaos and destruction, like a belligerent drunkard swinging a thorny stick.

26:10 The Hebrew here was hard to understand before scholars discovered that rav could mean archer (Jb 16:13; Jr 50:29) as well as "great." Hiring a fool or someone at random is as harmful to society as a berserk shooter (v. 18; cp. the English idiom "loose cannon").

26:11 Because a fool doesn't accept correction (1:22; 23:9), he never advances, but returns to what everyone else can see is repulsive.

26:12 A fool might respond to corporal punishment or even arguments (23:3,5), but the self-deluded will not.

26:13 On a slacker and his excuses, see note at 22:13.

26:14 This is a sarcastic image of the only "work" a slacker does. An ancient hinge was a hole in the threshold on which the door pivoted.

26:15 In ancient times, food was eaten by hand from a communal dish. The slacker does not have the gumption to bring food to his mouth, which has physical consequences (6:9-11; 20:4; 21:25; cp. 19:15).

26:16 A sensible answer implies discernment. Seven suggests this is a complete group of counselors (Ezr 7:14).

26:17 Meddles in could be translated as "is provided by" (20:2). Alternatively, it could be the dog that is passing by, i.e., a stray. Therefore, this could be translated, "One who gets riled up by a quarrel that's not his is like one who grabs a stray dog by the ears." The point is the same.

26:18-19 A liar who calls himself a jester if he gets caught is as dangerous to society as a berserk warrior (v. 10).

26:20 On gossip, see note at 16:28.

26:22 On choice food, see note at 18:8.

26:23-28 Though verses 23, 27, and 28 could each stand as independent proverbs, with 24-26 they develop a single theme. The Hebrew keseph siygiym

("silver dross"; cp. 25:4) has been emended to kesaphsagiym (glaze). Silver dross—lead monoxide—was also used as a glaze on pottery, so the point is the same. A flatterer (see note at 2:16) with evil intentions appears nice, but it's an artificial veneer, a pretense. Though a hateful person disguises himself, the wise person perceives that his heart is detestable. His driving force is hatred, the wicked person's passion to destroy anything good and godly. The person who hates will eventually be revealed publicly (5:14), and he will suffer the fate he wished on others (Ps 7:15-16; 9:15-16). The last line is ambiguous—the liar seeks the ruin of the godly, but he causes his own ruin.

27:4 On jealousy, see notes at 6:34-35 and 14:30.

27:6 A friend imparts constructive criticism out of love, but an enemy gives kisses (24:26) with deceit in mind.

27:7 On honeycomb, see note at 24:13-14.

27:8 The word translated wandering (cp. Jb 15:23; Hs 9:17) could also be translated "fleeing" (Ps 55:7; Is 16:2; Jr 4:25; 9:10).

27:9 Being anointed with oil and enjoying incense were ancient pleasures. The second line could be saying that the sweetness (see "pleasant" in note at 16:21) of a friend comes from sincere counsel.

27:10 On better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17. Long-term friendships are at times more dependable than blood relations (17:17; 18:24).

27:11 A parent might be publicly criticized if he cannot control his own children (1Tm 3:4-5).

27:12 On punished, see note at 22:3.

27:13 On security for a stranger, see note at 6:1.

27:14 There are two possible interpretations: For someone who is "not a morning person," a loud greeting early in the morning will be annoying. Or, a person who rushes over to shout a blessing is probably insincere, and God will curse a hypocrite.

27:15-16 On dripping, see note at 19:13. Controlling a nagging wife seems as impossible as stopping the wind or grabbing oil in one's fist.

27:17 As a file sharpens an ax or a sharpening steel a carving knife, good friends encourage one another to grow in wisdom and godliness, even if it requires painful criticism (v. 6).

27:18 If a person patiently serves his employer with integrity (Eph 6:5; Col 3:22; 1Tm 6:1-2; Ti 2:9-10; 1Pt 2:18), God will see to it that he is properly rewarded—if not in this life, then in eternity.

27:20 Sheol (see note at 1:12) and Abaddon (see note at 15:11) represent death, which can always take more victims (30:16). People's eyes represent their insatiable capacity for lust, envy, and greed (30:15).

27:21 Praise here could mean the praise a person receives or the praise he gives. This proverb has several possible meanings. As a crucible proves silver . . . a man should evaluate the praise he receives before he accepts it, dismissing flattery and insincerity. If you wonder about the praise a person receives or gives, look to the person; his character will show whether it is genuine. Over time, a person can refine the praise he receives or gives. The Hebrew could also be translated, "and a man according to his praise." That is, a man is tested (17:3) and proven by what kind of praise he receives and how graciously he receives it.

27:22 A mortar was a bowl made of fired clay or carved from stone. A pestle was a stone or fired-clay rod with a rounded tip. The worker would put a small amount of grain (hulled barley, in this case) into the mortar and pound and grind it until it became meal or flour. Foolishness taints every molecule of a fool (Hb ewiyl).

27:23-27 Just as a farmer cares for his livestock, Solomon here instructed his son the prince to pay attention to his people. While wealth is fickle (23:4-5) and a dynasty can end, flocks and crops (people and land) are a steady source of sustenance if they are well maintained (24:27). After hay was harvested new grass appeared for grazing. Later, grain was harvested, which along with the hay provided feed for livestock. Lambs provided wool. Females were kept for breeding and milk, while some male goats were sold for income that could be reinvested. All people in positions of leadership should be good stewards of their human and material resources.

28:1 God gives irrational terror to the wicked and courage to the righteous (Lv 26:17; Dt 28:25; Jos 1:5-6; Ac 9:31; Rm 15:5).

28:2 People usually do not rebel against a wise king. The last phrase could also be translated, "right endures."

28:3 A hard rain at the wrong time could sweep away (Jr 46:15) a crop.

28:5 To seek the LORD can mean to consult Him for wisdom and knowledge (Ex 33:7; 2Sm 21:1) or to pursue a relationship with Him (Dt 4:29; Ps 27:4; Zph 2:3).

28:6 On poor man . . . with integrity, see note at 11:20; on better . . . than proverbs, see note at 15:16-17.

28:7 On discerning, see note at 1:5.

28:8 In this life or in eternity, God will punish those who exploit the poor and reward those who help them.

28:9 To reject God's law implies lack of trust, which precludes prayer (1:23-31; Heb 11:6).

28:10 On inherit, see note at 3:35.

28:11 On rich, see notes at 10:15 and 18:10-11; on wise in his own eyes, see note at 26:12.

28:12 To see the end of the matter, read this verse along with verse 28 and 29:2,16. under righteous leadership there is a public celebration of "glory" or "beauty" (4:9; 15:31; 17:6; 20:29). Under wicked leaders, literally "a man is sought."

28:13 It is a good thing to conceal others' sins (17:9), but not one's own. To confess and renounce sins is the definition of repentance. The person who finds mercy will prosper in the ultimate sense in eternity.

28:14 On happy, see note at 3:13-18. The Hebrew word for reverent usually refers to terror (1:26-27), but in this context it is synonymous with the fear of the Lord. To have a hard heart is to refuse to turn and obey God (Ex 7:3; Ezk 3:7).

28:15 A wicked ruler is destructive out of anger (19:12; 20:2).

28:16 Very oppressive is literally "much extortion" (Is 33:15). On dishonest profit, see note at 1:19.

28:17 Until death is literally "to the Pit" (1:12). The innocent should be rescued from death (24:11), but not those guilty of shedding innocent blood (Dt 19:11-13).

28:18 On integrity, see note at 11:20.

28:19 On "work," see note at 12:11. Have plenty and have his fill translate the same Hebrew word (18:20).

28:20 It is implied that the person in a hurry to get rich is willing to use illegal or immoral means. On not go unpunished, see note at 6:27-29.

28:21 An unjust judge may eventually give in to small bribes (24:23; Dt 16:19).

28:22 On in a hurry for wealth, see notes at verse 19 and verse 20.

28:23 One exception to this is rebuking a mocker (9:7).

28:24 Refusing to call a sin a sin destroys society. It is sinful to justify stealing money from one's parents (Mt 15:5-6; cp. Pr 20:21; Lk 15:12). A person is known by what kind of companions he has (Ps 1:1; 119:63; Pr 4:14; Jr 15:17).

28:25 Greedy is literally "enlarged throat" (Is 5:14) or appetite (Hab 2:5); see (Hb) nephesh in note at Pr 13:2-4. To prosper is literally to "be fat" (15:30). On the benefit of trusting, cp. 16:20; 29:25.

28:26 Be safe is literally "escape (judgment)" (19:5, cp. 19:9). This implies the fool will perish (1:32) because the object of his trust cannot save him (11:28).

28:28 On the wicked in power, see note at verse 12. To flourish is to increase in number and power (29:16).

29:1 At the end of God's patient call to obedience comes sudden judgment against the obstinate (2Kg 17:13-14,18; 2Ch 36:16; Neh 9:29-30; Jr 7:2-29; Ac 7:51; 2Pt 3:9-10).

29:2 On righteous flourish, see note at 28:12. People groan when oppressed (Ex 2:23) or devastated (Lm 1:4,8,11,21).

29:3 This could refer to the father's or the man's wealth. Since a father is responsible for a son's debts, and a son hopes for an inheritance, the outcome is the same.

29:4 On justice and king, see note at 16:12. The Hebrew in the second line could refer to one who demands or who gives bribes, either of which subverts justice.

29:5 On flatters, see note at 2:16. His feet could be the neighbor's or the speaker's own feet (see v. 6; cp. 26:28).

29:6 The first line is literally "In the rebellion of a man of evil [is] a snare." Sin contains the seeds of self-destruction (1:19), but the righteous person rejoices in security.

29:7 The rights refers to a legal decision (Ezr 7:26; Dn 7:22).

29:9 Ranting and raving is literally "shakes (in rage; Jb 39:24) and laughs" (Pr 26:19).

29:10 The second line is difficult to translate (cp. 11:30). It is literally "and the upright ones, they seek his life." Do bloodthirsty men seek to kill the upright? The phrase "seek his life" almost always means "try to kill," but "upright" is plural and "his life" is singular. Or do the upright seek to take care of the honest person? That fits best with the rest of Proverbs, and "seek" can mean to "demand justice" ("require" in 2Sm 4:11).

29:12 A ruler who likes to hear lies will end up accumulating wicked attendants.

29:13 On this in common, see note at 22:2. Light to the eyes means life. The L ORD determines the outcome of both lives.

29:14 On king and fairness, see note at 16:12.

29:15 On this verse, see note at 23:13-14 (cp. 10:5,13;17:2).

29:16 On leadership of the wicked and the righteous, see note at 28:12.

29:17 Peace of mind means being free from emotional and physical threats (Jb 3:26; Ps 116:7; Is 14:3,7). A wise son provides necessities as well as delight (Gn 49:20; Lm 4:5).

29:18 Revelation, like instruction, probably refers to the inspired wisdom in Proverbs. True happiness (see note at 3:13-18) is found within God's plan.

29:19 A foolish slave only responds to corporal punishment (see note at 13:24).

29:21 A slave, like any other person, needs to be prepared during his youth to fulfill his life's responsibilities (22:6). On later on, see "at the end" in note at 5:11.

29:24 Associating with the wicked is self-destructive (1:19; 24:21-22). In an unsolved case, the legal system would announce a curse on the perpetrator and any accomplices (Lv 5:1). If witnesses came forward or the thief turned himself in, they could be exonerated (Jdg 17:2). But God's curse would be on this partner if he refused to testify against the thief (Zch 5:3-4; cp. Nm 5:21).

29:25 A snare can be fatal (13:14; 14:27; 18:7). Fear is literally "sheer terror" (1Sm 14:15; Is 21:4; Dn 10:7). A wise person does not fear mortal man. The One to fear is the L ORD , who is able to protect or destroy (18:10; Lk 12:4-5).

29:27 To detest an unjust man is to agree with God (3:32; 11:1; 12:22; 15:8-9,26; 16:5,12; 17:15; 20:10,23; 21:27; 28:9; Ps 139:21-22; 2Co 6:14-16), but hating the upright is wrong (v. 10; Ps 69:4; Mt 10:22; 24:9; Jn 15:18; 17:14; 1Jn 3:13).

30:1 On Jakeh and the oracle, see the textual footnote at verse 1. Agur, the author of this chapter (cp. 1:1; 31:1), and Ithiel and Ucal, the recipients, are otherwise unknown. These proverbs, though written for specific individuals, have application for all people. An oracle is a message from God (2Kg 9:25; Ezk 12:10; Mal 1:1; cp. Jr 23:33-40). Oration (Hb ne'um), which usually announces a declaration of the Lord (Gn 22:16; 1Sm 2:30; Hg 2:4), is used twice for the "oracle" or "proclamation" of men (Nm 24:3,15; 2Sm 23:1).

30:2-3 Some men claim to have a grasp on God. What Job eventually came to realize (Jb 40:4), Agur reverently states at the beginning: I have no knowledge of the Holy One.

30:4 Gathering wind and binding waters refer to God's control of thunderstorms, which are important for the agricultural cycle. Asking about God's name is asking whether the hearer knows His character. His Son could refer to Israel (Hs 11:1) or to anyone whom God teaches (Dt 8:5; Heb 12:6), but Jesus fulfilled the role perfectly (Mt 2:15; Lk 9:35).

A copper ink pot found at Qumran along with the Dead Sea Scrolls which contained portions of Proverbs.

30:7-9 This prayer is comparable to Jesus' model prayer (Mt 6:9-13). Both ask God's protection from temptation; both ask for basic needs (1Tm 6:8; cp. Php 4:12); both are concerned with upholding God's honor. The indulgent person may become a liar and a mocker (Ex 5:2); the destitute person may become a thief (Pr 6:30). The thief profanes God by implying that God can't provide.

30:11-15 A generation is a group of people of a certain time with certain characteristics in common. Jesus condemned an evil "generation" of His day (Mt 11:16; 12:39-45; 17:17).

30:11 On curses, see note at 20:20.

30:12 Filth is literally "excrement" (Dt 23:13; 2Kg 18:27; Ezk 4:12). It refers figuratively to obvious, detestable sin.

30:13-14 Arrogance leads to exploitation.

30:15-16 The blood-sucking leech takes without contributing. Until God restores paradise (Rm 8:19-22; Rv 21:1), Sheol and fire will always try to destroy, and the womb and the soil will always strive to produce (Gn 3:16-17).

30:17 The eye that ridicules indicates a haughty person (v. 13).

30:18-20 A man is a strong, virile man (20:24), and the young woman is of marriageable age, presumably a virgin (Gn 24:43; Is 7:14). If Pr 30:18-19 stand alone, the point might be that the progress of love is as marvelous and mysterious as the motion of the other three items. If verse 20 is connected to the saying, the interpretation is far different. The first three things leave no tracks. The man, like the adulteress who wipes her mouth, thinks fornication with the young woman leaves no trace. (The adulteress thinks sex is as casual and amoral as a meal.) However, in the end there are consequences (5:4; 14:12). These things are beyond Agur (Jb 42:3; Ps 131:1), but God knows (Jr 32:17).

30:21-23 This could be a humorous observation or a serious commentary on the collapse of social order. The servant could be an official who seized the kingdom. On fool, see note at 17:7. Unloved is literally "hated"; it may refer to a wicked woman who was rightly rejected. All these become destructive when they move into a position they should not be in.

30:24-28 A perceptive person can learn from observing God's creation (6:6-8; cp. 24:32). Each of these small animals overcomes potentially fatal limitations. Ants and hyraxes are metaphorically called people as if they were a nationality. Ants show forethought. A hyrax (Procavia syriacus) is a herbivore the size of a rabbit that lives in herds in cavities among the rocks. Wise men also rely on the Lord as their rock of protection. Locusts have unity of purpose, maintaining ranks without infighting. The lizard (or spider) is vulnerable, yet it can be found in unexpected places.

30:29-31 Stately is literally "good"; that is, they excel in the quality of their stride. The lion is literally a "hero" (1Sm 17:51). Each of these is supreme in its realm. The phrase that modifies the king is obscure.

30:32-33 On foolish, see note at 17:7. Putting one's hand over one's mouth means to immediately stop speaking out of fear (Jdg 18:19; Jb 21:5; 40:4; Mc 7:16). Churning . . . twisting, and stirring up are all the same word in Hebrew, which has to do with force or pressure and twisting or wringing. The scheming social climber is cautioned that his maneuverings will inevitably bring violence against him.

31:1 This chapter was written by Lemuel (cp. 1:1; 30:1). He was not a king in Israel, so he was probably a foreign king who converted to the worship of Israel's God (cp. Dn 4:34).

31:2 The Hebrew word for what is probably an implicit call to listen (1:8; 4:1) or a rhetorical question, "What should you do?" Lemuel's mother probably made a vow before his conception (1Sm 1:11).

31:3 Women . . . who destroy kings are either adulteresses (6:26,32; 30:20) or multiple wives (Dt 17:17; 1Kg 11:1-4). David diverted his energy to an affair, and it distorted his judgment and ruined his family (2Sm 11-12).

31:4-5 People in positions of authority should avoid wine and beer, which could affect their judgment (Is 5:22-23; Am 6:6; Eph 5:18; Ti 1:7). Since all persons wear a hat of authority at some point—whether as a parent or a voter in a representative organization—this warning applies to all persons. The king has a special responsibility to protect the oppressed (vv. 8-9; cp. 3:34; 29:4,14).

31:6-7 This is a sarcastic command (cp. 19:27) intended to emphasize that alcohol is not appropriate for kings.

31:8-9 Having no voice means being unable to be effective in court and get a fair hearing. The dispossessed are literally "vanishing." Each person needs to help the needy (Ps 82:3; Is 1:17).

31:10-31 This poem is an alphabetic acrostic. While Proverbs 1-9 describe the virtues of the symbolic Lady Wisdom, this passage celebrates the ideal flesh-and-blood wife. Just as most of the exhortations to the "son" in the rest of Proverbs can be applied to all people of both genders, everyone can learn from the example of this capable wife.

31:10 Capable implies practical competence (v. 29; cp. Gn 47:6), physical strength ("energy" in Pr 31:3; cp. Jdg 3:29), and financial wealth (Pr 13:22; cp. Ps 49:6), as well as "noble character" (Ru 2:1; 3:11).

31:11 This is the only case where the Bible commends trusting in anything but God; her husband can trust her because she is godly. Anything good is literally "spoil"; it refers to her abundant profits (v. 18).

31:13 Flax fibers were used to make linen (Dt 22:11; Ezk 44:18).

31:14 She could afford imported food.

31:15 Food is literally "prey" (Ps 111:5; Mal 3:10), implying diligence, strength, and cunning (Jb 24:5; 38:39).

31:16-17 It requires tremendous strength to earn the extra money to buy a vineyard, then to clear it of stones, plant the vines, dig a winepress, and build a tower to protect it (Is 5:2).

31:18 The burning lamp symbolizes long life and prosperity (20:20).

31:19 The spinning staff and spindle were used to make thread and to twist it into yarn.

31:22 These bed coverings were probably for comfort and decoration (7:16). Fine linen may have been imported from Egypt, and purple dye came from Phoenicia (Ezk 27:7).

31:23 On gates, see note at 24:7. She enabled her husband to sit among the elders, a respected local authority.

31:24 She sells everything, from the inner linen garments that are put on first, to the outer belt or sash.

31:25 She has strength like the young and honor like the old (20:29).

31:26 Her instruction arises out of wisdom and love (Hb chesed; see note at 19:22).

31:28-31 Here the wife is recognized and rewarded for her character and works. Even if all the rare capable women were gathered, her husband says she would surpass them. Charm is grace or favor (11:16; 22:1), and beauty is outward appearance (6:25; Ezk 16:14); both are temporary (see "fraud" in note at Pr 13:11). The end reward of wisdom depends on its beginning: the fear of the Lord (see 1:7; 9:10; 15:33 and notes there).

HCSB Translation understanding Uses in Proverbs 19
Uses in the OT 42
Key Passage Proverbs 2:2,3,6,11

Tevunah (understanding, competence, sound judgment) refers to competency at a particular skill or task relevant to living successfully within society. It does not connote a deep intellectual understanding of this world or thought, an idea prominently associated with the synonymous binah (understanding). Rather, tevunah refers to the skillful know-how of a craftsman (Ex 31:3; 35:31; 36:1; 1Kg 7:14), the business savvy of a king (Ezk 28:4), the skill of the idol-maker (Hs 13:2), and skill at speech (Jb 32:11). It may refer to skill at discerning the plans and purposes of God (Dt 32:28), sociopolitical realities (Ob 7-8), or spiritual realities (Is 44:19). Both David (Ps 78:72) and Solomon (1Kg 4:29) were endowed with understanding to rule skillfully (cp. Pr 28:16). Understanding leading to skillful living is the gift of God (Ex 31:3; 1Kg 4:29) and may be gained through long life (Jb 12:12). The person who acquires understanding is happy (3:13), quiet (11:12), patient (14:29; 17:27), humble (18:2), and successful (19:8).

da'ath Hebrew Pronunciation [DAH aht]
HCSB Translation knowledge Uses in Proverbs 39
Uses in the OT 88
Key Passage Proverbs 8:9,10,12

Fundamentally, da'ath (knowledge) refers to a relational awareness of people or objects gained through the senses. Knowledge is gained through practical involvement with the object of knowledge, and da'ath only infrequently expresses the concept of abstract intellectual knowledge apart from relationship. In Proverbs, there are two understandings of knowledge. In chapters 1-9, knowledge focuses more on insight gained through theological reflection (1:7,29; 2:5,6,10; 3:20; 9:10), while in chapters 10-29, knowledge focuses primarily upon the ability to handle interpersonal relationships (10:14; 11:9; 12:1; 14:6; 17:27; 19:25; 21:11; 23:12). In theological contexts, God possesses knowledge (Jb 10:7; Pr 3:20), and He disseminates it to men (Jb 21:22; Ps 94:10; 119:66; Is 40:14). The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge (da'ath; Pr 1:7; 2:5), and the perception of God's plans and purposes through relationship with Him is referred to as knowledge (Is 5:13; 11:2; 58:2; Jr 10:14; 51:17).

'ewiyl Hebrew Pronunciation [eh VEEL]
HCSB Translation fool Uses in Proverbs 19
Uses in the OT 26
Key Passage Proverbs 10:8,10,14,21

In Proverbs, 'ewiyl (fool) refers to one who is morally deficient from the standpoint of being able to make reasoned moral judgments. He willfully refuses to make moral choices, choosing neither good nor rejecting evil. He arrogantly refuses to receive moral instruction and to learn from his mistakes (1:7; 12:15; 15:5). The fool is characterized by foolishness ('iwweleth), an internal moral corruption that renders the fool impotent to make reasonable moral judgments in life (15:21; 16:22). While he is young, there is hope that a youth can be separated from his foolishness (22:15), but later in life the fool is irrevocably marked by his folly (27:22). His moral deficiency manifests itself in matters of speech, morality, discipline, religion, and daily life. He speaks either the wrong thing or at the wrong time (10:8,10,14,21; 14:3), and he is quick to show his anger (12:16; 20:3) and to refuse resolution (29:9).

chakam Hebrew Pronunciation [kha KAHM]
HCSB Translation wise Uses in Proverbs 47
Uses in the OT 138
Key Passage Proverbs 14:1,3,16,24

Chakam (wise) describes one with a high degree of knowledge and skill in a particular area. Chakam may describe a skilled craftsman in a task such as sewing (Ex 28:3; 35:25) or construction (Ex 31:6; 36:1,2,4,8). Second, chakam may refer to skillfulness in exercising good judgment in managing interpersonal relations. The wise can manage people and affairs of state (Gn 41:33,39; 1Kg 5:7; Pr 20:26) and adjudicate impartially (Dt 1:13,15; 16:19; 1Kg 2:9; Pr 24:23). Third, c*hakam* may refer to skillfulness in devising a scheme or plan (shrewd, clever, cunning; 2Sm 13:3; 14:2; 20:16). In Proverbs and Ecclesiastes, c*hakam* carries both intellectual and moral connotations and describes the skill of right living. In contrast to the fool, the wise have ethical, religious, and pragmatic wisdom. They foresee the ramifications of their actions and consequently change them. The wise obey the Lord (Ps 107:43; Hs 14:9), exercise discernment (Pr 16:21; Ec 2:14) and turn from evil (Pr 14:16).

kesiyl Hebrew Pronunciation [keh SEEL]

HCSB Translation fool Uses in Proverbs 49
Uses in the OT 70
Focus Passage Proverbs 17:10,12,16,21,24-25

Kesiyl indicates someone foolish because of laziness and complacency. The kesiyl has a stupidity stemming from apathy toward moral issues, not willful disregard of them. This apathy distinguishes him from the ewiyl, a fool who is intentionally immoral. The kesiyl harbors anger, is easily provoked (Ec 7:9), and in consequence becomes careless (Pr 14:16). He is amused by purposeless activity (Ec 7:4-6) and speaks without thinking (Pr 15:2). Being self-indulgent (Pr 19:10), he squanders resources (Pr 21:20). Like the ewiyl, he displays his foolishness (Pr 13:16), loves ignorance (Pr 1:22), and repeats foolish behavior (Pr 26:11). He brings harm to companions (Pr 13:20), is self-deceived (Pr 14:8), and self-destructive (Ec 4:5). Kesel (6x) is confidence (Pr 3:26) but also stupidity (Ec 7:25) or arrogance (Ps 49:13). Kislah denotes foolish ways (Ps 85:8) or confidence (Jb 4:6), and kesiylut signifies folly (Pr 9:13). Kasal means be foolish (Jr 10:8).

Focus Passage Proverbs 21:2,8,18,29

Adjectival yashar, from the verb yashar (go straight), means straight (Is 26:7) or smooth (Jr 31:9). People are upright (Nm 23:10), true (Dt 32:4), just (Ps 92:15), honest (Jb 4:7), or honorable (1Sm 29:6). Actions are right (Ex 15:26), laws impartial (Neh 9:13), journeys safe (Ezr 8:21), and hearts one (2Kg 10:15). " Yashar of heart" implies conscientious (2Ch 29:34). " Yashar in his eyes" suggests fine to him (2Sm 19:6), whatever he wants (Jdg 17:6), and what pleases him (Jr 34:15) or seems right (Jr 40:4). Book of Jasher is literally "Book of the Upright" (Jos 10:13). Related yosher (15x) and meshar (19x) mean integrity, uprightness, rightness, and agreement (Dn 11:6,17). Additionally, yosher connotes sincerity (Ps 119:7), honesty (Pr 17:26), accuracy (Ec 12:10), and straightness (Pr 4:11). Meshar connotes fairness (Ps 9:8), levelness (Is 26:7), and smoothness (Pr 23:31). Yishrah means integrity (1Kg 3:6).

Ra'a' means be evil, difficult, or a mistake (Gn 21:11; 38:10; 48:17). Someone is displeased (Jnh 4:1) or sad and suffers (Ps 106:32). "Your heart is evil" implies you are troubled (1Sm 1:8). "Your eye is evil" means you are stingy (Dt 15:9), look grudgingly, or begrudge. "Be evil in one's eyes" connotes resenting (1Sm 18:8) or being upset; something seems wrong (Jr 40:4), or one considers something evil. The passive-reflexive means suffer harm (Pr 13:20). Causative verbs denote do evil or harm (Gn 19:7,9) and act wickedly. With "do" it conveys behave wickedly or wrongly. One treats badly, mistreats (Nm 16:15), *afflict*s, injures, or destroys. Causatives also suggest bring/cause tragedy (harm, trouble, disaster) (Jr 25:29). Participles denote evildoer (Is 1:4) or wicked person. Another ra'a' (8x) signifies crush (Ps 44:3), smash, break, or shatter. Teeth are rotten. The reflexive-passive implies be devastated (Is 24:19) or harmed.

ECCLESIASTES

Everything is Futile

1 The words of the Teacher, [A,] [a] son of David, king in Jerusalem. [b]

2 “Absolute futility,” says the Teacher.
“Absolute futility. Everything is futile.” [c]
3 What does a man gain for all his efforts that he labors at under the sun? [d] 4 A generation goes and a generation comes,
but the earth remains forever. [e] 5 The sun rises and the sun sets; panting, it returns to its place [f]
where it rises.
6 Gusting to the south,
turning to the north,
turning, turning, goes the wind, [g]
and the wind returns in its cycles.
7 All the streams flow to the sea,
yet the sea is never full.
The streams are flowing to the place,
and they flow there again.
8 All things [B] are wearisome;
man is unable to speak.
The eye is not satisfied by seeing [h] or the ear filled with hearing.
9 What has been is what will be,
and what has been done is what will be done;
there is nothing new under the sun.
10 Can one say about anything,
“Look, this is new”?
It has already existed in the ages before us.
11 There is no remembrance of those who [C] came before; [i] and of those who [D] will come after there will also be no remembrance
by those who follow them.

The Limitations of Wisdom

12 I, the Teacher, [j] have been [E] king over Israel in Jerusalem. 13 I applied my mind to seek [k] and explore through wisdom all that is done under heaven. [l] God has given •people this miserable task to keep them occupied. [m] 14 I have seen all the things that are done under the sun and have found everything to be futile, a pursuit of the wind. [F, n]

15 What is crooked cannot be straightened; [o]
what is lacking cannot be counted.

16 I said to myself, [G] "Look, I have amassed wisdom far beyond all those who were over Jerusalem before me, [p] and my mind has thoroughly grasped [H] wisdom and knowledge." 17 I applied my mind to know wisdom and knowledge, [q] madness and folly; [r] I learned that this too is a pursuit of the wind.
[I, s]

18 For with much wisdom is much sorrow; [t]
as knowledge increases, grief increases.

The Emptiness of Pleasure

2 I said to myself, “Go ahead, I will test you with pleasure; [a] enjoy what is good.” But it turned out to be futile. 2 I said about laughter, [b] “It is madness,” and about pleasure, “What does this accomplish? ” 3 I explored with my mind how to let my body enjoy life [A] with wine [c] and how to grasp folly [d] — my mind still guiding me with wisdom — until I could see what is good for •people to do under heaven [e] during the few days of their lives. [f]

The Emptiness of Possessions

4 I increased my achievements. I built houses [g] and planted vineyards [h] for myself. 5 I made gardens [i] and parks for myself and planted every kind of fruit tree in them. 6 I constructed reservoirs of water for myself from which to irrigate a grove of flourishing trees. [j] 7 I acquired male and female servants and had slaves who were born in my house. [k] I also owned many herds of cattle and flocks, more than all who were before me in Jerusalem. [l] 8 I also amassed silver and gold for myself, and the treasure of kings and provinces. [m] I gathered male and female singers for myself, [n] and many concubines, the delights of men. [o, B] 9 So I became great and surpassed all who were before me in Jerusalem; [p] my wisdom also remained with me. 10 All that my eyes desired, I did not deny them. [q] I did not refuse myself any pleasure, for I took pleasure in all my struggles. This was my reward for all my struggles. [r] 11 When I considered all that I had accomplished [C] and what I had labored to achieve, I found everything to be futile and a pursuit of the wind. [s] There was nothing to be gained under the sun. [t]

The Relative Value of Wisdom

12 Then I turned to consider wisdom, [u] madness, and folly, for what will the man be like who comes after the king? He [v] will do what has already been done.
[w] 13 And I realized that there is an advantage to wisdom over folly, like the advantage of light over darkness. [x]

14 The wise man has eyes in his head,
but the fool walks in darkness. [y]

Yet I also knew that one fate comes to them both. [z] 15 So I said to myself, “What happens to the fool will also happen to me. Why then have I been overly wise? ” [a] And I said to myself that this is also futile. 16 For, just like the fool, there is no lasting remembrance of the wise man, [b] since in the days to come both will be forgotten. How is it that the wise man dies just like the fool? 17 Therefore, I hated life because the work that was done under the sun was distressing to me.
For everything is futile and a pursuit of the wind.

The Emptiness of Work

18 I hated all my work that I labored at under the sun [c] because I must leave it to the man who comes after me. [d] 19 And who knows whether he will be a wise man or a fool? [e] Yet he will take over all my work that I labored at skillfully under the sun. This too is futile. 20 So I began to give myself over [D] to despair concerning all my work that I had labored at under the sun. 21 When there is a man whose work was done with wisdom, knowledge, and skill, [f] and he must give his portion to a man who has not worked for it, this too is futile and a great wrong. 22 For what does a man get with all his work and all his efforts [g] that he labors at under the sun? 23 For all his days are filled with grief, and his occupation is sorrowful; [h] even at night, his mind does not rest. [i] This too is futile.

24 There is nothing better for man than to eat, drink, and enjoy [j, E] his work. [k]
I have seen that even this is from God's hand, [l] 25 because who can eat and who can enjoy life [m] apart from Him? [n] 26 For to the man who is pleasing in His sight, He gives wisdom, knowledge, and joy, [o] but to the sinner He gives the task of gathering and accumulating in order to give to the one who is pleasing in God's sight. [p] This too is futile and a pursuit of the wind. [q]

The Mystery of Time

3 There is an occasion for everything, and a time for every activity under heaven: [a] 2 a time to give birth and a time to die; [b] a time to plant and a time to uproot; [A] 3 a time to kill and a time to heal;
a time to tear down and a time to build;
4 a time to weep and a time to laugh; [c] a time to mourn and a time to dance; [d] 5 a time to throw stones and a time to gather stones; [e] a time to embrace and a time to avoid embracing; [f] 6 a time to search and a time to count as lost;
a time to keep and a time to throw away;
7 a time to tear and a time to sew;
a time to be silent and a time to speak; [g] 8 a time to love and a time to hate;
a time for war and a time for peace. [h]

9 What does the worker gain from his struggles? [i] 10 I have seen the task that God has given •people to keep them occupied. [j] 11 He has made everything appropriate [B] in its time. [k] He has also put eternity in their hearts, [C] but man cannot discover the work God has done from beginning to end. [l] 12 I know that there is nothing better for them than to rejoice and enjoy the [D] good life. 13 It is also the gift of God whenever anyone eats, drinks, and enjoys all his efforts. [m] 14 I know that all God does will last forever; there is no adding to it or taking from it. [n] God works so that people will be in awe of Him. [o] 15 Whatever is, has already been, [p] and whatever will be, already is. God repeats what has passed. [E]

The Mystery of Injustice and Death

16 I also observed under the sun: there is wickedness at the place of judgment and there is wickedness at the place of righteousness. [q] 17 I said to myself, “God will judge the righteous and the wicked, [r] since there is a time for every activity and every work.” [s] 18 I said to myself, “This happens concerning people, so that God may test them and they may see for themselves that they are like animals.” [t] 19 For the fate of people and the fate of animals is the same. [u] As one dies, so dies the other; they all have the same breath. People have no advantage over animals since everything is futile. 20 All are going to the same place; all come from dust, and all return to dust. [v] 21 Who knows if the spirit of people rises upward and the spirit of animals goes downward to the earth? 22 I have seen that there is nothing better than for a person to enjoy his activities w because that is his reward. For who can enable him to see what will happen after he dies? F, x

4 Again, I observed all the acts of oppression being done under the sun. [a] Look at the tears of those who are oppressed; they have no one to comfort them.
Power is with those who oppress them; they have no one to comfort them. 2 So I admired the dead, [b] who have already died, more than the living, who are still alive. 3 But better than either of them is the one who has not yet existed, [c] who has not seen the evil activity that is done under the sun.

The Loneliness of Wealth

4 I saw that all labor and all skillful work is due to a man's jealousy of his friend. [d] This too is futile and a pursuit of the wind. [e]

5 The fool folds his arms [f]
and consumes his own flesh. [g] 6 Better one handful with rest than two handfuls with effort and a pursuit of the wind. [h]

7 Again, I saw futility under the sun: 8 There is a person without a companion, [A] without even a son or brother, and though there is no end to all his struggles, his eyes are still not content with riches. [i] "So who am I struggling for," he asks,
"and depriving myself from good? " This too is futile and a miserable task.
9 Two are better than one because they have a good reward for their efforts.
10 For if either falls, his companion can lift him up; but pity the one who falls without another to lift him up. 11 Also, if two lie down together, they can keep warm; but how can one person alone keep warm? [j] 12 And if someone overpowers one person, two can resist him. A cord of three strands is not easily broken.
13 Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king who no longer pays attention to warnings. [k] 14 For he came from prison to be king, [l] even though he was born poor in his kingdom. 15 I saw all the living, who move about under the sun, follow [B] a second youth who succeeds him. 16 There is no limit to all the •people who were before them, yet those who come later will not rejoice in him. This too is futile and a pursuit of the wind. [m]

Chapter 5 [a]

Caution in God's Presence [1] Guard your steps when you go to the house of God. Better to draw near in obedience than to offer the sacrifice as fools do, [b] for they ignorantly do wrong. [2] [c] Do not be hasty to speak, and do not be impulsive to make a speech before God. God is in heaven and you are on earth, so let your words be few. [d] [3] For dreams result from much work and a fool's voice from many words. [e] [4] When you make a vow to God, [f] don't delay fulfilling it, because He does not delight in fools. Fulfill what you vow. [5] Better that you do not vow than that you vow and not fulfill it. [g] [6] Do not let your mouth bring •guilt on you, [h] and do not say in the presence of the messenger that it was a mistake. [i] Why should God be angry with your words and destroy the work of your hands? [7] For many dreams bring futility, so do many words. [j] Therefore, •fear God.

The Realities of Wealth [8] If you see oppression of the poor [k] and perversion of justice and righteousness in the province, don't be astonished at the situation, [l] because one official protects another official, and higher officials protect them. [9] The profit from the land is taken by all; the king is served by the field. [A, m]

[10] The one who loves money is never satisfied with money, and whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with income. This too is futile. [11] When good things increase, the ones who consume them multiply; what, then, is the profit to the owner, except to gaze at them with his eyes? [12] The sleep of the worker is sweet, whether he eats little or much, but the abundance of the rich permits him no sleep.

[13] There is a sickening tragedy I have seen under the sun: wealth kept by its owner to his harm. [n] [14] That wealth was lost in a bad venture, so when he fathered a son, he was empty-handed. [15] As he came from his mother's womb, so he will go again, naked as he came; [o] he will take nothing for his efforts that he can carry in his hands. [16] This too is a sickening tragedy: exactly as he comes, so he will go. What does the one gain [p] who struggles for the wind? [q] [17] What is more, he eats in darkness all his days, [r] with much sorrow, sickness, and anger.

[18] Here is what I have seen to be good: [s] it is appropriate to eat, drink, and experience good in all the labor one does under the sun during the few days of his life God has given him, because that is his reward. [t] [19] God has also given riches and wealth to every man, [u] and He has allowed him to enjoy them, take his reward, and rejoice in his labor. [v] This is a gift of God, [w] [20] for he does not often consider the days of his life because God keeps him occupied with the joy of his heart.

6 Here is a tragedy I have observed under the sun, [a] and it weighs heavily on humanity: [A] 2 God gives a man riches, wealth, and honor [b] so that he lacks nothing of all he desires for himself, [c] but God does not allow him to enjoy them. Instead, a stranger will enjoy them. This is futile and a sickening tragedy. 3 A man may father a hundred children and live many years. No matter how long he lives, [B] if he is not satisfied by good things and does not even have a proper burial, [d] I say that a stillborn child is better off than he. [e] 4 For he comes in futility and he goes in darkness, and his name is shrouded in darkness. 5 Though a stillborn child does not see the sun and is not conscious, it has more rest than he. 6 And if he lives a thousand years twice, but does not experience happiness, do not both go to the same place?

7 All man's labor is for his stomach, [C, f]
yet the appetite is never satisfied.

8 What advantage then does the wise man have over the fool? [g] What advantage is there for the poor person who knows how to conduct himself before others? 9 Better what the eyes see than wandering desire. [h] This too is futile and a pursuit of the wind. [i]

10 Whatever exists was given its name long ago, [D, j] and it is known what man is. But he is not able to contend with the One stronger than he. [k] 11 For when there are many words, they increase futility. [l] What is the advantage for man? 12 For who knows what is good for man in life, in the few days of his futile life that he spends like a shadow? [m] Who can tell man what will happen after him under the sun?

Wise Sayings

7 A good name is better than fine perfume, [a] and the day of one's death than the day of one's birth. [b] 2 It is better to go to a house of mourning than to go to a house of feasting, since that is the end of all mankind,
and the living should take it to heart. [c] 3 Grief is better than laughter, for when a face is sad, a heart may be glad. [d] 4 The heart of the wise is in a house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in a house of pleasure.
5 It is better to listen to rebuke from a wise person than to listen to the song of fools, [e] 6 for like the crackling of burning thorns under the pot, [f] so is the laughter of the fool.
This too is futile.
7 Surely, the practice of extortion turns a wise person into a fool, [g]
and a bribe destroys the mind. [h] 8 The end of a matter is better than its beginning;
a patient spirit is better than a proud spirit. [i] 9 Don't let your spirit rush to be angry, for anger abides in the heart of fools. [j] 10 Don't say, "Why were the former days better than these? " [k] since it is not wise of you to ask this.
11 Wisdom is as good as an inheritance and an advantage to those who see the sun, 12 because wisdom is protection as money is protection, and the advantage of knowledge is that wisdom preserves the life of its owner. [l] 13 Consider the work of God, [m] for who can straighten out what He has made crooked? [n]

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, [o] but in the day of adversity, consider: God has made the one as well as the other, [p] so that man cannot discover anything that will come after him.

Avoiding Extremes

15 In my futile life [A] I have seen everything: [q] there is a righteous man who perishes in spite of his righteousness, [r] and there is a wicked man who lives long in spite of his evil. [s] 16 Don't be excessively righteous, and don't be overly wise. [t] Why should you destroy yourself? 17 Don't be excessively wicked, and don't be foolish. Why should you die before your time? [u] 18 It is good that you grasp the one and do not let the other slip from your hand. For the one who •fears God will end up with both of them.

19 Wisdom makes the wise man stronger than ten rulers of a city. [v] 20 There is certainly no righteous man on the earth who does good and never sins. [w]

21 Don't pay attention [B] to everything •people say, or you may hear your servant cursing you, [x] 22 for you know that many times you yourself have cursed others.

What the Teacher Found

23 I have tested all this by wisdom. I resolved, “I will be wise,” but it was beyond me. 24 What exists is beyond reach and very deep. [y] Who can discover it? 25 I turned my thoughts to know, explore, and seek wisdom [z] and an explanation for things, and to know that wickedness is stupidity and folly is madness. 26 And I find more bitter than death [a] the woman who is a trap, [b] her heart a net, and her hands chains. The one who pleases God will escape her, but the sinner will be captured by her. 27 “Look,” says the Teacher, “I have discovered this by adding one thing to another to find out the explanation, 28 which my soul continually searches for but does not find: among a thousand people I have found one true man, but among all these I have not found a true woman. [c] 29 Only see this: I have discovered that God made people upright, [d] but they pursued many schemes.”

Wisdom, Authorities, and Inequities

8 Who is like the wise person, and who knows the interpretation of a matter? A man's wisdom brightens his face, and the sternness of his face is changed. [a]

2 Keep [b] the king's command because of your oath made before God. [c] 3 Do not be in a hurry; leave his presence, [d] and don't persist in a bad cause, since he will do whatever he wants. 4 For the king's word is authoritative, and who can say to him, "What are you doing? " [e] 5 The one who keeps a command will not experience anything harmful, [f] and a wise heart knows the right time and procedure. 6 For every activity there is a right time and procedure, [g] even though man's troubles are heavy on him. 7 Yet no one knows what will happen [h] because who can tell him what will happen? 8 No one has authority over the wind [A] to restrain it, [i] and there is no authority over the day of death; [j] there is no furlough in battle, and wickedness will not allow those who practice it to escape. 9 All this I have seen, applying my mind to all the work that is done under the sun, at a time when one man has authority over another to his harm.

10 In such circumstances, I saw the wicked buried. They came and went from the holy place, [k] and they were praised [l] in the city where they did so. This too is futile. 11 Because the sentence against a criminal act is not carried out quickly, [m] the heart of •people is filled with the desire to commit crime. 12 Although a sinner commits crime a hundred times and prolongs his life, [n] yet I also know that it will go well with God-fearing people, [o] for they are reverent before Him. 13 However, it will not go well with the wicked, [p] and they will not lengthen their days like a shadow, [q] for they are not reverent before God.

14 There is a futility that is done on the earth: there are righteous people who get what the actions of the wicked deserve, [r] and there are wicked people who get what the actions of the righteous deserve. [s] I say that this too is futile. 15 So I commended enjoyment because there is nothing better for man under the sun than to eat, drink, and enjoy himself, [t] for this will accompany him in his labor during the days of his life that God gives him under the sun.

16 When I applied my mind to know wisdom [u] and to observe the activity that is done on the earth (even though one's eyes do not close in sleep day or night), 17 I observed all the work of God and concluded that man is unable to discover the work that is done under the sun. Even though a man labors hard to explore it, he cannot find it; [v] even if the wise man claims to know it, he is unable to discover it.

Enjoy Life Despite Death

9 Indeed, I took all this to heart and explained it all: the righteous, the wise, and their works are in God's hands. [a] •People don't know whether to expect love or hate. Everything lies ahead of them. [2] Everything is the same for everyone: [b] there is one fate for the righteous and the wicked, [c] for the good and the bad, [d] for the •clean and the •unclean , for the one who sacrifices and the one who does not sacrifice. As it is for the good, so it is for the sinner; as for the one who takes an oath, so for the one who fears an oath. [3] This is an evil in all that is done under the sun: there is one fate for everyone. In addition, the hearts of people are full of evil, and madness is in their hearts while they live [e] — after that they go to the dead. [4] But there is hope for whoever is joined [f] with all the living, since a live dog is better than a dead lion. [5] For the living know that they will die, but the dead don't know anything. There is no longer a reward for them because the memory of them is forgotten. [g] [6] Their love, their hate, and their envy have already disappeared, and there is no longer a portion for them in all that is done under the sun.

[7] Go, eat your bread with pleasure, and drink your wine with a cheerful heart, for God has already accepted your works. [h] [8] Let your clothes be white all the time, and never let oil be lacking on your head. [i] [9] Enjoy life with the wife you love all the days of your fleeting [A] life, [j] which has been given to you under the sun, all your fleeting days. For that is your portion in life and in your struggle [k] under the sun. [10] Whatever your hands find to do, do with all your strength, [l] because there is no work, planning, knowledge, or wisdom [m] in •Sheol where you are going.

The Limitations of Wisdom

11 Again I saw under the sun that the race is not to the swift, [n] or the battle to the strong, [o] or bread to the wise, or riches to the discerning, or favor to the skillful; rather, time and chance happen to all of them. 12 For man certainly does not know his time: [p] like fish caught in a cruel net or like birds caught in a trap, [q] so people are trapped in an evil time [r] as it suddenly falls on them. [s]

13 I have observed that this also is wisdom under the sun, and it is significant to me: 14 There was a small city with few men in it. A great king came against it, surrounded it, and built large siege works against it. 15 Now a poor wise man was found in the city, [t] and he delivered the city by his wisdom. [u] Yet no one remembered that poor man. 16 And I said, “Wisdom is better than strength, [v] but the wisdom of the poor man is despised, and his words are not heeded.”

17 The calm words of the wise are heeded more than the shouts of a ruler over fools.
18 Wisdom is better than weapons of war,
but one sinner can destroy much good. [w]

The Burden of Folly

10 Dead flies make a perfumer’s oil ferment and stink; [a] so a little folly outweighs wisdom and honor.
2 A wise man’s heart goes to the [A] right,
but a fool’s heart to the [B] left.
3 Even when the fool walks along the road, his heart lacks sense,
and he shows everyone he is a fool. [b] 4 If the ruler’s anger rises against you, don’t leave your place, [c] for calmness puts great offenses to rest. [d]

5 There is an evil I have seen under the sun, an error proceeding from the presence of the ruler:

6 The fool is appointed to great heights, [e]
but the rich remain in lowly positions.
7 I have seen slaves on horses, [f]
but princes walking on the ground like slaves. [g]

8 The one who digs a pit may fall into it, [h] and the one who breaks through a wall may be bitten by a snake. [i] 9 The one who quarries stones may be hurt by them;
the one who splits trees may be endangered by them.
10 If the ax is dull, and one does not sharpen its edge, then one must exert more strength;
however, the advantage of wisdom is that it brings success.
11 If the snake bites before it is charmed, [j]
then there is no advantage for the charmer. [C] 12 The words from the mouth of a wise man are gracious, [k]
but the lips of a fool consume him. [l] 13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is folly, but the end of his speaking is evil madness.
14 Yet the fool multiplies words.
No one knows what will happen,
and who can tell anyone what will happen after him? [m] 15 The struggles of fools weary them,
for they don’t know how to go to the city.
16 Woe to you, land, when your king is a youth [n]
and your princes feast in the morning.
17 Blessed are you, land, when your king is a son of nobles and your princes feast at the proper time —

for strength and not for drunkenness. [o] 18 Because of laziness the roof caves in,
and because of negligent hands the house leaks.
19 A feast is prepared for laughter, and wine makes life happy, [p]
and money is the answer for everything. [q] 20 Do not curse the king even in your thoughts, [r] and do not curse a rich person even in your bedroom, [s]
for a bird of the sky may carry the message, and a winged creature may report the matter.

Invest in Life

11 Send your bread on the surface of the waters, [a] for after many days you may find it.
2 Give a portion to seven or even to eight, [b]
for you don’t know what disaster may happen on earth.
3 If the clouds are full, they will pour out rain on the earth;
whether a tree falls to the south or the north,
the place where the tree falls, there it will lie.
4 One who watches the wind will not sow,
and the one who looks at the clouds will not reap.
5 Just as you don’t know the path of the wind, or how bones develop in [A] the womb of a pregnant woman, so you don’t know the work of God who makes everything. [c] 6 In the morning sow your seed, and at evening do not let your hand rest,
because you don’t know which will succeed,
whether one or the other,
or if both of them will be equally good.
7 Light is sweet,
and it is pleasing for the eyes to see the sun. [d]
8 Indeed, if a man lives many years, let him rejoice in them all,
and let him remember the days of darkness, [e] since they will be many.
All that comes is futile.
9 Rejoice, young man, while you are young,
and let your heart be glad in the days of your youth.
And walk in the ways of your heart and in the sight of your eyes; [f]
but know that for all of these things God will bring you to judgment.
10 Remove sorrow from your heart, and put away pain from your flesh, [g]
because youth and the prime of life are fleeting.

The Twilight of Life

12 So remember your Creator in the days of your youth:
Before the days of adversity come,
and the years approach when you will say, [a]
"I have no delight in them";
2 before the sun and the light are darkened, [b] and the moon and the stars,
and the clouds return after [A] the rain;
3 on the day when the guardians of the house tremble,
and the strong men stoop,
the women who grind cease because they are few,
and the ones who watch through the windows see dimly, [c] 4 the doors at the street are shut while the sound of the mill fades; [d]
when one rises at the sound of a bird,
and all the daughters of song grow faint.
5 Also, they are afraid of heights and dangers on the road;
the almond tree blossoms,
the grasshopper loses its spring, [B] and the caper berry has no effect;
for man is headed to his eternal home, [e]
and mourners will walk around in the street; [f] 6 before the silver cord is snapped, [g] and the gold bowl is broken, [h]
and the jar is shattered at the spring,
and the wheel is broken into the well;
7 and the dust returns to the earth as it once was,
and the spirit returns to God who gave it. [i]
8 "Absolute futility," says the Teacher. "Everything is futile." [j]

The Teacher's Objectives and Conclusion 9 In addition to the Teacher being a wise man, he constantly taught the •people knowledge; he weighed, explored, and arranged many proverbs. [k] 10 The Teacher sought to find delightful sayings and write words of truth accurately. 11 The sayings of the wise are like goads, [l] and those from masters of collections are like firmly embedded nails. [m] The sayings are given by one Shepherd. [C]

12 But beyond these, my son, be warned: there is no end to the making of many books, [n] and much study wearies the body. [o] 13 When all has been heard, the conclusion of the matter is: •fear God [p] and keep His commands, because this is for all humanity. [q] 14 For God will bring every act to judgment, [r] including every hidden thing, whether good or evil.

Introduction

"All the streams flow to the sea, yet the sea is never full. The streams are flowing to the place, and they flow there again" (1:7).

The Bible is never shy about confronting painful truths or hard questions. The book of Ecclesiastes faces the issue of how we can find meaning in life in light of the seemingly futile nature of everything. It will not allow the reader to retreat into superficial answers. It does not answer this problem by comforting us with hollow slogans. To the contrary, its motto is "Everything Is Futile." But by forcing us to face the futility of human existence, it guides us to a life free of empty purpose and deceitful vindication.

Circumstances of Writing Author: According to 1:1 and 1:12, the author was David's son and a king over Israel from Jerusalem. Also, 12:9 speaks of the author as a writer of proverbs, so Solomon appears to be the author. Many scholars believe that Ecclesiastes was written too late in Israel's history for this to be true, and they want to date the book at least 500 years after Solomon's time (later than 450 B.C.). However, strong evidence attests that the book does come from the age of Solomon. For instance, it displays a great knowledge of literature from early Mesopotamia and Egypt.

One example is that the book shows an awareness of the "Harper Songs," poetry from Egypt that is much older than the age of Solomon. Ecclesiastes 9:7-9 is similar to that poetry, and it also resembles a portion of the famous Epic of Gilgamesh from Mesopotamia. It makes sense that Solomon, who had close contacts with Egypt and whose empire stretched up to the Euphrates River, would know and reflect on such texts. It is very doubtful that an anonymous Jew writing 500 or more years later, when Egyptian and Mesopotamian glory was finished and when Judah was a backwater nation, would have had access to these texts or could have understood them. By contrast, Ecclesiastes shows no similarities to the Greek philosophy that flourished in the fifth century B.C. and later. All of these conditions point to the traditional view that Solomon authored this book.

Background: Ecclesiastes is Wisdom literature, meaning that it is in the part of the Bible that is especially concerned with helping readers cope with the practical and philosophical issues of life. It has roots in the wisdom literature of Egypt and Babylon. Books like Proverbs and Ecclesiastes are the biblical answer to the search for truth. Proverbs is basic wisdom, giving the reader fundamental principles to live by. Ecclesiastes, by contrast, is for a more mature reader. It engages the question of whether death nullifies all purpose and meaning in life.

Message and Purpose Ecclesiastes shows us that since we and our works are futile—that is, destined to perish—we must not waste our lives trying to justify our existence with pursuits that ultimately mean nothing. Put simply, Ecclesiastes examines major endeavors of life in light of the reality of death. The book warns us about the pursuit of several different purposes in life.

1. Intellectual accomplishments. Ecclesiastes affirms that wisdom helps us cope with life, but it denies that acquiring knowledge as such is meaningful. Ultimately, the wise person and his works, like the fool and his deeds, perish.
2. Wealth and luxury. Wealth does not give life purpose. More than that, those who pursue riches waste their lives in bitterness, anxiety, and toil. Money does matter, and Ecclesiastes affirms that we need a strategy for maintaining a basic level of prosperity. But wealth of itself is a fraudulent substitute for true contentment.
3. Politics. Political power is inherently corrupting, and the worst evils in the world are committed by cruel or incompetent people with power. At the same time, government is necessary, and Ecclesiastes counsels the reader on how to survive in a world of political competition, and thus how to have a stable, peaceful life.
4. Religion. Zeal for religion also comes in for criticism in Ecclesiastes. Its two warnings are that we should not try to impress God and we should not wear ourselves out with irrational excess.

Positively, Ecclesiastes recommends that we do two things in light of the brevity of our days.

1. Enjoy life. This is not a philosophy of hedonism, nor does it involve neglect of other duties because there is a time for everything under the sun. But a life without enjoyment is no life at all.
2. Fear God. This is an honest humility before God arising from an awareness of our weakness and sin. It includes awareness of our dependence on Him and a remembrance of the fact that He is our judge.

Contribution to the Bible Ecclesiastes must be read with care because some of its verses, if read in isolation, seem to contradict other biblical teachings. It seems to deny the afterlife (3:18-22), to warn us against being too righteous (7:16), and to recommend a life of pleasure (10:19). But the real purpose of Ecclesiastes is to force us to take our mortality seriously and thus to consider carefully how we should live. Ecclesiastes knocks away all the façades by which we disguise the fact that life is short and we deny that all our accomplishments will pass away. In this sense, Ecclesiastes anticipates the NT teaching that only God's grace, and not excessive zeal, saves us.

Structure Ecclesiastes does not have the kind of structure we usually look for in a book of the Bible. At first glance it seems to move to and fro among various topics in a way that seems almost incoherent. It has no simple hierarchical outline, and it often jumps rapidly from one topic to the next. But a closer look reveals a structure that alternates between two perspectives: that of human existence apart from God and that of existence lived before God. If Ecclesiastes were music, it would be seen as antiphonal. The resolution of the tensions that permeate Ecclesiastes is found in the affirmation that the most important thing in life is to "fear God and keep His commands" (12:13).

Study Notes 1:1 The Hebrew word qoheleth , here translated as Teacher, probably means “assembly leader.” It is not the ordinary word for “teacher.” It is a rare Hebrew word (found seven times in Ecclesiastes and nowhere else in the Bible), and it could mean “public speaker.” It is the author’s self-designation throughout the book. For this reason the book of Ecclesiastes is often called “Qoheleth.” The words son of David, king in Jerusalem could refer to any Davidic king of Judah, but only Solomon was king over all Israel from Jerusalem (v. 12).

1:2 Hevel, the Hebrew word for futile, basically means “vapor” or “breath,” but it comes to mean “vain,” “transitory,” or “futile.” It does not necessarily mean that something is altogether worthless, but it implies that something is at best only of fleeting value. In the context of Ecclesiastes, it means that things done “under the sun” are only of temporary significance and therefore, set against eternity, they have no real value.

1:3-7 The phrase under the sun means here on earth; it speaks of the temporal and temporary nature of humanity. The sun . . . wind, and waters (streams) are in constant motion, but they never accomplish anything. It is simply a constant cycle of coming and going. In the same way, each generation comes and goes but does not change the world in any fundamental way. Worse yet, each generation of people (unlike the sun, wind, and waters) passes away.

1:8 The phrase all things are wearisome could be translated “all words are weary.” It refers to our inability to find either meaning or satisfaction in creation. No one can speak in the face of all the ceaseless motion of the sun, wind, and waters. That is, the world cannot be adequately explained or in any way affected by the human word. We stand dumb before it. Similarly, we neither see nor hear anything that fully satisfies.

1:9-10 When Ecclesiastes says that there is nothing new under the sun, it means that there is nothing that changes the fundamental facts of the human condition. This does not deny that there are technological innovations or new works of art, literature, and architecture, but these things are all variations on what had already existed, and they do not deliver humanity from its bondage to death. The “new thing” that really changes life can only come from God (Jr 31:31-34; Lk 22:20; Heb 9:15).

1:11 This verse does not claim that no human is ever remembered in history. The point is that people move on and that fame and glory have no lasting significance.

1:12-18 These verses describe the futility of the quest for knowledge. The claim is not that intellectual pursuits are evil; they are vain and frustrating because no person by learning finds the answers to his fundamental questions.

1:12 A king does not stop serving as king until he dies. The phrase have been king does not mean that the Teacher had stopped being king. Rather, the point is that he had, in his lifetime, been in a position to have the wealth and freedom to carry out the investigations described in this book.

1:13 The quest for wisdom is usually thought of as noble and fulfilling, but it is here called this miserable task, meaning that it is just a hard job.

1:15 This verse is a proverb. What is crooked cannot be straightened refers to a problem that cannot be solved. What is lacking cannot be counted refers to working with insufficient information. The problem of understanding life is beyond mere humans.

1:18 Instead of answering all our questions and bringing happiness, great learning or wisdom only leads to less certainty and more pain.

2:1-2 These verses summarize in advance the whole of verses 1-11. Solomon looked into finding meaning through riches, and he found it futile.

2:3 The word wine is literal wine, but it also stands for all the pleasure-giving luxuries of life. Folly refers to parties, frivolity, and self-indulgence. When the Teacher said my mind still guiding me with wisdom, he meant that he did not give himself over to total dissipation. Anyone can see that a person who has cast off all self-restraint, such as the alcoholic, will not be happy. Solomon never lost self-control or became an addict. Still, even pleasures pursued in moderation will not bring happiness.

2:4-8 The Teacher was rich in every way, including palatial homes, the natural beauty of vineyards and gardens, abundant and varied food from his herds and estates, riches in the form of livestock and precious metals, and feats of engineering in the form of reservoirs and aqueducts. He was free of hard labor and was served by an army of slaves. He was entertained by singers, and his sexual desires were fulfilled by concubines.

2:9 Solomon's assertion that my wisdom also remained with me is important. If he had lost all self-control and had become an addict, then the fact that his wealth and luxury had not made him happy would be self-evident. But he did handle the prosperity well and did not fall into debauchery. It is not only excess and dissipation that leads to ruin, but even indulgence with moderation does not satisfy.

2:10 The Teacher's quest for happiness through wealth failed, but not for lack of trying. He did not deny himself any pleasure.

2:11 Not only did Solomon realize his treasures and accomplishments failed to give him satisfaction, he also understood that none would endure. Consider that virtually nothing remains of all of Solomon's architectural achievements—they were all doomed to disappear.

2:12-17 The quest for knowledge is a source of frustration and pain because it is futile; no human mind can solve the mysteries of life. Wisdom has some practical value, but it is subject to great limitations. The advantages it offers are temporary.

2:12 Solomon compared wisdom, madness, and folly to see if there was any real value in one way of living over another. The last part of this verse has some extraordinarily difficult Hebrew. Literally it says, "For what is the man who will come after the king whom they already made?" Most interpreters take the king to be Solomon himself and so read the text more or less as the HCSB has done. It is possible, however, that "whom they already made" refers to the creation of man in Gn 1:26, where God is referred to in the plural ("Let Us make man"). If so, then "the king" is not Solomon but Adam, and the point is that any man (in Hb the word is 'adam) who comes after Adam must learn to make moral choices involving wisdom and folly. Adam started this when he ate from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. How can a man who comes after Adam not wrestle with these things?

2:13-15 The Teacher did not deny that wisdom is a good thing. The fool will fall into all kinds of troubles because of the poor decisions he makes. This refers to the kind of practical wisdom and folly that Proverbs describes. The fool may be lazy, quarrelsome, not handle money well, or fall into promiscuity. All these things bring about ruin. On the other hand, wisdom can do nothing to save a person from death, the greatest calamity of all. One person may be prudent and another foolish, but one fate comes to them both.

2:16 The wise man cannot even count on having a legacy that outlasts that of the fool.

2:18-23 In this section Ecclesiastes returns to the subject of wealth and pleasure. But unlike verses 1-11, which focus on the impossibility of finding satisfaction in riches, this text focuses on the absurdity of devoting one's life to acquiring wealth only to leave it all behind to someone else. A person may toil ceaselessly for wealth, so that his days are filled with grief, but he must lose it all to someone who had none of his skill and who did not work for it.

2:24-26 The words There is nothing better for man than to eat, drink, and enjoy his work must be understood in context. Ecclesiastes is preoccupied with how death nullifies all of man's accomplishments. It emphasizes that our days under the sun are limited, and thus that it is a tragedy to waste those days with excessive labor and grief. There are obviously many more things to a good life than just eating, drinking, and enjoying one's work, and Ecclesiastes does not suggest that we abandon ourselves to pleasure-seeking or our careers, but we ought to recognize that life is short and not miss out on its basic pleasures. These, too, are a gift of God.

3:1-11 These verses, the most famous text in Ecclesiastes, must be read from the context of the fundamental claim of the book: that we are mortals, doomed to perish, and that our work will perish with us. No human work is eternal, and our activities, whether building or tearing down, must change as the situation dictates. We naturally prefer to stay on the positive side of the list—to laugh rather than to weep, to love rather than to hate, and to have peace rather than war—but as long as we live in a world of change, conflict, and death, we must accept the fact that we cannot have unchanging bliss. Even so, as verse 11 says, everything is "appropriate in its time." Mourning and separation are painful, but there is a time when it is right and even beautiful to mourn. We must accept the fundamental fact of mortality: we are creatures who live in time. We must respond appropriately to the seasons of life as they come.

"A time to dance" (3:4). Jewish men dancing during a private ceremony in the Court of the Men at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem.

3:5 The meaning of throwing or gathering stones is uncertain. It may refer to clearing a field for planting versus building a wall, or spoiling a field (2Kg 3:25) versus clearing it (Is 5:2). A rabbinical tradition takes it to be a euphemism for participating in or refraining from sexual relations.

3:11 The fact that God has also put eternity in their hearts tells us that although we are creatures of time, we are not like the animals, who are fully and exclusively creatures of time. God made us as hybrids, so to speak, in that we are temporal but we have an inner longing for eternity. We can never be fully at peace in this life because, although we are mortal, we yearn for immortality.

3:12-14 The fact that we are creatures of time is another reason to enjoy the days we have. Giving ourselves to excessive mourning and toil is as wrong as indulging in excessive laughter and dancing.

3:15 The phrase God repeats what has passed is literally, "God seeks the pursued" or "God seeks the persecuted." Such a translation suggests that God cares about and seeks out those who are harassed and oppressed. This anticipates the text on injustice that follows (vv. 16-17).

3:16-17 An absurdity of life is that where there ought to be justice in the law courts, there is often corruption, oppression, and a perversion of justice. Even so, we may take comfort in the fact that God has appointed a final day for judging the world.

3:18-22 These verses are disturbing to Christian readers because they appear to deny the hope of eternal life. What they actually deny is that people within themselves have the power to transcend death. By contrast, Egyptian religion was so certain that people were immortal that the ancient Egyptians were obsessed with preparing their tombs for the afterlife. According to the Bible, death is an enemy (1Co 15:26); it is not merely a doorway to a new level of existence. God's people will experience eternal life only because they are known by God and will be raised by His power. Our hope is based entirely on the resurrection of Christ. The Teacher of Ecclesiastes wanted people to take death seriously so they would use well the time they had under the sun. It does not deny that God can raise us from the dead.

4:1-3 Returning to the topic of oppression (see note at 3:16-17), Ecclesiastes asserts that political corruption is terrible precisely because it does not allow common people to do the thing the book recommends—to enjoy their days under the sun. Oppression is innately wrong, and it also deprives its victims of the freedom to partake of the ordinary pleasures of life.

4:3 This verse is "hyperbole," the use of exaggeration for rhetorical effect. Someone who says, "I wish I had never been born," rarely means it literally. When Ecclesiastes declares that one who has not yet existed is the most fortunate of all, it is merely saying in an emphatic way that the corruption practiced under the sun is a cause for great sorrow.

4:4-8 Ecclesiastes returns to the theme of wealth, describing how foolish it is to spend one's life in the pursuit of riches. First, Solomon declares that people work hard not out of love for the task but out of a desire to do better than their peers. The work and the wealth it brings give no satisfaction; there is only the pathetic pleasure of beating others in a race for success. Second, a conventional proverb declares that laziness brings on poverty. Against this, verse 6 gives a counter lesson—that it is better to have little with peace than to have much with a constant hunger for more. A strong work ethic is not wrong, but it needs to be balanced with an appreciation for the joys of life. In verse 8, the example of the person who works ceaselessly to acquire but who has no one with whom to share it shows how sad is the life that is governed by a desire for more.

4:9-12 Friendship is the theme of this section. The advantages of friends are that they help one another get work done, that one friend sustains another when disaster strikes, that they give comfort to one another against the bitterness of life, and that they protect one another from enemies. Interestingly, friendship is one area of life that Ecclesiastes never calls "futile."

4:11-12 These verses do not refer to lying together sexually. It is an image of travelers sleeping outdoors in the desert who must huddle together to keep warm. The fact that verse 12 asserts that three are better than two makes it clear that these are friends, not lovers.

4:13-16 This section illustrates how fleeting political power is. There are two people here. The first person is an old king, who in his youth was poor but he rose to power through skill and perseverance. This king is now old but foolish. He has been in power for so long that he has lost touch with changing political circumstances. The second person is a youth who, possessing the political skills the old king once had but lost, is now ready and able to usurp him (this is the youth of v. 13, who is called the second youth in v. 15). But even though the second youth is successful for a time and pleases the crowd, he will also eventually get old, lose touch, and be abandoned. He is just the latest in a long line of kings who come and go. Political power and popularity are by nature fleeting.

5:1-7 This passage deals with religious behavior, and it warns that we should not try to impress God. It is in two parallel parts. First, positively, come to the house of God in humble obedience; negatively, don't try to impress God with big sacrifices and big vows; and then there is a proverb that big dreams and many words come from an overworked fool. Second, positively, fulfill your vow; negatively, don't make a vow you cannot keep; and then a proverb, many dreams and many words are futile, so it is better to fear God. The foundation of these teachings is our mortality: God is in heaven and you are on earth. Because we are weak, small, and prone to fail, we should give up on trying to impress God with vows, gifts, and promises. We cannot impress Him; our place is to be humble and obedient. This text calls on us to depend on the grace of God and not on our religious deeds.

5:8-9 Once again, the Teacher looks at political matters. In these verses he tells us not to be surprised at corruption. Layers of governmental bureaucracy are supposed to insure that every official is accountable to others and is behaving properly, but all these layers of government can make for more layers of corruption. If that is the case, should we abandon the idea of government and embrace anarchy? No. Government, although never free from corruption, is not something we can do without. Verse 9 could be translated, "And among everything a land's advantage is this: a king for a cultivated field." That is, the king is a benefit to agriculture (which represents the economy). For example, the king protected his people from enemies, maintained irrigation canals, and settled property disputes. Government is necessary, but corruption is inescapable.

5:10-6 : 6 This is a lengthy passage on wealth. It makes the point that a life spent pursuing wealth is futile. Ecclesiastes 5:10-20 gives us a series of seven reasons not to devote ourselves to getting rich. First, seeking wealth is an endless quest, because those who want to get rich never feel that they have enough (v. 10). Second, if you get rich, you attract people who care nothing for you but just want your money (v. 11a). Third, once you acquire much money, you can't do anything with it but look at it (v. 11b). Fourth, working people are not full of anxieties and they sleep well; the rich are awake at night worrying about their investments (v. 12). Fifth, wealthy people live in a world of high-stakes financial deals. They can lose their money in bad business deals just when they need the money for their families. In the world of finance, men put their families at risk (vv. 13-14). Sixth, at death you lose it all. You can't take it with you (vv. 15-16). Seventh, the quest for riches is hard and bitter, and days are spent in tedious and vexing work. It is far better to get by with fewer things and less money and be able to enjoy life (vv. 17-20).

6:1-6 A person who has money but who derives no real joy from his privileges is a pitiful wretch. His money serves no purpose but to be passed on to others. Ecclesiastes again wants us to see that because life is short, it should be enjoyed. A life spent huddled over work or eaten away by anxieties is wasted.

6:2-3 These verses describe typical measures of prosperity: wealth, honors, children, and long life (in ancient societies, having many children was a measure of success). But none of these is any good if a person is not able to enjoy them.

6:3-6 These verses use a stillborn child for rhetorical purposes, to make the point that a life without joy, no matter how rich a person may be, is wasted. This text should not be used for attempting to discern what happens to the souls of stillborn children.

6:7-9 This passage contains three proverbs, and it makes the transition from a major discussion of wealth (5:10-6:6) to a major discussion of wisdom and death (6:10-7:4). The proverbs teach that appetite is the thing that drives us, but it is never satisfied, that wisdom cannot save us from our appetite or from poverty, and that it is important to be satisfied with what we have. These proverbs can relate equally well to the desire for riches or for knowledge. Both are important in their places, but neither is the key to life.

6:10-7 : 4 The main point of this passage is given in 6:10: the fundamental truths of life are well known and that there is nothing to be added. This means that the quest for great knowledge is folly, since no one will find out something that changes the basic truths of life. Thus, a person should not prattle on about supposedly new insights (6:11). Our understanding is limited, as is shown by our inability to predict the future (6:12). Therefore, the truly wise give attention to the fact of death (7:1-4). Funerals should sober us to the reality of death and encourage us to live well and happily.

7:5-6 Fools can neither give nor take good advice. The song of fools stands for a life of carefree merrymaking. The pain of a rebuke is better than the encouragement to party that fools offer. Also, fools receive wisdom with smirking laughter. The image of thorns under the pot indicates that fools are prickly to those who try to deal with them but ultimately are useless, just as thorns are good for nothing but burning.

7:7-9 In these three maxims, the main focus is on how the wise person confronts political reality. First, corruption is pervasive and can bring anyone down; one should beware of it. Second, one should not judge by first appearances; those who are winning now may someday come to ruin. One should be patient and understand that virtue is proved right in the end, and so flee temptations to bribery. Third, abiding anger over a current situation in life shows you are a fool.

7:10 People see the evil in their own times and wrongly presume that earlier times were better.

7:11-14 Ecclesiastes acknowledges that people do need money. In discouraging the pursuit of riches, it does not say that money is unnecessary or evil. At the same time, we should accept with patience whatever God allots to us.

7:15-18 These verses seem to say that a little sinning is acceptable. That is not the point; the passage is about an extreme zeal for religious duties that makes life unbearably harsh (an example would be constant fasting). In this context, excessively righteous refers to being unreasonably demanding on yourself about moral or religious duties.

7:19 Wisdom is a good thing, but a person can be overly zealous about attaining it and end up disappointed (v. 23).

7:20-24 Awareness that everyone has sinned should lead to forbearance and patience with others.

7:25-29 This passage seems to say that women are more evil than men. However, it needs to be understood in its context; this was a male sage giving advice to other male sages and to men generally. Because Ecclesiastes was originally intended for men (few women were literate), it predominantly reflects the man’s point of view. Furthermore, this text is a reflection on the fall into sin, alluded to in verse 29. The point is that because of sin, the fundamental relationship between male and female, especially husband and wife, is broken (as implied in Gn 3:16). This is why men often have better friendships with other men (in the sense that they encourage and accept one another) than they have with their own wives. The phrase I have not found a true woman does not mean that women are intrinsically evil, but that Solomon, as a man, could not find a woman with whom his relationship was without guile, tension, or conflict. He in fact also found that such honest friendships with men were extremely rare (I have found one true man). If Ecclesiastes were written more for women, it would reflect their point of view, stating that many women have more caring relationships with other women than they have with their husbands. As it stands, both genders benefit from the God-given wisdom found in this book.

8:1-6 A wise person respects authority and knows how to approach an authority figure tactfully and at the right moment. No matter how bad things seem (even though man's troubles are heavy on him), approach a person in authority in the right way and at the right time.

8:7-8 We mortals are by nature frail, limited in our understanding, and incapable of predicting the future. Ultimately, everything is in God's hands.

8:9-9 : 1 This passage focuses on God's governance of the world; it struggles with the question of why evil sometimes seems to triumph. Examples of this include: cruel people rising to power (8:9), wicked people being honored in public (8:10), wicked people avoiding punishment (8:11), and good people suffering while the wicked do well (8:14). Against this, Ecclesiastes affirms that God does set things right (8:12-13) and asserts that a person should enjoy life and not always brood over evil (8:15). More than that, we must acknowledge that God alone knows what He is doing and why He does it, and we must be content to let Him rule the world (8:16-9:1).

9:2-6 When Ecclesiastes says there is one fate for the righteous and the wicked, it means physical death, not heaven or hell. We cannot control or avoid death by our works. But people draw the wrong conclusion from this; they assume that since there is nothing they can do to change the fact that death awaits all, they might as well cast away all restraint and live for themselves. They become full of evil, and madness. They cling to life, and use proverbs such as a live dog is better than a dead lion. Indeed, Ecclesiastes wants us to take death seriously. If we do, we will realize how fleeting are the passions that fuel our lives. But despair and self-abandonment are not the answer.

9:7-10 The proper response to death is to treat life as precious. The simple matters of eating and drinking should be done with a cheerful heart. Wearing clothes that are white and having oil on the head refers to dressing up, as for a party. The message is that we should treat most days as times of celebration and not of mourning. To enjoy life with one's wife is to find sexual pleasure in the proper way.

9:10 Sheol refers to the grave. The point of saying that no work, planning, knowledge, or wisdom occurs there is not to deny the possibility of the afterlife, but to assert that we have only one opportunity to enjoy this world.

9:11-12 Another aspect of our mortality is that we are governed by time and circumstances. Ecclesiastes does not deny the sovereignty of God over human affairs. The Teacher asserts that no matter how capable we are, many things are beyond our control. Above all, the moment of death is not ours to choose.

9:13-10 : 17 The teachings and proverbs in this section focus on making one's way in the world, and they are especially focused on political life. The people described here are likely to have direct contact with the king (10:4). This suggests that the original audience was not the peasant or merchant class, but the aristocracy. In the modern world, many of these teachings apply to what we might describe as "office politics."

9:13-16 In this anecdote, a poor but wise man conceived of a strategy that saved his city from destruction. This proves that wisdom is better than power, but the man's lack of power meant that he was not properly rewarded for his work. A person needs wisdom to deal with the world's problems, but this does not ensure that he will achieve wealth or glory.

9:17-10 : 1 In this section two contrasting ideas are set against each other. On the one hand, wisdom is more effective for governing people than is the brutal exercise of force and violence, described as shouts and weapons of war (9:17-18a). On the other hand, a single mistake can do a lot of damage and nullify the work of much wisdom (9:18b-10:1). The point of 10:1 is that dead flies in a fine ointment make that ointment disgusting. In the same way, one fool can ruin an administration and one mistake can ruin a career.

10:4 A person must maintain tact and self-control, showing wisdom, when dealing with the anger of a superior.

10:5-7 Even though folly is usually self-evident (v. 3), sometimes kings and other rulers appoint inept people to high offices but let the competent languish in lowly positions. In this context, slaves refers to people whose skill and wisdom are so limited they ought to be restricted to doing simple manual labor.

10:8-9 These verses contain two pairs of proverbs that are juxtaposed against each other. Verse 8 describes criminal activity: digging a pit refers to setting a trap in order to rob or murder someone, and breaking through a wall refers to breaking into a house to plunder it. Traditional wisdom teaches that people who engage in such criminal action inevitably destroy themselves (Ps 7:15; 9:15; Pr 26:27). On the other hand, Ec 10:9 teaches that even honest labor, such as quarrying stones or cutting trees, can result in severe injury. That is, criminal activity can destroy you, but so can honest work. The Teacher did not intend to discourage honesty but to say we have no guarantee of safety in this life. Even wise behavior can end in disaster. Ultimately, we must trust not in wisdom or in ethical behavior but in God for our security.

10:10-11 Wisdom can make success easier to accomplish, but wisdom must be applied in a timely manner or it will do no good.

10:12-15 The primary service of a counselor was giving advice to a king, and the quality of his advice marked the counselor as either a sage or a fool. The mark of a foolish counselor is that he says far more than he knows. Since no one knows what will happen, the wise counselor limits the amount of advice he gives. It is impossible to speak of the future with any certainty. By contrast, the foolish counselor tries to cover for his lack of knowledge by speaking on and on. This is well illustrated by the verbose but confusing directions fools give to someone who does not know the way to a location (v. 15 could be translated, "The effort of fools wearies him who does not know the way to the city").

10:16-17 Ultimately, the success or failure of a political entity (or of a business) depends on the quality of its leaders. These verses conclude the general discussion of 9:13-10:17 on wisdom in the political world with the remark that few things matter so much in this area as leadership.

10:18-20 These verses contain a series of three proverbs on what makes a safe, pleasant life. First, we must do the work needed to insure that we have the basic comforts that all people desire. Second, we must have some money and pleasure in order to enjoy a good life. In isolation from the rest of the book, this seems to recommend pure hedonism and greed, but this misreads the verse. There are things, such as a good meal, that almost all people enjoy. Money helps us to deal with all kinds of problems (money does not literally solve everything, but in fact many of our ordinary problems are financial in nature). Third, we should be careful in dealing with authorities in order to stay out of trouble.

11:1-6 This section focuses on making sound investments. It may seem odd that the Bible has such teachings, but much of Proverbs is concerned with advice on how to avoid poverty by prudent action. Most of us need a certain degree of prosperity in order to have a good life, and the advice here is valuable for both ancient and modern readers.

11:1 -2 These verses deal with financial investment, not charity. The phrase bread on the surface of the waters refers to investing in overseas trading ventures (1Kg 9:26-27). The phrase after many days you may find it refers to an eventual return on the investment, and the phrase to seven or even to eight refers to diversifying one's investments.

11:3-5 These verses expand on the reason that a person must diversify his investments. No one knows what will happen, so it is best to be ready for anything. Verse 3 essentially states that there are some signs that indicate what will happen in the future. Dark clouds do not guarantee—but they suggest—that a storm is coming. Certain trends are likely to remain the same. A fallen tree almost certainly will stay where it is. On the other hand, a person can be too concerned with looking for indications of what will happen. Verse 4 says that people who will not commit until they are absolutely certain of success never do anything. Verse 5 tells us that we know very little about the processes that govern the world. Understanding all about the weather or the formation of a fetus is beyond us. Thus, we should not demand infallible information about the future before making any investments.

11:6 A final word of advice on achieving prosperity: work hard in the hopes that at least one of your ventures will succeed.

11:7-12:7 Ecclesiastes is primarily concerned with making us understand that we are mortal, that our days are few, that all our works will fade away, and that we should govern our lives accordingly. In this, the last major passage of Ecclesiastes, the book reviews its essential conclusions about how we should spend the time we have. Essentially, the conclusion is twofold: enjoy your days under the sun and fear God.

11:7-8 In the Bible, light is often associated with life and darkness is associated with death. Light is beautiful, but the main point of light is sweet is that it is good to be alive. The assertion that the days of darkness . . . will be many does not deny the concept of an afterlife, nor does it specifically allude to an interim period between death and bodily resurrection. It is simply a way of saying that life is short but death is long. Enjoy these days because they are few and they pass quickly.

11:9-10 In these verses two pieces of advice are in tension with each other. The first is that we should enjoy life and the second is that we should fear God. The danger is that some people will try to enjoy life by doing things that are offensive to God. Whoever does such things destroys himself and loses both happiness and God. On the other hand, those who have the wrong kind of fear of God believe that anything that makes people happy must be bad and thus they deprive themselves of legitimate joys. A young man is specifically addressed because men (not women) were the original audience for Ecclesiastes and because the elderly, as described in 12:1-7, are already in the grip of death; the capacity to enjoy life has to a degree already passed them by.

12:1-7 Approaches to this passage differ, but it most likely is an extended series of metaphors describing the troubles of old age, culminating in death. The fact that old age is in view is suggested by the details of the metaphors and also by the exhortation in 11:10 to enjoy life while youthful vigor still exists. This text tells the young man, “This is what you have in your future, so enjoy your youth while it lasts.”

12:1 God is called the Creator here for two reasons. First, as maker of heaven and earth He is our judge; we must remember Him in the sense that we live in fear of Him and never forget that we are accountable to Him for our actions. Second, God as Creator calls us to enjoy life; He made the light, the earth and sky, food and drink, man and woman, and all the other things that in Genesis 1 He calls “good.” The days of adversity, as described in the verses that follow, are the days when a person is feeble and failing.

12:2 The phrase the sun and the light are darkened allude to the great works of creation in Gn 1:3-8—the creation of light, sun, moon, and sky. In apocalyptic texts, such as Jr 4:23-28 and Jl 2:10-11, the Day of the Lord is described as an unmaking of creation itself, including the darkening of the sun and moon. For every human being, death is a personal apocalypse; it is the end of the world for us. This, rather than failing eyesight, is probably the main point of this verse (failing eyesight is described in the next verse).

12:3 The phrase when the guardians of the house tremble probably refers to the hands. They are what a person uses to protect himself, and the hands of the elderly are sometimes subject to trembling. The strong men who stoop refer to the legs and back; these are the largest muscle groups in the body and they become flaccid in old age, leading to bent posture. The women who grind are the teeth, because they grind food. In the ancient world, where dental care was nonexistent, even the pharaohs of Egypt lost their teeth if they lived into old age. The teeth are referred to as “women” because typically women in a household did the work of grinding meal for bread. The ones who watch through the windows refer to the eyes. Here, however, the language is a metaphor for poor eyesight; there is no apocalyptic language, as there is in verse 2.

12:4 This verse describes two aspects of the effects of old age on hearing. On the one hand, people no longer hear well, and sounds are muffled and faint as if doors have been shut. On the other hand, many old people do not sleep well, and even a faint sound awakens them.

12:5 Solomon abandons metaphorical language with the phrase they are afraid of heights and dangers on the road. Old people fear falling down and are easy prey for criminals. Almond tree blossoms almost certainly refers to white hair. The grasshopper loses its spring and the caper berry has no effect may refer to impotence; it appears that the caper was regarded as an aphrodisiac. A man going to his eternal home with mourners walking in the street obviously alludes to a funeral.

12:6 The cord, the bowl, the jar . . . shattered at the spring, and the wheel . . . broken at the well all refer to drawing up water from a well, a spring, or a cistern. Water in the Bible is frequently associated with life (this is understandable, considering the near-desert climate of ancient Israel). Thus, if these things are broken, death has occurred. Describing these objects as silver and gold implies that life is precious.

12:7 This verse alludes to Gn 2:7; 3:19.

12:8 This verse repeats the theme of the book stated in 1:2. These two verses —1:2 and 12:8—bracket the whole of the book, and it properly ends at this point. What follows, verses 9-14, is an epilogue.

12:9-14 These verses reveal a few more details about the author's life and give the reader some parting exhortations.

12:9 This verse is consistent with the view that Solomon was the author of Ecclesiastes (1Kg 4:30-32).

12:10 This verse indicates that the Teacher not only sought to give sound teaching, but to present it in a way that was appealing and appropriate. This suggests that there is more care in the wording and arrangement of books such as Proverbs and Ecclesiastes than first meets the eye.

12:11 The essential teaching of this verse—that God has given us wisdom in order to guide us through life—is clear. A pastoral metaphor governs at least part of the verse. God (the one Shepherd) prods us along just as shepherds prod animals with goads—sticks with sharp points (Ac 26:14). It is not certain whether embedded nails refers to nails inserted at the ends of goads (1Sm 13:21), or whether this is a different metaphor, describing proverbs as fixed and dependable, like nails driven in a wall. If the latter, it implies that we can hang our lives on these fixed truths.

12:12 Proverbs are important, but the Teacher warns against study done for its own sake. Too much study deprives a person of the joys that Ecclesiastes recommends. This verse does not oppose scholarship, but it does demand that scholars approach their work with humility and with balance in their lives.

12:13-14 The meaning of the phrase because this is for all humanity is much debated. The Hebrew literally says, "for this [is] the whole of man." The phrase could mean, as the HCSB renders it, that the rule to fear God applies to every person. Alternatively, it could mean obedience to God is the proper role for man in the universe. In other words, to live in the fear of God is to be truly human. To do otherwise is to lose the essence of our humanity. The conclusion of Ecclesiastes, to fear God, is in keeping with the message of the book—that we are mortal and weak but He is almighty. Although the book recommends, among other things, that we should enjoy our brief time under the sun, the advice to fear God trumps everything. The whole of the book has been focused on the brevity of earthly life and on how we should live in light of this reality. But at the end, the book looks beyond this life to the final judgment.

Word Studies hevel Hebrew Pronunciation [HEH vel]

HCSB Translation breath, futility Uses in Ecclesiastes 38
Uses in the OT 73
Focus Passage Ecclesiastes 1:2,14

Hevel may originate in the sound of breath (Is 57:13). It may have produced a verb (haval) that occurs five times, once used as keep up empty talk (Jb 27:12). Haval denotes become worthless (Jr 2:5) or place false hope (Ps 62:10). The causative means make worthless (Jr 23:16). Breath as transient and apparently insignificant underlies all metaphorical uses of hevel. It can indicate vapor (Ps 39:5) or mist (Pr 21:6), but the idea of little worth is always present. Hevel connotes fraud (Pr 13:11). It signifies empty (Jb 27:12), worthless (Jr 10:3), meaningless (Ps 94:11), futile (Jb 21:34), fleeting (Pr 31:30), or in vain (Zch 10:2). It describes man (Ps 62:9). This key word in Ecclesiastes suggests futility except at Ec 9:9. Absolute futility is literally "futility of futilities" (Ec 1:2). The plural often denotes worthless idols (Dt 32:21) since context clarifies what the hevel is.

It connotes happiness (Jb 20:5), pleasure (Pr 21:17), enjoyment (Ec 8:15), celebration (Neh 8:12), and gratitude (Neh 12:44). Simchah appears 13x with sason ("joy, delight"), usually as gladness (Ps 51:8), and several times each with giyl ("rejoicing"; Is 16:10) and rinnah ("shout of joy, singing"; Zph 3:17). Simchah accompanied feasting (Est 9:17-19), harvest (Is 9:3), and especially music (21 v v.). It could arise from folly or wisdom (Pr 15:21,23). The adjective sameach (21x) describes people rejoicing (1Kg 1:40). It appears as joy (Dt 16:15) and joyful (Ps 113:9). It implies enjoying (oneself) (Est 5:14; Pr 2:14), taking pleasure (Ec 2:10), and being full of joy (Est 5:9). Carouser translates "sameach of heart" (Is 24:7).

sakal Hebrew Pronunciation [sah KAHL]

HCSB Translation fool Uses in Ecclesiastes 5
Uses in the OT 7
Focus Passage Ecclesiastes 10:3,14

Like kesiyl and 'ewiyl, sakal denotes fool. A related Akkadian adjective describes a simpleminded, clumsy, or foolish person so intellectually weak that he cannot evaluate his actions. An Arabic cognate means "doubtful." The sakal doesn't recognize when something is absurd (Jr 5:21), lacks understanding, and knows to do evil but not good (Jr 4:22). Contrasted with a wise man, he displays folly, multiplies words, and dies prematurely (Ec 2:19; 7:17; 10:3,14). The verb sakal (8x) is be foolish in the passive-reflexive (2Sm 24:10), act foolishly (Gn 31:28) or be a fool (1Sm 26:21) in the causative, and turn into foolishness in the intensive (2Sm 15:31). Sikluth, or folly (7x), appears only in Ecclesiastes. It includes drunken behavior (Ec 2:3) and is contrasted with wisdom as a kind of madness leading to evil madness (Ec 2:13; 10:1,13). Sekel means folly, specifically, a fool (Ec 10:6)

SONG OF SONGS

Introduction

"Listen! My love is approaching. Look! Here he comes, leaping over the mountains, bounding over the hills. My love is like a gazelle or a young stag" (2:8-9).

The Song of Songs celebrates the love of Solomon and his bride, who is called Shulamith or the Shulammite (6:13). The excitement of courtship, the beauty of the wedding night, the sexuality of the first night and subsequent nights, as well as tender friendship—all of these elements make this book a celebration of romance and marital sensuality as God intended them to be.

Circumstances of Writing Author: The Song claims authorship by Solomon in its title, "The Song of Songs which is Solomon's." The church has long accepted this at face value, but modern critics raise objections to Solomon as author.

First, critics claim that the title did not originate with the Song but was added later by someone who wanted to attribute the work to the famous Solomon. However, no evidence supports this claim. Moreover, the structure of the book suggests that the title is integral to the book's composition and is thus original. Like other biblical writers, the writer often structured content with attention to certain numbers—three, seven, and ten being some of the most common. Within the Song, for example, the author designed seven sections (see below), a sevenfold praise (4:1-5), twice a tenfold praise (5:10-16; 7:1-5), and a tenfold occurrence of the abstract word for love (2:4-5,7; 3:5; 5:8; 7:6; 8:4,6-7). Apart from the title (1:1), he wove Solomon's name into six other places (1:5; 3:7,9,11; 8:11-12): two in the last section, three in the central, and one in the first. With the inclusion of "Solomon" in the title, the name appears a perfect seven times and is symmetrically balanced within the Song: twice in the first section balanced by twice in the last one, with three in the central. The title is thus as cleverly integrated with the lyrics as possible. It not only conforms to their melodic alliteration and meter, but it completes the sevenfold occurrence of "Solomon" and in a manner that artistically balances it throughout the Song. In fact, the tenfold occurrence of "love" joins the sevenfold appearance of "Solomon" to show the Song's subject and author. Hardly a later addition, the title seems to have been original, constituting its first verse.

Another common objection to Solomon's authorship is the king's well-known possession of 700 wives and 300 concubines (1Kg 11:3). How could a man who lived like that write a song about devotion to one woman? It appears he could do so only because grace touched his heart. In this respect he foreshadowed other biblical writers who, except for God's grace and calling, were the least qualified to write Scripture. For example, Paul, the great apostle, wrote most eloquently of grace and his unworthiness (e.g., 1Tm 1:12-16). Solomon was a man immersed in power and pleasure, but God opened his eyes to true love. Solomon also authored the book of Proverbs. Just as he did not always follow the precepts he recorded there, so too he evidently composed a great love song despite his failure to live in accordance with its ideals.

Background: A compelling historical reason to date the Song as coming from the time of Solomon is its nearest literary parallel—the Egyptian love songs. No one doubts their origin prior to or contemporaneous with the time of Solomon, and the Egyptian love songs are indisputably the Song's closest literary parallels.

Message and Purpose The central theme of the Song of Songs is a celebration of the goodness and beauty of romantic love. The Song's romantic ideals are as captivating as its imagery: emotional intimacy, sensitive communication, delightful sexuality, profound companionship, common perspective, willing forgiveness, respect, integrity, security, love's devotion through bleak seasons of winter, and love's renewal in new seasons of spring.

Since the Song portrays a perfect love, it is natural for the songwriter to compare it to the love of God for Israel. Solomon's love is like God's love for His people, and Shulamith's love is like a response from those people to God. If the NT will later tell us that a man's love for his wife should emulate Christ's love for his bride (Eph 5:22-33), Solomon's song shows such a marriage patterned after divine love.

Since the Song captures ideal love in its reflection of God's love for Israel, its romance also reflects the ideal love that God intended for a husband and wife. We see a return to paradise in a courtship that blossomed in the uncluttered beauty of nature (1:15-2:3; 2:8-14), in a wedding night consummated with allusions to the garden of paradise (4:12-5:1), and in a marriage that delights in innocent lovemaking (4:1-5:1; 7:1-8:3).

The Song's last praise of love captures all of this (8:5-7). The flames of love are like the fire of the Lord. In Genesis, God ruled over the waters of chaos to make the heavens and earth, creating in His image Adam and Eve to reflect His love in their union. In Exodus, God ruled over the deathly waters of the Red Sea to establish a new nation for His people. Since God's love is like fire (Dt 4:24; 32:21-22), and since the love of Solomon and Shulamith recovers the innocence of Adam and Eve and reflects God's love for Israel, the Song compares the power of romantic love to the eternal fire of God that no waters or rivers can quench.

Contribution to the Bible A beautiful love song inspires us like grace, creating within us a desire for its beauty. Like such an enchanting love song, Solomon's Song inspires a pursuit of the love it portrays. This romantic delight is not a modern fairy tale or fantasy from the past, but reflects God's desire to form within us a pure and devoted love. We discover that there is a bliss in married love that is reflective of the greater love believers experience as the bride of Christ. As this book's imagery informs us of romantic love, it also helps us anticipate the full consummation of our relationship with Christ when He returns for His bride.

Structure The Song of Songs is a poem whose components form a chiastic structure. A chiasm takes the form:

where A and A' mirror each other and where the central element, C, conveys the main point of the poem. The outline below shows the structure of the Song of Songs. The author intended to emphasize the central elements of the structure, the day and night of the wedding (section IV). When God inspired Solomon to write this song, He gave divine approval to romantic love.

The Hebrew text makes a distinction between the various speakers through a change in gender and number. The HCSB text has added subheadings to clarify when the speakers change.

Timeline

Study Notes 1:1 Solomon's Finest Song (lit "The Song of Songs which is Solomon's"), like many of the lyrics, is alliterative and melodic. The form of the phrase "which is Solomon's" normally indicates authorship (cp. Pss 72 and 127).

1:2 Oh, that he would kiss me with the kisses of his mouth begins the Song like love often begins: with sudden intensity and excitement. The abrupt beginning artistically weds style to content, signaling to the reader that the Song will move at a quick and entrancing pace. The speaker is unidentified at this point. Later we learn that she is "the Shulammite" (6:13). For reasons explained in the note at 6:11-13, we will refer to her by the name "Shulamith."

1:3 Name (Hb shem) and perfume (Hb shemen) are similar in Hebrew, so the Song presents here the first of its frequent wordplays. Since names were thought to capture essence, the praise also begins an important theme—that desire arises out of delight.

1:4 Solomon's attractive qualities are apparent to others, and are not mere fantasies of infatuation.

1:5-6 Shulamith explained her darkened appearance as the consequence of her brothers' (my mother's sons) assignment to work outside in vineyards. We later discover they had leased this vineyard from Solomon (8:10-12).

1:7 As a shepherd finds shade for his flock during the heat of the day, Solomon could provide protection from the gaze of the women (vv. 5-6) and the anger of the brothers (v. 6) that burned like the sun. So Shulamith could ask Where do you let them (the flock) rest at noon, implicitly requesting relief in Solomon's protection from the "sun's" heat. This extended metaphor resumes in Shulamith's comparison of Solomon to a tree in the forest in whose "shade" she delighted (2:3) and concludes in her being compared to the morning star (or dawn light in 6:10). "Dawn" (or morning star, Hb shakar) is a play on "dark" (Hb shekorah ; 1:6), the effect of the sun on the skin. Love transformed the young woman darkened by the sun into the light of dawn.

In a wordplay, why appears in this form only here in the OT. The archaic relative pronoun (she) is attached to the interrogative with the lamed prefix (Hb lamah) to form shallamah. Since the consonants are exactly the same as the name "Solomon," the original readers might first have thought it should be translated "Solomon," making the sentence read, "Solomon, I will be like a veiled woman by the flocks." This is perhaps just the sort of playful thing young lovers would say.

One who veils herself is likely an allusion to Tamar, who disguised herself as a prostitute by donning a veil and then enticed Judah to fulfill his duty to provide for her (Gn 38:14-15). Like Tamar, Shulamith was not what she appeared to be: She was no more a common laborer than Tamar was a prostitute. But unlike Tamar, she did not have to use manipulation since Solomon was willing. So why indeed should Shulamith veil herself to conceal her motives? Later Shulamith is likened to a "palm tree," which is tamar in Hebrew (Sg 7:7-8).

1:8 Most beautiful of women is a term of address used twice elsewhere by the young women of Jerusalem for Shulamith (5:9; 6:1). Perhaps these other occurrences are evidence that the women of Jerusalem also speak here. If so, the reader can imagine that in 1:7 Shulamith addressed Solomon in soliloquy, similar to verses 2b-4a. Young goats is literally "female kids" (used only here in the OT), and it invites a figurative explanation for such an unusual flock. It likely anticipates the praise of Shulamith's long, flowing hair being like a flock of goats descending a mountain (4:1).

1:9 A mare among Pharaoh's chariots would stir the chariots' stallions, just as Shulamith would attract the attention of men. "Shepherds" (Hb ra'ah ; v. 8), which evidently refers to "companions" (v. 7), is a wordplay with my darling (Hb ra'yah), Solomon's first term of endearment for Shulamith. The name thus underscores their companionate friendship (5:16), in the imagery of shepherd and shepherdess.

1:10 Archaeological drawings show jewels decorating bridles of horses, so the imagery of jewels on the cheeks and in necklaces likely extends the metaphor of the mare.

1:12-2:5 This section is in chiastic balance with 8:5-7 in the design of the Song (see outline in the Introduction): (a) he was a sachet of myrrh . . . between my breasts (1:13) and she requested to be a seal over his heart (8:6); (b) they enjoyed the "house" of nature and the "house of wine" (lit for banquet hall) (1:17; 2:4) but "all the wealth of his house" (lit) could not buy love (8:7); (c) she delighted in him, likened him to an apricot (or apple) tree (2:3), and she awakened his love under the apricot (or apple) tree (8:5); (d) she was "faint from love" (lit in 2:5) and she emerged from the wilderness "leaning on the one she loved" (8:5).

1:12 One may also translate on his couch as "in his realm," similar to its meaning in 1Kg 6:29 and 2Kg 23:5 ("surrounding"), the only other times this phrase appears in the OT.

1:13-14 Spending the night personifies the sachet of myrrh, suggesting it was like a pillow a young woman would hold pretending it was her lover. While Solomon was away and about his realm, Shulamith's thoughts about him were as evocative as myrrh. En-gedi was an oasis in the desert, perhaps continuing the metaphor of Solomon's protection from the sun (vv. 6-7).

1:15-2:3 Mutual praise escalates, each building upon the imagery introduced by the other: his praise of her beauty and eyes like doves (1:15) elicited like praise (1:16a) to which she added additional imagery (1:16b-17); her comparison of herself to a flower (2:1) then elicited like praise (2:2a) from him to which he added additional imagery (2:2b), which she reciprocated (like an apricot tree), but also climactically embellished (she delighted to sit in his shade, 2:3). Doves were repeatedly shown in the drawings of the day as literal "messengers of love." The look of love in lovers' eyes is unmistakable. Our bed is lush with foliage (1:16) may also be translated "our resting place is in the branches' foliage," which is perhaps more consistent with the context and other OT usage.

One of the few natural waterfalls in Israel is located at En-gedi on the west side of the Dead Sea.

2:1 The Hebrew shushan was probably not the lily (Lilium spp.) but the water lily or lotus flower (Nymphaea lotus L.), which the ancient world associated with almost magical, life-giving powers. This association is consistent with references in the Song: the life-giving princess (v. 1); the source of life that bonds Solomon to her (v. 16); the erotic setting of her breasts (4:5); his lips flowing with liquid myrrh (5:13); flowers enjoyed before a reconciliation (6:3); and the flowers that surround her abdomen and navel. There is also a wordplay: Solomon praised Shulamith as a mare (Hb susa; 1:9) that drew the attention of others; she responded that she was also a life-giving flower (Hb shushan). She not only received attention; she gave attention as well.

2:2-3 The significance of the lotus flower's place among thorns is similar to the tree's shade and fruit in a dangerous forest: both are places of safety surrounded by danger. The implication is that their love was likewise a place of safety in a hostile world. "Fruit" is often a metaphor for speech (Pr 12:14; 13:2; 18:20) that can be described as sweet not only in Proverbs (Pr 16:24), but also in the Song (Sg 5:13,16).

2:4-5 Banquet hall is literally "house of wine," inviting a contrast with the house of nature in 1:17 and the house of wealth in 8:6-7; the latter is the corresponding section in the chiastic structure. He looked on me with love assumes that the root meaning behind the military banner was the concept of looking. The alternate reading, "His banner over me is love," is supported by the fact that drawings in the ancient Near East show groups carrying banners with symbols identifying the group. Solomon's love for Shulamith is clear and public. I am lovesick affirms the intensity of romantic love.

2:6-17 Between the two refrains of verses 6-7 and the two of verses 16-17 is Solomon's invitation to Shulamith during courtship to come from her house and enjoy a spring day that reflects the new life love has given (vv. 8-15). This section is in chiastic contrast with Shulamith's invitation to Solomon during marriage to enjoy a spring day and go to her house (7:10-8:4). This latter section is also framed by similar refrains (see outline in the Introduction). The wives of kings commonly had separate quarters from the king.

2:6-7 These refrains conclude the first section and begin the second, just as they appear in chiastic balance in 8:3-4 to conclude the sixth section and begin the last (see outline in the Introduction).

2:6 One may also render His left hand is as a wish: "Let his left hand be . . ." Wishes appear in the Song's opening request, "Oh, that he would kiss me" (1:1), and even on the wedding night, "Let my love come to his garden" (4:16). Here a wish appears even more likely. It is a public context (2:4-5,7), and afterwards comes an admonition advocating restraint until the appropriate time. The wedding night is that time, as evidenced in its fulfillment of a wish for intimacy (cp. 2:17 with 4:5-6) and the praise of Shulamith's virgin purity (4:12).

2:7 Shulamith asked the women to promise by the gazelles and the wild does of the field. Gazelles (Hb tseva'oth) is precisely like "hosts" (Hb tseva'oth) in "Lord of Hosts," and wild does of the field (Hb 'ayloth hasadeh) is similar to El Shaddai—two wordplays that might go unnoticed except that Shulamith's request is in the form of the traditional oath formula normally requesting a promise "by the Lord" (Gn 24:3). The play on the names of God is instructive. Shulamith asked for a promise of patience in love. So she asked for the promise not by the Lord of Hosts nor by the Almighty God but by the creatures whose manner modeled romantic ways. Love, as she expresses it here, awakens not in response to the coercive power of an army or the might of God, but to love expressed with the gentle sensitivity of the gazelles or does of the meadow. Until the appropriate time (lit "until it pleases") personifies love as their guide.

2:8-14 Listen! My love is approaching is literally "The voice of my beloved!" Voice can also mean "sound," which may be the sense of it here, but the same word appears in verse 12 to refer to the cooing (lit "voice") of the dove and in verse 14 to refer to the voice of Shulamith. The "voice" is thus at the beginning, middle, and end of this section and a theme of these lyrics develops around it:

the desire of each to hear the voice of the other, to communicate in the uncluttered freedom of nature—a theme begun in 1:4 that does not conclude until the last lyrics of the Song (8:13) but is distinctively developed in 2:8-14.

2:8 Bounding (Hb qaphats; v. 8) plays on the word "pleases" (Hb chaphets) in "until the appropriate time" (v. 7). Solomon approached in response to the leading of love.

2:10-14 Solomon's address to Shulamith comprises two lyrical sets: the first (vv. 10-13) describes the beauty of spring with the singing voice of the turtledove as its centerpiece; the second (v. 14) describes the hidden Shulamith as the real dove whose appearance and voice he wished to hear.

2:12 The word for singing may also mean "pruning," but the parallelism with the turtledove's cooing confirms the translation here.

2:15-17 These verses conclude section B with refrains resumed in part at the transition (7:7-8,10) beginning the corresponding section B' (7:10-8:4; see Introduction).

2:15 The term vineyards refers to Shulamith (1:6; 8:12). In bloom anticipates the vineyard's beauty before the harvest, and thus describes the beauty of the two lovers anticipating marriage; foxes extend the metaphor to anything harmful to the romance. Perhaps the primary warning is against a "premature harvest" of the fruit Shulamith offered Solomon on the wedding night (4:16). The speaker of Catch . . . for us could be Solomon, Shulamith, or both, and the ambiguity is likely intentional, suggesting mutual resolve.

2:16 My love is mine and I am his later transforms to "I am my love's and my love is mine" (6:3) and finally to "I belong to my love and his desire is for me" (7:10)—all similar but differing in ways that show a progression in Shulamith's security. First her possession of him was primary, then secondary, then finally omitted completely, as she found security not in her possession of him, but in his devoted love of her (see note at 7:10). On lilies, see note at verse 1. The flower becomes increasingly erotic and evidently associated with tenderness—her breasts, his lips, her abdomen.

2:17 The request in this verse is answered in similar language on the wedding night (4:6). Gazelle or a young stag is identical to the phrase in verse 9 that describes Solomon's behavior in courtship. Shulamith longed for the same delight on the wedding night. Divided mountains (lit "mountains of separation") is a poetic reference to her breasts (see note at 4:1-7). In Solomon's answer to this request, he embellished the metaphor as the "mountain of myrrh and hill of frankincense" (4:6; cp. 8:14), adding fragrance to the image. The enjoyment of Shulamith's breasts is again poetically expressed in a later night of lovemaking (7:7-8). So Solomon displayed in the Song what he encouraged in Proverbs, “Rejoice in the wife of your youth . . . Let her be your loving deer, your graceful doe. And drink your fill from her breasts of wine so you are always drunk with her love” (Pr 5:18-19, trans. by Gl ickman, Solomon’s Song of Love, p. 230). Until Solomon answered Shulamith’s request, the night remained and with it the anxiety of anticipation (3:1-4).

3:1-4 Shulamith and Solomon began the night apart but ended it together, aided by the watchmen of the walls. This is set in chiastic balance with section C' where again they began the night apart but fell asleep together (5:2-7:9; see Introduction), though hindered by the watchmen—one of many contrasts in the chiasm (see note at 5:2-8). The shorter length of this section as compared to the one corresponding to it is not uncommon in Hebrew chiasm.

3:5 Young women of Jerusalem begins a repetition of the refrain of 2:7 (see note at 2:7) and is a transition to the central section of the wedding day and night (3:6-5:1; see outline in the Introduction).

3:6-5:1 These verses feature the songwriter’s own words at beginning and end, first celebrating the pageant of the wedding day and then the beauty of the wedding night. Solomon is more central in the wedding day, his name appearing three times and the pageantry proclaiming his lavish wedding (3:6-11). Shulamith is more central in the wedding night, in praise of her beauty and character (4:1-5:1).

3:6 The word this is feminine in Hebrew, perhaps indicating Shulamith was in the procession coming to Solomon. Coming up from the wilderness (see 8:5) suggests two complimentary allusions: (1) Israel’s emergence from the wilderness they had entered after deliverance from Egypt and (2) Adam and Eve’s emergence from the wilderness they had entered after disobedience. The imagery of Shulamith as a garden paradise on the wedding night is evidence of the latter. The implicit comparisons of Shulamith to Israel are evidence of the former (see Introduction). Both allusions underscore the ideals of romantic love. Like Israel’s new land, their love was the foundation of a new life together; like a new paradise, their love recovered what romantic love was meant to be.

3:7-11 This section describes the powerful and magnificent retinue of King Solomon.

4:1-5:1 The wedding night begins with praise of seven aspects of Shulamith (4:1-7), then proceeds to invitation (4:8), lovemaking (4:9-11), and poetic consummation (4:12-5:1).

4:1-7 The praise begins and ends with compliment of the whole person. Within these comprehensive statements Solomon admired Shulamith’s eyes, hair, teeth, lips, mouth (see notes at v. 2 and v. 3), neck, and breasts. Between the compliment of her breasts and the concluding summary compliment is Solomon's answer to Shulamith's request of 2:17. The placement of the answer just after the imagery of her breasts but within the overall praise is significant in that it supports the interpretation that "divided mountains" of 2:17 and "mountain of myrrh and the hill of frankincense" in 4:6 are metaphors for her breasts.

4:1 Doves were associated with love in the ancient world, appearing as literal messengers of love in Egyptian art. Shulamith's eyes were messengers of love to Solomon (see note at 1:15). A flock of goats streaming down Mount Gilead describes her long, flowing hair. "Streaming" derives from a verb meaning "bubbling" or "boiling," suggesting movement within the whole, as if individual animals were leaping within the group, though merged within it. The metaphor suggests lively curls and healthy, flowing hair.

4:2 Shulamith's teeth were gleaming and white. A festive sheep-shearing may be suggested, too, by coming up from washing, occurring after they were shorn, so perhaps Solomon praised her smile as well.

4:3 The prostitute Rahab hung a scarlet cord from her window as a sign to the invading Israelites to protect her home (Jos 2:18). Shulamith's speech, which expressed her character, was her protection. This indicated she belonged to God, just as Rahab's scarlet ribbon indicated she belonged to God and His people (Glickman, p. 207). Your brow could be translated "your lips" (Hb raqqah). In addition, the word translated slice is more precisely rendered "sliced opening," which is consistent with the drawings from this era that show the pomegranate sliced open but not cut into slices (O. Keel, The Song of Songs, p. 144). These compliments are a dazzling array of movement and color. The colors proceed from white doves to black goats to white sheep to red lips and mouth. They also alternate movement: doves flying out, a flock scampering down, shorn sheep scurrying up, lips beckoning in.

4:4 The neck expresses the body language of character. If Shulamith's neck was like a military fortress, she had a character that demanded respect: Solomon admired her completely. The tower shields probably correspond metaphorically to her necklace (v. 9).

4:5 The lilies, or lotus flowers (see note at 2:1), suggest the life-giving effect of her breasts. The comparison to fawns perhaps suggests Solomon responded as if to playful, baby animals he wanted to hold and caress.

4:6 Before can be rendered "until" (see note at 2:17), which suggests the promise of love through the night. This mountain imagery occurs at the end of the first two sections (2:17), at the end of the last two sections (8:14), and here in the center of the central section.

4:7 No imperfection refers to both inner and outer perfection, so it is an apt summary of Solomon's praise of Shulamith's beauty and character.

4:8 The Hebrew for the end of verse 6 and beginning of verse 7 is hallevonah kulak and is translated as ". . . frankincense. You are absolutely," where "absolutely" is literally "completely." This phrase sounds like the phrase here translated as: from Lebanon, my bride (Hb millevanon kallah). This wordplay draws attention to a connotation of "bride" as the "completed one," and furnishes an alliterative transition between the closely related sections. The use of the simpler "bride" here rather than "my sister, my bride" (vv. 9,10,12 and 5:1) allows for the wordplay. From the peak . . . from the dens of the lions, from the mountains of the leopards perhaps are metaphors of the fearful places within Shulamith that she must leave in order to open her heart fully to Solomon.

4:9 "Sister" and "brother" were terms of endearment in Egyptian love songs as well as Sumerian love poetry. It is perhaps implied in Adam's expression of unity with Eve: "This one, at last, is bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh" (Gn 2:23)—a level of unity particularly fitting for siblings, and a metaphor, therefore, of the closest possible relationship. The "brother" metaphor for Solomon in 8:1 justifies a gentle kiss from Shulamith even in public. My sister, my bride—a phrase implying a bond as close as that of Adam and Eve—introduces each stage of increasing sexual intimacy: arousal from her presence; delight in her love and fragrance (v. 10); beginning of consummation (v. 12), and the celebration of their union (5:1). Captured my heart may also be rendered "made my heart beat faster."

4:11 The phrase Your lips drip sweetness like the honeycomb is alliterative in Hebrew, suggesting the sound of dripping honey. Honey and milk not only describes passionate kisses but likely alludes to the richness of the land that God gave Israel (Ex 3:8,17; Nm 14:8; 16:13-14). Solomon found the same richness in Shulamith and implied she was also a gift from God.

4:12-5:1 These lyrics include three principal metaphors in the consummation sequence: a garden, a fountain, and a banquet. Solomon compared Shulamith to a garden and spring, or fountain (4:12), expanding first upon the garden (4:13-14) and then the spring (4:15). Shulamith continued the metaphor in her invitation to the wind to blow upon the garden, causing its spices to "flow like a stream" (lit for "spread" in "spread the fragrance of its spices," 4:16). Solomon then celebrated in the metaphor of a festive banquet (5:1) that drew together the imagery of the garden (4:12,16) with its myrrh and spices (4:14) and the honey and milk of Shulamith's kisses (4:11). The banquet imagery continues in the songwriter's encouragement to celebrate (5:1) (Glickman, pp. 30-35).

4:12 The phrases locked garden and sealed spring praise virgin purity in the imagery of a garden paradise and pristine mountain streams (cp. v. 15).

4:13-14 The word paradise may mean simply “park” or “orchard,” but it may also allude to the perfection of Eden. The Hebrew rendered branches is difficult to translate but not difficult to understand. It refers to all the “extensions” from the garden soil: all the fruits, trees, and spices. It is not the word for “garden,” but for all that the garden contains, so it anticipates the entire description in verses 13-14. Pomegranates were symbols of lovemaking and fertility; henna had small red and white blossoms; nard was famous for its aroma; saffron was linked with nard, possibly because the spices were in the saffron’s stigmata, which when gathered together resembled a handful of yarn, perhaps providing a delicate metaphor of Shulamith’s sexuality. Calamus (Hb qaneh) and cinnamon (Hb qinnamon) are alliterative and, like nard and saffron, combine plant (the long, green-ribboned leaves of the calamus that grew in marshes) with fragrance. The trees of frankincense continue the movement to the larger, more overwhelming beauty of the garden, perhaps a metaphor for the increasing intensity of the experience.

4:15 Garden spring joins the metaphors of “garden” and “spring.” Water from Lebanon completes the embellishment of spring water with the image of pure, mountain streams. An allusion to Shulamith’s sexual response in the metaphor of the waters is consistent with the metaphor of a well in Pr 5:15-18.

4:16 If the previous imagery suggests the peak of excitement, then Shulamith’s invitation to Solomon is perfectly placed. She continued the previous metaphors in her poetic request for the winds to blow upon her garden (lit “let its spices flow like a stream”; the verb rendered “streams flowing” in v. 15 is the same verb rendered “flow like a stream” here). So Shulamith resumed both the garden and the spring metaphors. She asked the winds to entice Solomon into the garden with its intoxicating fragrances. Awaken is the same word used in the refrain advocating patient restraint (2:7; 3:5). The songwriter thus reminds the reader that such restraint is no longer needed.

5:1 Solomon celebrated the consummation (see note at 4:12-5:1). The songwriter’s words began this section and now conclude it (see outline in the Introduction). Since friends in the singular was Solomon’s customary name for Shulamith (rendered “darling” in 1:9,15; 2:2,10,13; 4:1,7; 6:4) and love in the singular was Shulamith’s customary name for Solomon (rendered “my love” in 1:13,14,16; 2:3,8,9,16,17; 4:16; 5:2,4,5,6,8,9,10,16; 6:1,2,3; 7:9,11; 8:14), an alternative translation is “Eat, O darling companions (Hb reyim); drink and drink deeply, O beloveds (Hb dodim).” In other words, it appears the songwriter addresses the couple by the names they most commonly called each other.

This blessing is at the center of the song’s lyrics and is the conclusion of its central section (see outline in the Introduction). As if Shakespeare stepped onto the stage of Romeo and Juliet, the songwriter dramatically appears. After encouraging the wedding guests at the end of the wedding day (3:11), he blesses the wedding couple at the end of the wedding night (5:1). His authorial perspective is all-knowing and all-present, hinting that he speaks for God. Readers have often thought it curious that the mothers appear five times (3:4,11; 6:9; 8:2,5) but fathers not at all, even where expected (8:8-9). Perhaps it is because the voice of the songwriter speaks for the ultimate Father who orchestrates the romance. As the wedding's preeminent guest, the Great Songwriter gives blessing to love and the lovers.

5:2-7:9 This is the lengthiest section of the Song. This night of relative apathy (5:2a) following the wedding night is structurally opposite the night of anxiety preceding the wedding day (see outline in the Introduction). As such this later section provides some obvious contrasts, but it also more broadly captures common romantic sequences within marriage that compare and contrast with the wedding night and all that precedes it. This section is also distinguished by the most developed internal chiasm in the Song. Despite its length, its beginning with Shulamith sleeping alone (5:2a) and conclusion with her sleeping romantically with Solomon (7:9), artistically maintains its chiastic balance with the corresponding section, 3:1-5. The outline of events is evident in the outline of the book (see Introduction). In addition, the two questions posed by the women of Jerusalem (5:9; 6:1) are poetic guides to the movement of the lyrics. After the problem created by Shulamith's reluctance (5:2), the first question (5:9) introduces her tenfold praise of Solomon (5:10-16) and the second question (6:1) introduces the reconciliation (6:1-13) that leads to Solomon's tenfold praise of her (7:1-5).

5:2-8 The contrast with the night before the wedding is apparent. On that earlier night (see note at 3:1-4), Shulamith couldn't sleep because of her anxiety over Solomon's absence; here, sleep comes easily, and she wants continued slumber out of apathy from his presence, as evidenced by Solomon's pleading to open to me. In 3:1-4 the watchmen of the walls assisted Shulamith to find him; here, they hinder her, mistaking her for a criminal. In 3:1-4 Shulamith's night ended united with Solomon; here, lengthy anxiety and reconciliation precedes the night of reunion.

5:2 Solomon's fourfold terms of endearment, the most of any place in the Song, underscore the contrast of his fervor with her apathetic response.

5:4-5 Many of the terms in these verses have euphemistic possibilities, suggesting a double entendre. She may have been dreaming. My feelings were stirred is literally "my insides were agitated."

5:8 Shulamith is no longer apathetic but lovesick (lit "faint from love am I"), just as she was in the peak of courtship (2:5).

5:9 This is the first of two questions (v. 9; 6:1; see note at 5:2-7:9) that guide the movement of this section.

5:10-16 This section contains tenfold praise that moves downward from head to feet, enclosed by comprehensive summary praise in verse 10 and verse 16b. The praise of Solomon's mouth in verse 16 is not likely an interruption of the movement since it is apparently a praise of his speech and not his literal lips that are praised in verse 13 (see note at 2:2-3). This section is in chiastic balance with the tenfold praise of Shulamith that moves upward from feet to head (7:1-5, see outline in the Introduction).

5:10 Fit and strong is literally "radiant and red," implying fitness and strength. Among ten thousand is clearly a ratio emphasizing uniqueness.

5:11 Gold is consistent with the lustrous radiance, and its color and value are paramount in the metaphor. The Hebrew word translated wavy may be associated with "palm leaves," a precursor to the palm tree simile of Shulamith in 7:7.

5:12 Eyes . . . like doves is the only identical praise of each by the other (1:15; 4:1). Each had eyes expressing love. Whereas the other aspects of Shulamith's praise are expanded at most by one phrase, this simile is expanded by three: beside streams of water, washed in milk and set like jewels (lit "perched over a pool"). The phrases contribute to imagery of happy, loving eyes. They also possibly allude to the power of love that triumphs over waters of chaos (8:6-7). Doves looking at rushing streams become doves perched over still water, with reflections of doves looking back to their source (Glickman, pp. 101, 151, 212).

5:13 The visual metaphors of verses 11-12 give way to more sensual, aromatic ones in this verse: fragrant spices and perfume describe Solomon's cheeks; liquid myrrh drips from his lips. Lilies are literally life-giving "lotus flowers" (see note at 2:1). Shulamith praised Solomon's fragrant, intoxicating kisses.

5:14 His arms are literally "his hands," and the rods of gold are likely his fingers, a metaphor in praise of Solomon's valued touch. His body (lit "his abdomen") is hard and polished like ivory, but rippled, as if covered with sapphires.

5:15 Alabaster was a valuable mineral normally used for small objects, so its use to create massive pillars emphasizes value, just like gold, ivory, or sapphires. "Pillars" imply legs of grandeur and strength. The pedestals of pure gold of Solomon's feet show gold from head to toe, a visual metaphor for his complete desirability (v. 16).

5:16 Mouth is likely a reference to speech (see note at 2:2-3). The affirmation of love and friendship intertwined continues the theme begun in 1:9 (see note at

6:1 This is the second of two questions (5:9; see note at 5:2-7:9) that guide the movement of this section.

6:2-13 This section first answers the question, showing Shulamith's awareness of Solomon's location, then recounts his affirming praise and the account of their reconciliation.

6:2-3 Lilies are "lotus flowers" (see note at 2:1). I am my love's continues the transformation of this refrain (see note at 2:16). Feeds among the lilies anticipates Solomon's life-giving praise that brings reconciliation (see note at 2:16).

6:4-10 This section consists of praise designed to reconcile. Although on the wedding night one glance of Shulamith's eyes aroused Solomon (4:9), here Solomon asked that she turn her eyes from him because they captivated (lit "aroused") him. He did not want to express his love physically until they reunited emotionally, which the praise was designed to achieve. He avoided the most erotic of lovemaking praise. He emphasized instead that Shulamith was God's gift for whom his love was unchanged from the wedding night. His comparison of her to the beauty of Israel (6:4,10) implies she was as wonderful a gift to him as the land was to God's people (see note at 4:11).

Solomon's comparison of Shulamith to Tirzah and Jerusalem (v. 4), Israel's most prominent cities in the south and the north, appears to be in chiastic balance with the description of her as beautiful as the moon, bright as the sun, since both lyrics end with the phrase: awe-inspiring as an army with banners. "An army with banners" may also be translated "bannered hosts" (i.e., "of heaven," which would be "stars," or "of armies," depending on the context). So Solomon compared Shulamith to the cities and military of Israel, which were like the moon, the sun, and the stars—perhaps recalling the imagery of Israel as the sun, moon, and stars in Joseph's dream (Gn 37:9).

6:11-13 In these verses Shulamith recounted the reconciliation. If the vines were budding and the pomegranates blooming is a metaphor expressing their desire to begin a new season of life together (2:17; 7:12). No easy explanation exists for the phrase among the chariots of my noble people, but the implication is that Shulamith had resumed a position of royal prominence. She is here identified as the Shulammite for the first time in the Song (or, as we have rendered it throughout the study notes, the word can also be rendered "Shulamith," the feminine form of Solomon's name). As the feminine form of Solomon, the name shows she and Solomon were "soulmates" who through their hardship and reconciliation had entered into a deeper relationship (8:10). Alternately, rather than a personal or pet name the word might mean she was from the town of Shulam, which is otherwise unknown, or from Shunem (Jos 19:18; 1Sm 28:4; 2Kg 4:8).

The two camps is Mahanaim in Hebrew. This was the place where Jacob and Esau's reconciliation took place (Gn 32-33)—an appropriate parallel for the resolution of conflict between husband and wife. Solomon was using the illustration of God's love for Israel to illustrate his love for Shulamith. The people were gazing (as if in a vision) at an illustration of the reconciliation God always wants to achieve with His people.

7:1-5 Solomon's tenfold praise of Shulamith from head to toe in this section is in chiastic balance with her tenfold praise of Solomon from toe to head in 5:10-16 (see outline in the Introduction). This praise also offers interesting comparisons with the lovemaking praise of the wedding night (4:1-7). It is more intimate and lavish—more lavish, in the royal imagery of a princess with hair not like a flock descending a mountain but like fine purple threads holding captive a king; more intimate, in praising not only her breasts again (more sensually), but her thighs (lit "hips"), navel, and waist (lit "abdomen") for the first time. The praise poetically portrays the greater depth of intimacy that reconciliation and time have achieved.

7:1 Princess is literally "daughter of a prince" (Hb bath nadiv). If this is not a wordplay, it is certainly a link to "my noble people" (6:12; Hb ʿammi nadiv). These are the only occurrences of "prince" (Hb nadiv) in the Song, and its repetition links the reconciliation section with the lovemaking praise. Thighs refer to their upper part, inclusive of the hips, which bear the curves that Solomon praised. The handiwork of a master (or "of a master craftsman") is another creative way of describing Shulamith as a gift.

7:2 Although some lexical evidence from Arabic suggests the possibility that navel is "vulva," the other two occurrences of this word in the OT refer to the body in general (Pr 3:8) and to the umbilical cord (Ezk 16:4). In addition, "navel" is more probable here since it is more like the image of a rounded bowl (or "wine chalice") to which it is compared. On the other hand, the image of wine and wheat, coupled with the reference to the pomegranate in 8:2 with its wordplay on "drink" and "kiss" (see note at 8:1-2), and the prior wordplays on "love" and "mandrakes," and then on "doors" and "openings" (see note at 7:12-13), suggests that "navel" may be a euphemism for Shulamith's more intimate sexuality. On surrounded by lilies, see note at 2:1. Solomon envisioned lotus flowers surrounding the wine and wheat of Shulamith's navel and abdomen that brought delight to him.

7:3 The phrase breasts are like two fawns repeats a praise from the wedding night (4:5) but significantly omits "that feed among the lilies." This emphasizes the “feeding” (lit “grazing”) among the lotus flowers just implied by their surrounding the wine and wheat of Shulamith’s abdomen. Solomon used the metaphor of a palm tree and its fruit to describe his delight in Shulamith’s breasts (7:7-8).

7:4 A tower of ivory is smooth to the touch but it has a demeanor that inspires respect (see note at 4:4). Eyes like pools in Heshbon perhaps continues the theme of Solomon’s eyes like doves “perched over a pool” (see note at 5:12), implying that the pool his dovelike eyes perched over were Shulamith’s eyes. They were tranquil waters (perhaps “of understanding,” Heshbon arising from the root for “explanation”) so that they gave rest by the city gates (Bath-rabbim, lit “daughter of many,” indicating a busy thoroughfare into the city). The peace and wholeness each found in the other contrasts with the chaos of city crowds. Nose . . . like the tower of Lebanon looking toward Damascus describes a capacity for appropriate anger. “Nose” is from the word for anger, arising from its evidence in the flaring of the nostrils; “tower” connotes strength with a military image; Damascus was the capital of potential enemies that might violate Israel’s borders. Shulamith’s anger would flare at anyone who violated her boundaries as well.

7:5 Mount Carmel has majesty like Shulamith’s, giving the capability to bind even the king with the power of her hair like purple cloth (lit “threads”—that can bind). The royal imagery of princess and king continues, albeit in irony. The king who stooped to admire the sandaled feet of the princess (v. 1) was bound by her silken hair (v. 5).

7:6-9 The fervor of this section is in chiastic balance with the apathy of 5:2-8 (see outline in the Introduction). This lovemaking following praise also invites comparison with the lovemaking following the praise of 4:1-7. If the focus of the wedding night is its beautiful consummation (4:12-5:1), the focus of this later night is the peaceful nurture their love brings. They fell asleep tasting kisses like wine (see note at 7:9). Sexual intimacy consummates marriage and nurtures it as well.

7:6 The Hebrew underlying my love, with such delights is difficult to translate. Linguistic data favors “love” (Hb ‘ ahavah) not as a term of address but as an abstract word for “love,” as it is in its other nine references in the Song (v. 6; 2:4-5,7; 3:5; 5:8; 8:4,6-7), one of which is in chiastic parallelism with this verse (5:8). So love is likely the subject, just as a new subject follows the only other place in the Song where the two Hebrew words rendered beautiful and pleasant appear (1:16). To paraphrase, Solomon says, “Love flows through your tender affection.” This is a beautiful lyric about the heartfelt source of Shulamith’s love.

7:7-8 The fruit of the palm tree transforms from "stalks of dates" (lit "fruit" in v. 8) to clusters of grapes, demonstrating first a view from a distance and then the object of Solomon's caresses. "At a distance her breasts seem like clusters of dates on the palm tree. But held close, they are like supple, juicy clusters of grapes" (Glickman, p. 127).

7:9 The last phrase in this verse could be translated "past the lips of sleepers" (Hb yeshenim). This section begins with Shulamith sleeping alone (Hb yeshenah , 5:2) and ends with the couple sleeping together (see outline in the Introduction) just as the section in chiastic balance with this does as well (3:1-4). So their kisses—hers as fragrant as apricots and both of theirs as intoxicating as wine—lingered on as they drifted peacefully off to sleep.

7:10 This verse repeats the similar refrain where Shulamith affirmed their exclusive bond (see note at 2:16). "Desire" in his desire is for me is used only twice elsewhere in the OT: at Gn 3:16, in God's words to Eve describing the consequences of disobedience ("Your desire will be for your husband, yet he will rule over you") and in God's words to Cain describing sin personified as a lion crouching at the door ("Its desire is for you, but you must rule over it," Gn 4:7). So "desire" may connote the desire to rule. This verse has been interpreted in at least three ways: (1) Now Solomon has a desire (to love or to rule) equal to the desire of Shulamith; (2) now Solomon has a desire to love, but not to dominate; and (3) now Solomon, and not Shulamith, has a desire to "rule" in a benevolent sense, perhaps as the sun and moon "rule" (or "govern") the day and night, providing guiding light (Gn 1:18) or as God's "rule" provides loving care for His people (Ps 22:28; 59:13; 66:7; 89:9). In any case, after a wonderful reconciliation and time of intimacy, Shulamith affirmed her complete security in Solomon's love.

7:11-8:4 This section is in chiastic balance with 2:6-17 (see note there).

7:11-13 This section contains Shulamith's invitation to enjoy spring. It balances Solomon's earlier invitation to do the same (2:8-14). His invitation concluded with a request to hear her voice (2:14); hers concluded with a request to make love (7:12-13). The Song will conclude on precisely these themes: Solomon's request to hear her voice (8:13) and her request to make love (8:14)—artistically portraying unending seasons of spring in their love.

7:11 The phrase let's spend the night among the henna blossoms uses language from 1:13-14 where Shulamith compared Solomon to henna blossoms in En-gedi after comparing him to a pouch of myrrh which spent the night between her breasts. During courtship her thoughts were of him who was like henna blossoms who would "spend the night" with her; now she asked to spend the night with him "among the henna blossoms."

7:12-13 These verses contemplate a new season of spring in their experience. Love (Hb doday) is a wordplay on mandrakes (Hb duda'iym), an appropriate name for these plants associated with love and fertility. Delicacy is the same word twice rendered "choicest fruits" referring to erotic delicacies of the wedding night (4:13,16). New and old refer literally to fresh fruit from the harvest and dried fruits from the past. This refers figuratively to lovemaking "delicacies" that were in part fresh and new and in part familiar and constant. "Old" (Hb yeshanim) plays on "of the ones sleeping" (Hb yeshenim ; v. 9). Since this is the peaceful sleep after lovemaking (see note at v. 9), the poet associates the familiar lovemaking with security and comfort.

The location of delicacies at our doors (Hb pethachenu) is a play on has opened (Hb pittach ; "of blossoms," v. 12), both words derived from the same root. The poet's intention to create the wordplay is underscored by his rejection of a different word for door that he could have used (Hb chomah , used in 8:9) without creating the wordplay. "Our doors" is thus a very erotic play on "our openings." Her "openings" and openness are like the opening of flower blossoms.

8:1-2 In these verses the couple moves inside. On the earlier spring day Solomon's description prepared for his request to see and hear Shulamith. Similarly, now she first wished for a kiss outside with all the innocence of a kiss from a brother, and that prepares for her wish for more intimate kissing in innocence—"without scorn"—as well. I would . . . kiss you (Hb 'eshaqka ; v. 1) is a play on I would give you . . . to drink (Hb 'ashqeka). They would have been identical in the original Hebrew, which did not write the vowels. "I would give you . . . to drink from" could be taken as "I would let you kiss from."

Spiced wine . . . from my pomegranate juice is a smooth translation, but the literal is more dramatic: "from the wine—the spiced wine—from the sweet wine of my pomegranate." The repetition of "from" reinforces the image of drinking from a container and probably resumes these images: (1) the image of the navel as the chalice of wine (see note at 7:2), (2) the image of drinking her kisses like wine (7:9), and (3) the image of drinking from a mother's breast (8:1). The "spiced wine" (Hb reqach) is likely a play on "mouth" or "opened lips" (as opposed to "brow," Hb raqqah ; see note at 4:3). The moisture of Shulamith's mouth was like the sliced opening of a pomegranate on the wedding night; now the moisture of "my pomegranate" is like "spiced wine."

8:3-14 This section concludes the themes introduced in 1:1-2:7 (see outline in the Introduction). Refrains similar to the ones that concluded the first section now begin the last one in chiastic balance. And once again the Song appropriately reintroduces Shulamith's brothers and explains the circumstances introduced in the first section and how the lovers first met.

8:3 This refrain again functions to close the prior section and to introduce the next. It appropriately requests consummation from Solomon (see note at 2:6) and leads to a variation on the refrain that previously urged patience.

8:4 Caution in love is important, but when the time is appropriate, don't let its joy pass you by.

The blossoms and fruit of a pomegranate tree (3:4; 6:7; 8:2). The pomegranate is a frequent image in Jewish art and was found atop the columns on the façade to the temple.

8:5-7 All earlier praise, though differing at times in purpose (see note at 6:4-10) was in praise of the lovers. The lyrics of this section, however, praise love itself. The love that pleased to awaken Solomon and Shulamith has a fiery origin in the love of Yahweh.

8:5 Who is this coming up from the wilderness begins a new section introduced with words identical to those that begin the wedding procession and with the same complimentary allusions (see note at 3:6). Solomon and Shulamith have left the wilderness created by Adam and Eve to experience a paradise, and their love is like God's for His people, particularly when after the hardships of the wilderness they emerged trusting and "leaning" on Him.

8:6-7 The seal is the valuable possession by which all of a person's possessions are identified. Strong as death is a stark metaphor, showing that just as death conquers, so does love. But perhaps it implies love has the last word. If death conquers mortality, then love may as well. Unrelenting as Sheol extends this image, showing that as the grave pursues all mortals, so love pursues the beloved. The ardent love is often attributed to God, who expresses it in fiery concern for those whom He loves (Dt 4:24; 32:21-22). Since its fiery flames are the blaze of the Lord (see textual footnote), it cannot be extinguished. Any improper attempts to attain love are scorned.

8:8-12 This section explains how Shulamith found love properly—by preparing herself for it and by a fortuitous meeting with Solomon in the vineyard. These sections are in chiastic balance with the introductory sections of the Song (see outline in the Introduction) and are a flashback to the life with her brothers assumed in 1:6.

8:8-9 Shulamith's brothers took responsibility for her care when she was young and had no breasts, promising restrictions if she was promiscuous (if she is a door) but rewards if she was responsible (if she is a wall) as they prepared for the day she was spoken for.

8:10 Shulamith affirmed the development of her character (I am a wall) and her body (my breasts like towers) continuing the imagery of verses 8-9. There may be an allusion to Ruth, who found favor in the eyes of Boaz (Ru 2:2,10,13) under circumstances similar to Shulamith's. The poet artfully changes the traditional expression that dates back to the story of Noah, who "found favor in the eyes of the LORD" (Gn 6:8): Shulamith found peace in the eyes of Solomon. It is an appropriate change and wordplay, since Shulamith and "Shelomoh" (Hb for "Solomon") are feminine and masculine forms of names derived from shalom "peace." Shulamith found shalom with Shelomoh. Boaz saw Ruth working in the field after the death of her husband left her destitute, but then Boaz's marriage to her raised her to a position of prominence. Solomon's observation of Shulamith working in the vineyard after the mistreatment by her brothers led to the same.

8:11-12 These verses describe what happened after Shulamith's brothers leased vineyards from Solomon and placed Shulamith there to work (1:6). Their agreement required them to pay 1,000 pieces of silver to the owner, Solomon, and allowed them, the caretakers, to keep 200 for themselves. Just as Solomon could do what he wanted with his own literal vineyard, Shulamith was free to do what she pleased with the figurative vineyard of herself (my . . . vineyard). Love cannot be purchased, but it can be given. Those who guard its fruits are the brothers who temporarily cared for the figurative vineyard that was Shulamith (vv. 8-9), just as they cared for Solomon's literal vineyard. In light of the hardships placed upon her at times by her brothers (1:6), Shulamith in effect forgave them, perhaps in recognition that their harshness resulted in her meeting Solomon.

8:13-14 These verses echo the themes of the days in spring (see note at 7:12-13). In the tarnished mirror of the world after Eden, the romantic love God designed to reflect His own love seldom does adequately. An almost universal distortion of this love is the stereotype that in companionship women seek only communication and security while men seek only sexual gratification. The recovery of ideal love displayed in the Song restores the right balance. Both enjoyed loving communication and both enjoyed sexual expression. However, quite remarkably, the themes of spring echoed at the end of the Song show it was Solomon who initiated and longed for communication while it was Shulamith who responded in desire to make love. Not only does this shatter the stereotype and recover the ideal of romantic love, it also reflects the love of God toward us: "We love because He first loved us" (1Jn 4:19).

Word Studies dod Hebrew Pronunciation [DOHD]

HCSB Translation love, uncle Uses in Song of Songs 39
Uses in the OT 61
Focus Passage Song of Songs 1:2,4,13-14,16

Dod has two distinct meanings that likely developed from a single verb yadad (love). In Song of Songs, dod refers to Solomon and always has a pronominal modifier identifying Solomon as the woman's romantic love (Sg 1:13). Elsewhere, this sense of dod appears only when Isaiah refers to Yahweh as his loved one (Is 5:1). The concept of romantic relationship occurs in the abstract plural use of dod to indicate sexual love (Sg 5:1) or lovemaking (Pr 7:18). Dod also denotes the important uncle on the father's side (Lv 10:4).

yapheh Hebrew Pronunciation [yah FEH]
HCSB Translation beautiful Uses in Song of Songs 13
Uses in the OT 42
Focus Passage Song of Songs 4:1,7

The adjective yapheh generally describes someone physically beautiful (Gn 12:11). It is part of a word family applying regularly to feminine beauty but also to men and other things. Frequently the words "form" (to'ar) or "appearance" (mar'eh) modify yapheh. These phrases indicate shapely and beautiful women (Gn 29:17) or well-built and handsome men (Gn 39:6). The second phrase covers healthy-looking cows (Gn 41:2). Yapheh alone depicts beautiful eyes (1Sm 16:12), voice (Ezk 33:32), or tree branches (Ezk 31:3). Describing a city's elevation, yapheh implies splendidly (Ps 48:2). Twice it connotes appropriate (Ec 3:11; 5:18). The noun yophiy (19x) is usually beauty (Ps 45:11), but characterizes wisdom as magnificent (Ezk 28:7). The verb yaphah (8x) means be beautiful (Ezk 16:13) or handsome (Ps 45:2). Love is delightful (Sg 4:10). The reflexive denotes beautify oneself (Jr 4:30), the intensive decorate (Jr 10:4). The reduplicated adjective yepheh-piyyah signifies very beautiful (Jr 46:20).

duda'iym Hebrew Pronunciation [doo dah EEM] HCSB Translation mandrakes Uses in Song of Songs 1
Uses in the OT 6
Focus Passage Song of Songs 7:13

Mandrakes (duda'iym) are in the nightshade family and grow natively in the Mediterranean region. The best-known species, Mandragora officinarum, has a short stem; large leaves of pungent odor; whitish, purple flowers; and a thick, pulpy root that often forks. The fruit is golden, juicy, about the size of an apple, and not poisonous. From ancient times, the mandrake was considered an aphrodisiac and used to promote conception by removing sterility. The plant appears frequently in Egyptian drawings from the New Kingdom era (1540-1075 B.C.), where its odor is used to arouse sexual desire. Rachel sold Leah the right to an evening with their husband Jacob in exchange for mandrakes (Gn 30:14-16). As a sign of her readiness for love, Solomon's lover mentions mandrakes giving off their fragrance (Sg 7:12-13). Duda'iym may derive from the root behind the noun love (dod) that stands before and after it, so wordplay may occur.

‘ur Hebrew Pronunciation [OOR]
HCSB Translation awaken, stir up Uses in Song of Songs 9
Uses in the OT 80
Focus Passage Song of Songs 8:4-5

‘Ur functions as the imperative wake up (Is 52:1), awake (Jdg 5:12), or come alive (Hab 2:19). All verb conjugations describe rousing someone (Jb 41:10). The intensive verb also means stir up (Is 14:9) or rally (Ps 80:2). One brandishes whips (Is 10:26) and raises (2Sm 23:18) or wields (1Ch 11:11) spears. People raise cries (Is 15:5). The causative verb also means awaken (Is 50:4), raise up (Is 45:13), or unleash (Ps 78:38). One puts into the mind or motivates (Ezr 1:1,5). God moves on someone’s behalf (Jb 8:6). People stir fires (Hs 7:4). The infinitive indicates arising (Ps 73:20). The reflexive-passive verb signifies be excited (Jb 31:29) or wake oneself (Is 51:17). The passive-reflexive shows people stirring from sleep (Jb 14:12). It suggests taking sheaths from bows (Hab 3:9). God is coming from heaven (Zch 2:13). The noun ‘ir denotes agitation (Jr 15:8) or rage (Hs 11:9).

ISAIAH

1 The vision [a] concerning Judah and Jerusalem that Isaiah [b] son of Amoz saw during the reigns [A, c] of Uzziah, [d] Jotham, [e] Ahaz, [f] and Hezekiah, [g] kings of Judah. [h]

Judah on Trial

2 Listen, heavens, and pay attention, earth, [i]
for the LORD has spoken:
"I have raised children [B] and brought them up,
but they have rebelled against Me. [j] 3 The ox knows its owner,
and the donkey its master's feeding trough,
but Israel does not know;
My people do not understand." [k]

4 Oh sinful nation,
people weighed down with iniquity, [l]
brood of evildoers, [m]
depraved children! [C]
They have abandoned [n] the LORD;
they have despised [o] the Holy One of Israel; [p]
they have turned their backs on Him.

5 Why do you want more beatings?
Why do you keep on rebelling?
The whole head is hurt,
and the whole heart is sick.
6 From the sole of the foot even to the head, [q]
no spot is uninjured [r] — wounds, welts, and festering sores not cleansed, bandaged, or soothed with oil.

7 Your land is desolate,
your cities burned with fire; [s] foreigners devour your fields before your very eyes —
a desolation demolished by foreigners.
8 Daughter •Zion [t] is abandoned like a shelter in a vineyard, like a shack in a cucumber field,
like a besieged city.
9 If the LORD of •Hosts [u] had not left us a few survivors, [v]

we would be like Sodom,
we would resemble Gomorrah. [w]

10 Hear the word of the LORD, [x]
you rulers of Sodom!
Listen to the instruction of our God,
you people of Gomorrah! [y]
11 "What are all your sacrifices to Me? " asks the LORD.
"I have had enough of •burnt offerings and rams and the fat of well-fed cattle;
I have no desire for the blood of bulls,
lambs, or male goats. [z] 12 When you come to appear before Me, who requires this from you —
this trampling of My courts?
13 Stop bringing useless offerings. [a]
Your incense is detestable to Me.
New Moons and Sabbaths, [b] and the calling of solemn assemblies [c] —
I cannot stand iniquity [d] with a festival.
14 I hate your New Moons and prescribed festivals.
They have become a burden to Me;
I am tired of putting up with them.
15 When you lift up your hands in prayer, [e]
I will refuse to look at you;
even if you offer countless prayers,
I will not listen. [f]
Your hands are covered with blood. [g]

Purification of Jerusalem

16 “Wash yourselves. Cleanse yourselves. [h]
Remove your evil deeds from My sight.
Stop doing evil. [i]
17 Learn to do what is good.
Seek justice. [j]
Correct the oppressor. [D]
Defend the rights of the fatherless.
Plead the widow’s cause.

18 “Come, let us discuss this,” [k]
says the LORD.
“Though your sins are like scarlet,
they will be as white as snow; [l]
though they are as red as crimson,
they will be like wool.
19 If you are willing and obedient,
you will eat the good things of the land. [m] 20 But if you refuse and rebel,
you will be devoured by the sword.” [n]
For the mouth of the LORD has spoken. [o]

21 The faithful city — what an adulteress [E] she has become!
She was once full of justice.
Righteousness once dwelt in her —
but now, murderers!
22 Your silver has become dross, [F]
your beer [G] is diluted with water.
23 Your rulers are rebels, friends of thieves. [p]
They all love graft
and chase after bribes. [q]
They do not defend the rights of the fatherless, and the widow’s case never comes before them. [r]

24 Therefore the Lord GOD of Hosts,

the Mighty One of Israel, declares:
“Ah, I will gain satisfaction from My foes;
I will take revenge against My enemies. [s]
25 I will turn My hand against you [t] and will burn away your dross [H] completely; [I]
I will remove all your impurities. [u]
26 I will restore your judges [v] to what they once were, [J] and your advisers to their former state. [K] Afterward you will be called the Righteous City, [w] a Faithful City.”

27 Zion will be redeemed by justice, her repentant ones by righteousness. [x]
28 But both rebels and sinners will be destroyed, and those who abandon the Lord will perish.
29 Indeed, they [y] will be ashamed of the sacred trees
you desired, [z]
and you will be embarrassed because of the gardens
you have chosen. [a] 30 For you will become like an oak whose leaves are withered, and like a garden without water. [b] 31 The strong one will become tinder, and his work a spark;
both will burn together, [c]
with no one to quench the flames. [d]

The City of Peace

2 The vision that Isaiah [a] son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem:
2 In [b] the last days [c]
the mountain of the LORD's house [d] will be established at the top of the mountains and will be raised above the hills.
All nations will stream to it, [e]
3 and many peoples will come and say,
"Come, let us go up to the mountain of the LORD,
to the house of the God of Jacob. [f]
He will teach us about His ways
so that we may walk in His paths."
For instruction will go out of •Zion and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.
4 He will settle disputes among the nations and provide arbitration for many peoples.
They will turn their swords into plows and their spears into pruning knives. [g] Nations will not take up the sword against other nations, and they will never again train for war. [h]

The Day of the LORD
5 House of Jacob,
come and let us walk in the LORD's light. [i] 6 For You have abandoned [j] Your people,
the house of Jacob,
because they are full of •divination from the East and of fortune-tellers [k] like the Philistines. [l]
They are in league [A] with foreigners.
7 Their [B, m] land is full of silver and gold,
and there is no limit to their treasures;
their land is full of horses,
and there is no limit to their chariots. [n]
8 Their land is full of idols; [o]
they bow down to the work of their hands, to what their fingers have made. [p] 9 So humanity is brought low,
and man is humbled.

Do not forgive them! [q]
10 Go into the rocks [r] and hide in the dust
from the terror of the LORD [s] and from His majestic splendor. [t] 11 Human pride [C] will be humbled, [u]
and the loftiness of men will be brought low;
the LORD alone will be exalted on that day.

12 For a day belonging to the LORD of •Hosts is coming against all that is proud and lofty, [v] against all that is lifted up — it will be humbled — 13 against all the cedars of Lebanon, [w] lofty and lifted up, against all the oaks of Bashan, [x] 14 against all the high mountains, [y] against all the lofty hills, 15 against every high tower, [z]
against every fortified wall, 16 against every ship of Tarshish, [a]
and against every splendid sea vessel.
17 So human pride will be brought low,
and the loftiness of men will be humbled;
the LORD alone will be exalted on that day. [b]
18 The idols will vanish completely.

19 People will go into caves in the rocks [c]
and holes in the ground,
away from the terror of the LORD
and from His majestic splendor,
when He rises to terrify the earth. [d] 20 On that day people will throw their silver and gold idols, [e] which they made to worship,
to the moles and the bats.
21 They will go into the caves of the rocks and the crevices in the cliffs,
away from the terror of the LORD

and from His majestic splendor, [f]
when He rises to terrify the earth.
22 Put no more trust in man, who has only the breath in his nostrils. [g]
What is he really worth?

Judah’s Leaders Judged

3 Observe this: The Lord God of •Hosts is about to remove from Jerusalem and from Judah
every kind of security:
the entire supply of bread and water,
2 the hero and warrior, [a]
the judge and prophet,
the fortune-teller and elder,
3 the commander of 50 and the dignitary,
the counselor, cunning magician, [A] and necromancer. [B] 4 "I will make youths their leaders, [b] and the unstable [C] will govern them."
5 The people will oppress one another, [c] man against man, neighbor against neighbor;
the youth will act arrogantly toward the elder,
and the worthless toward the honorable.
6 A man will even seize his brother in his father's house, saying:
"You have a cloak — you be our leader!
This heap of rubble will be under your control."
7 On that day he will cry out, saying:
"I'm not a healer.
I don't even have food or clothing in my house.
Don't make me the leader of the people! "
8 For Jerusalem has stumbled and Judah has fallen because they have spoken and acted against the Lord, [d]
defying His glorious presence. [e] 9 The look on their faces testifies against them, and like Sodom, [f] they flaunt their sin.
They do not conceal it.
Woe to them,
for they have brought evil on themselves. [g]
10 Tell the righteous that it will go well for them,
for they will eat the fruit of their labor.
11 Woe to the wicked — it will go badly for them,
for what they have done will be done to them.
12 Youths oppress My people, [h]

and women rule over them.
My people, your leaders mislead you;
they confuse the direction of your paths. [i]

13 The LORD rises to argue the case and stands to judge the people. [j] 14 The LORD brings this charge against the elders and leaders of His people: [k]
"You have devastated the vineyard.
The plunder from the poor is in your houses. [l]
15 Why do you crush My people and grind the faces of the poor? "
of the Lord GOD of Hosts.This is the declaration

Jerusalem's Women Judged

16 The LORD also says:
Because the daughters of •Zion are haughty, [m] walking with heads held high and seductive eyes,
going along with prancing steps,
jingling their ankle bracelets, 17 the Lord will put scabs on the heads of the daughters of Zion,
and the LORD will shave their foreheads bare.
18 On that day [n] the Lord will strip their finery: ankle bracelets, headbands, crescents, [o] 19 pendants, bracelets, veils, 20 headdresses, ankle jewelry, sashes, perfume bottles, amulets, [p] 21 signet rings, nose rings, [q] 22 festive robes, capes, cloaks, purses, 23 garments, linen clothes, turbans, and veils.

24 Instead of perfume there will be a stench;
instead of a belt, a rope;
instead of beautifully styled hair, [r] baldness; [s]
instead of fine clothes, •sackcloth ; [t]
instead of beauty, branding. [u] 25 Your men will fall by the sword, your warriors in battle.
26 Then her gates [v] will lament and mourn;
deserted, she will sit on the ground. [w]

4 On that day seven women will seize one man, [a] saying,
"We will eat our own bread
and provide our own clothing.
Just let us be called by your name.
Take away our disgrace." [b]

Zion's Future Glory

2 On that day the Branch of [A] the LORD will be beautiful and glorious, [c] and the fruit of the land [d] will be the pride and glory [e] of Israel's survivors. [f] 3 Whoever remains in •Zion and whoever is left in Jerusalem [g] will be called holy [h] — all in Jerusalem who are destined to live [i] — 4 when the Lord has washed away the filth [j] of the daughters of Zion and cleansed the bloodguilt [k] from the heart of Jerusalem by a spirit of judgment [l] and a spirit of burning. [m] 5 Then the LORD will create [n] a cloud of smoke by day [o] and a glowing flame of fire by night over the entire site of Mount Zion and over its assemblies. For there will be a canopy over all the glory, [B] 6 and there will be a booth for shade from heat by day, and a refuge and shelter from storm and rain. [p]

Song of the Vineyard

5 I will sing about the one I love, a song about my loved one's vineyard: [a]
The one I love had a vineyard on a very fertile hill.
2 He broke up the soil, cleared it of stones, and planted it with the finest vines. [b]
He built a tower in the middle of it and even dug out a winepress there.
He expected [c] it to yield good grapes,
but it yielded worthless grapes. [d]

3 So now, residents of Jerusalem and men of Judah,
please judge between Me
and My vineyard.
4 What more could I have done for My vineyard than I did? [e]
Why, when I expected a yield of good grapes,
did it yield worthless grapes?
5 Now I will tell you what I am about to do to My vineyard:
I will remove its hedge, [f]
and it will be consumed;
I will tear down its wall, [g]
and it will be trampled.
6 I will make it a wasteland. [h]
It will not be pruned or weeded;
thorns and briers will grow up. [i]
I will also give orders to the clouds that rain should not fall on it.
7 For the vineyard of the LORD of •Hosts is the house of Israel, [j]
and the men [A] of Judah,
the plant He delighted in.
He looked for justice
but saw injustice,
for righteousness,

but heard cries of wretchedness.

Judah's Sins Denounced

8 Woe to those who add house to house [k]
and join field to field until there is no more room and you alone are left in the land.

9 I heard the LORD of Hosts say:
Indeed, many houses [l] will become desolate,
grand and lovely ones without inhabitants.
10 For a ten-acre [B] vineyard will yield only six gallons, [C] and 10 bushels [D] of seed will yield only one bushel. [E]

11 Woe to those who rise early in the morning in pursuit of beer, [m] who linger into the evening, inflamed by wine.
12 At their feasts they have lyre, harp, tambourine, flute, and wine.
They do not perceive the LORD's actions, [n]
and they do not see the work of His hands. [o]

13 Therefore My people will go into exile because they lack knowledge; [p]
her [F] dignitaries are starving, and her [G] masses are parched with thirst.
14 Therefore •Sheol enlarges its throat and opens wide its enormous jaws, [q]
and down go •Zion 's dignitaries, her masses, her crowds, and those who carouse in her!
15 Humanity is brought low, man is humbled, and haughty eyes are humbled. [r]
16 But the LORD of Hosts is exalted by His justice, [s] and the holy God [t] is distinguished by righteousness. [u] 17 Lambs will graze

as if in [v] their own pastures, [w]
and strangers [x] will eat
among the ruins of the rich.

18 Woe to those who drag wickedness with cords of deceit [y]
and pull sin along with cart ropes, 19 to those who say:
“Let Him hurry up and do His work quickly
so that we can see it!
Let the plan [z] of the Holy One of Israel [a] take place
so that we can know it! ” 20 Woe to those who call evil good and good evil, [b]
who substitute darkness for light
and light for darkness, who substitute bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter.
21 Woe to those who are wise in their own opinion and clever in their own sight. [H, c] 22 Woe to those who are heroes at drinking wine, who are fearless at mixing beer, [d] 23 who acquit the •guilty for a bribe [e]
and deprive the innocent of justice.

24 Therefore, as a tongue of fire consumes straw and as dry grass shrivels in the flame, so their roots will become like something rotten and their blossoms will blow away like dust, for they have rejected [f]
the instruction of the LORD of Hosts, and they have despised the word of the Holy One of Israel. [g]
25 Therefore the LORD’s anger burns [h] against His people.
He raised His hand against them and struck them;
the mountains quaked, [i]
and their corpses were like garbage in the streets.
In all this, His anger is not removed,

and His hand is still raised to strike. [j]

26 He raises a signal flag for the distant nations [k]
and whistles [l] for them from the ends of the earth.
Look — how quickly and swiftly they come!
27 None of them grows weary or stumbles; [m]
no one slumbers or sleeps.
No belt is loose
and no sandal strap broken.
28 Their arrows are sharpened,
and all their bows strung.
Their horses' hooves are like flint;
their chariot wheels are like a whirlwind.
29 Their roaring is like a lion's; [n]
they roar like young lions; [o]
they growl and seize their prey and carry it off,
and no one can rescue it.
30 On that day they will roar over it,
like the roaring of the sea.
When one looks at the land,
there will be darkness and distress;
light will be obscured by clouds. [I]

Isaiah’s Call and Mission

6 In the year that King Uzziah [a] died, I saw the Lord [b] seated on a high and lofty [c] throne, [d] and His robe [A] filled the temple. 2 Seraphim [e] were standing above Him; each one had six wings: [f] with two he covered his face, with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew. [g] 3 And one called to another:

Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of •Hosts ;
His glory [h] fills the whole earth. [i]

4 The foundations of the doorways shook [j] at the sound of their voices, and the temple was filled with smoke.
5 Then I said:

Woe is me [k] for I am ruined [B] because I am a man of •unclean lips and live among a people of unclean lips, [l] and because my eyes have seen the King,
the LORD of Hosts.

6 Then one of the seraphim flew to me, and in his hand was a glowing coal that he had taken from the altar [m] with tongs. 7 He touched my mouth [n] with it and said:

Now that this has touched your lips, your wickedness is removed and your sin is atoned for. [o]

8 Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying:
Who should I send?
Who will go for Us?
I said:

Here I am. Send me.

9 And He replied:

Go! Say to these people:
Keep listening, but do not understand; [p]
keep looking, but do not perceive.
10 Dull the minds [C] of these people;
deafen their ears and blind their eyes;
otherwise they might see with their eyes
and hear with their ears, understand with their minds,

turn back, and be healed. [q]

11 Then I said, “Until when, Lord? ” [r] And He replied:

Until cities lie in ruins without inhabitants, [s] houses are without people,
the land is ruined and desolate, 12 and the LORD drives the people far away, leaving great emptiness in the land.
13 Though a tenth will remain in the land,
it will be burned again.
Like the terebinth or the oak that leaves a stump when felled,
the holy •seed [t] is the stump. [u]

The Message to Ahaz

7 This took place during the reign of Ahaz, son of Jotham, son of Uzziah king of Judah: [a] Rezin king of Aram, along with Pekah, son of Remaliah, king of Israel, waged war against Jerusalem, [b] but he could not succeed. 2 When it became known to the house of David [c] that Aram had occupied Ephraim, [d] the heart of Ahaz [A] and the hearts of his people trembled like trees of a forest shaking in the wind.

3 Then the LORD said to Isaiah, “Go out with your son Shear-jashub [e] to meet
Ahaz at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, [f] by the road to the Fuller’s Field. 4 Say to him: Calm down and be quiet. Don’t be afraid or cowardly [g] because of these two smoldering stubs of firebrands, the fierce anger of Rezin and Aram, and the son of Remaliah. 5 For Aram, along with Ephraim and the son of Remaliah, has plotted harm against you. They say, 6 ‘Let us go up against Judah, terrorize it, and conquer it for ourselves. Then we can install Tabeel’s son as king in it.’ ”

7 This is what the Lord GOD says:

It will not happen; it will not occur. [h]

8 The [B] head of Aram is Damascus, the head of Damascus is Rezin (within 65 years
Ephraim will be too shattered to be a people), 9 the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is the son of Remaliah.
If you do not stand firm in your faith,
then you will not stand at all.

The Immanuel Prophecy

10 Then the LORD spoke again to Ahaz: 11 “Ask for a sign [i] from the LORD your God — from the depths of •Sheol to the heights of heaven.”

12 But Ahaz replied, “I will not ask. I will not test the LORD.”

13 Isaiah [j] said, “Listen, house of David! Is it not enough for you to try the patience of men? Will you also try the patience of my God? [k] 14 Therefore, the Lord Himself will give you [l] a sign: The virgin will conceive, [C] have a son, and name him Immanuel. [m, n] 15 By the time he learns to reject what is bad and choose what is good, [o] he will be eating butter [D] and honey. [p] 16 For before the boy knows to reject what is bad and choose what is good, the land of the two kings you dread will be abandoned. 17 The LORD will bring on you, your people, and the house of your father, such a time as has never been since Ephraim separated from Judah [q] — the king of Assyria [r] is coming.”

18 On that day [s]
the LORD will whistle [t] to the fly that is at the farthest streams of the Nile and to the bee that is in the land of Assyria.
19 All of them will come and settle in the steep ravines, in the clefts of the rocks, [u]
in all the thornbushes, and in all the water holes.

20 On that day the Lord will use a razor [v] hired from beyond the Euphrates River — the king of Assyria [w] — to shave the head, the hair on the legs, and to remove the beard as well.

21 On that day
a man will raise a young cow and two sheep, 22 and from the abundant milk they give
he will eat butter,
for every survivor in the land will eat butter and honey. [x]

23 And on that day
every place where there were 1,000 vines, worth 1,000 pieces of silver,
will become thorns and briers. [y] 24 A man will go there with bow and arrows because the whole land will be thorns and briers.

25 You will not go to all the hills that were once tilled with a hoe,
for fear of the thorns and briers.
Those hills will be places for oxen to graze and for sheep to trample.

The Coming Assyrian Invasion

8 Then the LORD said to me, “Take a large piece of parchment [A] and write on it with an ordinary pen: [B, a] Maher-shalal-hash-baz. [b] 2 I have appointed [c] trustworthy witnesses — Uriah the priest and Zechariah son of Jeberechiah.” [d] 3 I was then intimate with the prophetess, and she conceived and gave birth to a son. The LORD said to me, “Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz, 4 for before the boy knows how to call out father or mother, [e] the wealth of Damascus and the spoils of Samaria will be carried off to the king of Assyria.” [f] 5 The LORD spoke to me again:
6 Because these people rejected the slowly flowing waters of Shiloah and rejoiced with [C] Rezin and the son of Remaliah, [g] 7 the Lord will certainly bring against them the mighty rushing waters of the Euphrates River —
the king of Assyria and all his glory.
It will overflow its channels and spill over all its banks.
8 It will pour into Judah, flood over it, and sweep through,
reaching up to the neck; [h] and its spreading streams [D] will fill your entire land, Immanuel! [i]

9 Band together, peoples, and be broken;
pay attention, all you distant lands;
prepare for war, and be broken;
prepare for war, and be broken.
10 Devise a plan; it will fail. [j]
Make a prediction; it will not happen.
For God is with us. [E, k]

The LORD of Hosts, the Only Refuge 11 For this is what the LORD said to me with great power, to keep [l] me from going the way of this people: [m]

12 Do not call everything an alliance
these people say is an alliance. [n]
Do not fear what they fear; [o]
do not be terrified.

13 You are to regard only the LORD of •Hosts as holy. [p]
Only He should be •feared ; [q]
only He should be held in awe.
14 He will be a sanctuary; [r]
but for the two houses of Israel,
He will be a stone [s] to stumble over and a rock to trip over, [t]
and a trap and a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.
15 Many will stumble over these; [u]
they will fall and be broken;
they will be snared and captured.

16 Bind up the •testimony . [v]
Seal up the instruction [w] among my disciples.
17 I will wait for the LORD, [x] who is hiding His face from the house of Jacob. [y]
I will wait for Him.

18 Here I am with the children the LORD has given me [z] to be signs and wonders in Israel from the LORD of Hosts who dwells on Mount •Zion . 19 When they say to you, “Consult the spirits of the dead and the spiritists who chirp and mutter,” [a] shouldn’t a people consult their God? [F] Should they consult the dead on behalf of the living? [b] 20 To the law and to the testimony! [c] If they do not speak according to this word, there will be no dawn for them.
21 They will wander through the land, dejected and hungry. When they are famished, they will become enraged, and, looking upward, will curse their king and their God. 22 They will look toward the earth [d] and see only distress, darkness, and the gloom of affliction, and they will be driven into thick darkness.

Chapter 9 [a] Birth of the Prince of Peace

[1]Nevertheless, the gloom of the distressed land will not be like that of the former times when He humbled the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali. [b] But in the future He will bring honor to the Way of the Sea, to the land east of the Jordan, and to Galilee of the nations.

[2] [c] The people walking in darkness have seen a great light; [d] a light has dawned
on those living in the land of darkness. [e] [3] You have enlarged the nation and increased its joy. [f, g]
The people have rejoiced before You as they rejoice at harvest time and as they rejoice when dividing spoils. [h] [4] For You have shattered their oppressive yoke [i] and the rod on their shoulders,
the staff of their oppressor,
just as You did on the day of Midian. [j] [5] For the trampling boot of battle and the bloodied garments of war will be burned as fuel for the fire.
[6] For a child will be born for us, a son will be given to us, [k]
and the government will be on His shoulders. [l]
He will be named
Wonderful Counselor, [m] Mighty God, [n]
Eternal Father, [o] Prince of Peace. [p] [7] The dominion will be vast,
and its prosperity will never end. [q]
He will reign on the throne of David and over his kingdom,
to establish and sustain it
with justice and righteousness from now on and forever.
The zeal of the LORD of •Hosts will accomplish this. [r]

The Hand Raised against Israel

8 The Lord sent a message against Jacob;
it came against Israel.
9 All the people —
Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria [s] — will know it.
They will say with pride and arrogance:
10 “The bricks have fallen,
but we will rebuild with cut stones;
the sycamores have been cut down,
but we will replace them with cedars.”
11 The LORD has raised up Rezin’s adversaries against him and stirred up his enemies.
12 Aram from the east and Philistia from the west have consumed Israel with open mouths.
In all this, His anger is not removed,
and His hand is still raised to strike. [t]

13 The people did not turn to Him who struck them;
they did not seek the LORD of Hosts.
14 So the LORD cut off Israel’s head and tail, [u] palm branch and reed in a single day.
15 The head is the elder, the honored one; [v]
the tail is the prophet, the lying teacher. [w] 16 The leaders of the people mislead them, and those they mislead are swallowed up. [A] 17 Therefore the Lord does not rejoice over [x] Israel’s young men and has no compassion
on its fatherless and widows, for everyone is a godless evildoer, [y]
and every mouth speaks folly.
In all this, His anger is not removed,
and His hand is still raised to strike.

18 For wickedness burns like a fire [z] that consumes thorns and briers and kindles the forest thickets

so that they go up in a column of smoke.
19 The land is scorched by the wrath of the LORD of Hosts, and the people are like fuel for the fire. [a]
No one has compassion on his brother. [b] 20 They carve meat on the right, but they are still hungry; [c]
they have eaten on the left,
but they are still not satisfied.
Each one eats the flesh of his own arm. [d]
21 Manasseh is with Ephraim, and Ephraim with Manasseh;
together, both are against Judah. [e]
In all this, His anger is not removed,
and His hand is still raised to strike. [f]

10 Woe to those enacting crooked statutes and writing oppressive laws
2 to keep the poor from getting a fair trial and to deprive the afflicted among my people of justice, so that widows can be their spoil
and they can plunder the fatherless.
3 What will you do on the day of punishment
when devastation comes from far away?
Who will you run to for help?
Where will you leave your wealth?
4 There will be nothing to do except crouch among the prisoners or fall among the slain.
In all this, His anger is not removed,
and His hand is still raised to strike.

Assyria, the Instrument of Wrath

5 Woe to Assyria, the rod of My anger —
the staff in their hands is My wrath.
6 I will send him against a godless nation;
I will command him to go against a people destined for My rage,
to take spoils, to plunder,
and to trample them down like clay [a] in the streets.
7 But this is not what he intends;
this is not what he plans.
It is his intent to destroy and to cut off many nations.
8 For he says,
“Aren’t all my commanders kings?
9 Isn’t Calno like Carchemish?
Isn’t Hamath like Arpad?
Isn’t Samaria [b] like Damascus? [c]
10 As my hand seized the idolatrous kingdoms, whose idols exceeded those of Jerusalem and Samaria, 11 and as I did to Samaria and its idols will I not also do to Jerusalem and its idols?”

Judgment on Assyria

12 But when the Lord finishes all His work against Mount •Zion and Jerusalem, He will say, “I [d] will punish the king of Assyria for his arrogant acts and the proud look in his eyes.” 13 For he said:

I have done this by my own strength and wisdom, for I am clever.
I abolished the borders of nations and plundered their treasures;
like a mighty warrior, I subjugated the inhabitants. [A] 14 My hand has reached out, as if into a nest, to seize the wealth of the nations.
Like one gathering abandoned eggs,
I gathered the whole earth.
No wing fluttered;
no beak opened or chirped.

15 Does an ax exalt itself above the one who chops with it?
Does a saw magnify itself
above the one who saws with it?
It would be like a staff waving the one who lifts [e] it!
It would be like a rod lifting a man who isn’t wood!
16 Therefore the Lord GOD of •Hosts will inflict an emaciating disease on the well-fed of Assyria, and He will kindle a burning fire
under its glory.
17 Israel’s Light will become a fire,
and its Holy One, a flame.
In one day it will burn up Assyria’s thorns and thistles.
18 He will completely destroy the glory of its forests and orchards
as a sickness consumes a person.
19 The remaining trees of its forest will be so few in number that a child could count them.

The Remnant Will Return

20 On that day the remnant of Israel and the survivors of the house of Jacob will no longer depend on the one who struck them, but they will faithfully depend on the LORD, the Holy One of Israel. [f]

21 The remnant will return, the remnant of Jacob, to the Mighty God.
22 Israel, even if your people were as numerous as the sand of the sea,
only a remnant of them will return. [g] Destruction has been decreed;
justice overflows.
23 For throughout the land
the Lord GOD of Hosts is carrying out a destruction that was decreed.

24 Therefore, the Lord GOD of Hosts says this: "My people who dwell in Zion, do not fear Assyria, though he strikes you with a rod and raises his staff over you as the Egyptians did. 25 In just a little while My wrath will be spent and My anger will turn to their destruction." 26 And the LORD of Hosts will brandish a whip against him as He did when He struck Midian at the rock of Oreb; [h] and He will raise His staff over the sea as He did in Egypt.

God Will Judge Assyria

27 On that day
his burden will fall from your shoulders,
and his yoke from your neck.
The yoke will be broken because of fatness. B 28 Assyria has come to Aiath and has gone through Migron, storing his equipment at Michmash.
29 They crossed over at the ford, saying,
"We will spend the night at Geba."
The people of Ramah are trembling;
those at Gibeah of Saul have fled.
30 Cry aloud, daughter of Gallim!
Listen, Laishah!
Anathoth is miserable.
31 Madmenah has fled.
The inhabitants of Gebim have sought refuge.
32 Today he will stand at Nob, shaking his fist at the mountain of Daughter Zion,
the hill of Jerusalem.
33 Look, the Lord GOD of Hosts will chop off the branches with terrifying power, and the tall trees will be cut down,
the high trees felled.
34 He is clearing the thickets of the forest with an ax, and Lebanon with its majesty will fall.

Reign of the Davidic King

11 Then a shoot will grow from the stump of Jesse, [a] and a branch [b] from his roots will bear fruit.
2 The Spirit of the LORD will rest on Him [c] — a Spirit of wisdom and understanding,
a Spirit of counsel and strength,
a Spirit of knowledge and of the •fear of the LORD.
3 His delight will be in the fear of the LORD.
He will not judge
by what He sees with His eyes, [d]
He will not execute justice
by what He hears with His ears, 4 but He will judge the poor righteously [e]
and execute justice for the oppressed of the land.
He will strike the land with discipline [A] from His mouth, [f] and He will kill the wicked [g] with a command [B] from His lips. [h] 5 Righteousness will be a belt around His loins; [i] faithfulness will be a belt around His waist. [j] 6 The wolf will live with the lamb, [k]
and the leopard will lie down with the goat.
The calf, the young lion, and the fatling will be together,
and a child will lead them.
7 The cow and the bear will graze,
their young ones will lie down together,
and the lion will eat straw like the ox.
8 An infant will play beside the cobra's pit,
and a toddler will put his hand into a snake's den.
9 None will harm or destroy another on My entire holy mountain, for the land will be as full of the knowledge of the LORD
as the sea is filled with water. [l]

Israel Regathered

10 On that day the root of Jesse [m] will stand as a banner for the peoples. [n]
The nations will seek Him, [o]
and His resting place will be glorious. [p]

11 On that day [q] the Lord will extend His hand a second time to recover — from Assyria, Egypt, Pathros, •Cush , Elam, •Shinar , Hamath, and the coasts and islands of the west — the remnant of His people who survive. [r]

12 He will lift up a banner for the nations and gather the dispersed of Israel; [s]
He will collect the scattered of Judah from the four corners of the earth. [t]
13 Ephraim's envy will cease; [u]
Judah's harassment will end.
Ephraim will no longer be envious of Judah,
and Judah will not harass Ephraim.
14 But they will swoop down on the Philistine flank to the west.
Together they will plunder the people of the east. [v]
They will extend their power over Edom and Moab, and the Ammonites will be their subjects. [w]
15 The LORD will divide [x, C] the Gulf of Suez. [D]
He will wave His hand over the Euphrates with His mighty wind [y]
and will split it into seven streams, letting people walk through on foot.
16 There will be a highway for the remnant of His people who will survive from Assyria, [z]
as there was for Israel
when they came up from the land of Egypt. [a]

A Song of Praise

12 On that day you will say:
“I will praise You, LORD,
although You were angry with me.
Your anger has turned away,
and You have had compassion [a] on me.
2 Indeed, God is my salvation;
I will trust Him and not be afraid,
for •Yah , the LORD,
is my strength and my song.
He has become my salvation.” [b] 3 You will joyfully draw water [c]
from the springs of salvation, 4 and on that day you will say:
“Give thanks to Yahweh; proclaim His name!
Celebrate His works among the peoples. [d]
Declare that His name is exalted.
5 Sing to Yahweh, for He has done glorious things. [e]
Let this be known throughout the earth.
6 Cry out and sing, citizen of •Zion , for the Holy One of Israel [f] is among you in His greatness.”

An Oracle against Babylon

13 An •oracle [a] against Babylon [b] that Isaiah son of Amoz saw:

2 Lift up a banner on a barren mountain. [c]
Call out to them.
Wave your hand, and they will go through the gates of the nobles.
3 I have commanded My chosen ones;
I have also called My warriors,
who exult in My triumph,
to execute My wrath. [d] 4 Listen, a tumult on the mountains,
like that of a mighty people!
Listen, an uproar among the kingdoms,
like nations being gathered together!
The LORD of •Hosts is mobilizing an army for war.
5 They are coming from a far land, from the distant horizon —
the LORD and the weapons of His wrath — to destroy the whole country. [A]

6 Wail! For the day of the LORD is near. [e]
It will come like destruction from the •Almighty . [f]
7 Therefore everyone's hands will become weak, and every man's heart will melt.
8 They will be horrified;
pain and agony will seize them;
they will be in anguish like a woman in labor. [g]
They will look at each other,
their faces flushed with fear.
9 Look, the day [h] of the LORD is coming — cruel, with rage and burning anger — to make the earth a desolation and to destroy the sinners on it. [i] 10 Indeed, the stars of the sky and its constellations [B] will not give their light.
The sun will be dark when it rises,
and the moon will not shine. [j] 11 I will bring disaster on the world, and their own iniquity, [k] on the wicked.

I will put an end to the pride of the arrogant [l] and humiliate the insolence of tyrants.
12 I will make man scarcer than gold,
and mankind more rare than the gold of Ophir. [m] 13 Therefore I will make the heavens tremble, and the earth will shake from its foundations [n]
at the wrath of the LORD of Hosts, on the day of His burning anger.
14 Like wandering gazelles and like sheep without a shepherd, [o]
each one will turn to his own people,
each one will flee to his own land.
15 Whoever is found will be stabbed,
and whoever is caught will die by the sword.
16 Their children will be smashed to death before their eyes; [p] their houses will be looted,
and their wives raped.
17 Look! I am stirring up the Medes against them, [q] who cannot be bought off with [C] silver and who have no desire for gold.
18 Their bows will cut young men to pieces.
They will have no compassion on little ones;
they will not look with pity on children.

19 And Babylon, the jewel of the kingdoms,
the glory of the pride of the Chaldeans, will be like Sodom and Gomorrah
when God overthrew them. [r] 20 It will never be inhabited or lived in from generation to generation; [s] a nomad will not pitch his tent there,
and shepherds will not let their flocks rest there.
21 But desert creatures will lie down there,
and owls will fill the houses.
Ostriches will dwell there,
and wild goats will leap about. [t]

22 Hyenas will howl in the fortresses, and jackals, in the luxurious palaces.
Babylon’s time is almost up;
her days are almost over.

Israel's Return

14 For the LORD will have compassion [a] on Jacob and will choose Israel again. [b] He will settle them on their own land. [c] The foreigner will join them and be united with the house of Jacob. [d] 2 The nations will escort Israel and bring it to its homeland. Then the house of Israel will possess them as male and female slaves in the LORD's land. [e] They will make captives of their captors and will rule over their oppressors.

Downfall of the King of Babylon

3 When the LORD gives you rest from your pain, [f] torment, and the hard labor [g] you were forced to do, 4 you will sing this song of contempt about the king of Babylon [h] and say:

How the oppressor has quieted down,
and how the raging [i] has become quiet!
5 The LORD has broken the staff of the wicked,
the scepter of the rulers.
6 It struck the peoples in anger with unceasing blows.
It subdued the nations in rage with relentless persecution.
7 All the earth is calm and at rest;
people shout with a ringing cry.
8 Even the cypresses and the cedars of Lebanon rejoice over you: [j]
"Since you have been laid low,
no woodcutter has come against us."

9 •Sheol below is eager to greet your coming.
He stirs up the spirits of the departed for you —
all the rulers [A] of the earth.
He makes all the kings of the nations rise from their thrones.
10 They all respond to you, saying:
"You too have become as weak as we are;
you have become like us!
11 Your splendor has been brought down to Sheol,
along with the music of your harps.
Maggots are spread out under you,
and worms cover you."

12 Shining morning star, B, k
how you have fallen from the heavens! l
You destroyer of nations,
you have been cut down to the ground.
13 You said to yourself:
“I will ascend to the heavens; m
I will set up my throne above the stars of God. n
I will sit on the mount of the gods’ assembly, in the remotest parts of the North. C, o 14 I will ascend above the highest clouds;
I will make myself like the •Most High.”
15 But you will be brought down to Sheol into the deepest regions of the •Pit . p

16 Those who see you will stare at you;
they will look closely at you:
“Is this the man who caused the earth to tremble,
who shook the kingdoms,
17 who turned the world into a wilderness, q who destroyed its cities and would not release the prisoners to return home? ” 18 All the kings of the nations lie in splendor, each in his own tomb.
19 But you are thrown out without a grave,
like a worthless branch,
covered by those slain with the sword
and dumped into a rocky pit like a trampled corpse.
20 You will not join them in burial, because you destroyed your land
and slaughtered your own people.
The offspring of evildoers will never be remembered. r 21 Prepare a place of slaughter for his sons, because of the iniquity s of their fathers.
They will never rise up to possess a land or fill the surface of the earth with cities.

22 “I will rise up against them” — this is the declaration of the LORD of •Hosts — “and I will cut off from Babylon her reputation, remnant, offspring, and posterity” — this is the LORD’s declaration. 23 “I will make her a swampland and a region for screech owls, D and I will sweep her away with a broom of destruction.”
This is the declaration of the LORD of Hosts.

Assyria Will Be Destroyed

24 The LORD of Hosts has sworn:
As I have purposed, so it will be;
as I have planned it, so it will happen. [t]
25 I will break Assyria [u] in My land;
I will tread him down on My mountain.
Then his yoke will be taken from them,
and his burden will be removed from their shoulders.
26 This is the plan [v] prepared for the whole earth,
and this is the hand stretched out against all the nations.
27 The LORD of Hosts Himself has planned it;
therefore, who can stand in its way?
It is His hand that is outstretched,
so who can turn it back?

An Oracle against Philistia

28 In the year that King Ahaz died, [w] this •oracle came: [x]

29 Don't rejoice, all of you in Philistia, because the rod of the one who struck you [y] is broken.
For a viper will come from the root [E] of a snake,
and from its egg comes a flying serpent. [z] 30 Then the firstborn [a] of the poor will be well fed, and the impoverished will lie down in safety,
but I will kill your root with hunger,
and your remnant will be slain. [b]
31 Wail, you gates! [c] Cry out, city!
Tremble with fear, [d] all Philistia!
For a cloud of dust is coming from the north, [e]
and there is no one missing from the invader's ranks.
32 What answer will be given to the messengers from that nation?
The LORD has founded •Zion , [f]
and His afflicted people find refuge in her.

An Oracle against Moab

15 An •oracle against Moab: [a]

Ar in Moab is devastated, [b] destroyed in a night.
Kir in Moab is devastated,
destroyed in a night.
2 Dibon went up to its temple to weep at its •high places.
Moab wails on Nebo and at [A] Medeba.
Every head is shaved;
every beard is cut off.
3 In its streets they wear •sackcloth ;
on its rooftops and in its public squares everyone wails, falling down and weeping.
4 Heshbon and Elealeh cry out;
their voices are heard as far away as Jahaz. [c]
Therefore the soldiers of Moab cry out, and they tremble. [B]
5 My heart cries out over Moab, whose fugitives flee as far as Zoar, [d]
to Eglath-shelishiyah;
they go up the slope of Luhith weeping;
they raise a cry of destruction
on the road to Horonaim.
6 The waters of Nimrim [e] are desolate;
the grass is withered, the foliage is gone,
and the vegetation has vanished.
7 So they carry their wealth and belongings over the •Wadi of the Willows. [f] 8 For their cry echoes throughout the territory of Moab.
Their wailing reaches Eglaim;
their wailing reaches Beer-elim.
9 The waters of Dibon [g] are full of blood, [h] but I will bring on Dibon [i] even more than this — a lion for those who escape from Moab, and for the survivors in the land. [j]

16 Send lambs to the ruler of the land, [a] from Sela in the desert [b] to the mountain of Daughter •Zion .
2 Like a bird fleeing,
forced from the nest,
the daughters of Moab
will be at the fords of the Arnon.

3 Give us counsel and make a decision.
Shelter us at noonday
with shade that is as dark as night.
Hide the refugees; [c]
do not betray the one who flees.
4 Let my refugees stay with you;
be a refuge for Moab [A] from the aggressor.

When the oppressor has gone,
destruction has ended,
and marauders have vanished from the land.
5 Then in the tent of David a throne will be established by faithful love. [d]
A judge who seeks what is right and is quick to execute justice will sit on the throne forever.

6 We have heard of Moab's pride [e] — how very proud he is — his haughtiness, his pride, his arrogance, and his empty boasting.
7 Therefore let Moab wail;
let every one of them wail for Moab.
Mourn, you who are completely devastated,
for the raisin cakes [f] of Kir-hareseth. [g]
8 For Heshbon's terraced vineyards and the grapevines of Sibmah have withered.
The rulers of the nations have trampled its choice vines that reached as far as Jazer [h] and spread to the desert.

Their shoots spread out and reached the Dead Sea. [i] 9 So I join with Jazer to weep for the vines of Sibmah;
I drench Heshbon and Elealeh with my tears.
Triumphant shouts have fallen silent [B]
over your summer fruit and your harvest.
10 Joy and rejoicing [j] have been removed from the orchard;
no one is singing or shouting for joy in the vineyards. [k]
No one tramples grapes [C] in the winepresses.
I have put an end to the shouting.
11 Therefore I moan like the sound of a lyre for Moab, [l] as does my innermost being for Kir-heres.
12 When Moab appears on the •high place, when he tires [m] himself out [n]
and comes to his sanctuary to pray,
it will do him no good. [o]

13 This is the message that the LORD previously announced about Moab. 14 And now the LORD says, “In three years, as a hired worker counts years, [p] Moab’s splendor will become an object of contempt, in spite of a very large population. And those who are left will be few and weak.”

An Oracle against Damascus

17 An •oracle [a] against Damascus: [b]

Look, Damascus is no longer a city.
It has become a ruined heap.
2 The cities of Aroer are forsaken;
they will be places for flocks.
They will lie down without fear.
3 The fortress disappears from Ephraim, [c]
and a kingdom from Damascus.
The remnant of Aram will be like the splendor of the Israelites.

This is the declaration of the LORD of •Hosts .

Judgment against Israel

4 On that day
the splendor of Jacob will fade,
and his healthy body [A] will become emaciated. [d] 5 It will be as if a reaper had gathered standing grain — his arm harvesting the heads of grain — and as if one had gleaned heads of grain in the Valley of Rephaim. [e] 6 Only gleanings will be left in Israel, [f]
as if an olive tree had been beaten —
two or three berries at the very top of the tree, four or five on its fruitful branches.

This is the declaration of the LORD, the God of Israel.
7 On that day people will look to their Maker and will turn their eyes to the Holy One of Israel. [g] 8 They will not look to the altars [h] they made with their hands or to the •Asherahs and incense altars [i] they made with their fingers.

9 On that day their strong cities will be like the abandoned woods and mountaintops [j] that were abandoned because of the Israelites;
there will be desolation.
10 For you have forgotten the God of your salvation, and you have failed to remember the rock of your strength; [k]
therefore you will plant beautiful plants and set out cuttings from exotic vines.
11 On the day that you plant,
you will help them to grow,
and in the morning
you will help your seed to sprout, but the harvest will vanish
on the day of disease and incurable pain.

Judgment against the Nations

12 Ah! The roar of many peoples — they roar like the roaring of the seas.
The raging of the nations —
they rage like the raging of mighty waters. [l]
13 The nations rage like the raging of many waters. [m]
He rebukes them, and they flee far away, [n] driven before the wind like chaff on the hills [o]
and like tumbleweeds before a gale.
14 In the evening — sudden terror!
Before morning — it is gone!
This is the fate of those who plunder us and the lot of those who ravage us.

The LORD's Message to Cush

18 Ah! The land of buzzing insect wings [A] beyond the rivers of •Cush [a] 2 sends couriers by sea,
in reed vessels on the waters.

Go, swift messengers,
to a nation tall and smooth-skinned,
to a people feared far and near,
a powerful nation with a strange language, [B]
whose land is divided by rivers.
3 All you inhabitants of the world and you who live on the earth,
when a banner is raised on the mountains, look!
When a trumpet sounds, listen!

4 For, the LORD said to me:
I will quietly look out from My place,
like shimmering heat in sunshine,
like a rain cloud in harvest heat.
5 For before the harvest, when the blossoming is over and the blossom becomes a ripening grape,
He will cut off the shoots with a pruning knife,
and tear away and remove the branches.
6 They will all be left for the birds of prey on the hills and for the wild animals of the land.
The birds will spend the summer on them,
and all the animals, the winter on them.
7 At that time a gift will be brought to •Yahweh of •Hosts from [b] a people tall and smooth-skinned, [c] a people feared far and near, a powerful nation with a strange language, whose land is divided by rivers — to Mount •Zion , the place of the name of Yahweh of Hosts.

An Oracle against Egypt

19 An •oracle [a] against Egypt: [b]

Look, the LORD rides on a swift cloud [c]
and is coming to Egypt.
Egypt's idols will tremble before Him, [d]
and Egypt's heart will melt within it. [e] 2 I will provoke Egypt against Egypt;
each will fight against his brother [f]
and each against his friend,
city against city, kingdom against kingdom. [g] 3 Egypt's spirit will be disturbed within it, and I will frustrate its plans.
Then they will seek idols, ghosts, spirits of the dead, and spiritists. [h]
4 I will deliver Egypt into the hands of harsh masters, [i] and a strong king will rule it.

This is the declaration of the Lord GOD of •Hosts .

5 The waters of the sea will dry up,
and the river will be parched and dry.
6 The channels will stink;
they will dwindle, and Egypt's canals will be parched.
Reed and rush will die. [A] 7 The reeds by the Nile, by the mouth of the river, and all the cultivated areas of the Nile will wither, blow away, and vanish.
8 Then the fishermen will mourn.
All those who cast hooks into the Nile will lament,
and those who spread nets on the water will shrivel up.
9 Those who work with flax will be dismayed; [j]
the combers and weavers will turn pale. [k] 10 Egypt's weavers [B] will be dejected;
all her wage earners will be demoralized.

11 The princes of Zoan are complete fools; [l]
Pharaoh's wisest advisers give stupid advice!
How can you say to Pharaoh,
"I am one [C] of the wise,

a student of eastern [D] kings”?
12 Where then are your wise men?
Let them tell you and reveal what the LORD of Hosts has planned against Egypt.
13 The princes of Zoan have been fools;
the princes of Memphis are deceived. [m]
Her tribal chieftains have led Egypt astray.
14 The LORD has mixed within her a spirit of confusion.
The leaders have made Egypt stagger in all she does,
as a drunkard staggers in his vomit.
15 No head or tail, palm or reed, [n]
will be able to do anything for Egypt.

Egypt Will Know the LORD 16 On that day Egypt will be like women. She will tremble with fear because of the threatening hand of the LORD of Hosts when He raises it against her. 17 The land of Judah will terrify Egypt; whenever Judah is mentioned, Egypt will tremble because of what the LORD of Hosts has planned [o] against it.

18 On that day five cities in the land of Egypt will speak the language of Canaan and swear loyalty to the LORD of Hosts. One of the cities will be called the City of the Sun. [p, q]

19 On that day there will be an altar to the LORD in the center of the land of Egypt and a pillar to the LORD near her border. [r] 20 It will be a sign and witness to the LORD of Hosts in the land of Egypt. When they cry out to the LORD because of their oppressors, He will send them a savior and leader, and he will rescue them. [s] 21 The LORD will make Himself known to Egypt, and Egypt will know the LORD on that day. They will offer sacrifices and offerings; [t] they will make vows to the LORD and fulfill them. 22 The LORD will strike Egypt, striking and healing. Then they will return to the LORD and He will hear their prayers and heal them.

23 On that day there will be a highway [u] from Egypt to Assyria. Assyria will go to Egypt, Egypt to Assyria, and Egypt will worship with Assyria.

24 On that day Israel will form a triple alliance with Egypt and Assyria — a blessing within the land. 25 The LORD of Hosts will bless them, saying, “Egypt My people, Assyria My handiwork, [v] and Israel My inheritance are blessed.” [w]

No Help from Cush or Egypt

20 In the year that the chief commander, [a] sent by Sargon king of Assyria, came to Ashdod [b] and attacked and captured it — [2] during that time the LORD had spoken through Isaiah [c] son of Amoz, saying, "Go, take off your •sackcloth [A] and remove the sandals from your feet," and he did so, going naked and barefoot [d] — [3] the LORD said, "As My servant Isaiah has gone naked and barefoot three years as a sign and omen against Egypt and •Cush , [e] [4] so the king of Assyria will lead the captives of Egypt [f] and the exiles of Cush, young and old alike, naked and barefoot, with bared buttocks — to Egypt's shame. [5]
Those who made Cush their hope and Egypt their boast will be dismayed and ashamed. [g] [6] And the inhabitants of this coastland will say on that day, 'Look, this is what has happened to those we relied on and fled to for help to rescue us from the king of Assyria! Now, how will we escape? ' "

A Judgment on Babylon

21 An •oracle [a] against the desert by the sea: [b]

Like storms that pass over the •Negev , it comes from the desert, from the land of terror.
2 A troubling vision is declared to me:
“The treacherous one acts treacherously, [c]
and the destroyer destroys.
Advance, Elam! Lay siege, you Medes!
I will put an end to all her groaning.”

3 Therefore I am [A] filled with anguish.
Pain grips me, like the pain of a woman in labor. [d]
I am too perplexed to hear, too dismayed to see.
4 My heart staggers;
horror terrifies me.
He has turned my last glimmer of hope [B]
into sheer terror. [e]
5 Prepare a table, [f] and spread out a carpet!
Eat and drink!
Rise up, you princes, and oil the shields!

6 For the Lord has said to me, “Go, post a lookout;
let him report what he sees.
7 When he sees riders —
pairs of horsemen,
riders on donkeys,
riders on camels —
he must pay close attention.”
8 Then the lookout [g] reported, “Lord, I stand on the watchtower all day, [h] and I stay at my post all night.
9 Look, riders come — horsemen in pairs.”
And he answered, saying,
“Babylon has fallen, [i] has fallen.
All the images of her gods
have been shattered on the ground.” [j]

10 My people who have been crushed on the threshing floor, [k]
I have declared to you what I have heard from the LORD of •Hosts ,
the God of Israel.

An Oracle against Dumah

11 An oracle [l] against Dumah: [m, n]

One calls to me from Seir, [o]
“Watchman, what is left of the night?
Watchman, what is left of the night? ”
12 The watchman said,
“Morning has come, and also night.
If you want to ask, ask!
Come back again.”

An Oracle against Arabia

13 An oracle against Arabia: [p]

In the desert [q] brush
you will camp for the night,
you caravans of Dedanites. [r]
14 Bring water for the thirsty.
The inhabitants of the land of Tema [s]
meet [t] the refugees with food.
15 For they have fled from swords,
from the drawn sword,
from the bow that is strung,
and from the stress of battle.

16 For the Lord said this to me: “Within one year, [u] as a hired worker counts years, all the glory of Kedar [v] will be gone. 17 The remaining Kedarite archers will be few in number.” For the LORD, the God of Israel, has spoken.

An Oracle against Jerusalem

22 An •oracle [a] against the Valley of Vision: [b]
What's the matter with you?
Why have all of you gone up to the rooftops? [c]
2 The noisy city, the jubilant town, [d] is filled with revelry.
Your dead did not die by the sword;
they were not killed in battle.
3 All your rulers have fled together, captured without a bow.
All your fugitives were captured together;
they had fled far away.
4 Therefore I said,
"Look away from me! Let me weep bitterly! [e]
Do not try to comfort me about the destruction of my dear [A] people."
5 For the Lord God of •Hosts had a day of tumult, trampling, and confusion [f] in the Valley of Vision — people shouting [B] and crying to the mountains;
6 Elam took up a quiver with chariots and horsemen, [C]
and Kir [g] uncovered the shield.
7 Your best valleys were full of chariots,
and horsemen were positioned at the gates.
8 He removed the defenses of Judah.

On that day you looked to the weapons in the House of the Forest. [h] 9 You saw that there were many breaches in the walls of the city of David. [i] You collected water from the lower pool. [j] 10 You counted the houses of Jerusalem so that you could tear them down to fortify the wall. 11 You made a reservoir between the walls [k] for the waters of the ancient pool, [l] but you did not look to the One who made it, or consider the One who created it long ago.

12 On that day the Lord God of Hosts called for weeping, [m] for wailing, for shaven heads, and for the wearing of •sackcloth .
13 But look: joy and gladness, butchering of cattle, slaughtering of sheep,

eating of meat, and drinking of wine —
“Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die! ” [n]
14 The Lord of Hosts has directly revealed to me: [o]
“This sin of yours will never [D] be wiped out.” [p]
The Lord God of Hosts has spoken.

An Oracle against Shebna

15 The Lord God of Hosts said: “Go to Shebna, [q] that steward who is in charge of the palace, and say to him: 16 What are you doing here? Who authorized you to carve out a tomb for yourself here, carving your tomb on the height and cutting a crypt for yourself out of rock? [r] 17 Look, you strong man!
The Lord is about to shake you violently. He will take hold of you, 18 wind you up into a ball, and sling you into a wide land. [E] There you will die, and there your glorious chariots will be — a disgrace to the house of your lord. 19 I will remove you from your office; you will be ousted from your position.

20 “On that day I will call for my servant, Eliakim son of Hilkiah. [s] 21 I will clothe him with your robe and tie your sash around him. I will put your authority into his hand, and he will be like a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the House of Judah. [t] 22 I will place the key [u] of the House of David on his shoulder; what he opens, no one can close; what he closes, no one can open. [v] 23
I will drive him, like a peg, into a firm place. He will be a throne of honor for his father’s house. 24 They will hang on him the whole burden of his father’s house: the descendants and the offshoots — all the small vessels, from bowls to every kind of jar. 25 On that day” — the declaration of the Lord of Hosts — “the peg that was driven into a firm place will give way, be cut off, and fall, and the load on it will be destroyed.” Indeed, the Lord has spoken.

An Oracle against Tyre

23 An •oracle [a] against Tyre: [b]

Wail, ships of Tarshish, [c]
for your haven has been destroyed.
Word has reached them from the land of Cyprus. [A, d]
2 Mourn, inhabitants of the coastland, you merchants of Sidon; [e]
your agents have crossed the sea [f] 3 on many waters.
Tyre's revenue was the grain from Shihor —
the harvest of the Nile.
She was the merchant among the nations. [g] 4 Be ashamed Sidon, the stronghold of the sea,
for the sea has spoken:
"I have not been in labor or given birth.
I have not raised young men or brought up young women."
5 When the news reaches Egypt, they will be in anguish over the news about Tyre. [h] 6 Cross over to Tarshish;
wail, inhabitants of the coastland!
7 Is this your jubilant city, whose origin was in ancient times, whose feet have taken her
to settle far away?
8 Who planned this against Tyre,
the bestower of crowns,
whose traders are princes,
whose merchants are the honored ones of the earth?
9 The LORD of •Hosts planned it,
to desecrate all its glorious beauty,
to disgrace all the honored ones of the earth.
10 Overflow [i] your land like the Nile, daughter of Tarshish;
there is no longer anything to restrain you. [B] 11 He stretched out His hand over the sea; [j]
He made kingdoms tremble.
The LORD has commanded that the Canaanite fortresses be destroyed.

12 He said,
“You will not rejoice anymore,
ravished young woman, daughter of Sidon.
Get up and cross over to Cyprus [k] —
even there you will have no rest! ” 13 Look at the land of the Chaldeans —
a people who no longer exist.
Assyria destined it for desert creatures.
They set up their siege towers and stripped its palaces.
They made it a ruin.
14 Wail, ships of Tarshish,
because your fortress is destroyed!

15 On that day Tyre will be forgotten for 70 years — the life span of one king. At the end of 70 years, what the song says about the prostitute will happen to Tyre:

16 Pick up your lyre,
stroll through the city,
prostitute forgotten by men.
Play skillfully,
sing many a song,
and you will be thought of again.

17 And at the end of the 70 years, [l] the LORD will restore Tyre [m] and she will go back into business, prostituting herself with all the kingdoms of the world on the face of the earth. 18 But her profits and wages will be dedicated to the LORD. They will not be stored or saved, for her profit will go to those who live in the LORD’s presence, to provide them with ample food and sacred clothing.

The Earth Judged

24 Look, the LORD is stripping the earth bare and making it desolate.
He will twist its surface and scatter its inhabitants:
2 people and priest alike,
servant and master,
female servant and mistress,
buyer and seller,
lender and borrower,
creditor and debtor.
3 The earth will be stripped completely bare and will be totally plundered, for the LORD has spoken this message. [a]

4 The earth mourns and withers;
the world wastes away and withers;
the exalted people of the earth waste away.
5 The earth is polluted by its inhabitants, [b]
for they have transgressed teachings, overstepped decrees,
and broken the everlasting covenant. [c]
6 Therefore a curse has consumed the earth, [d]
and its inhabitants have become •guilty ;
the earth's inhabitants have been burned,
and only a few survive.
7 The new wine mourns; [e]
the vine withers.
All the carousers now groan.
8 The joyful tambourines [f] have ceased.
The noise of the jubilant has stopped.
The joyful lyre has ceased.
9 They no longer sing and drink wine;
beer is bitter to those who drink it.
10 The city of chaos is shattered; [g]
every house is closed to entry. [h]
11 In the streets they cry [A] for wine.
All joy grows dark;
earth's rejoicing goes into exile.
12 Only desolation remains in the city;

its gate has collapsed in ruins.
13 For this is how it will be on earth
among the nations:
like a harvested olive tree,
like a gleaning after a grape harvest. [i]

14 They raise their voices, they sing out;
they proclaim in the west
the majesty of the LORD.
15 Therefore, in the east honor the LORD!
In the islands of the west honor the name of •Yahweh ,
the God of Israel.
16 From the ends of the earth we hear songs:
The Splendor of the Righteous One. [j]

But I said, “I waste away! I waste away! [B] Woe is me.”
The treacherous act treacherously;
the treacherous deal very treacherously. [k]

17 Panic, pit, and trap await you [l] who dwell on the earth. [m] 18 Whoever flees at the sound of panic will fall into a pit,
and whoever escapes from the pit
will be caught in a trap.
For the windows are opened from heaven, [n]
and the foundations of the earth are shaken. [o] 19 The earth is completely devastated;
the earth is split open;
the earth is violently shaken.
20 The earth staggers like a drunkard [p]
and sways like a hut.
Earth’s rebellion weighs it down,
and it falls, never to rise again.

21 On that day [q] the LORD will punish the host of heaven above and kings of the earth below.

22 They will be gathered together like prisoners in a pit. [r]
They will be confined to a dungeon; [s]
after many days they will be punished.
23 The moon will be put to shame
and the sun disgraced, because the LORD of •Hosts will reign as king
on Mount •Zion in Jerusalem, and He will display His glory
in the presence of His elders. [t]

Salvation and Judgment on That Day

25 •Yahweh , You are my God; [a]
I will exalt You. I will praise Your name, for You have accomplished wonders,
plans formed long ago, with perfect faithfulness.
2 For You have turned the city into a pile of rocks, [b] a fortified city, into ruins;
the fortress of barbarians [c] is no longer a city;
it will never be rebuilt.
3 Therefore, a strong people will honor You.
The cities of violent nations will •fear You.
4 For You have been a stronghold for the poor,
a stronghold for the needy [d] person in his distress,
a refuge from the rain, a shade from the heat. [e]
When the breath of the violent is like rain against a wall,
5 like heat in a dry land,
You subdue the uproar of barbarians.
As [A] the shade of a cloud cools the heat of the day,
so He silences the song of the violent.

6 The LORD of •Hosts will prepare a feast [f] for all the peoples on this mountain [g, h] — a feast of aged wine, choice meat, [B] finely aged wine.
7 On this mountain
He will destroy the burial shroud,
the shroud over all the peoples,
the sheet covering all the nations; [i]
8 He will destroy death forever. [j]
The Lord GOD will wipe away the tears from every face [k]
and remove His people's disgrace [l]
from the whole earth,
for the LORD has spoken.

9 On that day it will be said,
"Look, this is our God;
we have waited for Him, and He has saved us.
This is the LORD; we have waited for Him.

Let us rejoice and be glad in His salvation.” [m]
10 For the LORD’s power will rest on this mountain.

But Moab [n] will be trampled in his place [C]
as straw is trampled in a dung pile.
11 He will spread out his arms in the middle of it,
as a swimmer spreads out his arms to swim.
His pride will be brought low,
along with the trickery of his hands. [o] 12 The high-walled fortress will be brought down, thrown to the ground, to the dust. [p]

The Song of Judah

26 On that day this song will be sung in the land of Judah:
We have a strong city.
Salvation is established as walls and ramparts. [a] 2 Open the gates so a righteous nation can come in —
one that remains faithful.
3 You will keep the mind that is dependent on You in perfect peace, [b]
for it is trusting in You.
4 Trust in the LORD forever, because in •Yah , the LORD, is an everlasting rock! [c] 5 For He has humbled those who live in lofty places — an inaccessible city. [d]
He brings it down; He brings it down to the ground;
He throws it to the dust.
6 Feet trample it,
the feet of the humble,
the steps of the poor.

God's People Vindicated

7 The path of the righteous is level; [e]
You clear a straight path for the righteous.
8 Yes, Yahweh, we wait for You in the path of Your judgments.
Our desire is for Your name and renown. [f] 9 I long for You in the night; [g]
yes, my spirit within me diligently seeks You,
for when Your judgments are in the land,
the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.
10 But if the wicked man is shown favor,
he does not learn righteousness.
In a righteous land he acts unjustly and does not see the majesty of the LORD.

11 LORD, Your hand is lifted up to take action,
but they do not see it.
They will see Your zeal for Your people,
and they will be put to shame.

The fire for Your adversaries will consume them!
12 LORD, You will establish peace for us,
for You have also done all our work for us.
13 Yahweh our God, lords other than You have ruled over us, but we remember Your name alone. h

14 The dead do not live;
departed spirits do not rise up.
Indeed, You have visited and destroyed them;
You have wiped out all memory of them. i
15 You have added to the nation, LORD. j
You have added to the nation; You are honored.
You have expanded all the borders of the land. k
16 LORD, they went to You in their distress; l they poured out whispered prayers because Your discipline fell on them. A 17 As a pregnant woman about to give birth writhes and cries out in her pains, m
so we were before You, LORD.
18 We became pregnant, we writhed in pain;
we gave birth to wind.
We have won no victories on earth,
and the earth's inhabitants have not fallen.

19 Your dead will live; their bodies B will rise. n
Awake and sing, you who dwell in the dust!
For you will be covered with the morning dew, C and the earth will bring out the departed spirits.

20 Go, my people, enter your rooms and close your doors behind you.
Hide for a little while until the wrath has passed. o
21 For look, the LORD is coming from His place p to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity. q
The earth will reveal the blood shed on it and will no longer conceal her slain.

Leviathan Slain

27 On that day the LORD with His harsh, great, and strong sword, will bring judgment on •Leviathan , [a] the fleeing serpent — Leviathan, the twisting serpent. He will slay the monster that is in the sea. [b]

The LORD's Vineyard

2 On that day
sing about a desirable vineyard: [c]
3 I, •Yahweh , watch over it;
I water it regularly.
I guard it night and day
so that no one disturbs it.
4 I am not angry,
but if it produces thorns and briers [d] for Me,
I will fight against it, trample it,
and burn it to the ground.
5 Or let it take hold of My strength;
let it make peace with Me —
make peace with Me.
6 In days to come, Jacob will take root. [e]
Israel will blossom and bloom [f]
and fill the whole world with fruit.

7 Did the LORD strike Israel
as He struck the one who struck Israel? [g]
Was he killed like those killed by Him?
8 You disputed with her by banishing and driving her away. [A]
He removed her with His severe storm on the day of the east wind.
9 Therefore Jacob's iniquity [h] will be purged in this way, and the result of the removal of his sin will be this: [i] when he makes all the altar stones like crushed bits of chalk,
no •Asherah poles or incense altars will remain standing.
10 For the fortified city will be deserted, pastures abandoned and forsaken like a wilderness.
Calves will graze there,
and there they will spread out and strip its branches.

11 When its branches dry out, they will be broken off.
Women will come and make fires with them,
for they are not a people with understanding. [j]
Therefore their Maker [k] will not have compassion on them, and their Creator will not be gracious to them.

12 On that day [l]
the LORD will thresh grain from the Euphrates River as far as the •Wadi of Egypt, [m] and you Israelites will be gathered one by one.
13 On that day
a great trumpet [n] will be blown,
and those lost in the land of Assyria will come,
as well as those dispersed in the land of Egypt;
and they will worship the LORD
at Jerusalem on the holy mountain.

Woe to Samaria

28 Woe to the majestic crown of Ephraim’s drunkards, [a]
and to the fading flower of its beautiful splendor,
which is on the summit above the rich valley.
Woe to those overcome with wine.
2 Look, the Lord has a strong and mighty one [b] —
like a devastating hail storm,
like a storm with strong flooding waters.
He will bring it across the land with His hand.
3 The majestic crown of Ephraim’s drunkards will be trampled underfoot.
4 The fading flower of his beautiful splendor,
which is on the summit above the rich valley,
will be like a ripe fig before the summer harvest. [c] Whoever sees it will swallow it while it is still in his hand.
5 On that day
the LORD of •Hosts will become a crown of beauty and a diadem of splendor [d]
to the remnant of His people, 6 a spirit of justice to the one who sits in judgment, [e]
and strength
to those who turn back the battle at the gate.

7 These also stagger because of wine and stumble under the influence of beer:
priest and prophet stagger because of beer,
they are confused by wine. [f]
They stumble because of beer,
they are muddled in their visions,
they stumble in their judgments.
8 Indeed, all their tables are covered with vomit;
there is no place without a stench.
9 Who is he [A] trying to teach?
Who is he [B] trying to instruct?
Infants [C] just weaned from milk?
Babies [D] removed from the breast?

10 For he says: “Law after law, law after law,
line after line, line after line,
a little here, a little there.” E, g 11 So He will speak to this people with stammering speech and in a foreign language. h
12 He had said to them:
“This is the place of rest, let the weary rest; i
this is the place of repose.”
But they would not listen.

13 Then the word of the LORD came to them:
“Law after law, law after law,
line after line, line after line,
a little here, a little there,” F, j
so they go stumbling backward, to be broken, trapped, and captured. k

A Deal with Death

14 Therefore hear the word of the LORD, [l] you mockers [m] who rule this people in Jerusalem.
15 For you said, “We have cut a deal with Death, and we have made an agreement with •Sheol ;
when the overwhelming scourge passes through, [n]
it will not touch us,
because we have made falsehood our refuge and have hidden behind treachery.”
16 Therefore the Lord GOD said:
“Look, I have laid a stone [o] in •Zion ,
a tested stone,
a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation; [p]
the one who believes will be unshakable. [G, q] 17 And I will make justice the measuring line and righteousness the mason’s level.” [r] Hail will sweep away the false refuge, and water will flood your hiding place.
18 Your deal with Death will be dissolved, and your agreement with Sheol will not last.
When the overwhelming scourge passes through,
you will be trampled.
19 Every time it passes through,
it will carry you away;
it will pass through every morning —
every day and every night.
Only terror [s] will cause you to understand the message. [H] 20 Indeed, the bed is too short to stretch out on,
and its cover too small to wrap up in.
21 For the LORD will rise up as He did at Mount Perazim. [t]
He will rise in wrath, as at the Valley of Gibeon, [u]
to do His work, His strange work, and to perform His task, His disturbing task.
22 So now, do not mock,
or your shackles will become stronger.

Indeed, I have heard from the Lord God of Hosts
a decree of destruction for the whole land. [v]

God's Wonderful Advice

[23] Listen and hear my voice.
Pay attention and hear what I say.
[24] Does the plowman plow every day to plant seed?
Does he continuously break up and cultivate the soil?
[25] When he has leveled its surface,
does he not then scatter black cumin and sow cumin?
He plants wheat in rows and barley in plots,
with spelt as their border.
[26] His God teaches him order;
He instructs him.
[27] Certainly black cumin is not threshed with a threshing board,
and a cart wheel is not rolled over the cumin.
But black cumin is beaten out with a stick,
and cumin with a rod.
[28] Bread grain is crushed,
but is not threshed endlessly.
Though the wheel of the farmer's cart rumbles,
his horses do not crush it.
[29] This also comes from the Lord of Hosts.
He gives wonderful advice;
He gives great wisdom. [w]

Woe to Jerusalem

29 Woe to Ariel, [A] Ariel, the city where David camped! [a] Continue year after year;
let the festivals recur.
2 I will oppress Ariel,
and there will be mourning and crying,
and she will be to Me like an Ariel. [B]
3 I will camp in a circle around you;
I will besiege you with earth ramps,
and I will set up my siege towers against you.
4 You will be brought down;
you will speak from the ground,
and your words will come from low in the dust.
Your voice will be like that of a spirit from the ground; [b] your speech will whisper from the dust.

5 Your many foes [C] will be like fine dust, [c]
and many of the ruthless, like blowing chaff.
Then suddenly, in an instant, [d]
6 you will be visited by the LORD of •Hosts with thunder, earthquake, and loud noise, storm, tempest, and a flame of consuming fire. [e] 7 All the many nations [f] going out to battle against Ariel — all the attackers, the siege works against her,
and those who oppress her — will then be like a dream, a vision in the night. [g] 8 It will be like a hungry one who dreams he is eating, then wakes and is still hungry;
and like a thirsty one who dreams he is drinking,
then wakes and is still thirsty, longing for water.
So it will be for all the many nations who go to battle against Mount •Zion .

9 Stop and be astonished;
blind yourselves and be blind!
They are drunk, [h] but not with wine;
they stagger, [i] but not with beer. [j]

10 For the LORD has poured out on you an overwhelming urge to [D] sleep; [k]
He has shut your eyes — the prophets, and covered your heads — the seers. [l]

11 For you the entire vision will be like the words of a sealed document. [m] If it is given to one who can read and he is asked to read it, [E] he will say, “I can’t read it, because it is sealed.” 12 And if the document is given to one who cannot read and he is asked to read it, [F] he will say, “I can’t read.”

13 The Lord said:

Because these people approach Me with their mouths [n]
to honor Me with lip-service [G] — yet their hearts are far from Me,
and their worship consists of man-made rules learned by rote —
14 therefore I will again confound these people with wonder after wonder. [o]
The wisdom of their wise men will vanish, [p]
and the understanding of the perceptive will be hidden.

15 Woe to those who go to great lengths to hide their plans from the LORD. [q]
They do their works in darkness, and say, “Who sees us? Who knows us? ” [r] 16 You have turned things around,
as if the potter were the same as the clay.
How can what is made say about its maker,
“He didn’t make me”? [s]
How can what is formed say about the one who formed it,
“He doesn’t understand what he’s doing”?

17 Isn’t it true that in just a little while Lebanon will become an orchard, and the orchard will seem like a forest? [t] 18 On that day the deaf will hear [u]
the words of a document, and out of a deep darkness

the eyes of the blind will see.
19 The humble will have joy
after joy in the LORD, and the poor people will rejoice [v]
in the Holy One of Israel. [w] 20 For the ruthless one will vanish, the scorner will disappear, [x]
and all those who lie in wait with evil intent will be killed — 21 those who, with their speech, accuse a person of wrongdoing,
who set a trap at the •gate for the mediator,
and without cause deprive the righteous of justice. [y]

22 Therefore, the LORD who redeemed Abraham [z] says this about the house of Jacob:

Jacob will no longer be ashamed and his face will no longer be pale.
23 For when he sees his children,
the work of My hands within his nation,
they will honor My name,
they will honor the Holy One of Jacob [a]
and stand in awe of the God of Israel. [b] 24 Those who are confused will gain understanding, and those who grumble will accept instruction.

Condemnation of the Egyptian Alliance

30 Woe to the rebellious children! [a]
They carry out a plan, [b] but not Mine;
they make an alliance,
but against My will,
piling sin on top of sin.
This is the LORD*'s declaration.*
2 They set out to go down to Egypt [c]
without asking My advice,
in order to seek shelter under Pharaoh's protection and take refuge in Egypt's shadow. [d] 3 But Pharaoh's protection will become your shame, and refuge in Egypt's shadow your disgrace. [e] 4 For though his [A] princes are at Zoan [f]
and his messengers reach as far as Hanes, 5 everyone will be ashamed
because of a people who can't help.
They are of no benefit, they are no help;
they are good for nothing but shame and reproach. [g]
6 An •oracle [h] about the animals of the •Negev : [B]

Through a land of trouble and distress,
of lioness and lion,
of viper and flying serpent, [i]
they carry their wealth on the backs of donkeys and their treasures on the humps of camels,
to a people who will not help them.
7 Egypt's help is completely worthless;
therefore, I call her:
•Rahab Who Just Sits. [j]

8 Go now, write it on a tablet in their presence and inscribe it on a scroll;
it will be for the future,
forever and ever.
9 They are a rebellious people, deceptive children, [k]
children who do not want to obey the LORD's instruction.
10 They say to the seers, "Do not see,"
and to the prophets,

“Do not prophesy the truth to us.
Tell us flattering things. [l]
Prophesy illusions.
11 Get out of the way!
Leave the pathway.
Rid us of the Holy One of Israel.” [m]
12 Therefore the Holy One of Israel says:
“Because you have rejected this message and have trusted in oppression and deceit,
and have depended on them, 13 this iniquity [n] of yours will be like a spreading breach,
a bulge in a high wall
whose collapse will come in an instant — suddenly!
14 Its collapse will be like the shattering of a potter’s jar, [o] crushed to pieces, so that not even a fragment of pottery will be found among its shattered remains — no fragment large enough to take fire from a hearth or scoop water from a cistern.”
15 For the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, has said:
“You will be delivered by returning and resting;
your strength will lie in quiet confidence.
But you are not willing.”
16 You say, “No!
We will escape on horses” —
therefore you will escape! — and, “We will ride on fast horses” —
but those who pursue you will be faster. [p] 17 One thousand will flee at the threat of one, [q]
at the threat of five you will flee, until you alone remain
like a solitary pole on a mountaintop or a banner on a hill.

The Lord’s Mercy to Israel

18 Therefore the Lord is waiting to show you mercy, and is rising up to show you compassion, [r]

for the LORD is a just God.
All who wait patiently for Him are happy.
19 For you people will live on •Zion in Jerusalem and will never cry again. He will show favor to you at the sound of your cry; when He hears, He will answer you. 20 The Lord will give you meager bread and water during oppression, [s] but your Teacher [C] will not hide Himself [D] any longer. Your eyes will see your Teacher, [E] 21 and whenever you turn to the right or to the left, your ears will hear this command behind you: “This is the way. Walk in it.” [t] 22 Then you will defile your silver-plated idols and your gold-plated images. You will throw them away like menstrual cloths, and call them filth.
23 Then He will send rain for your seed that you have sown in the ground, and the food, the produce of the ground, will be rich and plentiful. On that day your cattle will graze in open pastures. [u] 24 The oxen and donkeys that work the ground will eat salted fodder scattered with winnowing shovel [v] and fork. 25 Streams flowing with water will be on every high mountain and every raised hill on the day of great slaughter when the towers fall. 26 The moonlight will be as bright as the sunlight, and the sunlight will be seven times brighter [w] — like the light of seven days — on the day [x] that the LORD bandages His people’s injuries and heals the wounds He inflicted. [y]

Annihilation of the Assyrians

27 Look, •Yahweh [F] comes from far away,
His anger burning and heavy with smoke. [G]
His lips are full of fury,
and His tongue is like a consuming fire.
28 His breath is like an overflowing torrent [z]
that rises to the neck. [a]
He comes to sift the nations in a sieve of destruction and to put a bridle on the jaws of the peoples to lead them astray. [b] 29 Your singing will be like that on the night of a holy festival, and your heart will rejoice
like one who walks to the music of a flute, going up to the mountain of the LORD,
to the Rock of Israel. [c]
30 And the LORD will make the splendor of His voice heard and reveal His arm [d] striking in angry wrath and a flame of consuming fire,
in driving rain, a torrent, and hailstones.
31 Assyria will be shattered by the voice of the LORD.
He will strike with a rod.
32 And every stroke of the appointed [e] staff that the LORD brings down on him will be to the sound of tambourines and lyres;
He will fight against him with brandished weapons.
33 Indeed! •Topheth has been ready [f]
for the king for a long time now.
Its funeral pyre is deep and wide,
with plenty of fire and wood.
The breath of the LORD, [g] like a torrent of brimstone, kindles it.

The LORD, the Only Help

31 Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help [a]
and who depend on horses!
They trust in the abundance of chariots and in the large number of horsemen. [b]
They do not look [c] to the Holy One of Israel and they do not seek the LORD*'s help.*
2 But He also is wise and brings disaster. [d]
He does not go back on what He says; [e]
He will rise up against the house of wicked men and against the allies of evildoers.
3 Egyptians are men, not God;
their horses are flesh, not spirit.
When the LORD raises His hand to strike,
the helper will stumble
and the one who is helped will fall;
both will perish together.
4 For this is what the LORD said to me:
As a lion or young lion growls over its prey [f]
when a band of shepherds is called out against it, and is not terrified by their shouting or subdued by their noise, so the LORD of •Hosts will come down to fight on Mount •Zion and on its hill. [g]

5 Like hovering birds,
so the LORD of Hosts will protect Jerusalem [h] —
by protecting it, He will rescue it,
by sparing it, He will deliver it.

6 Return to the One the Israelites have greatly rebelled against. [i] 7 For on that day, every one of you will reject the silver and gold idols that your own hands have sinfully made. [j]

8 Then Assyria will fall,
but not by human sword;
a sword will devour him,
but not one made by man. [k]

He will flee from the sword;
his young men will be put to forced labor. [l]
9 His rock [m] will pass away because of fear, [n] and his officers will be afraid because of the signal flag. [o]

This is the LORD's declaration — whose fire is in Zion and whose furnace is in Jerusalem. [p]

The Righteous Kingdom Announced

32 Indeed, a king will reign righteously, and rulers will rule justly. [a] 2 Each will be like a shelter from the wind, a refuge from the rain, [b]
like streams of water [c] in a dry land and the shade of a massive rock in an arid land.
3 Then the eyes of those who see will not be closed, and the ears of those who hear will listen. [d] 4 The reckless mind will gain knowledge, and the stammering tongue [e] will speak clearly and fluently.
5 A fool will no longer be called a noble, [f]
nor a scoundrel said to be important.
6 For a fool speaks foolishness and his mind plots iniquity.
He lives in a godless way
and speaks falsely about the LORD.
He leaves the hungry empty and deprives the thirsty of drink. [g] 7 The scoundrel's weapons are destructive;
he hatches plots to destroy the needy with lies,
even when the poor says what is right.
8 But a noble person plans noble things;
he stands up for noble causes.

9 Stand up, you complacent women; [h]
listen to me.
Pay attention to what I say,
you overconfident daughters.
10 In a little more than a year
you overconfident ones will shudder, for the vintage will fail
and the harvest will not come.
11 Shudder, you complacent ones;
tremble, you overconfident ones!
Strip yourselves bare [i]
and put •sackcloth around your waists.
12 Beat your breasts in mourning [j]

for the delightful fields and the fruitful vines, [k] 13 for the ground of my people growing thorns and briers, [l]
indeed, for every joyous house in the joyful city.
14 For the palace will be forsaken,
the busy city abandoned.
The hill and the watchtower will become barren places forever,
the joy of wild donkeys,
and a pasture for flocks,
15 until the Spirit from heaven is poured out on us. [m]
Then the desert will become an orchard, and the orchard will seem like a forest. [n] 16 Then justice will inhabit the wilderness, and righteousness will dwell in the orchard.
17 The result of righteousness will be peace; [o]
the effect of righteousness will be quiet confidence forever.
18 Then my people will dwell in a peaceful place,
in safe and secure dwellings.
19 But hail will level the forest, [A, p]
and the city will sink into the depths. [q] 20 Those who sow seed are happy beside abundant waters; [r]
they let ox and donkey range freely. [s]

The LORD Rises Up

33 Woe, you destroyer never destroyed,
you traitor never betrayed!
When you have finished destroying,
you will be destroyed.
When you have finished betraying,
they will betray you. [a]

2 LORD, be gracious to us! We wait for You. [b]
Be our strength every morning and our salvation in time of trouble. [c] 3 The peoples flee at the thunderous noise; [d]
the nations scatter when You rise in Your majesty.
4 Your spoil will be gathered as locusts are gathered;
people will swarm over it like an infestation of locusts.
5 The LORD is exalted, for He dwells on high;
He has filled •Zion with justice and righteousness.
6 There will be times of security for you —
a storehouse of salvation, wisdom, and knowledge.
The •fear of the LORD is Zion's treasure. [e]

7 Listen! Their warriors cry loudly in the streets;
the messengers of peace weep bitterly. [f]
8 The highways are deserted;
travel has ceased.
An agreement has been broken, [g] cities [h] despised,
and human life disregarded.
9 The land mourns and withers; [i]
Lebanon is ashamed and decayed.
Sharon is like a desert;
Bashan and Carmel shake off their leaves.
10 "Now I will rise up," [j] says the LORD.
"Now I will lift Myself up.
Now I will be exalted.
11 You will conceive chaff; [k]
you will give birth to stubble.
Your breath is fire that will consume you.
12 The peoples will be burned to ashes,

like thorns cut down and burned in a fire.
13 You who are far off, hear what I have done;
you who are near, [l] know My strength.”

14 The sinners in Zion are afraid; trembling seizes the ungodly:
“Who among us can dwell with a consuming fire? [m]
Who among us can dwell with ever-burning flames? ” 15 The one who lives righteously and speaks rightly, [n]
who refuses gain from extortion, whose hand never takes a bribe,
who stops his ears from listening to murderous plots [A]
and shuts his eyes to avoid endorsing evil [B, o] — 16 he will dwell on the heights;
his refuge will be the rocky fortresses,
his food provided, his water assured.

17 Your eyes will see the King in His beauty; [p]
you will see a vast land. [q]
18 Your mind will meditate on the past terror:
“Where is the accountant? [C]
Where is the tribute collector? [D]
Where is the one who spied out our defenses? ” [E] 19 You will no longer see the barbarians, a people whose speech is difficult to comprehend — who stammer in a language that is not understood. [r] 20 Look at Zion, the city of our festival times.
Your eyes will see Jerusalem,
a peaceful pasture, [s] a tent that does not wander;
its tent pegs will not be pulled up nor will any of its cords be loosened. [t] 21 For the majestic One, our LORD, will be there, [u] a place of rivers and broad streams where ships that are rowed will not go,
and majestic vessels will not pass. [v]
22 For the LORD is our Judge, the LORD is our lawgiver, [w]

the LORD is our King.
He will save us. [x]
23 Your ropes are slack;
they cannot hold the base of the mast
or spread out the flag.
Then abundant spoil will be divided,
the lame will plunder it,
24 and none there will say, “I am sick.”
The people who dwell there will be forgiven [y] their iniquity. [z]

The Judgment of the Nations

34 You nations, come here and listen;
you peoples, pay attention! [a]
Let the earth hear, and all that fills it,
the world and all that comes from it. [b] 2 The LORD is angry with all the nations — furious with all their armies. [c]
He will set them apart for destruction, [d] giving them over to slaughter.
3 Their slain will be thrown out,
and the stench of their corpses will rise; [e]
the mountains will flow [A] with their blood. [f]
4 All [g] the heavenly bodies [h] will dissolve.
The skies will roll up like a scroll, [i]
and their stars will all wither
as leaves wither on the vine, and foliage on the fig tree. [j]

The Judgment of Edom

5 When My sword has drunk its fill [k, l] in the heavens, it will then come down on Edom [m]
and on the people I have •set apart for destruction.
6 The LORD's sword is covered with blood.
It drips with fat,
with the blood of lambs and goats,
with the fat of the kidneys of rams. [n]
For the LORD has a sacrifice in Bozrah, [o]
a great slaughter in the land of Edom.
7 The wild oxen will be struck [B] down with them,
and young bulls with the mighty bulls.
Their land will be soaked with [C] blood,
and their soil will be saturated with fat.

8 For the LORD has a day of vengeance, [p] a time of paying back Edom for its hostility against •Zion .
9 Edom's streams will be turned into pitch, her soil into sulfur; [q]
her land will become burning pitch.
10 It will never go out — day or night.
Its smoke will go up forever. [r]
It will be desolate, from generation to generation;
no one will pass through it forever and ever. [s] 11 The desert owl [D] and the screech owl [E] will possess it, and the great owl and the raven will dwell there. [t]
The LORD will stretch out a measuring line and a plumb line over her for her destruction and chaos. [u] 12 No nobles will be left to proclaim a king, and all her princes will come to nothing.
13 Her palaces will be overgrown with thorns;
her fortified cities, with thistles and briers. [v]
She will become a dwelling for jackals, an abode [w] for ostriches. [x]

14 The desert creatures will meet hyenas, and one wild goat will call to another.
Indeed, the screech owl will stay there and will find a resting place for herself.
15 The sand partridge [F] will make her nest there;
she will lay and hatch her eggs
and will gather her brood under her shadow.
Indeed, the birds of prey will gather there,
each with its mate. [y]
16 Search and read the scroll of the LORD: [z]
Not one of them will be missing,
none will be lacking its mate,
because He has ordered it by my [a] mouth,
and He will gather them by His Spirit.
17 He has ordained a lot for them;
His hand allotted their portion with a measuring line.
They will possess it forever; [b]
they will dwell in it from generation to generation.

The Ransomed Return to Zion

35 The wilderness and the dry land will be glad;
the desert will rejoice and blossom like a rose. [A, a, b] 2 It will blossom abundantly and will also rejoice with joy and singing.
The glory of Lebanon will be given to it,
the splendor of Carmel and Sharon. [c]
They will see the glory of the LORD, [d]
the splendor of our God. [e] 3 Strengthen the weak hands, steady the shaking knees! [f]
4 Say to the cowardly:
"Be strong; do not fear!
Here is your God; vengeance is coming. [g]
God's retribution is coming; He will save you." [h]
5 Then the eyes of the blind will be opened,
and the ears of the deaf unstopped. [i] 6 Then the lame will leap like a deer, [j] and the tongue of the mute will sing for joy, [k] for water will gush in the wilderness, and streams in the desert; [l]
7 the parched ground will become a pool of water, and the thirsty land springs of water. [m]
In the haunt of jackals, [n] in their lairs, there will be grass, reeds, and papyrus.
8 A road will be there and a way; [o]
it will be called the Holy Way. [p]
The •unclean will not travel on it, [q]
but it will be for the one who walks the path. [r]
Even the fool will not go astray.
9 There will be no lion there,
and no vicious beast will go up on it;
they will not be found there.
But the redeemed will walk on it,
10 and the redeemed of the LORD will return [s] and come to •Zion with singing,
crowned with unending joy.

Joy and gladness will overtake them,
and sorrow and sighing will flee. [t]

Sennacherib's Invasion

36 In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, [a] Sennacherib king of Assyria attacked all the fortified cities of Judah and captured them. 2 Then the king of Assyria sent the •Rabshakeh , along with a massive army, from Lachish [b] to King Hezekiah at Jerusalem. The Assyrian stood near the conduit of the upper pool, by the road to the Fuller's Field. [c] 3 Eliakim son of Hilkiah, who was in charge of the palace, Shebna the court secretary, [d] and Joah son of Asaph, the court historian, came out to him.

4 The Rabshakeh said to them, "Tell Hezekiah:

The great king, the king of Assyria, says this: What are you relying on? [A] 5 I [e] say that your strategy and military preparedness are mere words. What are you now relying on that you have rebelled against me? [f] 6 Look, you are trusting in Egypt, that splintered reed of a staff [g] that will enter and pierce the hand of anyone who leans on it. This is how Pharaoh king of Egypt is to all who trust in him. [h] 7 Suppose you say to me, 'We trust in the LORD our God.'
Isn't He the One whose •high places and altars Hezekiah has removed, saying to Judah and Jerusalem, 'You are to worship at this altar'? [i]

8 Now make a deal with my master, the king of Assyria. I'll give you
2,000 horses if you're able to supply riders for them! 9 How then can you drive back a single officer among the weakest of my master's officers and trust in Egypt for chariots and horsemen? [j] 10 Have I attacked this land to destroy it without the LORD's approval? The LORD said to me, 'Attack this land and destroy it.' "

11 Then Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah said to the Rabshakeh, "Please speak to your servants in Aramaic, [k] since we understand it. Don't speak to us in Hebrew [B] within earshot of the people who are on the wall."

12 But the Rabshakeh replied, "Has my master sent me to speak these words to your master and to you, and not to the men who are sitting on the wall, who are destined with you to eat their own excrement and drink their own urine? "

13 Then the Rabshakeh stood and called out loudly in Hebrew: [C]

Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria! 14 This is what the king says: "Don't let Hezekiah deceive you, [l] for he cannot deliver you. 15 Don't let Hezekiah persuade you to trust in the LORD, saying, 'The LORD will certainly deliver us! This city will not be handed over to the king of Assyria.' "

16 Don't listen to Hezekiah, for this is what the king of Assyria says:

> “Make peace [D] with me and surrender to me. Then every one of you > may eat from his own vine and his own fig tree [m] and drink water from > his own cistern [17] until I come and take you away to a land like your > own land — a land of grain and new wine, a land of bread and > vineyards. [18] Beware that Hezekiah does not mislead you by saying,
> ‘The LORD will deliver us.’ [n] Has any one of the gods of the nations [o] > delivered his land from the power of the king of Assyria? [19] Where are > the gods of Hamath and Arpad? [p] Where are the gods of Sepharvaim?
> Have they delivered Samaria from my power? [q] [20] Who among all the > gods of these lands ever delivered his land from my power? So will the > LORD deliver Jerusalem.”

[21] But they kept silent; they didn’t say anything, for the king’s command was, “Don’t answer him.” [r] [22] Then Eliakim son of Hilkiah, who was in charge of the palace, Shebna the court secretary, and Joah son of Asaph, the court historian, came to Hezekiah with their clothes torn and reported to him the words of the Rabshakeh.

Hezekiah Seeks Isaiah's Counsel

37 When King Hezekiah heard their report, [a] he tore his clothes, put on •sackcloth , [b] and went to the LORD*'s temple.* [2] Then he sent Eliakim, who was in charge of the palace, Shebna the court secretary, and the leading priests, who were wearing sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz. [3] They said to him, "This is what Hezekiah says: 'Today is a day of distress, rebuke, and disgrace, [c] for children have come to the point of birth, and there is no strength to deliver them. [d] [4] Perhaps •Yahweh your God will hear all the words of the •Rabshakeh , whom his master the king of Assyria sent to mock the living God, [e] and will rebuke him for the words that Yahweh your God has heard. Therefore offer a prayer for the surviving remnant.' " [f]

[5] So the servants of King Hezekiah went to Isaiah, [6] who said to them, "Tell your master this, 'The LORD says: Don't be afraid [g] because of the words you have heard, which the king of Assyria's attendants have blasphemed Me with. [h] [7] I am about to put a spirit [i] in him and he will hear a rumor and return to his own land, where I will cause him to fall by the sword.' " [j]

Sennacherib's Letter

[8] When the Rabshakeh heard that the king of Assyria had left Lachish, [k] he returned and found him fighting against Libnah. [l] [9] The king had heard this about Tirhakah king of •Cush : [m] "He has set out to fight against you." So when he heard this, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, [10] "Say this to Hezekiah king of Judah: 'Don't let your God, whom you trust, deceive you [n] by promising that Jerusalem won't be handed over to the king of Assyria. [11] Look, you have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the countries: they •completely destroyed them. Will you be rescued? [12] Did the gods of the nations [o] that my predecessors destroyed rescue them — Gozan, [p] Haran, [q] Rezeph, and the Edenites in Telassar? [13] Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arpad, the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena, or Ivvah? ' "

Hezekiah's Prayer

[14] Hezekiah took the letter from the messengers, read it, then went up to the LORD's temple and spread it out before the LORD. [r] [15] Then Hezekiah prayed [s] to the LORD:

[16] LORD of •Hosts , God of Israel, who is enthroned above the •cherubim , [t] You are God [u] — You alone [v] — of all the kingdoms of the earth. [w] You made the heavens and the earth. [x] [17] Listen closely, LORD, and hear; [y] open

Your eyes, LORD, and see. [z] Hear all the words that Sennacherib has sent to mock the living God. [a] 18 LORD, it is true that the kings of Assyria have devastated all these countries and their lands. 19 They have thrown their gods into the fire, for they were not gods [b] but made by human hands [c] — wood and stone. [d] So they have destroyed them. 20 Now, LORD our God, save us from his power so that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that You are the LORD [e] — You alone. [f]

God's Answer through Hezekiah 21 Then Isaiah son of Amoz sent a message to Hezekiah: "The LORD, the God of Israel, says: 'Because you prayed to Me about Sennacherib king of Assyria, 22 this is the word the LORD has spoken against him:

Virgin Daughter •Zion [g]
despises you and scorns you:
Daughter Jerusalem shakes her head [h] behind your back. [A] 23 Who is it you have mocked [i] and blasphemed?
Who have you raised your voice against and lifted your eyes in pride? [j]
Against the Holy One of Israel! [k]
24 You have mocked the LORD through [B] your servants.
You have said, "With my many chariots [l]
I have gone up to the heights of the mountains, to the far recesses of Lebanon.
I cut down its tallest cedars,
its choice cypress trees.
I came to its distant heights,
its densest forest.
25 I dug wells [m] and drank water.
I dried up all the streams of Egypt with the soles of my feet." [n]

26 Have you not heard? [o]
I designed it long ago;
I planned it in days gone by. [p]
I have now brought it to pass, and you have crushed fortified cities [q]
into piles of rubble.

27 Their inhabitants have become powerless, dismayed, and ashamed.
They are plants of the field,
tender grass,
grass on the rooftops,
blasted by the east wind. [r]

28 But I know [s] your sitting down, your going out and your coming in, [t]
and your raging against Me.
29 Because your raging against Me and your arrogance have reached My ears, [u] I will put My hook in your nose [v]
and My bit in your mouth; [w] I will make you go back
the way you came.

30 " 'This will be the sign for you: [x] This year you will eat what grows on its own, and in the second year what grows from that. But in the third year sow and reap, plant vineyards and eat their fruit. 31 The surviving remnant of the house of Judah will again take root [y] downward and bear fruit upward. 32 For a remnant [z] will go out from Jerusalem and survivors, from Mount Zion. The zeal of the LORD of Hosts will accomplish this.' [a]

33 "Therefore, this is what the LORD says about the king of Assyria:
He will not enter this city or shoot an arrow there or come before it with a shield or build up an assault ramp against it.
34 He will go back
the way he came,
and he will not enter this city.
This is the LORD's declaration.

35 I will defend this city and rescue it because of Me [b] and because of My servant David." [c]

Defeat and Death of Sennacherib 36 Then [d] the angel of the LORD [e] went out and struck down 185,000 in the camp of the Assyrians. When the people got up the next morning — there were all the dead bodies! [37] So Sennacherib king of Assyria broke camp and left. He returned home and lived in Nineveh. [f]

[38] One day, while he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer struck him down with the sword and escaped to the land of Ararat. [g] Then his son Esar-haddon [h] became king in his place.

Hezekiah's Illness and Recovery

38 In those days Hezekiah became terminally ill. [a] The prophet Isaiah son of Amoz came and said to him, “This is what the Lord says: ‘Put your affairs in order, [A, b] for you are about to die; you will not recover.’ ” [B]
2 Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord. 3 He said, “Please, Lord, remember how I have walked before You faithfully and wholeheartedly, [c] and have done what pleases You.” [C, d] And Hezekiah wept bitterly.
4 Then the word of the Lord came to Isaiah: 5 “Go and tell Hezekiah that this is what the Lord God of your ancestor David says: I have heard your prayer; I have seen your tears. Look, I am going to add 15 years to your life. [D, e 6] And I will deliver you and this city from the power of the king of Assyria; I will defend this city. [f 7] This is the sign to you [g] from the Lord that He will do what [E] He has promised: [F 8] I am going to make the sun’s shadow that goes down on Ahaz’s stairway go back by 10 steps.” [h] So the sun’s shadow [G] went back the 10 steps it had descended.
9 A poem by Hezekiah king of Judah after he had been sick and had recovered from his illness:
10 I said: In the prime [H] of my life [I, i]
I must go to the gates of •Sheol ; [j]
I am deprived of the rest of my years.
11 I said: I will never see the Lord,
the Lord in the land of the living; [k]
I will not look on humanity any longer with the inhabitants of what is passing away. [l] 12 My dwelling is plucked up and removed from me like a shepherd’s tent. [m]
I have rolled up my life like a weaver; [n]
He cuts me off from the loom. [J, o]
You make an end of me from day until night. [p]
13 I thought until the morning:
He will break all my bones like a lion;
You make an end of me day and night.
14 I chirp like a swallow or a crane;
I moan like a dove. [q]
My eyes grow weak looking upward.
Lord, I am oppressed; support me. [r]

15 What can I say?
He has spoken to me,
and He Himself has done it.
I walk along slowly all my years [s]
because of the bitterness of my soul, [t] 16 Lord, because of these promises people live, [u]
and in all of them is the life of my spirit as well;
You have restored me to health [v]
and let me live. [w]
17 Indeed, it was for my own welfare that I had such great bitterness; [x]
but Your love has delivered me from the •Pit of destruction, [y] for You have thrown all my sins behind Your back. [z] 18 For Sheol cannot thank You;
Death cannot praise You. [a]
Those who go down to the Pit cannot hope for Your faithfulness.
19 The living, only the living can thank You,
as I do today;
a father will make Your faithfulness known to children. [b] 20 The LORD will [K] save me;
we will play stringed instruments
all the days of our lives
at the house of the LORD. [c]

21 Now Isaiah [d] had said, “Let them take a lump of pressed figs and apply it to his infected skin, so that he may recover.” 22 And Hezekiah had asked, “What is the sign that I will go up to the LORD’s temple? ”

Hezekiah's Folly

39 At that time [a] Merodach-baladan son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a gift to Hezekiah since he heard that he had been sick and had recovered. 2 Hezekiah was pleased with them, and showed them his treasure house — the silver, the gold, the spices, and the precious oil — and all his armory, and everything that was found in his treasuries. [b] There was nothing in his palace and in all his realm that Hezekiah did not show them. [c]

3 Then the prophet Isaiah came to King Hezekiah and asked him, "Where did these men come from and what did they say to you? "

Hezekiah replied, "They came to me from a distant country, from Babylon."

4 Isaiah asked, "What have they seen in your palace? "

Hezekiah answered, "They have seen everything in my palace. There isn't anything in my treasuries that I didn't show them."

5 Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, "Hear the word of the LORD of •Hosts : [d] 6 'The time will certainly come when everything in your palace and all that your fathers have stored up until this day will be carried off to Babylon; nothing will be left,' says the LORD. [e] 7 'Some of your descendants who come from you will be taken away, and they will become eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.' "

8 Then Hezekiah said to Isaiah, "The word of the LORD that you have spoken is good," for he thought: There will be peace and security during my lifetime. [f]

God’s People Comforted

40 “Comfort, comfort My people,” [a]
says your God.
2 “Speak tenderly to [A] Jerusalem, and announce to her
that her time of forced labor is over,
her iniquity [b] has been pardoned, [c] and she has received from the Lord’s hand double for all her sins.” [d]

3 A voice of one crying out:

Prepare the way of the Lord in the wilderness; [e]
make a straight highway for our God in the desert. [f] 4 Every valley will be lifted up,
and every mountain and hill will be leveled;
the uneven ground will become smooth and the rough places, a plain. [g] 5 And the glory of the Lord will appear, [h] and all humanity [B] together will see it, [i] for the mouth of the Lord has spoken. [j]

6 A voice was saying, “Cry out! ”
Another [k] said, “What should I cry out? ”
“All humanity is grass, [l] and all its goodness is like the flower of the field. [m] 7 The grass withers, the flowers fade when the breath [C] of the Lord blows on them; [D] indeed, the people are grass.
8 The grass withers, the flowers fade, [n]
but the word of our God remains forever.” [o]

9 •Zion , herald of good news, go up on a high mountain. [p]
Jerusalem, herald of good news, [q] raise your voice loudly.
Raise it, do not be afraid!
Say to the cities of Judah,
“Here is your God! ” [r]

10 See, the Lord God comes with strength, and His power establishes His rule. [s]
His reward is with Him, [t]
and His gifts accompany Him.
11 He protects His flock like a shepherd; [u]
He gathers the lambs in His arms and carries them in the fold of His garment.
He gently leads those that are nursing.

12 Who has measured the waters in the hollow of his hand or marked off the heavens with the span of his hand? [v]
Who has gathered the dust of the earth in a measure or weighed the mountains in a balance and the hills in the scales?
13 Who has directed [E] the Spirit of the Lord, or who gave Him His counsel? [w] 14 Who did He consult with?
Who gave Him understanding [x]
and taught Him the paths of justice?
Who taught Him knowledge and showed Him the way of understanding?
15 Look, the nations are like a drop in a bucket;
they are considered as a speck of dust in the scales;
He lifts up the islands like fine dust.
16 Lebanon is not enough for fuel,
or its animals enough for a •burnt offering. [y] 17 All the nations are as nothing before Him;
they are considered by Him
as nothingness and emptiness. [z]

18 Who will you compare God with?
What likeness will you compare Him to? [a] 19 To an idol? — something that a smelter casts, and a metalworker plates with gold and makes silver welds for it? [b] 20 To one who shapes a pedestal, choosing wood that does not rot? [F]
He looks for a skilled craftsman to set up an idol that will not fall over. [c]

21 Do you not know? [d]
Have you not heard?
Has it not been declared to you from the beginning?
Have you not considered
the foundations of the earth? [e] 22 God is enthroned above the circle of the earth;
its inhabitants are like grasshoppers. [f]
He stretches out the heavens like thin cloth [g]
and spreads them out like a tent to live in. [h] 23 He reduces princes to nothing [i]
and makes judges of the earth irrational.
24 They are barely planted, barely sown, their stem hardly takes root in the ground
when He blows on them and they wither,
and a whirlwind carries them away like stubble. [j]

25 "Who will you compare Me to, [k] or who is My equal? " asks the Holy One.
26 Look up [G] and see:
who created [l] these?
He brings out the starry host by number;
He calls all of them by name. [m]
Because of His great power and strength, not one of them is missing.

27 Jacob, why do you say,
and Israel, why do you assert:
"My way is hidden from the LORD,
and my claim is ignored by my God"? [n]
28 Do you not know?
Have you not heard?
•Yahweh is the everlasting God, [o]
the Creator of the whole earth.
He never grows faint or weary;
there is no limit to His understanding. [p] 29 He gives strength to the weary and strengthens the powerless.

30 Youths may faint and grow weary,
and young men stumble and fall, 31 but those who trust in the LORD will renew their strength; [q]
they will soar on wings like eagles; [r]
they will run and not grow weary;
they will walk and not faint.

The LORD versus the Nations' Gods

41 “Be silent before Me, islands! [a]
And let peoples renew their strength.
Let them approach, then let them testify;
let us come together for the trial.
2 Who has stirred him up from the east? [b]
He calls righteousness to his feet. [A, c]
The LORD hands nations over to him, [d]
and he subdues kings.
He makes them like dust with his sword,
like wind-driven stubble with his bow.
3 He pursues them, going on safely,
hardly touching the path with his feet.
4 Who has performed and done this,
calling the generations from the beginning?
I, •Yahweh , am the first,
and with the last [e] — I am He.” [f]

5 The islands see and are afraid, the whole earth trembles. [g]
They approach and arrive.
6 Each one helps the other,
and says to another, “Take courage! ”
7 The craftsman encourages the metalworker; [h]
the one who flattens with the hammer supports the one who strikes the anvil, saying of the soldering, “It is good.”
He fastens it with nails so that it will not fall over. [i]

8 But you, Israel, My servant, [j]
Jacob, whom I have chosen, [k] descendant of Abraham, My friend [l] — 9 I brought [B] you from the ends of the earth and called you from its farthest corners.
I said to you: You are My servant;
I have chosen you and not rejected you. [m]
10 Do not fear, for I am with you; [n]
do not be afraid, for I am your God. [o]

I will strengthen you; I will help you;
I will hold on to you with My righteous right hand. [p]

11 Be sure that all who are enraged against you will be ashamed and disgraced; [q]
those who contend with you will become as nothing and will perish.
12 You will look for those who contend with you,
but you will not find them.
Those who war against you will become absolutely nothing.
13 For I, Yahweh your God, [r] hold your right hand and say to you: Do not fear,
I will help you.
14 Do not fear, you worm Jacob, [s]
you men [t] of Israel:
I will help you —
Your Redeemer [u] is the Holy One of Israel. [v] this is the LORD's declaration.
15 See, I will make you into a sharp threshing board, new, with many teeth.
You will thresh mountains and pulverize them
and make hills into chaff. [w] 16 You will winnow them [x] and a wind will carry them away,
a gale will scatter them.
But you will rejoice in the LORD;
you will boast in the Holy One of Israel.

17 The poor and the needy seek water, but there is none;
their tongues are parched with thirst.
I, Yahweh, will answer them; [y]
I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them.
18 I will open rivers on the barren heights, [z]
and springs in the middle of the plains.
I will turn the desert into a pool of water and dry land into springs of water. [a] 19 I will plant cedars in the desert,

acacias, myrtles, and olive trees. [b]
I will put juniper trees in the desert,
elms and cypress trees together, 20 so that all may see and know,
consider and understand,
that the hand of the LORD has done this, [c]
the Holy One of Israel has created [d] it.

21 "Submit your case," says the LORD.
"Present your arguments," says Jacob's King.
22 "Let them come and tell us what will happen. [e]
Tell us the past events,
so that we may reflect on them
and know the outcome,
or tell us the future.
23 Tell us the coming events, [f]
then we will know that you are gods.
Indeed, do something good or bad,
then we will be in awe [g] and perceive.
24 Look, you are nothing [h] and your work is worthless.
Anyone who chooses you is detestable.

25 "I have raised up one from the north, [i] and he has come,
one from the east [j] who invokes My [k] name. [l]
He will march over rulers as if they were mud,
like a potter who treads the clay.
26 Who told about this from the beginning,
so that we might know,
and from times past,
so that we might say: He is right?
No one announced it,
no one told it,
no one heard your words.
27 I was the first to say to •Zion : [C]
Look! Here they are!
And I gave a herald of good news to Jerusalem. [m]

28 When I look, there is no one;
there is no counselor among them;
when I ask them, they have nothing to say. [n] 29 Look, all of them are a delusion; [o] their works are nonexistent;
their images are wind and emptiness.

The Servant's Mission

42 “This [a] is My Servant; [b] I strengthen Him, this is My Chosen One; [c] I delight in Him. [d]
I have put My Spirit on Him; [e]
He will bring justice [f] to the nations. [g]
2 He will not cry out or shout or make His voice heard in the streets.
3 He will not break a bruised reed,
and He will not put out a smoldering wick;
He will faithfully bring justice.
4 He will not grow weak or be discouraged until He has established justice on earth.
The islands will wait for His instruction.” [h]

5 This is what God •Yahweh says — who created the heavens and stretched them out, [i] who spread out the earth and what comes from it, [j] who gives breath to the people on it and life [A] to those who walk on it [k] — 6 “I, Yahweh, have called You for a righteous purpose, [B, l] and I will hold You by Your hand. [m]
I will keep You and appoint You to be a covenant for the people [n]
and a light to the nations, [o] 7 in order to open blind eyes, [p] to bring out prisoners from the dungeon, [q]
and those sitting in darkness from the prison house.
8 I am Yahweh, that is My name;
I will not give My glory to another [r]
or My praise to idols.
9 The past events have indeed happened.
Now I declare new events; [s]
I announce them to you before they occur.”

A Song of Praise

10 Sing a new song to the LORD; [t] sing His praise from the ends of the earth, you who go down to the sea with all that fills it, [u]
you islands with your C inhabitants.
11 Let the desert and its cities shout,
the settlements where Kedar dwells cry aloud. [v]
Let the inhabitants of Sela sing for joy; [w]
let them cry out from the mountaintops.
12 Let them give glory to the LORD and declare His praise in the islands.
13 The LORD advances like a warrior;
He stirs up His zeal like a soldier. [x]
He shouts, He roars aloud,
He prevails over His enemies.

14 "I have kept silent from ages past;
I have been quiet and restrained Myself. [y]
But now, I will groan like a woman in labor, [z] gasping breathlessly.
15 I will lay waste mountains and hills and dry up all their vegetation.
I will turn rivers into islands and dry up marshes. [a] 16 I will lead the blind by a way they did not know; [b]
I will guide them on paths they have not known.
I will turn darkness to light in front of them [c]
and rough places into level ground. [d]
This is what I will do for them, and I will not forsake them. [e] 17 They will be turned back and utterly ashamed — those who trust in idols
and say to metal-plated images:
You are our gods! [f]

Israel's Blindness and Deafness

18 “Listen, you deaf!
Look, you blind, so that you may see. [g]
19 Who is blind but My servant, [h] or deaf like My messenger I am sending?
Who is blind like My dedicated one, [D] or blind like the servant of the LORD?
20 Though seeing many things, [i] you do not obey.
Though his ears are open, he does not listen.” [j]

21 The LORD was pleased, because of His righteousness, to magnify His instruction and make it glorious.
22 But this is a people plundered and looted,
all of them trapped in holes or imprisoned in dungeons.
They have become plunder [k]
with no one to rescue them
and loot, with no one saying, “Give it back! ” 23 Who among you will pay attention to this?
Let him listen and obey in the future.
24 Who gave Jacob to the robber, [E]
and Israel to the plunderers?
Was it not the LORD?
Have we not sinned against Him?
They were not willing to walk in His ways,
and they would not listen to His instruction.
25 So He poured out on Jacob His furious anger and the power of war.
It surrounded him with fire, but he did not know it;
it burned him, but he paid no attention. [F, l]

Restoration of Israel

43 Now this is what the LORD says —
the One who created you, Jacob, and the One who formed you, Israel [a] —
"Do not fear, for I have redeemed you; [b]
I have called you by your name; you are Mine. [c]
2 I will be with you [d]
when you pass through the waters, [e]
and when you pass through the rivers, they will not overwhelm you.
You will not be scorched
when you walk through the fire, [f]
and the flame will not burn you.
3 For I •Yahweh your God, [g]
the Holy One of Israel, and your Savior, [h] give Egypt as a ransom for you, •Cush and Seba in your place.
4 Because you are precious in My sight [i] and honored, and I love you, [j]
I will give people in exchange for you and nations instead of your life.
5 Do not fear, for I am with you;
I will bring your descendants from the east, [k]
and gather you from the west. [l]
6 I will say to the north: Give them up!
and to the south: Do not hold them back!
Bring My sons from far away, [m] and My daughters from the ends of the earth [n] — 7 everyone called by My name and created for My glory.
I have formed him; indeed, I have made him."

8 Bring out a people who are blind, yet have eyes, [o]
and are deaf, yet have ears.
9 All the nations are gathered together,
and the peoples are assembled. [p]
Who among them can declare this, [q]
and tell us the former things?

Let them present their witnesses to vindicate themselves,
so that people may hear and say, “It is true.”
10 “You are My witnesses” [r] —
“and My servant whom I have chosen, [s] this is the LORD’s declaration — so that you may know and believe Me and understand that I am He. [t]
No god was formed before Me,
and there will be none after Me. [u] 11 I, I am Yahweh,
and there is no other Savior but Me. [v] 12 I alone declared, saved, and proclaimed — and not some foreign god [A] among you.
So you are My witnesses” —
“and [B] I am God. [w] this is the LORD’s declaration — 13 Also, from today on I am He alone, and none can deliver from My hand. [x]
I act, and who can reverse it? ” [y]

God’s Deliverance of Rebellious Israel 14 This is what the LORD, your Redeemer, [z] the Holy One of Israel [a] says:

Because of you, I will send to Babylon and bring all of them as fugitives, [C]
even the Chaldeans [b] in the ships in which they rejoice. [D] 15 I am Yahweh, your Holy One,
the Creator of Israel, your King.

16 This is what the LORD says —
who makes a way in the sea,
and a path through surging waters, [c] 17 who brings out the chariot and horse, [d]
the army and the mighty one together (they lie down, they do not rise again;
they are extinguished, quenched like a wick [e]) — 18 “Do not remember the past events, pay no attention to things of old. [f]
19 Look, I am about to do something new; [g]

even now it is coming. Do you not see it?
Indeed, I will make a way in the wilderness, [h] rivers [i] in the desert.
20 The animals of the field will honor Me, jackals and ostriches,
because I provide water in the wilderness,
and rivers in the desert, [j]
to give drink to My chosen people.
21 The people I formed for Myself will declare My praise. [k]

22 "But Jacob, you have not called on Me, because, Israel, you have become weary of Me. [l] 23 You have not brought Me your sheep for •burnt offerings or honored Me with your sacrifices. [m]
I have not burdened you with offerings or wearied you with incense. [n] 24 You have not bought Me aromatic cane with silver, or satisfied Me with the fat of your sacrifices.
But you have burdened Me with your sins;
you have wearied Me [o] with your iniquities. [p]

25 "It is I who sweep away your transgressions [q]
for My own sake [r]
and remember your sins no more. [s]
26 Take Me to court; let us argue our case together. [t]
State your case, so that you may be vindicated.
27 Your first father sinned, [u]
and your mediators have rebelled against Me. [v] 28 So I defiled the officers of the sanctuary, and •set Jacob apart for destruction [w]
and Israel for abuse.

Spiritual Blessing

44 “And now listen, Jacob My servant,
Israel whom I have chosen. [a] 2 This is the word of the Lord your Maker who formed you from the womb;
He [A] will help you:
Do not fear; Jacob is My servant;
I have chosen Jeshurun. [b, c]
3 For I will pour water on the thirsty land and streams on the dry ground;
I will pour out My Spirit [d] on your descendants and My blessing on your offspring.
4 They will sprout among [e] the grass like poplars by flowing streams.
5 This one will say, ‘I am the Lord’s’;
another will call himself by the name of Jacob;
still another will write on his hand, ‘The Lord’s,’
and name himself by the name of Israel.”

No God Other Than Yahweh

6 This is what the LORD, the King of Israel and its Redeemer, [f] the LORD of •Hosts , says:

I am the first and I am the last. [g]
There is no God but Me. [h]
7 Who, like Me, can announce the future?
Let him say so and make a case before Me, [i] since I have established an ancient people.
Let these gods declare [B] the coming things,
and what will take place.
8 Do not be startled or afraid.
Have I not told you and declared it long ago?
You are my witnesses! [j]
Is there any God but Me? [k]
There is no other Rock; [l] I do not know any.

9 All who make idols are nothing,
and what they treasure does not profit.
Their witnesses do not see or know anything,
so they will be put to shame. [m] 10 Who makes a god or casts a metal image for no profit? [n]
11 Look, all its worshipers will be put to shame,
and the craftsmen are humans.
They all will assemble and stand;
they all will be startled and put to shame.

12 The ironworker labors over the coals, shapes the idol with hammers,
and works it with his strong arm.
Also he grows hungry and his strength fails;
he doesn't drink water and is faint.
13 The woodworker stretches out a measuring line,
he outlines it with a stylus;
he shapes it with chisels
and outlines it with a compass.
He makes it according to a human likeness, [o]

like a beautiful person,
to dwell in a temple.
14 He cuts down [C] cedars for his use,
or he takes a cypress or an oak.
He lets it grow strong among the trees of the forest.
He plants a laurel, and the rain makes it grow.
15 It serves as fuel for man.
He takes some of it and warms himself;
also he kindles a fire and bakes bread;
he even makes it into a god and worships it;
he makes an idol from it and bows down to it.
16 He burns half of it in a fire,
and he roasts meat on that half.
He eats the roast and is satisfied.
He warms himself and says, “Ah!
I am warm, I see the blaze.”
17 He makes a god or his idol with the rest of it.
He bows down to it and worships;
He prays to it, [p] “Save me, for you are my god.”
18 Such people [D] do not comprehend and cannot understand,
for He has shut their eyes [E] so they cannot see,
and their minds so they cannot understand.
19 No one reflects,
no one has the perception or insight to say,
“I burned half of it in the fire,
I also baked bread on its coals,
I roasted meat and ate.
I will make something detestable [q] with the rest of it, and I will bow down to a block of wood.”
20 He feeds on [F] ashes.
His deceived mind has led him astray,
and he cannot deliver himself,
or say, “Isn’t there a lie in my right hand? ” [r]

21 Remember these things, Jacob,
and Israel, for you are My servant;
I formed you, you are My servant;

Israel, you will never be forgotten by Me. [s, t]
22 I have swept away your transgressions like a cloud, [u]
and your sins like a mist.
Return to Me, [v]
for I have redeemed you. [w] 23 Rejoice, heavens, [x] for the LORD has acted;
shout, depths of the earth.
Break out into singing, mountains,
forest, and every tree in it.
For the LORD has redeemed Jacob,
and glorifies Himself through Israel. [y]

Restoration of Israel through Cyrus

24 This is what •Yahweh , your Redeemer [z] who formed you from the womb, [a] says:

I am Yahweh, who made everything;
who stretched out the heavens by Myself; [b]
who alone spread out the earth;
25 who destroys the omens of the false prophets and makes fools of diviners;
who confounds the wise
and makes their knowledge foolishness; [c] 26 who confirms the message of His servant and fulfills the counsel of His messengers;
who says to Jerusalem, “She will be inhabited,”
and to the cities of Judah, “They will be rebuilt,”
and I will restore her ruins;
27 who says to the depths of the sea, “Be dry,”
and I will dry up your rivers;
28 who says to Cyrus, [d] “My shepherd,
he will fulfill all My pleasure” [e]
and says to Jerusalem, “She will be rebuilt,” [f]
and of the temple, “Its foundation will be laid.”

45 The LORD says this to Cyrus, His anointed, [a] whose right hand I have grasped [b]
to subdue nations before him, to disarm [A] kings, [c]
to open the doors before him and the gates will not be shut:
2 "I will go before you
and level the uneven places; [d, e]
I will shatter the bronze doors and cut the iron bars in two. [f] 3 I will give you the treasures of darkness and riches from secret places, [g]
so that you may know that I, •Yahweh ,
the God of Israel call you by your name. [h] 4 I call you by your name, because of Jacob My servant [i]
and Israel My chosen one.
I give a name to you,
though you do not know Me.
5 I am Yahweh, and there is no other; [j]
there is no God but Me. [k]
I will strengthen [B] you,
though you do not know Me,
6 so that all may know from the rising of the sun to its setting that there is no one but Me. [l]
I am Yahweh, and there is no other.
7 I form light and create darkness, [m]
I make success and create disaster; [n]
I, Yahweh, do all these things.

8 "Heavens, sprinkle from above, and let the skies shower righteousness. [o]
Let the earth open up
so that salvation will sprout and righteousness will spring up with it. [p]
I, Yahweh, have created it.

9 “Woe to the one who argues with his Maker —
one clay pot among many. C
Does clay say to the one forming it,
‘What are you making?’ q
Or does your work say,
‘He has no hands’? D
10 How absurd is the one who says to his father,
‘What are you fathering?’
or to his mother,
‘What are you giving birth to? ’ ”
11 This is what the Lord,
the Holy One of Israel r and its Maker, says:
“Ask Me what is to happen to E My sons, s and instruct Me about the work of My hands. t 12 I made the earth,
and created man on it.
It was My hands that stretched out the heavens, u
and I commanded all their host.
13 I have raised him up in righteousness, v
and will level all roads for him.
He will rebuild My city, w and set My exiles free, x not for a price or a bribe,”
says the Lord of •Hosts .

God Alone is the Savior

14 This is what the LORD says:
The products of Egypt and the merchandise of •Cush and the Sabeans, men of stature, [y] will come over to you [z]
and will be yours;
they will follow you,
they will come over in chains
and bow down to you.
They will confess [F] to you:
God is indeed with you, [a] and there is no other;
there is no other God.

15 Yes, You are a God who hides Himself, [b]
God of Israel, Savior. [c]
16 All of them are put to shame, even humiliated; [d]
the makers of idols go in humiliation together.
17 Israel will be saved by the LORD with an everlasting salvation;
you will not be put to shame or humiliated
for all eternity. [e]

18 For this is what the LORD says —
God is the Creator of the heavens.
He formed the earth and made it.
He established it;
He did not create it to be empty,
but formed it to be inhabited [f] —
"I am Yahweh,
and there is no other.
19 I have not spoken in secret, [g]
somewhere in a land of darkness.
I did not say to the descendants of Jacob:
Seek Me in a wasteland. [h]
I, Yahweh, speak truthfully; [i]
I say what is right.

20 "Come, gather together,

and draw near, you fugitives of the nations.
Those who carry their wooden idols,
and pray to a god who cannot save, [j]
have no knowledge. [k]
21 Speak up and present your case [G, l] —
yes, let them take counsel together.
Who predicted this long ago?
Who announced it from ancient times?
Was it not I, Yahweh?
There is no other God but Me,
a righteous God and Savior; [m]
there is no one except Me. [n] 22 Turn to Me and be saved,
all the ends of the earth.
For I am God,
and there is no other.
23 By Myself I have sworn; [o]
Truth has gone from My mouth, [p] a word that will not be revoked:
Every knee will bow [q] to Me,
every tongue will swear allegiance.
24 It will be said to Me: Righteousness and strength is only in the LORD.”
All who are enraged against Him will come to Him and be put to shame. [r] 25 All the descendants of Israel will be justified and find glory through the LORD.

There is No One Like God

46 Bel crouches; Nebo cowers. [a]
Their idols are consigned to beasts and cattle.
The images you carry are loaded,
as a burden for the weary animal.
2 The gods cower; they crouch together;
they are not able to rescue the burden,
but they themselves go into captivity. [b]

3 “Listen to Me, house of Jacob,
all the remnant of the house of Israel,
who have been sustained from the womb,
carried along since birth.
4 I will be the same until your old age, [c]
and I will bear you up when you turn gray.
I have made you, and I will carry you;
I will bear and save you.

5 “Who will you compare Me or make Me equal to?
Who will you measure Me with,
so that we should be like each other? [d] 6 Those who pour out their bags of gold and weigh out silver on scales —
they hire a goldsmith and he makes it into a god.
Then they kneel and bow down to it. [e]
7 They lift it to their shoulder and bear it along; [f]
they set it in its place, and there it stands; it does not budge from its place. [g]
They cry out to it but it doesn’t answer;
it saves no one from his trouble.

8 “Remember this and be brave; [A] take it to heart, you transgressors!
9 Remember what happened long ago, [h]
for I am God, and there is no other;
I am God, and no one is like Me.
10 I declare the end from the beginning,
and from long ago what is not yet done,
saying: My plan will take place,
and I will do all My will. [i]

11 I call a bird of prey [j] from the east, [k]
a man for My purpose from a far country.
Yes, I have spoken; so I will also bring it about. [l]
I have planned it; I will also do it.
12 Listen to me, you hardhearted,
far removed from justice:
13 I am bringing My justice near; [m]
it is not far away,
and My salvation will not delay.
I will put salvation in •Zion ,
My splendor in Israel.

The Fall of Babylon

47 “Go down and sit in the dust, [a]
Virgin Daughter Babylon. [b]
Sit on the ground without a throne,
Daughter Chaldea!
For you will no longer be called pampered and spoiled.
2 Take millstones and grind meal; [c]
remove your veil,
strip off your skirt, bare your thigh,
wade through the streams.
3 Your nakedness will be uncovered, and your shame will be exposed. [d]
I will take vengeance;
I will spare no one. [A]
4 The Holy One of Israel is our Redeemer; [e] •Yahweh of •Hosts is His name.

5 “Daughter Chaldea,
sit in silence [f] and go into darkness.
For you will no longer be called mistress of kingdoms.
6 I was angry with My people;
I profaned My possession,
and I placed them under your control.
You showed them no mercy;
you made your yoke very heavy on the elderly.
7 You said, ‘I will be the mistress forever.’
You did not take these things to heart or think about their outcome.

8 “So now hear this, lover of luxury, who sits securely, [g]
who says to herself,
‘I exist, and there is no one else.
I will never be a widow or know the loss of children.’ [h] 9 These two things will happen to you suddenly, in one day:
loss of children and widowhood.
They will happen to you in their entirety,

in spite of your many sorceries [i]
and the potency of your spells.
10 You were secure in your wickedness;
you said, ‘No one sees me.’ [j]
Your wisdom and knowledge led you astray.
You said to yourself,
‘I exist, and there is no one else.’
11 But disaster will happen to you;
you will not know how to avert it.
And it will fall on you,
but you will be unable to ward it off. [B] Devastation will happen to you suddenly and unexpectedly. [k] 12 So take your stand with your spells and your many sorceries,
which you have wearied yourself with from your youth.
Perhaps you will be able to succeed;
perhaps you will inspire terror!
13 You are worn out with your many consultations.
So let them stand and save you — the astrologers, [C] who observe the stars, [l] who predict monthly
what will happen to you.
14 Look, they are like stubble; [m]
fire burns them up. [n]
They cannot deliver themselves from the power [D] of the flame.
This is not a coal for warming themselves,
or a fire to sit beside!
15 This is what they are to you —
those who have wearied you and have traded with you from your youth — each wanders on his own way;
no one can save you.

Israel Must Leave Babylon

48 “Listen to this, house of Jacob — those who are called by the name Israel and have descended from [A] Judah, [a] who swear by the name of •Yahweh [b] and declare the God of Israel,
but not in truth or righteousness.
2 For they are named after the Holy City, and lean on the God of Israel; [c]
His name is Yahweh of •Hosts .
3 I declared the past events long ago;
they came out of My mouth; I proclaimed them.
Suddenly I acted, and they occurred.
4 Because I know that you are stubborn, and your neck is iron [B] and your forehead bronze, [d]
5 therefore I declared to you long ago.
I announced it to you before it occurred,
so you could not claim, ‘My idol caused them;
my carved image and cast idol control them.’ [e]
6 You have heard it. Observe it all.
Will you not acknowledge it?
From now on I will announce new things to you,
hidden things that you have not known. [f]
7 They have been created now, and not long ago;
you have not heard of them before today,
so you could not claim, ‘I already knew them! ’
8 You have never heard; you have never known;
For a long time your ears have not been open.
For I knew that you were very treacherous,
and were known as a rebel from birth. [g] 9 I will delay My anger for the honor of My name, and I will restrain Myself for your benefit and for My praise,
so that you will not be destroyed.
10 Look, I have refined you, [h] but not as silver;
I have tested [C] you in the furnace of affliction.
11 I will act for My own sake, indeed, My own, [i] for how can I [j] be defiled?

I will not give My glory to another. [k]

12 “Listen to Me, Jacob, and Israel, the one called by Me:
I am He; I am the first,
I am also the last. [l]
13 My own hand founded the earth, and My right hand spread out the heavens; [m]
when I summoned them,
they stood up together.
14 All of you, assemble and listen!
Who among the idols [D] has declared these things?
The LORD loves him; [n]
he will accomplish His will against Babylon, [o]
and His arm will be against the Chaldeans.
15 I — I have spoken;
yes, I have called him; [p]
I have brought him,
and he will succeed in his mission. [q]
16 Approach Me and listen to this.
From the beginning I have not spoken in secret; [r]
from the time anything existed, I was there.”
And now the Lord GOD has sent me and His Spirit. [s]

17 This is what Yahweh, your Redeemer, [t] the Holy One of Israel [u] says:

I am the LORD your God,
who teaches you for your benefit,
who leads you in the way you should go.
18 If only you had paid attention to My commands.
Then your peace would have been like a river, [v]
and your righteousness like the waves of the sea. [w] 19 Your descendants would have been as countless as the sand, [x] and the offspring of your body like its grains;

their name would not be cut off or eliminated from My presence.

20 Leave Babylon,
flee from the Chaldeans!
Declare with a shout of joy,
proclaim this,
let it go out to the end of the earth;
announce,
“The Lord has redeemed His servant [y] Jacob! ”
21 They did not thirst
when He led them through the deserts;
He made water flow for them from the rock; [z]
He split the rock, and water gushed out.
22 “There is no peace for the wicked,” says the Lord. [a]

The Servant Brings Salvation

49 Coastlands, [A] listen to me;
distant peoples, pay attention.
The LORD called [a] me before I was born.
He named me while I was in my mother's womb. [b]
2 He made my words like a sharp sword; [c]
He hid me in the shadow of His hand. [d]
He made me like a sharpened arrow;
He hid me in His quiver.
3 He said to me, "You are My Servant, Israel; [e]
I will be glorified in him."
4 But I myself said: I have labored in vain,
I have spent my strength for nothing and futility;
yet my vindication is with the LORD,
and my reward is with my God.
5 And now, says the LORD,
who formed me from the womb to be His Servant,
to bring Jacob back to Him
so that Israel might be gathered to Him;
for I am honored in the sight of the LORD, and my God is my strength — 6 He says,
"It is not enough for you to be My Servant
raising up the tribes of Jacob and restoring the protected ones of Israel.
I will also make you a light for the nations, [f]
to be My salvation to the ends of the earth." [g] 7 This is what the LORD,
the Redeemer [h] of Israel, his Holy One, says
to one who is despised, to one abhorred by people, [B, i]
to a servant of rulers:
"Kings will see and stand up,
and princes [C] will bow down,
because of the LORD, who is faithful,
the Holy One of Israel [j] — and He has chosen you." [k]

8 This is what the LORD says:

I will answer you in a time of favor,
and I will help you in the day of salvation. [l]
I will keep you, and I will appoint you to be a covenant for the people, [m]
to restore the land,
to make them possess the desolate inheritances, 9 saying to the prisoners: Come out, [n]
and to those who are in darkness: Show yourselves.
They will feed along the pathways, and their pastures will be on all the barren heights. [o]
10 They will not hunger or thirst,
the scorching heat or sun will not strike them;
for their compassionate One will guide them,
and lead them to springs of water. [p] 11 I will make all My mountains into a road, and My highways will be raised up. [q] 12 See, these will come from far away, from the north and from the west, [D, r] and from the land of Sinim. [s, t]

13 Shout for joy, you heavens! [u]
Earth, rejoice!
Mountains break into joyful shouts!
For the LORD has comforted His people, [v]
and will have compassion on His afflicted ones. [w]

Zion Remembered

14 •Zion says, “The LORD has abandoned me;
The Lord has forgotten me! ”
15 “Can a woman forget her nursing child, or lack compassion for the child of her womb?
Even if these forget,
yet I will not forget you.
16 Look, I have inscribed you on the palms of My hands; [x] your walls are continually before Me.
17 Your builders [y] hurry;
those who destroy and devastate you will leave you.
18 Look up, and look around.
They all gather together; they come to you. [z]
As I live” —
“you will wear all your children [E] as jewelry, this is the LORD’s declaration — and put them on as a bride does.
19 For your waste and desolate places and your land marked by ruins — will now be indeed too small for the inhabitants, [a]
and those who swallowed you up will be far away.
20 Yet as you listen, the children that you have been deprived of will say, ‘This place is too small for me;
make room for me so that I may settle.’ [b] 21 Then you will say within yourself,
‘Who fathered these for me?
I was deprived of my children and unable to conceive, exiled and wandering —
but who brought them up?
See, I was left by myself —
but these, where did they come from? ’ ” [F]

22 This is what the Lord GOD says:
Look, I will lift up My hand to the nations,
and raise My banner to the peoples. [c]
They will bring your sons in their arms, and your daughters will be carried on their shoulders. [d]

23 Kings will be your foster fathers, and their queens [G] your nursing mothers. [e]
They will bow down to you with their faces to the ground, and lick the dust at your feet. [f]
Then you will know that I am •Yahweh ; [g]
those who put their hope in Me will not be put to shame. [h]

24 Can the prey be taken from the mighty,
or the captives of the righteous [i] be delivered?
25 For this is what the LORD says:
“Even the captives of a mighty man will be taken,
and the prey of a tyrant will be delivered;
I will contend with the one who contends with you,
and I will save your children.
26 I will make your oppressors eat their own flesh, [j]
and they will be drunk with their own blood
as with sweet wine.
Then all flesh will know that I, Yahweh, am your Savior, [k] and your Redeemer, [l] the Mighty One of Jacob.” [m]

50 This is what the LORD says:
Where is your mother's divorce certificate that I used to send her away? [a]
Or who were My creditors that I sold you to? [b]
Look, you were sold for your iniquities, [c] and your mother was put away
because of your transgressions.
2 Why was no one there when I came?
Why was there no one to answer when I called?
Is My hand too short to redeem? [d]
Or do I have no power to deliver?
Look, I dry up the sea by My rebuke; [e]
I turn the rivers into a wilderness; their fish rot because of lack of water
and die of thirst.
3 I dress the heavens in black and make •sackcloth their clothing. [f]

The Obedient Servant

4 The Lord God has given Me
the tongue of those who are instructed [g]
to know how to sustain the weary with a word.
He awakens Me each morning;
He awakens My ear to listen like those being instructed. [h]
5 The Lord God has opened My ear, and I was not rebellious;
I did not turn back. [i]
6 I gave My back to those who beat Me, and My cheeks to those who tore out My beard.
I did not hide My face from scorn and spitting. [j]
7 The Lord God will help Me;
therefore I have not been humiliated;
therefore I have set My face like flint, [k]
and I know I will not be put to shame.
8 The One who vindicates Me is near; [l]
who will contend with Me?
Let us confront each other. [A]
Who has a case against Me? [B]
Let him come near Me!
9 In truth, the Lord God will help Me;
who will condemn Me? [m]
Indeed, all of them will wear out like a garment;
a moth will devour them. [n]
10 Who among you •fears the Lord, listening to the voice of His Servant? [o]
Who among you walks in darkness,
and has no light?
Let him trust in the name of •Yahweh ;
let him lean on his God.
11 Look, all you who kindle a fire,
who encircle yourselves with [p] firebrands;
walk in the light of your fire
and in the firebrands you have lit!
This is what you'll get from My hand:

you will lie down in a place of torment.

Salvation for Zion

51 Listen to Me, you who pursue righteousness, you who seek the LORD:
Look to the rock from which you were cut,
and to the quarry from which you were dug.
2 Look to Abraham your father,
and to Sarah who gave birth to you in pain.
When I called him, he was only one;
I blessed him and made him many. [a]
3 For the LORD will comfort •Zion ; [b]
He will comfort all her waste places, and He will make her wilderness like Eden, [c]
and her desert like the garden of the LORD. [d]
Joy and gladness will be found in her, thanksgiving and melodious song.

4 Pay attention to Me, My people, and listen to Me, My nation;
for instruction will come from Me,
and My justice for a light to the nations. [e]
I will bring it about quickly.
5 My righteousness is near, [f]
My salvation appears,
and My arms will bring justice to the nations. [g]
The coastlands [A] will put their hope in Me, and they will look to My strength. [B] 6 Look up to the heavens,
and look at the earth beneath;
for the heavens will vanish like smoke,
the earth will wear out like a garment,
and its inhabitants will die like gnats. [C, h]
But My salvation will last forever, [i] and My righteousness will never be shattered.

7 Listen to Me, you who know righteousness, the people in whose heart is My instruction: [j]
do not fear disgrace by men,
and do not be shattered by their taunts.
8 For the moth will devour them like a garment, [k]

and the worm will eat them like wool. [l]
But My righteousness will last forever, and My salvation for all generations.

9 Wake up, wake up!
Put on the strength of the LORD's power.
Wake up as in days past,
as in generations of long ago.
Wasn't it You who hacked •Rahab to pieces, [m]
who pierced the sea monster? [n] 10 Wasn't it You who dried up the sea, [o]
the waters of the great deep,
who made the sea-bed into a road
for the redeemed to pass over? [p] 11 And the redeemed of the LORD will return [q]
and come to Zion with singing,
crowned with unending joy.
Joy and gladness will overtake them,
and sorrow and sighing will flee.

12 I — I am the One who comforts you.
Who are you that you should fear man who dies, [r]
or a son of man who is given up like grass? [s] 13 But you have forgotten the LORD, your Maker, who stretched out the heavens and laid the foundations of the earth. [t]
You are in constant dread all day long because of the fury of the oppressor, who has set himself to destroy.
But where is the fury of the oppressor? [u] 14 The prisoner [D] is soon to be set free;
he will not die and go to the •Pit ,
and his food will not be lacking.
15 For I am •Yahweh your God who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar [v] —
His name is Yahweh of •Hosts .
16 I have put My words in your mouth, [w]
and covered you in the shadow of My hand, [x]

in order to plant [y] the heavens,
to found the earth,
and to say to Zion, “You are My people.”

17 Wake yourself, wake yourself up!
Stand up, Jerusalem,
you who have drunk the cup of His fury [z]
from the hand of the LORD;
you who have drunk the goblet to the dregs —
the cup that causes people to stagger.
18 There is no one to guide her among all the children she has raised;
there is no one to take hold of her hand
among all the offspring she has brought up.
19 These two things have happened to you: [a] devastation and destruction,
famine and sword.
Who will grieve for you?
How can I [b] comfort you?
20 Your children have fainted;
they lie at the head of every street
like an antelope in a net.
They are full of the LORD’s fury,
the rebuke of your God.

21 So listen to this, afflicted and drunken one — but not with wine. [c]
22 This is what your Lord says —
Yahweh, even your God, who defends His people [d] — “Look, I have removed the cup of staggering from your hand;
that goblet, the cup of My fury.
You will never drink it again.
23 I will put it into the hands of your tormentors, who said to you: [e]
Lie down, so we can walk over you.
You made your back like the ground,
and like a street for those who walk on it.

52 “Wake up, wake up;
put on your strength, •Zion !
Put on your beautiful garments, [a]
Jerusalem, the Holy City! [b]
For the uncircumcised and the •unclean will no longer enter you. [c]
2 Stand up, shake the dust off yourself!
Take your seat, Jerusalem.
Remove the bonds [d] from your neck,
captive Daughter Zion.”
3 For this is what the Lord says:
“You were sold for nothing,
and you will be redeemed without silver.” [e]
4 For this is what the Lord God says:
“At first My people went down to Egypt to live there, [f]
then Assyria oppressed them without cause. [A] 5 So now what have I here” —
“that My people are taken away for nothing? this is the Lord’s declaration —
Its rulers wail” —
“and My name is continually blasphemed allthis is the Lord’s declaration — day long. [g]
6 Therefore My people will know My name; [h] therefore they will know on that day that I am He who says:
Here I am.”

7 How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of the herald,
who proclaims peace,
who brings news of good things, [i]
who proclaims salvation,
who says to Zion, “Your God reigns! ” [j] 8 The voices of your watchmen [k] —
they lift up their voices, shouting for joy together;
for every eye will see when the Lord returns to Zion.

9 Be joyful, rejoice together,
you ruins of Jerusalem! [l]
For the LORD has comforted His people; [m]
He has redeemed Jerusalem.
10 The LORD has displayed His holy arm in the sight of all the nations; [n] all the ends of the earth will see the salvation of our God. [o]

11 Leave, leave, go out from there! [p]
Do not touch anything unclean;
go out from her, purify yourselves, [q]
you who carry the vessels of the LORD.
12 For you will not leave in a hurry, [r] and you will not have to take flight;
because the LORD is going before you, [s] and the God of Israel is your rear guard. [t]

The Servant's Suffering and Exaltation

13 See, My Servant [u, v] will act wisely; [B]
He will be raised and lifted up and greatly exalted. [w]
14 Just as many were appalled at You [x] —
His appearance was so disfigured that He did not look like a man, and His form did not resemble a human being — 15 so He will sprinkle [C, y] many nations. [z, a]
Kings will shut their mouths because of Him,
For they will see what had not been told them,
and they will understand what they had not heard. [b]

53 Who has believed what we have heard? [A]
And who has the arm of the LORD [a] been revealed to? [b]
2 He grew up before Him like a young plant [c]
and like a root out of dry ground.
He didn't have an impressive form or majesty that we should look at Him,
no appearance that we should desire Him. [d] 3 He was despised and rejected by men, [e] a man of suffering who knew what sickness was. [f]
He was like someone people turned away from; [B]
He was despised, and we didn't value Him.

4 Yet He Himself bore our sicknesses, and He carried our pains; [g]
but we in turn regarded Him stricken, struck down by God, [h] and afflicted.
5 But He was pierced because of our transgressions, [i] crushed because of our iniquities; [j] punishment [k] for our peace was on Him, and we are healed by His wounds. [l]
6 We all went astray like sheep; [m]
we all have turned to our own way;
and the LORD has punished Him
for [C] the iniquity [n] of us all. [o]

7 He was oppressed and afflicted, yet He did not open His mouth.
Like a lamb led to the slaughter and like a sheep silent before her shearers,
He did not open His mouth. [p]
8 He was taken away because of oppression and judgment;
and who considered His fate? [D]
For He was cut off from the land of the living;
He was struck because of my people's rebellion.
9 They [q] made His grave with the wicked and with a rich man at His death, [r]
although He had done no violence and had not spoken deceitfully. [s]

10 Yet the LORD was pleased [t] to crush Him severely. [E, u]
When [F] You make Him a •restitution offering, [v]
He will see His •seed , He will prolong His days, and by His hand, the LORD's pleasure will be accomplished. [w] 11 He will see it [x] out of His anguish, and He will be satisfied with His knowledge.
My righteous [y] Servant [z] will justify many, [a]
and He will carry their iniquities.
12 Therefore I will give Him [G] the many as a portion,
and He will receive [H] the mighty as spoil, because He submitted Himself to death, [b] and was counted among the rebels; [c] yet He bore the sin of many [d]
and interceded for the rebels. [e]

Future Glory for Israel

54 “Rejoice, childless one, who did not give birth;
burst into song and shout,
you who have not been in labor! [a]
For the children of the forsaken one will be more than the children of the married woman,” [b]
says the LORD.
2 “Enlarge the site of your tent,
and let your tent curtains be stretched out; [c]
do not hold back;
lengthen your ropes,
and drive your pegs deep.
3 For you will spread out to the right and to the left, [d]
and your descendants will dispossess nations and inhabit the desolate cities.

4 “Do not be afraid, for you will not be put to shame; [e] don’t be humiliated, for you will not be disgraced.
For you will forget the shame of your youth,
and you will no longer remember the disgrace of your widowhood. [f]
5 Indeed, your husband is your Maker [g] —
His name is •Yahweh of •Hosts —
and the Holy One of Israel [h] is your Redeemer; [i]
He is called the God of all the earth.
6 For the LORD has called you,
like a wife deserted and wounded in spirit, [j]
a wife of one’s youth [k] when she is rejected,”
says your God.
7 “I deserted you for a brief moment, [l]
but I will take you back with great compassion.
8 In a surge of anger
I hid My face [m] from you for a moment, but I will have compassion on you with everlasting love,” [n]
says the LORD your Redeemer.
9 “For this is like the days [o] of Noah to Me:
when I swore that the waters of Noah would never flood the earth again, [p] so I have sworn that I will not be angry with you or rebuke you. [q]

10 Though the mountains move
and the hills shake,
My love will not be removed from you and My covenant of peace [r] will not be shaken,” says your compassionate Lord.

11 “Poor Jerusalem, storm-tossed, and not comforted,
I will set your stones in black mortar, [A]
and lay your foundations in sapphires. [B, s] 12 I will make your fortifications [C] out of rubies, your gates out of sparkling stones,
and all your walls out of precious stones.
13 Then all your children will be taught by the Lord, [t] their prosperity will be great, 14 and you will be established on a foundation of righteousness.
You will be far from oppression,
you will certainly not be afraid;
you will be far from terror,
it will certainly not come near you.
15 If anyone attacks you,
it is not from Me;
whoever attacks you
will fall before you.
16 Look, I have created the craftsman who blows on the charcoal fire and produces a weapon suitable for its task;
and I have created the destroyer to cause havoc.
17 No weapon formed against you will succeed, and you will refute any accusation [D]
raised against you in court.
This is the heritage of the Lord’s servants, [u]
and their righteousness is from Me.” [v]

This is the Lord’s declaration.

Come to the LORD

55 “Come, everyone who is thirsty, [a] come to the waters;
and you without money,
come, buy, and eat!
Come, buy wine and milk
without money and without cost!
2 Why do you spend money on what is not food,
and your wages on what does not satisfy?
Listen carefully to Me, and eat what is good,
and you will enjoy the choicest of foods. [A] 3 Pay attention and come to Me;
listen, so that you will live.
I will make an everlasting covenant with you, [b]
the promises assured to David. [c] 4 Since I have made him a witness to the peoples, [d] a leader and commander for the peoples, [e] 5 so you will summon a nation you do not know, [f] and nations who do not know you will run to you. [g]
For the LORD your God, even the Holy One of Israel, [h]
has glorified you.” [i]

6 Seek the LORD while He may be found;
call to Him while He is near. [j] 7 Let the wicked one abandon his way and the sinful one his thoughts; [k]
let him return to the LORD,
so He may have compassion on him,
and to our God, for He will freely forgive. [l]

8 “For My thoughts are not your thoughts, and your ways are not My ways.” 9 “For as heaven is higher than earth, [m]
so My ways are higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts.
10 For just as rain and snow fall from heaven and do not return there

This is the LORD’s declaration.

without saturating the earth and making it germinate and sprout, and providing seed to sow and food to eat, [n] 11 so My word that comes from My mouth will not return to Me empty, but it will accomplish what I please and will prosper in what I send it to do.” [o]

12 You will indeed go out with joy and be peacefully guided;
the mountains and the hills will break into singing before you,
and all the trees of the field will clap their hands. [p] 13 Instead of the thornbush, a cypress will come up, and instead of the brier, a myrtle will come up; [q]
it will make a name for •Yahweh [r] as an everlasting sign that will not be destroyed.

A House of Prayer for All

56 This is what the LORD says:
Preserve justice and do what is right, [a]
for My salvation is coming soon, and My righteousness will be revealed. [b] 2 Happy is the man who does this, anyone who maintains this,
who keeps the Sabbath without desecrating it,
and keeps his hand from doing any evil. [c]

3 No foreigner who has joined himself to the LORD should say,
"The LORD will exclude me from His people"; [d]
and the eunuch should not say,
"Look, I am a dried-up tree." [e] 4 For the LORD says this:
"For the eunuchs who keep My Sabbaths, and choose what pleases Me,
and hold firmly to My covenant,
5 I will give them, in My house and within My walls, a memorial and a name
better than sons and daughters.
I will give each of them an everlasting name that will never be cut off. [f]
6 And the foreigners who join themselves to the LORD minister to Him, love the name of •Yahweh and become His servants,
all who keep the Sabbath without desecrating it and who hold firmly to My covenant — 7 I will bring them to My holy mountain [g]
and let them rejoice in My house of prayer.
Their •burnt offerings and sacrifices will be acceptable on My altar, [h] for My house will be called a house of prayer for all nations." [i] who gathers the dispersed of Israel:8 This is the declaration of the Lord GOD,
"I will gather to them still others besides those already gathered." [j]

Unrighteous Leaders Condemned

9 All you animals of the field and forest,
come and eat!
10 Israel's [A] watchmen are blind, all of them,
they know nothing;
all of them are mute dogs,
they cannot bark;
they dream, lie down,
and love to sleep.
11 These dogs have fierce appetites;
they never have enough.
And they are shepherds
who have no discernment;
all of them turn to their own way,
every last one for his own gain. [k] 12 "Come, let me get some wine,
let's guzzle some beer;
and tomorrow will be like today,
only far better!" [l]

57 The righteous one perishes, and no one takes it to heart;
faithful men are swept away,
with no one realizing that the righteous one is swept away from the presence [A] of evil.
2 He will enter into peace — they will rest on their beds [a] — everyone who lives uprightly.

Pagan Religion Denounced

3 But come here,
you sons of a sorceress,
offspring of an adulterer and a prostitute! B 4 Who is it you are mocking?
Who is it you are opening your mouth and sticking out your tongue at?
Isn't it you, you rebellious children, b
you race of liars,
5 who burn with lust among the oaks,
under every green tree, c
who slaughter children in the •wadis below the clefts of the rocks? d 6 Your portion is among the smooth stones of the wadi;
indeed, they are your lot.
You have even poured out a •drink offering to them;
you have offered a •grain offering;
should I be satisfied with these?
7 You have placed your bed on a high and lofty mountain; e
you also went up there to offer sacrifice.
8 You have set up your memorial behind the door and doorpost.
For away from Me, you stripped,
went up, and made your bed wide, f
and you have made a bargain C for yourself with them.
You have loved their bed;
you have gazed on their genitals. D, g 9 You went to the king with oil and multiplied your perfumes;
you sent your couriers far away h and sent them down even to •Sheol .
10 You became weary on your many journeys,
but you did not say, "I give up! " i
You found a renewal of your strength; E therefore you did not grow weak.

11 Who was it you dreaded and feared, so that you lied and didn’t remember Me
or take it to heart?
Have I not kept silent for such a long time [j, k]
and you do not •fear Me?
12 I will expose your righteousness, and your works — they will not profit you.
13 When you cry out,
let your collection of idols deliver you!
The wind will carry all of them off,
a breath will take them away.
But whoever takes refuge in Me will inherit the land [l] and possess My holy mountain. [m]

Healing and Peace

14 He said,
"Build it up, build it up, prepare the way, remove every obstacle from My people's way." [n] 15 For the High and Exalted One who lives forever, whose name is Holy [o] says this:
"I live in a high and holy place,
and with the oppressed and lowly of spirit, [p]
to revive the spirit of the lowly and revive the heart of the oppressed. [q] 16 For I will not accuse you forever, and I will not always be angry; [r]
for then the spirit would grow weak before Me, even the breath of man, which I have made.
17 Because of his sinful greed I was angry, [s]
so I struck him; I was angry and hid; [F]
but he went on turning back to the desires of his heart.
18 I have seen his ways, but I will heal him;
I will lead him and restore comfort to him and his mourners, [t] 19 creating words of praise." [G, u]
The LORD says,
"Peace, peace to the one who is far or near, [v]
and I will heal him.
20 But the wicked are like the storm-tossed sea, [w]
for it cannot be still,
and its waters churn up mire and muck.
21 There is no peace for the wicked," says my God. [x]

True Fasting

58 “Cry out loudly, [A] don’t hold back!
Raise your voice like a trumpet.
Tell My people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sins.
2 They seek Me day after day and delight to know My ways, like a nation that does what is right and does not abandon the justice of their God.
They ask Me for righteous judgments;
they delight in the nearness of God.” [a] 3 “Why have we fasted, but You have not seen? [b]
We have denied ourselves, but You haven’t noticed! ” [c] “Look, you do as you please on the day of your fast, and oppress all your workers. [d] 4 You fast with contention and strife to strike viciously with your fist.
You cannot fast as you do today,
hoping to make your voice heard on high.
5 Will the fast I choose be like this:
A day for a person to deny himself,
to bow his head like a reed,
and to spread out •sackcloth and ashes? [e]
Will you call this a fast and a day acceptable to the LORD?
6 Isn’t the fast I choose:
To break the chains of wickedness, [f]
to untie the ropes of the yoke,
to set the oppressed free,
and to tear off every yoke? [g]
7 Is it not to share your bread with the hungry, [h]
to bring the poor and homeless into your house, to clothe the naked when you see him, [i]
and not to ignore [B] your own flesh and blood? [j] 8 Then your light will appear like the dawn, and your recovery will come quickly. [k]
Your righteousness will go before you, [l] and the LORD’s glory will be your rear guard. [m]

9 At that time, when you call, the LORD will answer; [n]
when you cry out, He will say, ‘Here I am.’
If you get rid of the yoke among you, [C]
the finger-pointing and malicious speaking, [o] 10 and if you offer yourself [p] to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted one,
then your light will shine in the darkness, [q]
and your night will be like noonday.
11 The LORD will always lead you, satisfy you in a parched land,
and strengthen your bones.
You will be like a watered garden [r] and like a spring whose waters never run dry. [s] 12 Some of you will rebuild the ancient ruins; [t]
you will restore the foundations laid long ago; [D, u]
you will be called the repairer of broken walls,
the restorer of streets where people live.

13 “If you keep from desecrating [E] the Sabbath, [v]
from doing whatever you want on My holy day;
if you call the Sabbath a delight,
and the holy day of the LORD honorable;
if you honor it, not going your own ways, [w]
seeking your own pleasure, or talking too much; [F] 14 then you will delight yourself in the LORD, [x] and I will make you ride over the heights of the land, [y] and let you enjoy the heritage of your father Jacob.”
For the mouth of the LORD has spoken. [z]

Sin and Redemption

59 Indeed, the LORD’s hand is not too short to save, [a] and His ear is not too deaf to hear.
2 But your iniquities [b] have built barriers between you and your God, and your sins have made Him hide His face from you [c]
so that He does not listen. [d]
3 For your hands are defiled with blood and your fingers, with iniquity;
your lips have spoken lies,
and your tongues mutter injustice.
4 No one makes claims justly;
no one pleads honestly.
They trust in empty and worthless words;
they conceive trouble and give birth to iniquity. [e] 5 They hatch viper’s eggs
and weave spider’s webs.
Whoever eats their eggs will die;
crack one open, and a viper is hatched.
6 Their webs cannot become clothing,
and they cannot cover themselves with their works.
Their works are sinful works,
and violent acts are in their hands.
7 Their feet run after evil, [f]
and they rush to shed innocent blood. [g]
Their thoughts are sinful thoughts; [h] ruin and wretchedness are in their paths.
8 They have not known the path of peace, [i]
and there is no justice in their ways.
They have made their roads crooked;
no one who walks on them will know peace. [j]

9 Therefore justice is far from us,
and righteousness does not reach us.
We hope for light, but there is darkness;
for brightness, but we live in the night.
10 We grope along a wall like the blind;
we grope like those without eyes. [k]

We stumble at noon as though it were twilight;
we are like the dead among those who are healthy.
11 We all growl like bears and moan like doves. [l]
We hope for justice, but there is none;
for salvation, but it is far from us.
12 For our transgressions have multiplied before You, [m] and our sins testify against us. [n]
For our transgressions are with us, and we know our iniquities: [o]
13 transgression and deception against the LORD, turning away from following our God,
speaking oppression and revolt,
conceiving and uttering lying words from the heart.
14 Justice is turned back,
and righteousness stands far off.
For truth has stumbled in the public square,
and honesty cannot enter.
15 Truth is missing,
and whoever turns from evil is plundered.

The LORD saw that there was no justice,
and He was offended.
16 He saw that there was no man —
He was amazed that there was no one interceding; [p]
so His own arm brought salvation, and His own righteousness supported Him.
17 He put on righteousness like a breastplate, and a helmet of salvation on His head; [q]
He put on garments of vengeance for clothing, and He wrapped Himself in zeal as in a cloak. [r] 18 So He will repay according to their deeds: [s] fury to His enemies, retribution to His foes,
and He will repay the coastlands.
19 They will •fear the name of •Yahweh in the west and His glory in the east; [t]
for He will come like a rushing stream [u] driven by the wind of the LORD.

20 “The Redeemer [v] will come to •Zion , and to those in Jacob who turn from transgression.” [w]

This is the LORD’s declaration.
21 “As for Me, this is My covenant with them,” [x] says the LORD: “My Spirit who is on you, and My words that I have put in your mouth, [y] will not depart from your mouth, or from the mouth of your children, or from the mouth of your children’s children, from now on and forever,” says the LORD.

The LORD's Glory in Zion

60 Arise, shine, for your light has come, [a] and the glory of the LORD shines over you. [b, c] 2 For look, darkness covers the earth,
and total darkness the peoples;
but the LORD will shine over you,
and His glory will appear over you.
3 Nations will come to your light,
and kings to the brightness of your radiance. [d] 4 Raise your eyes and look around:
they all gather and come to you;
your sons will come from far away,
and your daughters will be carried on the hip. [e] 5 Then you will see and be radiant, [f] and your heart will tremble and rejoice, [A] because the riches of the sea will become yours and the wealth of the nations will come to you. [g] 6 Caravans of camels will cover your land [B] — young camels of Midian and Ephah — all of them will come from Sheba. [h]
They will carry gold and frankincense [i] and proclaim the praises of the LORD.
7 All the flocks of Kedar will be gathered to you;
the rams of Nebaioth will serve you [j]
and go up on My altar as an acceptable sacrifice. [k]
I will glorify My beautiful house. [l]

8 Who are these who fly like a cloud, like doves to their shelters? [m] 9 Yes, the islands will wait for Me [n] with the ships of Tarshish in the lead, [o]
to bring your children from far away, [p] their silver and gold with them, for the honor of the LORD your God,
the Holy One of Israel, [q]
who has glorified you. [r]
10 Foreigners will build up your walls, [s] and their kings will serve you. [t]

Although I struck you in My wrath, yet I will show mercy to you with My favor. [u] 11 Your gates will always be open;
they will never be shut day or night
so that the wealth of the nations may be brought into you, [v]
with their kings being led in procession.
12 For the nation and the kingdom that will not serve you will perish;
those nations will be annihilated. [w] 13 The glory of Lebanon will come to you [x] — its pine, fir, and cypress together [y] —
to beautify the place of My sanctuary, and I will glorify My dwelling place. C 14 The sons of your oppressors will come and bow down to you; [z]
all who reviled you will fall facedown at your feet. [a]
They will call you the City of the LORD,
•Zion of the Holy One of Israel. [b]
15 Instead of your being deserted and hated, with no one passing through, [c]
I will make you an object of eternal pride, [d]
a joy from age to age.
16 You will nurse on the milk of nations, and nurse at the breast of kings; [e]
you will know that I, •Yahweh , am your Savior [f]
and Redeemer, [g] the Mighty One of Jacob. [h]

17 I will bring gold instead of bronze;
I will bring silver instead of iron,
bronze instead of wood,
and iron instead of stones.
I will appoint peace as your guard and righteousness as your ruler.
18 Violence will never again be heard of in your land; [i]

devastation and destruction
will be gone from your borders.
But you will name your walls salvation [j]
and your gates, praise.
19 The sun will no longer be your light by day,
and the brightness of the moon will not shine on you;
but the LORD will be your everlasting light, [k]
and your God will be your splendor.
20 Your sun will no longer set,
and your moon will not fade;
for the LORD will be your everlasting light,
and the days of your sorrow will be over. [l] 21 Then all your people will be righteous; [m] they will possess the land forever; [n]
they are the branch I planted,
the work of My [o] hands,
so that I may be glorified. [p] 22 The least will become a thousand,
the smallest a mighty nation.
I am Yahweh;
I will accomplish it quickly in its time.

Messiah's Jubilee

61 The Spirit of the Lord God is on Me, [a] because the Lord has anointed Me to bring good news to the poor. [b]
He has sent Me to heal [A] the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and freedom to the prisoners; [c] 2 to proclaim the year of the Lord's favor, [d] and the day of our God's vengeance; [e]
to comfort [f] all who mourn,
3 to provide for those who mourn in •Zion ;
to give them a crown of beauty instead of ashes,
festive oil instead of mourning, [g]
and splendid clothes instead of despair. [B]
And they will be called righteous trees, planted by the Lord
to glorify Him. [h]

4 They will rebuild the ancient ruins; [i]
they will restore the former devastations;
they will renew the ruined cities,
the devastations of many generations.
5 Strangers will stand and feed your flocks,
and foreigners will be your plowmen and vinedressers. [j] 6 But you will be called the Lord's priests; [k]
they will speak of you as ministers of our God;
you will eat the wealth of the nations,
and you will boast in their riches.
7 Because your shame was double, [l] and they cried out, "Disgrace is their portion," therefore, they will possess double in their land, [m]
and eternal joy will be theirs.

8 For I •Yahweh love justice; [n]
I hate robbery and injustice; [o]
I will faithfully reward them
and make an everlasting covenant [p] with them.
9 Their descendants will be known among the nations,
and their posterity among the peoples.

All who see them will recognize that they are a people the LORD has blessed.

10 I greatly rejoice in the LORD,
I exult in my God;
for He has clothed me with the garments of salvation and wrapped me in a robe of righteousness, [q]
as a groom wears a turban and as a bride adorns herself with her jewels. [r] 11 For as the earth produces its growth, and as a garden enables what is sown to spring up,
so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring up before all the nations. [s]

Zion’s Restoration

62 I will not keep silent because of •Zion , and I will not keep still because of Jerusalem, [a] until her righteousness shines like a bright light [b] and her salvation, like a flaming torch.
2 Nations will see your righteousness [c]
and all kings, your glory.
You will be called by a new name that the LORD's mouth will announce. [d]
3 You will be a glorious crown in the LORD's hand, and a royal diadem in the palm of your God. [e] 4 You will no longer be called Deserted, [f]
and your land will not be called Desolate; instead, you will be called My Delight is in Her, [A] and your land Married; [B, g] for the LORD delights in you,
and your land will be married.
5 For as a young man marries a young woman,
so your sons will marry you;
and as a groom rejoices [C] over his bride,
so your God will rejoice over you. [h]

6 Jerusalem,
I have appointed watchmen on your walls; [i]
they will never be silent, day or night.
There is no rest for you,
who remind the LORD.
7 Do not give Him rest until He establishes and makes Jerusalem
the praise of the earth. [j]

8 The LORD has sworn with His right hand and His strong arm:
I will no longer give your grain to your enemies for food, [k]
and foreigners will not drink your new wine
you have labored for.
9 For those who gather grain will eat it and praise the LORD,

and those who harvest the grapes will drink the wine
in My holy courts.

10 Go out, go out through the gates;
prepare a way for the people!
Build it up, build up the highway; [l]
clear away the stones!
Raise a banner for the peoples. [m] 11 Look, the LORD has proclaimed to the ends of the earth, “Say to Daughter Zion: [n]
Look, your salvation is coming,
His reward is with Him, [o]
and His gifts accompany Him.”
12 And they will be called [D] the Holy People, [p]
the LORD’s Redeemed;
and you will be called Cared For,
A City Not Deserted.

The LORD's Day of Vengeance

63 Who is this coming from Edom [a] in crimson-stained garments from Bozrah —
this One who is splendid in His apparel, rising up proudly [b] in His great might?

It is I, proclaiming vindication, [A] powerful to save.

2 Why are Your clothes red,
and Your garments like one who treads a winepress? [c]

3 I trampled the winepress alone, and no one from the nations was with Me.
I trampled them in My anger and ground them underfoot in My fury;
their blood spattered My garments,
and all My clothes were stained.
4 For I planned the day of vengeance, [B, d]
and the year of My redemption [C] came.
5 I looked, but there was no one to help, [e]
and I was amazed that no one assisted;
so My arm accomplished victory for Me,
and My wrath assisted Me.
6 I crushed nations in My anger;
I made them drunk with My wrath [f]
and poured out their blood on the ground. [g]

Remembrance of Grace

7 I will make known the LORD's faithful love and the LORD's praiseworthy acts, because of all the LORD has done for us —
even the many good things
He has done for the house of Israel and has done for them based on His compassion and the abundance of His faithful love.
8 He said, "They are indeed My people, children who will not be disloyal,"
and He became their Savior.
9 In all their suffering, He suffered, [h, i] and the Angel of His Presence saved them.
He redeemed them
because of His love and compassion; [j]
He lifted them up and carried them all the days of the past. [k] 10 But they rebelled and grieved His Holy Spirit. [l]
So He became their enemy and fought against them.
11 Then He [D] remembered the days of the past,
the days of Moses and his people.
Where is He who brought them out of the sea with the shepherds [m] of His flock?
Where is He who put His Holy Spirit among the flock?
12 He sent His glorious arm to be at Moses' right hand, divided the waters before them [n]
to obtain eternal fame for Himself, 13 and led them through the depths like a horse in the wilderness,
so that they did not stumble.
14 Like cattle that go down into the valley,
the Spirit of the LORD gave them [E] rest.
You led Your people this way to make a glorious name for Yourself.

Israel's Prayer

15 Look down from heaven and see [o]
from Your lofty home — holy and beautiful.
Where is Your zeal and Your might?
Your yearning [F] and Your compassion are withheld from me.
16 Yet You are our Father, even though Abraham does not know us and Israel doesn't recognize us.
You, •Yahweh , are our Father;
from ancient times,
Your name is our Redeemer. [p]
17 Why, Yahweh, do You make us stray from Your ways?
You harden our hearts so we do not •fear [G] You. [q] Return, because of Your servants,
the tribes of Your heritage.
18 Your holy people had a possession [H] for a little while,
but our enemies have trampled down
Your sanctuary. [r]
19 We have become like those You never ruled over, like those not called by Your name. [s]

Chapter 64

[a] [1] If only You would tear the heavens open and come down, [b]
so that mountains would quake at Your presence [c] — [2] [d] as fire kindles the brushwood, and fire causes water to boil —
to make Your name known to Your enemies,
so that nations will tremble at Your presence!
[3] When You did awesome works [e]
that we did not expect,
You came down, [f]
and the mountains quaked at Your presence.
[4] From ancient times no one has heard,
no one has listened,
no eye has seen any God except You,
who acts on behalf of the one who waits for Him. [g] [5] You welcome the one who joyfully does what is right;
they remember You in Your ways.
But we have sinned, and You were angry.
How can we be saved if we remain in our sins? [A] [6] All of us have become like something •unclean , and all our righteous acts are like a polluted [B] garment; [h] all of us wither like a leaf, [i]
and our iniquities [j] carry us away like the wind.
[7] No one calls on Your name,
striving to take hold of You.
For You have hidden Your face from us [k]
and made us melt because of [l, C] our iniquity.

[8] Yet LORD, You are our Father; [m]
we are the clay, and You are our potter;
we all are the work of Your hands. [n]
[9] LORD, do not be terribly angry or remember our iniquity forever. [o]
Please look — all of us are Your people!
[10] Your holy cities have become a wilderness;
•Zion has become a wilderness,
Jerusalem a desolation. [p]

11 Our holy and beautiful D temple, where our fathers praised You,
has been burned with fire,
and all that was dear to us lies in ruins. q
12 LORD, after all this, will You restrain Yourself?
Will You keep silent and afflict severely? r

The LORD's Response

65 “I was sought by those who did not ask; [a]
I was found by those who did not seek Me.
I said: Here I am, here I am,
to a nation that was not called by [b] My name. [c] 2 I spread out My hands all day long to a rebellious people [d]
who walk in the wrong path,
following their own thoughts.
3 These people continually provoke Me to My face, sacrificing in gardens, [e]
burning incense on bricks, 4 sitting among the graves,
spending nights in secret places, eating the meat of pigs, [f]
and putting polluted broth in their bowls. [g] 5 They say, ‘Keep to yourself, don’t come near me, for I am too holy for you! ’
These practices are smoke in My nostrils,
a fire that burns all day long.
6 It is written before Me:
I will not keep silent, [h] but I will repay; [i]
I will repay them fully [A] 7 for your iniquities and the iniquities [j]
of your [k] fathers together,”
says the LORD.
“Because they burned incense on the mountains and reproached Me on the hills, [l]
I will reward them fully [B]
for their former deeds.”
8 The LORD says this:
As the new wine is found in a bunch of grapes,
and one says, ‘Don’t destroy it,
for there’s some good [C] in it,’
so I will act because of My servants and not destroy them all.

9 I will produce descendants from Jacob, [m] and heirs to My mountains from Judah;
My chosen [n] ones will possess it,
and My servants will dwell there. [o]
10 Sharon will be a pasture for flocks, [p] and the Valley of Achor a place for cattle to lie down, [q] for My people who have sought Me. [r] 11 But you who abandon the LORD, who forget My holy mountain, who prepare a table for Fortune and fill bowls of mixed wine for Destiny, [s] 12 I will destine you for the sword, and all of you will kneel down to be slaughtered,
because I called and you did not answer,
I spoke and you did not hear;
you did what was evil in My sight and chose what I did not delight in. [t]
13 Therefore, this is what the Lord GOD says:
My servants will eat,
but you will be hungry;
My servants will drink,
but you will be thirsty;
My servants will rejoice,
but you will be put to shame.
14 My servants will shout for joy from a glad heart,
but you will cry out from an anguished heart,
and you will lament out of a broken spirit.
15 You will leave your name behind as a curse for My chosen ones, [u]
and the Lord GOD will kill you;
but He will give His servants another name. [v] 16 Whoever is blessed in the land will be blessed by the God of truth, [w] and whoever swears in the land will swear by the God of truth.
For the former troubles will be forgotten and hidden from My sight.

A New Creation

17 “For I will create a new heaven and a new earth; [x]
the past events will not be remembered or come to mind.
18 Then be glad and rejoice forever in what I am creating;
for I will create Jerusalem to be a joy
and its people to be a delight.
19 I will rejoice in Jerusalem and be glad in My people.
The sound of weeping and crying will no longer be heard in her. [y] 20 In her, a nursing infant will no longer live only a few days, [D]
or an old man not live out his days.
Indeed, the youth will die at a hundred years,
and the one who misses a hundred years will be cursed. [z] 21 People will build houses and live in them;
they will plant vineyards and eat their fruit. [a] 22 They will not build and others live in them;
they will not plant and others eat.
For My people’s lives will be like the lifetime of a tree. [b]
My chosen ones will fully enjoy
the work of their hands.
23 They will not labor without success [c] or bear children destined for disaster, for they will be a people blessed by the Lord
along with their descendants. [d] 24 Even before they call, I will answer; [e]
while they are still speaking, I will hear.
25 The wolf and the lamb will feed together, [E]
and the lion will eat straw like the ox, [f]
but the serpent’s food will be dust! [g]
They will not do what is evil or destroy on My entire holy mountain,” [h]
says the Lord.

Final Judgment and Joyous Restoration

66 This is what the LORD says:
Heaven [a] is My throne, [b] and earth is My footstool. [c]
What house could you possibly build for Me?
And what place could be My home? [d]
2 My hand made all these things, and so they all came into being.
I will look favorably on this kind of person: This is the LORD's declaration.
one who is humble, [e] submissive [A] in spirit, [f]
and trembles at My word.
3 One slaughters an ox, one kills a man;
one sacrifices a lamb, one breaks a dog's neck;
one offers a •grain offering, one offers pig's blood;
one offers incense, one praises an idol —
all these have chosen their ways and delight in their detestable practices. [g] 4 So I will choose their punishment, and I will bring on them what they dread
because I called and no one answered;
I spoke and they didn't hear;
they did what was evil in My sight and chose what I didn't delight in. [h]

5 You who tremble at His word, [i] hear the word of the LORD: [j]
"Your brothers who hate and exclude you because of Me have said, [k]
'Let the LORD be glorified
so that we can see your joy! '
But they will be put to shame." [l]

6 A sound of uproar from the city!
A voice from the temple —
the voice of the LORD, paying back His enemies what they deserve! [m]

7 Before •Zion was in labor, she gave birth;
before she was in pain, she delivered a boy.

8 Who has heard of such a thing?
Who has seen such things?
Can a land be born in one day
or a nation be delivered in an instant?
Yet as soon as Zion was in labor,
she gave birth to her sons.
9 “Will I bring a baby to the point of birth and not deliver it? ”
says the LORD;
“or will I who deliver, close the womb? ”
says your God.
10 Be glad for Jerusalem and rejoice over her,
all who love her. [n]
Rejoice greatly with her,
all who mourn over her — 11 so that you may nurse and be satisfied from her comforting breast and drink deeply and delight yourselves from her glorious breasts.

12 For this is what the LORD says:
I will make peace flow to her like a river, [o]
and the wealth [B] of nations like a flood; [p]
you will nurse and be carried on her hip [q]
and bounced on her lap.
13 As a mother comforts her son,
so I will comfort you, [r]
and you will be comforted in Jerusalem.

14 You will see, you will rejoice, and you [C] will flourish like grass; [s]
then the LORD’s power will be revealed to His servants, but He will show His wrath against His enemies.
15 Look, the LORD will come with fire [t] — His chariots are like the whirlwind [u] — to execute His anger with fury and His rebuke with flames of fire.
16 For the LORD will execute judgment on all flesh [v] with His fiery sword, and many will be slain by the LORD.

17 "Those who dedicate and purify themselves to enter the groves [w] following their leader, [D] eating meat from pigs, vermin, and rats, will perish together."
This is the LORD's declaration.

18 "Knowing [x] their works and their thoughts, I have come to gather all nations and languages; [y] they will come and see My glory. 19 I will establish a sign among them, and I will send survivors from them to the nations — to Tarshish, Put, [z] Lud (who are archers), Tubal, Javan, [a] and the islands far away — who have not heard of My fame or seen My glory. And they will proclaim My glory among the nations. [b] 20 They will bring all your brothers from all the nations as a gift to the LORD on horses and chariots, in litters, and on mules and camels, to My holy mountain Jerusalem," [c] says the LORD, "just as the Israelites bring an offering in a •clean vessel to the house of the LORD. 21 I will also take some of them as priests and Levites," [d] says the LORD.

22 "For just as the new heavens and the new earth, [e] which I will make,
will endure before Me" —
"so your offspring and your name will endure. this is the LORD's declaration — 23 All mankind will come to worship Me from one New Moon to another and from one Sabbath to another,"
says the LORD.

24 "As they leave, they will see the dead bodies of the men who have rebelled against Me; [f] for their worm [g] will never die, their fire will never go out, [h] and they will be a horror to all mankind." [i]

Introduction

"You will indeed go out with joy and be peacefully guided; the mountains and the hills will break into singing before you, and all the trees of the field will clap their hands. Instead of the thornbush, a cypress will come up, and instead of the brier, a myrtle will come up; it will make a name for Yahweh as an everlasting sign that will not be destroyed" (55:12-13).

Isaiah was an eighth-century b.c. prophet. His book is the first of the prophets in the English canon and the first of the Latter Prophets in the Hebrew canon. Isaiah is powerful in its poetic imagination, intriguing in its prophetic vision, and complex in its structure. One can never read or study the book without having new insights into the nature of God and our relationship with Him. The authors of the New Testament read the book of Isaiah in light of the coming of Christ and realized that this prophet anticipated Messiah's coming with remarkable clarity. For this reason they quoted Isaiah more than any other Old Testament book.

Circumstances of Writing Author: The book presents itself as the writing of one man, Isaiah son of Amoz. The superscription to the book dates his prophetic activity as spanning the reigns of four kings of Judah: Uzziah (783-742 B.C.; Isaiah's call is dated to this king's last year, 6:1), Jotham (742-735 B.C.), Ahaz (735-716 B.C.), and Hezekiah (716-686 B.C.). Not much is known about Isaiah apart from his prophecy.

Isaiah's authorship of the whole book has been vehemently contested in the modern period. Many scholars have argued that the historical Isaiah could not have written chapters 40-66. For those who believe that God knows the future and can reveal it to His servants, it is not problematic that God through Isaiah predicted the rise of Babylon, its victory against Judah, the exile, and the return.

Background: Isaiah 6:1 records that Isaiah received his prophetic call in the last year of Uzziah's reign over Judah (ca 742 B.C.). Uzziah's reign was a particularly prosperous time in the history of Judah, but storm clouds were on the horizon. Assyria was on the rise again in the person of Tiglath-pileser III (745-727 B.C.). The Assyrian king threatened to engulf Syria and the northern kingdom of Israel. After the death of Tiglath-pileser, his successors, Shalmaneser and Sargon, defeated the northern kingdom in 722 B.C. and deported its citizens. This event brought Judah even more under the shadow of that great empire. Isaiah 37:38 suggests that the prophet lived until the death of Sennacherib in 681 B.C.

Isaiah's vision extended beyond the eighth century, through the rest of the OT period and beyond. The NT authors cited Isaiah as finding fulfillment in the great events surrounding Jesus Christ, the Messiah and Suffering Servant.

Message and Purpose Isaiah's message is relatively simple. First, Isaiah accused God's people of sin, rebelling against the One who made them and redeemed them. Second, Isaiah instructed these sinners to reform their ways and act obediently. Third, Isaiah announced God's judgment on the people because of their sin. Finally, God revealed His future restoration of the people, or at least of the faithful remnant that survived the judgment. As part of the restoration of God's people, Isaiah foresaw both judgment on the nations (chaps. 13-23) and a future turning of the nations to God (2:1-4). The first part of the book (chaps. 1-39) emphasizes sin, the call to repentance, and judgment; the second part (chaps. 40-66) emphasizes the hope of restoration. Other topics should be noted: God, the Holy One of Israel: From the beginning to the end of the book, God is called the Holy One of Israel. At the time of Isaiah's call, the seraphim cried out, "Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of Hosts" (6:3). God is set apart, completely removed from sin, the very epitome of moral perfection. God's people were to reflect the character of their holy God according to the requirements of the Torah (Lv 11:44-45; 19:2; 20:7), but they had fallen far short. Isaiah was commissioned to remind them of this high standard.

Trust and confidence: Isaiah called God's people to trust God, and when they did not, he condemned them for it. They were to fear God, not other human beings. Most often the Israelites betrayed God by trusting a powerful foreign nation or false gods.

God versus the idols: Because of the tendency of God's people to trust false gods, Isaiah's prophetic word often contrasted the true God with the false gods of the nations. God acted in history; idols did not. God could reveal the future; idols could not. God is eternal; idols were man-made and amounted to nothing.

Messiah and Servant: Perhaps more than any other part of Isaiah, the passages describing a future anointed king (Messiah; 9:1-7; 11:1-9) and those describing the Servant (42:1-9; 49:1-6; 50:4-6; 52:13-53:12) have attracted the interest of Christian readers of the book. From the time of the NT, Christian readers have understood Jesus Christ as the ultimate fulfillment of the expectation of a future king and Suffering Servant.

Structure The book of Isaiah is a combination of both prose and poetry. The prose is found primarily in chapters 36-39, a section that forms a bridge between the two sections of the book (see Message and Purpose). Isaiah's poetry is rich and varied. He wrote hymns, wisdom poetry, and even poetry that resembles a love song (5:1-7). The richness is seen in Isaiah's vocabulary. He used over 2,200 different Hebrews words, far more variety than found in any other OT book.

Study Notes 1:1 On the historical setting for Isaiah's ministry, see Introduction.

1:2 The opening oracle of the book puts Judah on trial. The call goes out to the heavens and the earth to hear the charges against God's people. In Deuteronomy the heavens and earth are invoked as witnesses to the covenant (Dt 4:26; 30:19). Isaiah called on the witnesses to listen to the charges filed in the following verses and to render judgment. God Himself describes the rebellion of His people, referring to them as His children, underlining the scandal of the betrayal.

1:3 God stood amazed at the stupidity of His people. They were dumber than an ox; even dumber than a donkey. The former was smart enough to recognize its owner; the latter might not recognize its owner, but it knew where it got its food. Israel did not even have that level of intelligence as it denied God, its master and sustainer.

1:4 The opening Oh marks the beginning of what is commonly called a "woe oracle." This literary form derives from funeral processions and often signifies the sense that the object of the Oh—in this case the sinful nation (Judah)—is as good as dead. As in verse 2, the heart of Judah's transgression is identified as a betrayal of God. Isaiah frequently refers to God as the Holy One of Israel. This title emphasizes God's separation from and profound aversion toward sin. When Isaiah encountered God in the temple, he experienced this absolute purity as he heard the seraphim cry out, "Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of Hosts" (6:3).

1:5-6 Judah's rebellion had already reaped consequences. They were like a sick man whose injuries stemmed from a beating, perhaps a poetic allusion to Assyrian military threats in 722 B.C. when the northern kingdom of Israel fell, or perhaps to a later incursion in 701 B.C. (see Introduction).

1:7-8 Judah's sin resulted in a foreign military intrusion in the land (see notes at 2:5 and 2:6). Daughter Zion is a personification of Zion, the most holy place in Judah, the mountain where the temple was built. It reminds the reader of the intimate relationship God enjoyed with the people He must judge. A shelter in a vineyard or a shack in a cucumber field were both fragile. Without upkeep they would crumble, providing an illuminating analogy for the desolation of Jerusalem.

1:9 God had been gracious. He did not completely destroy His people and make them like Sodom and Gomorrah (Gn 19). Rather, some would survive the judgment; restoration would follow the cleansing of judgment.

1:10-15 In these verses God expressed His revulsion at the religious practices of His people.

1:10 Though God will not punish the people with total annihilation as He did the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah (cp. v. 9), it is not as if they did not deserve that fate. Their rulers were like the inhabitants of those depraved cities who denied hospitality to strangers and engaged in perverse sexual acts.

1:11 God commanded His people to offer sacrifices (Lv 1-7; burnt offerings are specifically described in Lv 1), but the sacrifices of His people were reprehensible to Him. They were not offered with pure motives of sincere repentance. Rather, they were offered with hands covered with blood (Is 1:15).

1:13-14 God also commanded that Israel consecrate holy times on a weekly (Sabbaths) and yearly (New Moons . . . solemn assemblies . . . festivals) cycle, but they were loathsome to God because of the hypocrisy of His people.

1:15 This oracle has delayed the problem with the people's ritual practice until the very last line. Their sacrifices, times of worship, and even prayers were not acceptable because their hands were covered with blood. That is, they sinned and did not repent but still participated in worship. God did not tolerate such hypocritical behavior.

1:16-17 The oracle gives a prescription for change—repent. The metaphor for transformation here is a good washing. Transformation involves a cessation of evil activities as well as the requirement of good deeds. The good deeds are defined as social justice, particularly resisting oppressors and promoting the interests of the vulnerable (the fatherless and the widow).

1:18-20 The Lord presented two options to the people. One was to repent and obey. A remarkable transformation would result. Now they were blood red as a result of their sin, but repentance would turn them a glorious white. They could be cleansed (v. 16) with the result that life would be good. The second option was continued rebellion, a course of action that would end with their destruction.

1:21-22 God's people were not always corrupt. A formerly faithful city—Jerusalem—had gone bad. The worship of false gods, idolatry, is often described as a form of adultery. Dross and watered-down beer are symbols of impurity.

1:23 The rulers of Judah were corrupt. They sought their own financial advantage and neglected the rights and needs of the socially vulnerable (the widow and the fatherless).

1:24 Therefore marks the transition from indictment (vv. 21-23) to judgment. God will not let the guilty escape their punishment.

1:25-26 The judgment is not just punitive; it purifies. The people started a faithful city (v. 21) and after their cleansing, they will again be a Faithful City.

1:29 The people of God sinned by their idolatry that often took the form of worshiping false gods with foreign rituals. One common form of this false worship involved sacred trees that were probably connected with worship of a Canaanite fertility goddess called Asherah, the mother of Baal.

1:30-31 The oracle charged that Judah (you) would become like an oak. Here the tree image stands for the pride and resistance of God's people. But such apparent strength is undermined by the fact that the tree was not watered and therefore would quickly burn when set on fire.

2:2-4 This oracle is virtually identical to that found in Isaiah's near contemporary, the prophet Micah (Mc 4:1-3).

2:2 The phrase last days refers to the future, a time beyond the judgment on the sin of God's people. The mountain of the LORD's house is a reference to Zion, where the temple was built. Zion was where God made His presence known in a special way among His people. In actuality, Zion was not a physically imposing mountain—indeed, the nearby Mount of Olives was considerably taller—but in terms of spiritual importance, Zion stood above all the other mountains of the world.

2:3 The vision anticipates a day when not only Israel but all the nations will stream toward this mountain that represents the presence of God on earth. God had promised Abraham that He would bless the nations through his descendants (Gn 12:1-3). Today the church is composed of people from many different nations who have aligned themselves with God, thus fulfilling this vision in at least a preliminary way.

2:4 The nations seeking the Lord will experience a great transformation. They will not exert their energies and resources to destruction (swords . . . spears), but rather to productive activities (plows . . . pruning knives).

2:5 Some scholars believe this call to obey God's way concludes the previous oracle. If so, it invites Israel to follow God as the least they can do in anticipation of the fact that the nations will turn to God in the future. However, verse 6 begins with "For," marking the verses that follow as motivation for the repentance of Israel called for in this verse.

2:6 God had removed His presence from His people because they had imbibed of the superstitions of their neighbors to the East (Edom and Mesopotamia, for instance) and the west (Philistia). In particular, they practiced divination. Divination tries to access the divine realm via rituals, with the aim of foretelling the future and warding off evil. The Torah forbade such practices (Lv 19:26; Dt 18:9-14).

2:7 Deuteronomy 17:14-20 prohibited kings from accumulating precious metals and military assets (horses and chariots).

2:8 The root of the evil of idolatry is expressed here when the oracle states that idols are man-made (the work of their hands). Paul reflected this understanding when he referred to the folly of exchanging "the glory of the immortal God for images resembling mortal man, birds, four-footed animals, and reptiles" (Rm 1:23).

2:11 With the words human pride will be humbled, Isaiah expressed one of the major themes of his book. Through judgment, God cuts down the sinful pretensions of His people.

2:12-17 The prophets often spoke of a coming day belonging to the LORD (Jl 1:15; 2:1,11,31; Am 5:18,20; Zph 1:7,14; Zch 14:1). This day is one of judgment of sinners, which means the redemption of God's people. However, God's people in this verse were the object of His anger since they were rebelling against Him. While the "Day of the L ORD " ultimately points to the final judgment, God's temporal punishments of His people are often understood to be anticipatory fulfillments of the final judgment. Lebanon and Bashan were well known for their fertile lands and, in particular, their impressive trees. Thus, they are representative of arrogance built on abundance. God's judgment is against all kinds of pride.

2:19-20 People will flee in terror from the coming judgment of God. Out of fear, they will throw away their precious idols.

2:22 The last verse of the oracle states an important and pervasive theme in Isaiah connected to the prophet's concern that God's people act with humility. They were not to trust in man, but to put their confidence in God.

3:1-3 Since God's people trust in man (2:22) rather than in God, He will remove from them every kind of security. While various political, military, and religious leaders are on the list, it begins with the staples of bread and water.

3:4-5 With the removal of the leaders in whom the people trust comes the installation of youths to replace them. The result will be social chaos and oppression.

3:6-7 In such a disorderly society, it did not take much to be a leader among men. In the vignette described in these verses, the people are so unwilling and unfit to lead that a man will be pressed into a leadership role just because he has a cloak. But what would be left for him to lead? Only a heap of rubble.

3:9 Again, God's oracle compares Judah to Sodom, the preeminent early example of open, flagrant sin as well as God's determined judgment (Gn 19; see note at Is 1:9).

3:10-11 But not all people will experience the severe judgment of God. The righteous will find reward in a good life, and the wicked will suffer. In both cases, they will get what they deserve (see note at Ps 103:1-2).

3:13-15 Isaiah returned to the legal language with which the book began (1:2). The leaders were guilty of destroying the vineyard, the land of Judah (5:1-7), through their exploitation of the poor.

3:16 The proud daughters of Zion stand for the city and the inhabitants of Jerusalem (1:8), not just its female inhabitants. Though clearly the inhabitants included its share of rich, snooty women, the fact that the city is clearly described by such a female personification in 3:25-26 confirms the view that the daughters should not be restricted to the female population. For another oracle against women, see 32:9-20.

3:17-24 God will humiliate these proud women who represent the city and inhabitants of Jerusalem. Their physical appearance will be spoiled and their finery will be removed. They will end up wearing sackcloth, ugly and uncomfortable. While this language should be understood figuratively of the city of Jerusalem, it also has a literal significance. Wealthy, beautiful, well-dressed women would be reduced to such a state in the midst of the coming military siege.

3:25-4:1 War will severely reduce the male population of Jerusalem. There will not be enough men to go around for all the women. Women without husbands were socially vulnerable. Thus, seven women will beg a single man to make them their wives. He will not even need to provide their food (bread) and clothing (something mandated even for unloved secondary wives in Ex 21:10-11).

4:2-6 This oracle marks a sudden shift from judgment described in the oracles of 2:5-4:1 to future salvation. A similar dynamic has been observed in the abrupt transition of judgment speeches in 1:2-31 to the powerful picture of salvation in 2:1-4.

4:2 That day is a future day, a time that comes after the judgment described in 2:5-4:1. Indeed, the new restored state of Zion is a product of passing through the crucible of judgment. The remnant is here described as Israel's survivors. The reference to the Branch of the LORD is provocative. After all, the branch has a messianic connotation in Jr 23:5; 33:18; Zch 3:8; 6:12. Many scholars have pointed out that the branch in this verse is parallel with the fruit of the land and may indicate the rich abundance that Zion will enjoy in the future. But the two readings may not be mutually exclusive since in Hebrew parallelism the second idea is often not strictly synonymous, but expands the thought of the first idea.

4:3 The remnant will be holy. Holiness means set apart or consecrated for service to the Lord. Such a relationship implies an obedient lifestyle.

4:4 This verse explicitly states that Zion's blessed future condition will be accomplished through judgment. It is an act of the grace of God. God's people must wash themselves (1:16), but it is God who makes them clean.

4:5 After the exodus from Egypt, God guided Israel through the desert by a cloud and flame (cp. Ex 40:38), which represented God's mysterious and powerful presence with His people. Isaiah used this language to teach that the future remnant will again enjoy an intimate and assuring relationship with God after the judgment.

5:1-7 This poem has been identified as a parable, an allegory, and a love poem. Whatever its precise genre, its message is clear and compelling. It uses imagery to make the point that the people of God deserve the punishment coming their way. While previous oracles have hinted at hope beyond the judgment, this poem does not.

5:1 The loved one in the song turns out to be none other than God Himself, and His vineyard stands for His people (v. 7). The image of the vineyard is appropriate for Israel because grapes were one of its main crops.

5:2 The singer continues by describing the labor that went into preparing the vineyard. To create a vineyard was no easy matter. There was a period of a few years that passed from clearing the area of stones (pervasive through the hill country of Israel), planting expensive vines, and building a tower and a winepress. Similarly, God expended great effort in creating the right conditions for Israel to flourish as a godly nation. But in spite of all the work, the vineyard produced worthless grapes. This signified that the people of God did not live up to their promise of being an obedient and blessed people who would also bless the nations around them.

5:3-6 In these verses the first-person speaker is God, the owner of the vineyard, demanding an accounting of His grapes, the people of Israel.

5:3-4 When God called on the residents of Jerusalem to judge between Him and His vineyard, He in essence was calling on them to judge themselves. In this way, this poem functions similarly to the parable of Nathan as he confronted David about his sin with Bathsheba (2Sm 12:1-15).

5:5-6 The owner was incensed that the results of His hard labor had produced useless grapes, so He took His anger out on the vineyard.

5:7 The last verse of the poem makes explicit the identification of the vineyard as the people of God. It also gives the explanation for their punishment by means of a wordplay. In the land there was injustice (Hb mispach) and not justice (Hb mishpat), cries of wretchedness (Hb tse'aqah) and not righteousness (Hb tsedaqah).

5:8-30 The previous passage described Israel as a vineyard that produced worthless grapes. The six woes (on "woe," see note at 1:4) that follow illustrate why Israel was so worthless. Judgment oracles follow the description of the woes.

5:8 The first woe is directed toward those who expanded their real estate holdings. Since God graciously provided the land so all of His people had some, buying up land was always done at the cost of another person. Ahab's seizure of Naboth's vineyard is a concrete illustration of this exploitation (1Kg 21).

5:9-10 While the wealthy intended to grab land to get richer, the result will be the opposite—empty houses and poor harvests.

5:11-12 The second woe is directed toward those who indulged in excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages (beer and wine). They drank and ate and sang, forgetting what was really important—the work of God.

5:14 As God's people indulged themselves with drink and food, so Sheol will open its large mouth and swallow them. Sheol refers to the grave and in some contexts signifies the underworld. The idea of Sheol swallowing its victims did not originate with the Hebrews, but may stem from the Canaanite story that describes the god of death (Mot) swallowing his victims.

5:18-19 The third woe begins by picturing people whose sins were so heavy that they ended up pulling it along in a cart behind them. Their sin was one of cynicism. With a tone of disbelief, they challenged God to act. In particular they might be thinking of God's work of judgment. They sinned and did not yet see God's punishment.

5:20 The fourth woe is against those who confused ethical categories. They classified actions as evil that God would call good and vice versa. While the principle is broader than judicial, such moral confusion was particularly reprehensible in the courtroom (v. 23).

5:21 As with the previous verse, the issue of the fifth woe is human autonomy. On being wise in one's own eyes, see Pr 3:7; 26:12; 28:11,26.

5:22-23 The sixth and final woe returns to the earlier issue of excessive drinking (heroes at drinking wine) and also twisting justice for money.

5:24-25 Two judgment speeches follow (therefore introduces vv. 24 and 25) the woes.

5:26 God will call for foreign armies to descend on His people. Though these armies are not mentioned by name, we know from later history that these nations were Assyria and Babylon. Notice that God would signal them with a whistle, and they would immediately respond. This illustrates God's sovereign rule over the nations.

5:29 Assyrian royal inscriptions often compare their kings to lions.

6:1-13 Most prophets record a time when God called them to their ministry. Moses received God's call at the burning bush (Ex 3). Jeremiah heard God tell him that he had been chosen from the womb to deliver a message of judgment and salvation to the nations (Jr 1:4-10). Ezekiel experienced an incredible vision while he was in exile in Babylon (Ezk 1:4-3:27). Isaiah received his commissioning vision in the temple, but in his vision the temple was transformed into the throne room of heaven itself.

6:1 King Uzziah (called "Azariah" in 2Kg 15:3) died about 740 B.C. He had been a relatively good king, and did "what was right in the LORD's sight" (2Kg 15:3), though he did not remove the high places. God also blessed Uzziah's reign with prosperity and military success. His death, coupled with the rise of Assyria, created great uncertainty in Judah. Note that God is so great that His robe (the Hb suggests just the seam of His robe) filled the temple.

6:2 The seraphim were angelic creatures of great power and importance. Their name means "burning ones," and the implication of fire evokes thoughts of danger and mystery. Covering their eyes shielded them from the brilliance of the divine glory. Covering their feet (possibly used here as a euphemism) may have been a posture of submission.

6:3 The word holy spoken three times is emphatic or superlative and points to God's otherness. He is completely separated from anything profane or sinful. His sovereignty is underlined by the fact that His glory filled the whole earth.

6:5 In the presence of such holiness, Isaiah felt the weight of his own sinfulness. He feared for himself because he knew that God did not tolerate uncleanness in His presence.

6:6-7 God prepared Isaiah by cleansing his lips, the instrument by which he would execute his prophetic task. He did this symbolically by having one of His seraphim touch the prophet's lips with a burning coal. Fire can purify (Nm 31:22-23), and this burning coal was taken from the altar where sacrifices were offered to atone for sin (1Ch 6:49).

6:8 Isaiah's readiness to serve contrasts with the reluctance of Moses and Jeremiah (Ex 4:1-17; Jr 1:6).

6:9-10 Isaiah was a prophet with a message of judgment. God's commission recognized that, because of its sin, Israel's healing could only come about through their punishment. Isaiah's message from God would serve only to distance them even more from God.

6:11-13 From the start Isaiah knew that his message would not lead God's people to repentance. They would experience destruction. Even so, a remnant would survive. This remnant is pictured as a stump that is left after a mighty tree falls.

7:1 -2 The political situation was tense in Jerusalem. In the early 730s B.C. the aggressive Assyrian king Tiglath-pileser III was busy on his northern frontier. During this time, Rezin, the king of Aram with its capital in Damascus, and Pekah, the king of Israel (also known as Ephraim), joined forces to withstand the almost certain Assyrian attack that would follow Tiglath-pileser's victory in the north. Rezin and Pekah wanted Judah to support them, but Ahaz wanted nothing to do with the alliance. By this time he might already have paid (or at least was contemplating paying) the Assyrians to rescue him from these kings (2Kg 16:6-9). He probably feared Tiglath-pileser, but he apparently realized the Syro-Ephraimite coalition was a more immediate threat. Isaiah confronted the king with a question: What was the source of his trust: Yahweh or the Assyrians?

7:3 The name of Isaiah's son, Shear-jashub, means "a remnant will return," a theme that has already played a significant role in the first six chapters of the book (1:9,26; 4:2-6; 6:13).

7:6 Though no other certain references to Tabeel exist in the Bible or outside of it, the political intentions of Rezin and Pekah were clear. They wanted to remove Ahaz from the throne because of his unwillingness to join their coalition and they intended to install a puppet king who would be more easily manipulated.

7:8 The reference to 65 years is puzzling. If this oracle is dated to 735 B.C. or thereabouts, then it would point to approximately 670 B.C., but the northern kingdom was soundly defeated by Assyria in 722 B.C. Of course, that is "within 65 years," but perhaps the reference is to some unknown event among the survivors of the northern kingdom around 670 B.C. It is also possible that the deportations of Israelites and the importation of foreigners into their former region happened around that time.

7:9 The challenge that the oracle presented to Ahaz was that he should trust God and not Assyria as he faced the threat from Rezin and Pekah.

7:11 The purpose of a sign was to give Ahaz even more reason to have confidence in God rather than Assyria to rescue him from Rezin and Pekah. Sheol refers to the underworld.

7:12 From Isaiah's reaction, the reader can discern that Ahaz's reply, which on the surface seems pious, was actually impious. The king seemed to cite scriptural precedent (Dt 6:16), but the law prohibited the type of rebellious testing that took place at Massah (Ex 17:1-7), not a test offered by a true prophet of the Lord. It may be that Ahaz had already decided to call on Assyria for help.

7:14 The context indicates that the preliminary fulfillment of this sign must have taken place within a few years of its utterance—the time between a child's conception and his knowing right from wrong (vv. 15-16), traditionally at age 12. The Hebrew word translated virgin means "young woman of marriageable age" and often has the implication of virginity. Thus many scholars feel that the referent is a woman whom Isaiah would marry and, if so, then the birth is mentioned in 8:1-4. This may be the immediate fulfillment of this sign. But its ultimate and more exalted fulfillment is noted in Mt 1:23 as it cites the more specific Greek word found in the Septuagint, parthenos, which means "virgin." Immanuel means "God is with us."

7:15 The first phrase could also be translated, "In order to learn," meaning that hardship will motivate the child to turn to God. The significance of eating butter and honey is that the devastation of the land's agriculture (vv. 23-24) will be such that other foods will not be available.

7:16 The Aramean kingdom of Rezin was destroyed in 732 B.C. Tiglath-pileser reduced the size of the northern kingdom of Pekah in 733 B.C., and the king was assassinated and replaced by Hoshea. Even so, the northern kingdom was totally defeated in 722 B.C., about 13 years after the Immanuel prophecy.

7:17 But it was not just Syria and the northern kingdom that would experience Assyrian devastation. Judah would also experience God's punishment. As later events showed, paying Tiglath-pileser to take care of Ahaz's northern problem was not the smartest strategy. From that point on Ahaz paid a heavy tribute as Assyria's vassal (2Kg 16:10-18).

7:18-19 The fly (Egypt) and the bee (Assyria) will infest (occupy) the land.

7:20 The razor is Tiglath-pileser, who will ravage the land of Judah.

The Syro-Ephraimite War 8:1 There is nothing unusual about the use of parchment and pen in this verse. Nor would there be anything unusual if, as some scholars suggest, the Hebrew here indicates a clay tablet and a stylus. The significance of the large size of the parchment may simply be that the writing was prominent and clear. The name Maher-shalal-hash-baz means "Speeding to the Plunder, Hurrying to the Spoil," and it signifies the rapid future advance of Assyria.

8:2 The presence of witnesses indicates that the writing of this prophecy had the force of a legal document. If the prophecy did not come true, then these two witnesses could attest to its falsity. If it did come true, they could proclaim that it was written before, and not after, the fact. It is possible that Uriah is mentioned in 2Kg 16:10-18. He was the high priest during Ahaz's reign who, at the king's request, modified the altar to conform to the one in Damascus.

8:3 On intimate with the prophetess, see note at 7:14. The first fulfillment of the Immanuel prophecy may well be connected with the birth of Maher-shalal-hash-baz recorded here. Isaiah's wife was a prophetess (cp. Miriam, Ex 15:20; Deborah, Jdg 4:4; Huldah, 2Kg 22:14; Anna, Lk 2:36).

8:4 The point of the prophecy is that within just a few years the Assyrian army would advance to crush Damascus, the capital of Rezin's Syria, and Samaria, the capital of Pekah's northern kingdom of Israel.

8:5-8 It was good news to Judah that Assyria would defeat Syria and Israel, the two nations that were allied against it. In this light rejoiced with Rezin, the translation and meaning of which is debated, likely refers to Judah's rejoicing in Rezin's coming defeat. The oracle states that such rejoicing might be premature since the Assyrian threat would come to its doorstep as well.

8:6 The waters of Shiloah refer to the small water channel that carried water from pools outside Jerusalem into the city. Here it stands for God Himself contrasting with the raging river mentioned in the next verse. Thus, Judah's rejection of Shiloah signifies their rejection of God.

8:7 The mighty rushing waters of the Euphrates represent the Assyrian king and thus Assyrian might. By calling on Tiglath-pileser to help him against the Syro-Ephraimite alliance, Ahaz was choosing a foreign nation rather than God.

8:8 The waters that represent Assyria will come up to Judah's neck. They will not be drowned, but they will find themselves paying annual tribute. On occasion the Assyrian army will threaten their independent existence.

8:9-10 However, Assyria will not completely subjugate Judah. After all, God was still with them.

8:11 God spoke to Isaiah (me) so he would not conform to the people's beliefs.

8:12 The alliance (alternatively "conspiracy," NRSV) may refer to the alliance between Syria and the northern kingdom of Israel against Judah or perhaps an inner-Judean alliance against the pro-Assyrian party of Ahaz. Whatever the exact alliance in view, the point was that Isaiah must not be afraid like the people were.

8:13 The fear of God overshadows all other fears (Lk 12:5). The reason Isaiah and others must not fear threatening alliances is because God is the only One who should be feared. There is a difference in the quality of the two fears described in these verses. The fear of human beings may be described as terror (v. 12), while the fear of God is described as awe.

8:14 The sanctuary image highlights God's holiness and suggests that He protects His people, but because they have rejected Him, the Judeans will experience Him as a stumbling stone.

8:16 The testimony, also called the instruction, refers to the words of God that have come to Isaiah. These are to be kept safely (bind up . . . seal up) by Isaiah's disciples. They will keep the oracles of God secure until the events prove them true.

8:17 Because of their sin, God will withdraw His saving presence (hiding His face) from His people (the house of Jacob). The faithful, represented by Isaiah, will wait for His certain return.

8:18 The children who are signs and wonders are Shear-jashub (7:3) and Maher-shalal-hash-baz (8:1).

8:19-20 The people wanted Isaiah to engage in necromancy along the lines of the witch of En-dor (1Sm 28). Such divination was strictly prohibited in the OT (Dt 18:9-14). They should put their trust in God and seek only His guidance through His word.

9:1 Zebulun and Naphtali were two northern tribes hit hard by the Assyrian invasion led by Tiglath-pileser in 733 B.C. At that time, the Assyrians reduced the land holdings of the northern empire and integrated three new provinces into their empire. These three provinces were called Magiddo (Galilee), Du'ru (the Way of the Sea), and Gl 'aza (the land east of the Jordan).

9:2 The Assyrian invasion brought great devastation (darkness), but the people still had great reason to hope (light has dawned). The verbs in this section are in what is often called the "prophetic perfect." Though the events were in the future, they are described as if they had already happened.

9:4 The type of deliverance the oracle pictures seemed impossible. After all, Assyria was a world power and God's people were weak and crushed. Thus, the oracle alludes to the day of Midian. This refers to the events of Jdg 6 and 7 when Gideon with just a handful of troops—but with the power of God—defeated the oppressive Midianites and expelled them from the land.

9:6-7 Twice earlier in this section of Isaiah, the birth of children has been described as having prophetic significance (7:14; 8:1-4). For a third time, the reader learns of a future birth. Some commentators believe the text means that this future royal child will be a purely human descendant of David who will be proclaimed king and lead God's people to a new level of freedom and prosperity. Both Hezekiah and Josiah have been identified as this child. However, the titles given to this child and the description of His kingdom far surpass anything that was applicable to Hezekiah or Josiah. The only feasible interpretation of this passage is messianic. This child will be given names that signify His character. He will be a sage characterized by extraordinary wisdom (Wonderful Counselor). He will have life that is never ending (Eternal Father). He will bring peace (Prince of Peace). But the most extraordinary thing of all that confirms He is simply not to be identified with a Hezekiah or a Josiah is His title, Mighty God (cp. 8:21). In the NT, Jesus is identified as the Davidic descendant who fulfilled this great promise (Mt 1:1,22-23).

9:9-10 The preeminent sin of God's people, pride and arrogance, is again pointed out. They believed they did not need God to survive and prosper. They continued in their pride even after experiencing devastation at the hands of Tiglath-pileser. They foolishly claimed they not only could rebuild, they could even improve themselves by their own resources and strength (cut stones replace bricks . . . cedars replace sycamores).

9:11 Rezin was the king of Syria (Aram) whose adversaries were Assyria and its vassals.

9:12 Israel was beset by enemies to the northeast (Aram, who under their king, Rezin, allied and exploited them for its purposes) and Philistia to its immediate west. Note that the last two parts of this verse are repeated in verses 17 and 21, as well as 10:4.

9:13 God's punishment of His people was intended to convince them to return to His ways, but they were so dull of mind and spirit that they did not respond.

9:14 After the first Assyrian incursion into the north (733 B.C.), Israel continued in its sinful ways. God soon brought a more devastating judgment in 722 B.C., ending their independent existence. The expression head and tail, palm branch and reed points to a totality (19:15).

9:15-16 It was particularly the leaders (including the elder and the prophet) who were responsible for the people going in the wrong direction.

9:18-19 Devastation is seen as the natural consequence of wickedness itself (wickedness burns like a fire) as well as the result of divine anger (the land is scorched by the wrath of the LORD of Hosts). Sin breaks up human relationships, even brotherly love.

9:20 The greediness of the people led them to consume everyone and everything in their path. Eventually their hunger turned them on themselves.

9:21 Manasseh and Ephraim were two large northern tribes whose founding fathers were brothers, the sons of Joseph (Gn 41:50-52; 48:5). They turned against each other, illustrating lack of compassion toward a brother (Is 9:19). Then together they turned against Judah.

10:1-2 On woe, see note at 1:4. God's law protected the socially vulnerable: the poor (see Ex 23:6,11; Dt 15:4-11), widows (see Ex 22:22), and the fatherless (see Dt 10:18). Isaiah condemned man-made laws that corrupted justice.

10:4 With the fourth repetition of the refrain concerning God's anger (cp. 9:12,17,21), the section comes to a close. The refrain identifies the main theme of the passage (9:8-10:4). Though punishment has come, God's people still have not repented. More judgment will follow.

10:5 The oracle opens with a woe against Assyria. On "woe" see note at 1:4 (see also 5:8-30). This woe is directed toward the enemy rather than toward God's people (10:1). Assyria is the tool He will use to bring punishment against Israel and Judah. The reference to a rod brings to mind the extensive teaching in Proverbs about using a rod to drive the folly out of a child (Pr 10:13; 22:15) and how a rod is applied to one's son to encourage him to travel the right path (Pr 13:24; 23:13-14).

10:6 The godless nation is ironically not Assyria but Israel. They will become the object of God's anger. The phrase to take spoils, to plunder is reminiscent of the name Maher-shalal-hash-baz, "Speeding to the Plunder, Hurrying to the Spoil" (8:1).

10:7 There was a difference between the divine intention and the intention of Assyria. This difference was no obstacle to God's use of Assyria for His purposes, but it did bode poorly for the tool of God's anger. While God's intention was to promote His own glory by punishing His sinful people, Assyria was interested only in imperialistic expansion.

10:9 These three pairs of cities each begin with the southernmost of the two. Thus, Calno (also known as Calneh) was south of Carchemish, Hamath was south of Arpad, and Samaria was south of Damascus. These cities were paired and listed for geographical and not chronological reasons since Carchemish was conquered by the Assyrians in 717 B.C., Calno in 738, Hamath in 738 and 720, and Arpad in 740. The claim of the Assyrian king was an imperialistic one, again demonstrating that his intention was different from God's.

10:11 The comparisons of southern cities to northern ones culminate in a final comparison between Samaria in the north and Jerusalem in the south: both were practicing idolatry as the Syrian cities did (v. 9).

10:12 God will overrule Assyria's imperialistic intentions. Indeed, He will use their godless motivation to accomplish His own goal of punishing His idolatrous people. Nonetheless, the king of Assyria and his nation will not get off the hook.

10:13-14 The boastful quotation from the Assyrian king reflects the type of bombastic language used in contemporary Assyrian royal inscriptions. The image of the Assyrian king stealing eggs from an abandoned nest emphasizes his cruelty in taking advantage of weaker nations. Indeed, no one can put up a substantial challenge to his growing power.

10:15 The Assyrian king's boasts are ill-founded. From his perspective, he was a mighty warrior and a great leader of armies. From a heavenly perspective, he was a mere tool used by God to accomplish His purposes. The use of rhetorical questions directed to the king has the function of scolding and embarrassing him in his pretension. Each question has the implied answer, "Of course not."

10:16-19 The conjunction therefore serves as a transition from indictment to judgment. The description of the punishment by disease and fire could be taken literally or metaphorically, or both. The point is clear: glorious and prosperous Assyria will soon be weakened by the judgment of God.

10:17 The image of God as Light is typically used for positive purposes (Ps 27:1), but like the light of the sun, God both illuminates so people can see clearly and also scorches and kills in judgment.

10:20 The remnant will turn their trust to God rather than a foreign power.

10:22 God had promised Abraham that his descendants would be as numerous as the sand of the sea (see Gn 22:17; 32:12; 41:49), but because of their punishment, only a remnant would survive and even that would be an act of God's grace.

10:24 The present Assyrian threat is compared to the bondage in Egypt. This comparison evokes memories of God's deliverance of His people at the Red Sea (Ex 14-15).

10:26 Oreb was a Midianite leader who oppressed the Israelites during the period of the judges. He was defeated by the forces of Gideon and executed at a rock that was given his name, the rock of Oreb (Jdg 7:24-25). The reference to God's staff in Egypt recalls the crossing of the Red Sea. Moses raised his staff, representing God's presence. God caused the sea to divide, allowing the Israelites to escape the Egyptian army (Ex 14:21-31).

10:27 The yoke is an image of political domination frequently used by the prophets (14:25; 47:6; 58:6; Jr 27:11; 30:8; Ezk 30:18).

10:28-32 The oracle in these verses describes the march of the Assyrian army from the north to the very doorstep of Jerusalem. While some have suggested that this describes an actual attack on Jerusalem, it cannot be equated with the Assyrian advance that took place in 701 B.C. under Sennacherib because the army took a different route. This leads certain scholars to propose a second, later Assyrian campaign on Judah, but this is doubtful. The route described in these verses is unlikely to be one taken by an actual army since the terrain would be difficult to cross. The best understanding of these verses is as a visionary image of an attack, not a description of an actual attack. The route described is the most direct route "as the crow flies," indicating that not even natural obstacles could slow down the army's advance.

10:28 Aiath is likely identified with Ai (Jos 8), which was about 30 miles north of Jerusalem. But the Hebrew term Ai means "ruin" and Aiath is plural, "ruins," so the name could be given to a number of different sites. Migron refers to the Wadi Swenit, a dry riverbed between Michmash and Geba.

10:29 Ramah and Gibeah were on the major central hill route north of Jerusalem.

10:30 Gallim . . . Laishah, and Anathoth (known as the hometown of the prophet Jeremiah; Jr 1:1) were small towns just north of Jerusalem.

10:31 Madmenah and Gebim are still not identified, but they were probably villages just north of Jerusalem.

10:32 Nob is typically associated with modern Mount Scopus, just northeast of Jerusalem. As a person stands on Nob, he has a commanding view of the city of Jerusalem. Nob was where David received sustenance and the sword of Goliath as he began his flight from Saul. King Saul repaid the priests at Nob by slaughtering them (1Sm 21:1-9; 22:11-23). Nob is also mentioned in Neh 11:32 as near Anathoth.

10:33-34 The oracle ends with a sudden reversal. Assyria marched on Jerusalem, but the army met with destruction. They will become trees (a cedar from Lebanon is implied by the final line) that will be felled by none other than God Himself. The Assyrians had been the ax in God's hand against His people (v. 15), but God will wield an ax against them.

11:1 Judgment in Isaiah is often described as a cutting down of trees (6:13; 10:33-34). The stump of Jesse indicates that the Davidic line has also been cut down, but the tree is yet living. The shoot that springs up shows that David's line will have new life. It will be restored and will once again bear fruit. The association of the stump with Jesse rather than David indicates that there is a new beginning here, a going back to origins, and a distancing from the later corrupt kings of Judah. The continuation of the Davidic line is an indication of the grace of God based on the covenant of kingship with David: "Your house and kingdom will endure before Me forever, and your throne will be established forever" (2Sm 7:16). As redemptive history progressed, the new Davidic dynasty was not realized in later Davidic descendants like Zerubbabel (Ezr 3; Zch 4), but in Jesus Christ.

11:2 The shoot is different in character than other descendants of David, most of whom were self-seeking, fearful, and cruel. The Spirit of the LORD will characterize this descendant. The Spirit will fill this leader with wisdom: the ability to rule, and strength: the power to rule. Scripture makes it clear that the Spirit brings wisdom (Ex 31:3; Dt 34:9) and that wisdom leads to productive and just rule (1Kg 4:29; Pr 8:15-16).

11:3 The fear of the LORD is the basic characteristic of a wise, godly person (Pr 1:7). The fear described here is not terror but awe. This wise, Spirit-filled person will not judge according to external appearances, but he will cut to the heart of the truth.

11:4 The wicked kings of Israel and the Near East exploited and took advantage of the weak (the poor and the oppressed; see notes at 3:13-15 and 10:1-2), but this king will rule with justice and protect their rights.

11:5 The term translated belt (Hb 'ezor) refers to an intimate piece of apparel. The idea is that these two fundamental characteristics of covenant fidelity will be an integral part of the future Davidic king's character.

11:6-9 The future rule is described in Edenic terms where there is no animosity among God's creatures. The knowledge of the LORD will permeate this future ideal world ushered in by the shoot of the stump of Jesse.

11:10 The root of Jesse is a variant reference to what is called the "stump of Jesse" (see note at v. 1). Of course, the stump would include the root of the tree, but perhaps this way of referring to the image is a way of emphasizing the hidden life that remains. The root of Jesse is here a banner, which refers to a standard around which an army rallied. This same Hebrew word is used in 5:26 (translated "signal flag"). In 5:26 the signal flag was a rallying point for the nations as they assembled to attack God's people. Here the banner is a rallying point for the regathering of the remnant.

11:11 The list of nations in this verse probably should not be taken as a literal reference as if God's people would return from all of these nations, but from all directions. Assyria . . . Elam, and Shinar (Mesopotamia) were to the east; Egypt, Pathros, and Cush were to the south; Hamath was to the north; and the coasts and islands were to the west.

11:12 On banner, see note at verse 10.

11:13 At least from the time of Rehoboam, Solomon's son, enmity and political division had existed between Judah and Ephraim (the northern kingdom of Israel also known as Samaria). The future will bring an end to hostilities and a reunion of God's people.

11:14 A reunited Israel will expand its borders to encompass the small nations to the east: Edom . . . Moab, and Ammon. These nations harassed Israel whenever they could.

11:15-16 Exodus imagery is used to describe the return of the remnant from Assyria. God will split the Euphrates River like He did the Red Sea, but in this case He won't split it into two parts but seven.

12:1 On that day points to a future date. That date is unspecified, but it is a day that will certainly come. Up to this point in the text, the phrase has been used in reference to the coming judgment (2:20; 3:18; 4:1; 7:18,20-21,23), but now it points to the time after the storm, the time of salvation.

12:2 Yah is a shortened form of the divine name Yahweh, God's personal covenant name that He revealed to Moses at the burning bush (Ex 3:14-15).

12:3 In a relatively dry land like Israel, water and the refreshment it brings was an apt image for salvation. The picture of water bubbling up in a spring evokes freshness and abundance.

12:4 The praise of God serves as a testimony not just within God's people, but also to the nations. They were also recipients of God's blessing through Abraham's descendants (Gn 12:1-13).

13:1 Oracle (Hb massa' ; lit "burden") is often used in the context of judgment pronouncements against the nations. This is a "war oracle," a declaration of war. Babylon is the object, which is surprising since Babylon was not the major player on the world scene in Isaiah's time. But Babylon will play a major role in the judgment of God's people in Judah. Babylon represented cultural arrogance and human self-reliance.

13:2 The call to lift a banner is a call to rally troops before a battle (5:26; 11:10,12). The identity of the army and the object of their attack are unspecified. Even though an actual gate of the nobles is unknown, the name evokes ideas of elitism, power, and pride.

13:3 My warriors might be angelic, but the reference is more likely to human warriors whom God will use for His purposes. Since they may not be conscious of such a divine purpose (10:5-11), they are not necessarily an army of the faithful.

13:4 The LORD of Hosts is God's name that signifies His activity in warfare. The tumult on the mountains emanates from God's army that gathers there. While it is possible that the mountains are the Zagros east of Babylon, it is not certain.

13:5 The far land is not specified, but it may be a reference to the Medes (v. 17) whom God will use (as part of the Persian Empire) to defeat Babylon (the whole country).

13:6 The day of the LORD is a future time when God will wage war against those who oppose Him.

13:7 Weak hands and a melted heart refer to physical and psychological reactions to fear.

13:8 Isaiah used the theme of a woman in labor, one that appears often in prophetic literature (21:3; Jr 4:31; 6:24; 22:23; 30:6; Mc 4:9). It is a graphic image of the pain and distress that will result from God's warring activity.

13:10 The incursion of God as warrior causes nature to go into convulsions. On the day of God's judgment, the sun . . . moon, and stars, which God created to provide the world with light (Gn 1:14-19), will go out, plunging the world into darkness (Ezk 32:7; Jl 2:2; 3:1,15; Am 5:18; Mc 3:6; Mt 24:29; Lk 21:25; Rv 8:12).

13:11 The object of God's wrath is pride that leads people to trust in themselves rather than in Him.

13:12 God's warring judgment will reduce the population of the earth dramatically.

13:13 When the divine warrior appears, not only will the heavenly bodies convulse (v. 10); so will the earth.

13:14-15 The destroyed city had residents from many different lands. Once destroyed, the people will be leaderless and will quickly run (like wandering gazelles) back to their homeland. However, they may not make it back. The road will be lined with dangers, including robbers and perhaps even an enemy army.

13:16 In ancient times defeated cities endured the horrible atrocities described in this verse. The worst was that their children would be killed.

13:17 At last, the attacking army is described as the implacable Medes, a people known as early as the ninth century B.C. They came from the Zagros Mountains east of the Mesopotamian plain. These warlike people are known in history as Babylon's allies when they defeated Assyria. However, in the sixth century B.C. they were engulfed by Persia. The combined armies of the Medes and Persians defeated Babylon in 539 B.C.

13:19 For the first time Babylon is named as the object of God's warring activity. They are described as the jewel of the kingdoms in anticipation of the position they will assume after their defeat of Assyria at the end of the seventh century B.C. The Chaldeans were the leading tribe that produced the leaders (Nabopolassar and Nebuchadnezzar) who led the Babylonian resurgence. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah is described in Gn 19. This account in Isaiah implies a horrible end. It associates Babylon with the perverse sin that led to the destruction of those cities.

13:21-22 These verses describe animals that lived in ruins and desolate places. Ostriches and owls were considered unclean (Lv 11:15-16).

14:1-2 An oracle anticipating the restoration of God's people appears in the midst of the oracle against Babylon. While this seems awkward, Babylon's fall correlates with the rise of a restored Judah. Indeed, this restoration provides the context for the taunt song against Babylon's king in verses 4-21.

14:1 Just as God chose Israel in Egypt and freed them from bondage, He will do so again in Mesopotamia. As foreigners traveled with God's people from Egypt, they will do so again.

14:2 The nations had escorted God's people out of the promised land when they were exiled, so in the future they will escort them back. Power relations will be reversed. Israel had been the slave of the nations; now the nations will serve God's people.

14:3-4 The following song (vv. 4b-21) has its setting after Israel's return to the land. The song is a song of contempt or a taunt song (Hb mashal). It was directed toward the king of Babylon. The song speaks as if the king is a definite individual, but the lack of a specific name may mean that the king is depicted as the apex of the imperialistic machine that oppressed the people of God.

14:5 The staff and the scepter were held by the king, and they represented his power. The staff may be a shepherd's staff, and it could refer to the king's responsibility to shepherd the people. The scepter was an ornamented mace used as a weapon, representing the king's fearsome power. The fact that God has broken them indicates His superior power.

14:8 It is not just the inhabitants of the earth, and in particular the people of God, who rejoice over Babylon's downfall, but even the trees, which had been cut down to produce siege works.

14:9 Sheol refers to the grave and in some contexts signifies the underworld. In this verse Sheol is personified and pictured as warmly greeting its new citizen, the Babylonian king. Indeed, Sheol will rouse all the spirits of the departed kings to greet the Babylonian king when he arrives in the realm of the dead. Some believe this reference to the activities of the dead is just a poetic device, but it is better understood as evidence that the Israelites at the time of Isaiah had an awareness of the afterlife.

14:10 Though conscious, the spirits of the departed kings will confess that they are weak in the afterlife. This weakness contrasts with the oppressive power they had exercised in life.

14:11 Maggots and worms will crawl over the corpse in the grave. This plays on the idea that Sheol was considered both the grave and the underworld.

14:12-15 Commentators have often connected this passage to Lk 10:18 and Rv 12:8-9, but the context seems clear that the one fallen from the heavens is not Satan (even though the KJV translated shining morning star as "Lucifer") but is instead the Babylonian king. If there is a double application the Bible never indicates as much. The poetic theme of this passage may be modeled on the Canaanite account of a lesser god that tried to usurp the position of the high God. Such pride resulted in a quick and horrible fall.

14:12 The shining morning star may figuratively refer to a Canaanite deity whose story provides the pattern for this taunting lament for the Babylonian king. But in any case, Venus is the morning "star" that falls so quickly through the sky.

14:13 The attempt of a human, no matter how powerful, to take the place of God is the ultimate expression of arrogance. In Canaanite mythology, which is exploited here to make a point about human pride, the mountain of Baal, the chief god, was in the remotest parts of the North. Indeed, his mountain was named Mount North (Hb Zaphon).

14:15 Pride tries to lift a human being up to the level of God, but it always causes a rapid fall to a position below humanity (the Pit).

14:16-17 In death the powerful, oppressive king will look weak and helpless. The nameless people who will see him are quoted as expressing amazement at how powerless he looks.

14:18-20 There is even a contrast with other kings, who were buried in fine tombs. This king will not even be given a decent burial but will lie dead on the battlefield, surrounded and even covered by other dead bodies. Again, the idea is that a person who was powerful in life will be reduced to a humiliating circumstance in death.

14:21 It was an expectation of a powerful king that, when he died, his son would become the next king and would continue his imperialistic pretensions, but because of the depredations of the fathers, the sons would meet an untimely death.

14:22-23 God will bring this judgment. Babylon, particularly its most southern part, was a swampland. God would reduce the entire nation to this in the anger of His judgment.

14:24-27 The oracle shifts focus to the northern center of Mesopotamian power, Assyria. Assyria was the nation that under Tiglath-pileser III reduced the size of the northern kingdom of Israel in the 730s B.C. and then in 722, under Shalmaneser, deported its citizens. But God will bring even this strong kingdom to an end.

14:24 On a human level Assyria seemed invincible, but God assured His people of His determination to judge the Assyrian people.

14:25 The yoke was a common metaphor for political servitude (10:27; 47:6; 58:6; Jr 27:11; 30:8; Ezk 30:18).

14:28-32 The oracle against Philistia is the first in a series of oracles against nations that were immediate neighbors of Israel. Indeed, Philistia occupied part of the promised land in a region west of Jerusalem and on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The book of Genesis records interaction between the patriarchs and the Philistines (Gn 10:14; 21:32,34), but it was not until the period of the united monarchy that we hear of a sizeable presence of Philistines in the region. Both Saul and David waged war against them. A remnant of Philistines lasted until the sixth century (Jr 47).

14:28 The year that King Ahaz died is debated. It may have been as early as the 720s, but it certainly was not later than 715 B.C.

14:29 Debate surrounds the exact reference to the figurative language of this verse, but the broken rod may be a reference not to a particular king but to weakness in Assyria, perhaps in the period after Sargon II took the throne. However, the warning is that, though apparently weak, Assyria is not done. From its slumber will come a flying serpent against Philistia. Under Sennacherib, Esar-haddon, and Ashurbanipal, Assyria did experience a major resurgence.

14:30 Because of Philistia's oppression of Judah, the poor had grown poorer, but with its destruction, there will be a reversal of their fortunes.

14:31 The cloud of dust coming from the north will be none other than the Assyrian army that will destroy Philistia.

14:32 This verse envisions Philistine envoys trying to convince Judah to join them in resisting the Assyrian army. But Judah's trust should be in Zion, or God, not foreign alliances.

15:1-16:14 The oracle against Moab is the second in a series of oracles against nations that were immediate neighbors of Israel. Moab was located in Transjordan opposite Jericho and on the east bank of the Dead Sea. The Bible and other sources (the Moabite Stone, for example) record a long history of conflict between Israel and Moab whose origins go back to the incestuous union between Lot and his daughter (Gn 19:30-38). See Jr 48 for a similar oracle against Moab.

15:1 Ar was a city on the wadi Arnon in the middle part of Moab, and Kir (the same place as Kir-hareseth; 16:7) was further south.

15:2 Nebo and Medeba were two northern Moabite sites east of the northern tip of the Dead Sea. Nebo was further known as the mountain that Moses ascended to catch sight of the promised land before he died (Dt 34:1). Dibon was further south about midway down the coast of the Dead Sea and some 20 miles inland. Its temple was dedicated to Chemosh, the main god of the Moabites. Shaving hair from the head and beard was an ancient mourning rite.

15:3 Sackcloth was a very rough material, irritating to the skin, worn as part of mourning rites.

15:4 Heshbon and Elealeh were northeastern cities in Moab. Jahaz was further south parallel to Dibon.

15:5-9 The oracle in these verses describes the attempted escape route of those who survived the devastation of northern Moab.

15:5 While the location of some of these sites (Zoar, for instance) is debated, the fact that others (Eglath-shelishiyah and Horonaim) were in the south suggests that all the sites mentioned here were in the south. This implies that the destruction was in the northern part of Moab and the refugees fled south.

15:6 The waters of Nimrim may be associated with the wadi Numeira, continuing the naming of southern Moabite sites.

15:7 The Wadi of the Willows may be a reference to the Zered River, the Wadi el-Hesa, which separated Moab from Edom on the south.

15:8 The locations of Eglaim and Beer-elim are uncertain.

15:9 The Hebrew text says the "waters of Dimon," but good textual evidence (as listed in the textual footnote in the HCSB) leads to the change of Dimon to Dibon. The oracle reverts from the south to the midpoint of Moab, but this may be due to the fact that Dibon was the most important city. The point is that those who escaped the devastation of the attack would be eaten by lions.

16:1-5 The Moabites will turn to Judah (Zion) to request refuge.

16:1 Sela (commonly identified as the cliff fortress of Petra) was in Edom, so the Moabite refugees apparently will go that far. Then they will send gifts (lambs) to Jerusalem (Zion).

16:2 The previous verses place the refugees in Edom, so it is odd that they will now say they are at the fords of the Arnon which is in the center of Moab. The metaphor of the bird pushed from the nest presupposes that they were out of their home in Moab. Oswalt suggests that it may be a "stereotyped phrase which has been pressed into service here to express the agitated flight of the Moabites" (Isaiah 1-39 , p. 342).

16:3 The request for shelter as well as shade is a request for protection, and it implies that Moab will be willing to become a vassal state of Judah.

16:5 The oracle evokes the picture of a just descendant of David ruling on the throne forever. The language is a reminder of the Davidic covenant in 2Sm 7:12-16 (cp. Is 9:7; 11:1-9), and it hints at the expectation of the Messiah.

16:6-12 In response to Moab's request for shelter, the prophet can only lament its destruction. This part of the oracle is similar in wording and imagery to Jr 48:29-39.

16:6 In keeping with a major theme throughout the book of Isaiah, the heart of Moab's sin is described as pride.

16:7 Raisin cakes were a delicacy mentioned in Sg 2:5 along with apples as providing sustenance for lovemaking, though it may not have been an aphrodisiac. Hosea 3:1 suggests that raisin cakes were associated with pagan rituals.

16:8-9 Moab was known for its wine production. Jazer was in the north on the border with Ammon, and Sibmah is of uncertain location. Jazer will weep for itself as God wept for Sibmah.

16:10 Because of the devastation, joy . . . singing, and wine will vanish from the land of Moab.

16:12 Moabite worship is ineffective. His sanctuary refers to the temple of Chemosh, who was no god and therefore could not respond to prayer.

16:13-14 The concluding comment about the Moabite oracle declares that it actually had been delivered at an earlier time, but from this moment Moab had only three more years. Presumably a hired worker would count the time until his work was over with great attention and precision. Most scholars associate this Moabite devastation with the Assyrian king Sargon's campaign against the people of northwest Arabia in approximately 718 B.C.

17:1-3 The next oracle is directed against Damascus, an ancient city and the capital of Syria. From the time of Solomon (1Kg 11:23-25) to the mid-eighth century, there was fighting between Israel and Syria. Isaiah 7 describes how Isaiah encouraged Ahaz of Judah to resist the threat of a Syrian-Ephraimite alliance. Assyria under Tiglath-pileser III absorbed Damascus into its growing empire.

17:2 The best known cities of Aroer were in Moab, but it seems odd that they are mentioned in the middle of an oracle against Damascus. Perhaps these are a different set of cities or perhaps, as some have suggested, the text should be emended to say "its cities are deserted forever" (Childs, Isaiah, p. 137).

17:3 As the next passage demonstrates, it is not good for Aram that its splendor will be like that of Israel (v. 4). Both of these nations will be destroyed.

17:4 On that day (vv. 7,9) points to a future but unspecified period. The first image of the destruction of Israel is a diseased body.

17:5 A second image of destruction is a reaper picking grain. The Valley of Rephaim was southwest of Jerusalem. The meaning of its name is ominous: "Valley of the Departed."

17:6 The third image of destruction concerns the harvesting of an olive tree. It was shaken and the fallen olives were eaten. But this image also shows that, though the devastation will be extensive, it will not be total. A remnant, represented by berries that stayed attached to the tree, will survive.

17:7-8 On that day (v. 4) points to a time beyond the judgment. Indeed, the judgment of God will cause the remnant to turn from false worship to the worship of the true God who created them. Asherah was a Canaanite goddess of love and war. The plural form (Asherahs) signifies that the reference is to wooden poles or trees associated with her worship.

17:9 On that day signals the future time of judgment again (see v. 4). The destruction will turn cities into abandoned woods and mountaintops. The reason for their abandonment is the Israelites, who, as verse 10 explains, have sinned by forgetting God.

17:10-11 To remember God involves more than a mental activity; it implies obeying and worshiping Him. To forget Him points to Israel's disobedience. Isaiah spoke of Israel's bad end by using a plant analogy. Israel worked hard to grow beautiful plants. They exerted their energy but ended up with nothing. Israel's self-sufficient efforts will also end up empty.

17:12 The opening exclamation Ah is the same word earlier translated as "Oh" (see 1:4). It begins an oracle that has the form of a funeral dirge. The nations were agitated; they roared and raged (Ps 2:1-4). Their agitation is compared to the pounding of waves. Mighty waters is often an image of social and religious chaos (Ps 18:16; 29:3; 32:6).

17:13 Though the nations rage, God's rebuke will quiet them by driving them away (Pss 2; 48). Chaff was light and wind blew it away, so God's rebuke will blow away the tumultuous nations.

17:14 God's judgment comes quickly, in a single day (in the evening . . . before morning). The victim of the nations (God's people) speaks here in the first person (us).

18:1-7 The statement about Cush is not called an oracle as the previous chapters have specified, but the opening word Ah signals a type of judgment speech (see notes at 1:4 and 17:12). The land of Cush was south of Egypt, on the upper (southern) portion of the Nile River, roughly identical to modern Ethiopia.

18:1 The best explanation for the reputation of the region beyond the rivers of Cush as being a land of buzzing insect wings is that it was renowned for its bugs.

18:2 Cush sent envoys on reed vessels, typical of Egypt and Cush, down the Nile River toward Judah. Then follows a command to go to a nation described as having tall and smooth-skinned inhabitants who spoke a strange language and were feared. The best understanding of this is that the command is addressed to Judean envoys to go to Cush since the description describes that nation, rather than as a command to the Ethiopian messengers to return home. The verse describes hectic diplomatic activity.

18:3 In spite of human diplomatic efforts, a decisive moment will occur in the future when an army gathers for battle. The banner marks the rallying point (5:26; 11:10,12; 13:2), and the trumpet signals the start of war.

18:4 In contrast to the frenetic efforts of diplomacy, God was calmly in control.

18:5-6 God's judgment is compared to pruning a grapevine before the grapes got ripe. Those fallen in battle would be left to the wild animals.

18:7 The Ethiopians (Cushites), described as a tall and smooth-skinned people (v. 2), are pictured as bringing tribute. This is a sign of their submission to God's temple on Zion after the judgment.

19:1 The swift cloud, a storm cloud, is God's war chariot. The image is found elsewhere in Scripture (Ps 18:10; 68:33; 104:3; Nah 1:3) and even has an older ancient Near Eastern background (the god Baal is often described as a "cloud rider"). Fear strikes the hearts of Egypt's idols again, just as the plagues were described as a victory over Egypt's gods at the time of the exodus (Ex 12:12).

19:2 God will use Egyptian civil war to judge that nation. During much of the eighth century Egypt was at war with itself. There were conflicts between power centers at Tanis, Thebes, and in the delta. There were also conflicts between Cushite rulers and the rulers at Sais. Not until 712 B.C. was Egypt united under one pharaoh, the Cushite king Shabaka. Even though conditions through much of the eighth century are described by this verse, the picture is so general that it could apply to a different, future time as well.

19:3 Egyptian religion was filled with many gods and mysterious rites, but this verse describes a darker religious turn born out of frustration.

19:4 Egypt's punishment is to be delivered into the control of harsh masters, a strong king. The lack of specificity does not allow the identification of a concrete historical figure. The description reminds the reader that Egypt at an earlier point had been a harsh master for Israel in bondage.

19:5-7 The waters of the Nile River were the lifeblood of Egypt. Its fresh waters running northward from the south to the delta and out into the Mediterranean Sea were the only source of drinkable water in the country. Egypt's prosperity was enhanced by the early development of an irrigation system. God's judgment of Egypt is pictured as a drying up of the waters. As a result farmland will vanish.

19:8 The disappearance of the Nile waters will not only affect farmers but also those who make their living by fishing.

19:9-10 Another major industry associated with Egypt was the production of flax, a fiber from which clothes were made. The loss of this industry would lead to economic depression.

19:11 Zoan was an important city (also known as Tanis), formerly a capital of Egypt. It is mentioned in this verse because it was the residence of Pharaoh's wisest advisers. Egypt was known as a center of wisdom in the ancient Near East. This oracle mocks their wisdom.

19:12 The ignorance of the wise men of Egypt is revealed by their ignorance of God's plans for their country.

19:14 Egyptian leaders and wise men are pictured as drunk, in a state of heightened confusion. The image of a drunkard staggering and passing out, representing the demise of God's enemies, occurs frequently in the Prophets. It is often connected with the theme of the cup of God's wrath (Jr 25:15-38), but sometimes not explicitly (Jr 48:26-28; Nah 3:11). See also Ps 75:8; Lm 4:21; Ezk 23:32-33; Hab 2:16; Zch 12:2; Mt 26:42; Rv 14:10; 16:19; 17:4; 18:6. The image recurs in Is 51:17-23 and is alluded to in 63:6.

19:15 The expression head or tail, palm or reed points to a totality (9:14). Nothing can protect Egypt against God's devastating judgment.

19:16 On that day points to a future but unspecified time (vv. 18-19,23). It was an insult to say that Egypt's troops will be like women (Jr 50:37; 51:30).

19:17 Egypt was always militarily superior to Judah, so Judah was tempted to depend on Egypt for military support, but this verse envisions Egypt fearing Judah, a shameful reversal for this proud nation.

19:18 On that day, see note at verse 16. While Hebrew settlements were known from the postexilic period on, it is more likely that this verse refers to a conversion of at least some Egyptians to Yahweh. The five cities cannot be identified and may be a symbolic number for "a few." But the City of the Sun is well known. It was Heliopolis, closely associated with the worship of the sun god. That the worship of Yahweh would be taken up in this city is a sign of a radical transformation.

19:19 On that day, see note at verse 16. As a sign of an Egyptian conversion to the worship of the true God, there will be an altar set up in the center of the land and a memorial pillar at the border. The land will be dedicated to the worship of the true God.

19:20 The language of this verse is reminiscent of that of the book of Judges. Here, however, sending someone to rescue a repentant nation from an oppressor describes the situation in future Egypt.

19:22 Egypt's conversion will be after that country experiences God's judgment; healing will follow striking.

19:23 On that day, see note at verse 16. Highway is a "favorite metaphor in Isaiah for the removal of alienation and separation (11:16; 33:8; 35:8; 40:3; 49:11; 62:10)" (Oswalt, Isaiah 1-39 , p. 380). Assyria and Egypt had been enemies for many years, but this amazing passage envisions a time when travel will be free and easy between them and they will be united in the worship of God.

19:24 Israel was a land bridge between Egypt and Assyria. Both of these nations had tried to control Israel to get a foothold against the other. Here Israel is added to Assyria and Egypt in an intimate relationship of love and worship of the Lord.

19:25 The description of God blessing Israel and the two most powerful Gentle nations of the time anticipates the fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise that God would bless not only Abraham's descendants but other nations as well (Gn 12:1-3).

20:1 The events narrated in this verse took place between 713 and 711 B.C. Sargon II attacked the Philistine city of Ashdod after its king, Azuri, revolted. Azuri probably thought that Egypt under Shabaka would provide aid. The Assyrians deposed Azuri and placed his brother Ahimeti on the throne. But Ahimeti was deposed by a person named Yamani, so Sargon had to come back.

Yamani fled to Egypt, but under the Assyrian threat, Egypt handed the rebel over. This should have served as a warning to others who believed Egypt could provide help against their enemies.

20:2 God commanded Isaiah to perform a symbolic action that would support his spoken oracle. Isaiah had been wearing sackcloth, a symbol of mourning, but he was told to go about naked. This would represent the coming humiliation and destitution of Egypt.

20:5 Those who trusted Egypt and Cush for help against their enemies would be sorely disappointed. God was the only proper object of the people's trust.

20:6 The oracle envisioned other nations coming to recognize that Egypt was an unreliable ally. The implicit message is that Judah should come to the same realization.

21:1-10 The oracle in these verses was against the desert by the sea. This designation is ambiguous when first stated, but the end of the passage (v. 9) makes it clear that Babylon was meant. The description of the fall of Babylon is mysterious. Debate surrounds whether it anticipates an Assyrian defeat of Babylon in the late eighth or early seventh century B.C. (three times: 710, 700, 689) or the ultimate defeat of Babylon by Persia in 539 B.C. A good argument can be made that both the earlier and the later defeats are alluded to in this prophecy. The intention of this prophecy at the time of Isaiah was to show that Babylon would not be an effective ally against Assyria as even King Hezekiah of Judah at one point had hoped (chap. 39).

21:1 The desert (lit "wilderness") by the sea in connection with Babylon could be taken as a reference to the area in the extreme south of Mesopotamia, the swampland next to what today is called the Persian Gulf. This area was the center of Babylonian revolts against Assyria at the end of the eighth century (Merodach-baladan) as well as in the late part of the seventh century (Nabopolassar). The Negev was to the extreme south of Jerusalem and was itself a wilderness area. The storms that pass through that area even today are particularly violent.

21:2 Elam and Media (Medes) were countries on the Iranian plateau east of Babylon. In this verse they are called to advance, but against whom? In the late eighth century B.C., they were allies with Babylon and would have fought against Assyria. In 539 B.C. they were both parts of the Persian Empire that defeated Babylon. Perhaps the ambiguity intends the reader at a later time to recognize allusions to both events.

21:3 Isaiah used the theme of a woman in labor, one widely used in prophetic literature (13:8; Jr 4:31; 6:24; 22:23; 30:6; Mc 4:9). This was a graphic image of the pain and distress that would fall on the object of God's warring activity.

21:5 Attack would come in the midst of celebrative feasting, reminiscent of Daniel 5 when Belshazzar ate and drank on the eve of Babylon's destruction. It is unclear whether such banqueting indicated a lack of preparedness for battle or whether it was a pre-battle rally (Est 1). The reference to the oiling of shields may indicate the latter since this was done before battle.

21:6 The lookout was posted at some point distant from the battle, perhaps at the city of the attackers. He looked for signs of victory or defeat.

21:9 The attacking army returned intact with the announcement that Babylon has fallen. The focus is on the defeat of Babylon's gods.

21:10 The crushed people were the people of Israel. The prophet confirmed to them that the destruction of Babylon had been announced by none other than God Himself.

21:11-12 Dumah was an oasis in Arabia that controlled trade routes. In the eighth century it was an object of Assyrian invasion under Sennacherib and was an ally of Babylon. In the sixth century when the last Babylonian king, Nabonidus, moved to Tema in Arabia, he tried to control all the trade routes in that region. Besides designating an oasis in north central Arabia, the Hebrew word Dumah means "silence," like the silence of death (Ps 94:17). Thus, the name sets the mood for the oracle. The Greek translation of the OT understood Dumah as a reference to Edom. Seir is a reference to an important part of Edom, but here Edom spoke to Dumah. The theme of the watchman continues from the preceding oracle. The question the watchman was asked is enigmatic, but it may be a way of asking how much longer the suffering (night) would last.

21:13-17 Dedan, Tema, and Kedar are references to geographical and/or political entities in northern Arabia. They were likely allies of Babylon during the eighth century B.C. Childs (Isaiah, p. 154) has pointed out that these tribes were defeated by Assyria between 691-689 B.C.

21:16 Presumably a hired worker counted the time until his work was over with great attention and precision (see note at 16:13-14).

22:1 From later in the oracle, it is clear that the Valley of Vision is a reference to Jerusalem, even though this name is not used elsewhere of the city. It could be satirical, that is, the Valley of Vision was blind to the divine purpose. Or perhaps it could be a reference to Hinnom, where divinatory practices took place (Walton, IVP BBC, p. 613). The significance of the rooftops is also difficult, but it probably refers to their getting a better perspective on the withdrawal of a besieging army. Most think the historical reference is to the withdrawal of the Assyrian army from Jerusalem in 701 B.C. (chaps. 36-37).

22:2 The inhabitants were jubilant because the attacking army had withdrawn from its siege. The reference to those who died apart from battle may be a reference to those who starved or contracted disease during the siege.

22:3 The description of fleeing rulers does not accord with what we know about the siege of 701 B.C., but some connect it with an Assyrian account of the battle that mentions the capture of some of Hezekiah's paid troops.

22:4 The prophet Isaiah (the first-person speaker) did not share the joy of the city. After all, although the siege was lifted, people died.

22:6 Elam (located on the Iranian plateau east of Babylon) and Kir (of uncertain location) appear to have fought along with the Assyrians.

22:8 The House of the Forest is likely the same as the storehouse in the palace complex known as the House of the Forest of Lebanon (1Kg 7:1-12). Weapons were stored there. The people should have been looking to God for help, but they put their trust in their weapons instead.

22:10-11 Refortifying the wall with construction materials taken from demolished homes and building an emergency reservoir within the city are taken again by the prophet as a sign of human self-reliance. They should have been looking to God for help. After all, he was the One who created it long ago. The reference to collecting water from the lower pool may connect to the fact that Hezekiah built a tunnel to bring water inside the city walls (2Kg 20:20).

22:12 Shaving one's head and wearing sackcloth were rituals of mourning in ancient Israel.

22:13-14 God called for mourning (v. 12), but the people celebrated the lifting of the siege on the city. The people lived for the moment. The fact that the sin of the people would never be removed boded poorly for the future of the city.

22:15-25 The oracle against Jerusalem in these verses concludes with an evaluation of two stewards. Shebna abused his office and would be replaced by Eliakim. Eliakim was competent, and Isaiah praised him, but even Eliakim eventually failed. The message is that politicians cannot be relied on to solve problems that only God can solve.

22:15 The office of steward was an important role, analogous to the chief of staff of a president. Shebna is known elsewhere as a high-ranking officer in the court of Hezekiah (36:3,11,22; 37:2; 2Kg 18:18; 19:2), though in these passages he is called a "secretary" which may indicate that he had been demoted.

22:16 Shebna was concerned more about himself and his own glory than with the well-being of the city. Rock-hewn tombs from antiquity may be seen today all around Jerusalem, but particularly east of the city. Archaeologists discovered a tomb near Jerusalem that contained an inscription with the title of a person who was "in charge of the palace" (v. 15). However, there was no name on the tomb. Since he was demoted, it was probably not Shebna's.

22:18 Shebna not only exalted himself by the type of tomb he was building, but also by driving glorious chariots.

22:19 Because of his vanity and self-promotion, God will replace him in his position as steward.

22:20 Shebna's replacement will be Eliakim son of Hilkiah, also known as a high official in King Hezekiah's court (36:3,11,22; 37:22; 2Kg 18:18,26,37). He will be God's servant, a title used elsewhere for Isaiah (20:3).

22:21 The robe and sash were symbols of the office of steward. As opposed to self-serving Shebna, Eliakim will function like a father, looking after the needs of his people.

22:22 The key, whether literal or metaphorical, indicates the control the steward had over the distribution of resources.

22:23 Eliakim will not be shaken like Shebna but will be a firmly implanted peg. The metaphor probably refers to a peg driven into a plastered wall to hold up shelves.

22:24-25 Eliakim is compared to a shelf on which his family put a tremendous burden. The weight ultimately sheared off the peg, causing the shelf (Eliakim) to crash and its contents (his family's burdens) to break. The message of the oracle seems to be that the people could not trust even a competent, well-intentioned person to resolve Jerusalem's problems.

23:1 Tyre was the southernmost major city of Phoenicia. It was a wealthy city, due to its development and control of sea trade. As an island city (with overflow population living on the mainland) its major port was easily protected. Tyre had established a trading colony on Tarshish, thought to be in what is modern Spain (Tartessus). The ships of Tarshish were particularly impressive, since they traveled so far between Tyre and Iberia. The destruction of Tyre prophetically described in this oracle is difficult to pin down from the description made here. In the latter part of the eighth century and the early seventh century B.C., the Assyrians tried to take Tyre a number of times. However, the oracle may also look forward to Nebuchadnezzar's attack on Tyre (including a thirteen-year siege) in the sixth century and perhaps even to the final destruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great in 332 B.C. Cyprus was a large island about 75 miles west of Tyre and would have been the last port of call before reaching Tyre.

23:2 Sidon was another important Phoenician trade port north of Tyre. Its mention indicates that, though the oracle was specifically directed toward Tyre (the city closest to Jerusalem), the whole of Phoenicia was under judgment.

23:3 Shihor is a name for the Nile valley. Phoenicia carried on trade with Egypt during much of its history. Egypt was well known for its production and export of grain.

23:4 The sea here is personified, perhaps evoking the idea that the sea (Hb yam) was an important god and rival of the Canaanite god Baal (though the following description fits a female much better). In any case, the sea will lament for its barrenness, perhaps a reference to the loss of Sidon.

23:5 Egypt will be upset because it had lost an important trading partner.

23:6 Because of the destruction of the Phoenician coastland, its inhabitants will have to disperse, some perhaps going as far as the trading colony Tarshish (see note at v. 1).

23:7 The jubilant city is Tyre, the ancient city that established Tarshish as a colony. After it is destroyed, its inhabitants will flee to Tarshish.

23:8 Tyre's wealth had brought her great power and prestige.

23:9 In answer to the question of verse 8, the oracle proclaims that the One who planned the fall of the magnificent city of Tyre was none other than the LORD of Hosts. Thus, this oracle continues the teaching that God is sovereign over all nations.

23:10 The Nile's waters overflow annually, leaving a rich, fertile soil. As a result, the Nile also overflowed with human population. Now Tarshish will overflow with all the refugees from the destroyed cities of the Phoenician coastland.

23:11 God determines the fate of even the most powerful human cities and strikes terror in the hearts of the nations (Ps 2). Phoenicia was considered a part of Canaan, and its fortresses may be referred to as Canaanite fortresses.

23:12 Sidon is compared to a rape victim, who must leave to seek refuge in Cyprus.

23:13 An analogy is drawn between the fall of the Chaldeans (the Aramaic-speaking tribe that produced the two rebels against Assyria—Merodach-baladan at the end of the eighth century and Nabopolassar at the end of the seventh century B.C.) and the fall of Tyre. Since the verse goes on to imply the fall of Babylon at the hands of the Assyrians, it probably refers to the first of these, not the second in which Babylon was victorious.

23:15-18 The oracle against Tyre ends with a note about its restoration. It also suggests that the city will turn to the Lord.

23:15 Interestingly, 70 years is cited as the length of the exile and punishment of the people of God (Jr 25:12; Dn 9:2; Zch 1:12). There have been some attempts to identify such a time period (from the death of Sennacherib to the time of Nebuchadnezzar), but this cannot be done with certainty.

23:16 This song may have been popular in ancient Israel. It speaks of an old prostitute forgotten by men who tried to attract attention by singing songs. The revived Tyre is like this prostitute. The image of the prostitute suggests Tyre itself, since it was a trading city.

23:18 Surprisingly, though, Tyre's restored trade will go to the work of the Lord, specifically to the priests.

24:1 While chapters 13-23 focused on the judgment of particular nations, chapters 24-27 speak of the whole earth (a word repeated 23x) as the object of God's punishment.

24:2 This long list of pairs of opposites is a striking way of saying that all human inhabitants of the earth will be judged without regard for social standing.

24:5 The cause of this horrific judgment is human sin. The people have broken the covenant between God and Israel (Ex 19-24). The reference to everlasting covenant reminds the reader of the Noahic covenant between God and all the inhabitants of the earth (Gn 9:16).

24:6 The covenant form called for a curse if the law was broken (see Dt 27-28 in relationship to Dt 5-26). The remnant theme is seen here in the fact that a few will survive.

24:7-9 God's judgment brings joyful singing and drinking alcoholic beverages to an end. Both of these involved celebration. Wine and beer were the two main types of alcoholic drinks in the ancient Near East.

24:10 The city of chaos is not a specific city. It represents evil men and women who are subject to God's judgment.

24:11 Wine production will decline, so the people will cry for wine but go unsatisfied. Wine is associated with joy and celebration; the judgment of God will bring such festivities to an end. Wine also blunts pain. This may be another reason the people will cry out for wine—because of the suffering that God's judgment will produce.

24:12 The gate in a walled city represented its defenses.

24:13 A harvested olive tree or a grape vine after harvest had only a few olives or grapes. So the cities of the nations will have just a few people left when God's judgment falls.

24:14-16a Those who sing out are not specifically identified. They could be Israel or the remnant from all the nations. The fact that they are in the west, the east, the islands of the west, and the ends of the earth, suggests that if it does refer to Israel, then it imagines a time when they will be scattered among the nations. In any case, these verses indicate that there were some people who celebrated the downfall of the wicked described in the previous verses.

24:16 b Isaiah (the first-person speaker) does not join the chorus of celebration of verses 14-16a. Perhaps he was horrified by the destruction or, more likely, by the depth of the transgression of the nations.

24:17-18 The words panic, pit, and trap (pachad, wapachat, wapach) play on the similarity of sound of these three words in Hebrew. They stand for the judgment that God has prepared for the sinful inhabitants of the earth. The open windows of the sky imply rain and suggest devastating flood. The shaking foundations would be experienced as earthquakes.

24:20 A drunkard cannot think or stand straight. A lightweight hut sways in the wind. Both ultimately will fall down. This judgment is connected to rebellion against God by virtually all people on earth.

24:21 The phrase on that day points to a future but unspecified time. God's judgment is extensive. It not only covers the earth but also the host of heaven, a phrase that either indicates the stars (perhaps also suggesting pagan deities) or fallen angels.

24:23 Even the moon and sun will pale in comparison with the brilliant light emanating from God as He exercises His sovereign rule from the temple.

25:1 The prophet Isaiah is the first-person speaker (I) who praises God for His plan that includes judgment. His judgment is an example of perfect faithfulness because His covenant promised that punishment would follow rebellion.

25:2 The city described in this and the following verses is the same as the "city of chaos" of 24:10. It is not a specific place but a city that represents human evil.

25:3 Because of God's judgment of sin, even people who are violent will fear Him.

25:4-5 The poor and the needy are the antithesis of the powerful and proud inhabitants of the city that God has judged. God is their protection, not city walls or weapons. God's protection of the humble poor is illustrated by the image of a refuge from the rain and a shade from the heat. Violent people are the rain and the heat from which God provides protection for the vulnerable.

25:6 Feasting follows victory, and the Lord prepares a fine feast for His people. The mountain refers to the mountain of God's presence—Zion.

25:7-8 God not only conquers the evil nations, but death and sorrow (tears) and disgrace. The verb translated destroy is better rendered as "swallow." Here there is likely an allusion to the Baal myth of Ugarit where death swallowed the god Baal. Here Yahweh swallows death.

25:9 On that day, see note at 24:21. Salvation indicates rescue from powerful, evil enemies.

25:10 The mountain is where God will make His presence known—Zion. Up to this point the nations have been referred to generically. Now Moab, a small nation east of the Dead Sea, becomes the subject of the oracle. Moab is a prime example of the sinful pride of the nations.

25:11 Continuing the image from the previous verse, Isaiah described Moab as swimming in dung.

26:1 The strong city contrasts with the "city of chaos" (see note at 24:10). That city represents human evil and has walls that crumble, but this city's strength (its walls and ramparts) is defined by salvation. Oswalt states that this city is "a state of mind more than a geographical place" (Isaiah 1-39 , p. 297).

26:2 The righteous nation includes faithful Israelites but might also suggest other peoples as well, since the defining characteristic of the nation is that it remains faithful to God and His law.

26:3-4 Trust is the defining trait of those who depend on God (on Yah, see note at 12:2), not on other nations. The image of the everlasting rock points to God's persistent protection of His people. The rock is one in which the faithful can find shelter (Ex 33:22).

26:5 The inaccessible city, like the "city of chaos" (see note at 24:10), represents the proud who do not humble themselves before God. Though it is called "inaccessible," God is able to defeat this city in spite of its pretensions.

26:6 Thanks to God's intervention, the humble . . . poor will trample on the arrogant.

26:7 The image of the path is drawn from wisdom literature (Pr 1-9) and stands for the course of a person's life. A level or straight path is a life with few problems (Heb 12:13).

26:8 In this verse Isaiah spoke on behalf of himself and the righteous as he expressed longing for God and specifically for God's coming judgment on the wicked. But even in the context of passionate desire for God, they did not demand His actions but expressed confidence (we wait).

26:9-10 People learn about righteousness when wickedness is punished. Otherwise, evil behavior is encouraged (Ec 8:11).

26:11 God's upraised hand is an image of the imminent judgment against the wicked.

26:12 Contrary to the fate of the wicked, God's righteous people will experience peace, not destruction. While it is hard to pinpoint the exact nature of the prophet's reference to God's work, it certainly includes the punishment of the wicked.

26:13 The faithful acknowledge that other lords have ruled over them. These would include the Assyrians and eventually the Babylonians and others. But for the faithful there is only one true ruler—God Himself.

26:14 A contrast exists between this statement and verse 19. In this verse, the wicked dead stay dead. God's judgment will not be reversed. A fuller understanding of the afterlife awaits the NT period (though it is anticipated in passages like Dn 12:2).

26:15 In contrast to the wicked whom He punishes, God blesses the righteous.

In this verse His blessing takes the form of an expanded land, evoking the memory that God promised Abraham his descendants would become a "great nation" (Gn 12:2).

26:17-18 Turning from the future back to the present, God's people experienced suffering similar to the excruciating pain of a woman in labor. A pregnant woman goes through that pain with a positive result at the end—a baby. However, God's people went through the pain and simply passed gas (gave birth to wind). There was no deliverance, no victory over enemies.

26:19 In contrast to the wicked who die and stay dead (v. 14), God's people will live again. The morning dew is an image of freshness and renewal.

26:20-21 The call to hide during the judgment is reminiscent of the first Passover when God's people stayed in their homes while God took the lives of the Egyptian firstborn (Ex 12).

27:1 On that day refers to a future but unspecified time. Leviathan was well-known from ancient Canaanite mythology. Leviathan was a sea monster, representing chaos and evil in this verse. Childs says that Isaiah used this image to proclaim that God "will destroy not only historical forms of evil, but strike against its cosmic source once and for all" (Isaiah, p. 196).

27:2-6 The desirable vineyard is a metaphor for God's people. The poem has many contrasts with the vineyard song of 5:1-7. There the vineyard image is used to emphasize God's judgment on sin; here the vineyard image describes the restoration of His people after judgment.

27:4-5 In these verses the thorns and briers seem to represent rebellion against God—the type of behavior that led to judgment in the first place. The thorns and briers have two possible courses of action: they can experience the devastating punishment of God or they can make peace with Him.

27:6 The phrase in days to come, like "on that day" (see note at v. 1), refers to a future but unspecified time. The prophet Isaiah saw a prosperous future for God's people, one that would bring prosperity to the whole world (Gn 12:1-3).

27:7 God indeed will judge His people, but He will not annihilate them as He will do with those whom He uses to punish them (Assyria in the eighth century B.C. and Babylon in the sixth).

27:8 Rather than annihilating His people, God will scatter them. The image of a windy storm (the east wind was a particularly hot, dangerous wind coming off the desert) evokes the picture of chaff being blown away.

27:9 God's punishment of His people will be a cleansing (will be purged), a renewing, not a complete destruction. In particular, their idolatrous practices will be removed. On Asherah poles see note at 17:7-8.

27:10-11 The fortified city, like the "city of chaos" (see note at 24:10) and the “inaccessible city” (see note at 26:5), represents arrogant human evil. In the aftermath of God’s judgment, this city will become grazing land.

27:12 On that day, see note at 24:21. The Euphrates River and the Wadi of Egypt were the far northern and southern boundaries of the promised land. The image of threshing grain is an image of refining judgment since the process separated the wheat from the chaff. But the aftermath of the punishment will bring a regathering of God’s dispersed people.

27:13 On that day, see note at 24:21. The Israelites will come back for the purpose of worship. The holy mountain refers to Zion, the location of the temple.

28:1 Woe marks the beginning of an oracle connected to a funeral procession (see note at 1:4). This is the first woe in chapters 28-33 (29:1,15; 30:1; 31:1; 33:1). The effect of the oracle is to announce that the object of the oracle, in this case the northern kingdom of Israel (called by the name of its major tribe Ephraim), is as good as dead. The majestic crown of Ephraim may be a reference to its capital city Samaria, which sat atop a large hill overlooking the area. The reference to heavy drinking in the northern kingdom may be because of an abuse of alcohol in the region, particularly among its leaders, but this also fits with the prophetic theme of the cup of wrath (Jr 12). God will make the object of His anger drink from this cup so they will become disoriented and eventually pass out (see note at Is 19:14).

28:2 God’s judgment is compared to the devastating effects of a hail storm and a flood. Joshua 10 recounts the time when God defeated a coalition of southern Canaanite city-states by pelting them with hailstones. The great flood (Gn 6-9) and the crossing of the Red Sea (Ex 14-15) illustrate how God used floodwaters to defeat His enemies.

28:3-4 Appealing again to the images of crown and flower from verse 1, the prophet describes the devastating punishment coming on Ephraim. He adds the picture of the ripe fig ready to be plucked and devoured.

28:5-6 On that day, see note at 24:21. While the majestic crown of Ephraim will be “trampled underfoot” (28:3), God Himself will become a crown of beauty for the remnant—for the righteous who survive the punishments to come and form the nucleus for a new people of God. Inspired by God, judges will again be just and soldiers will again have the strength to defend their city.

28:7-13 While verses 1-6 criticize the nobility for their drunken behavior, this section focuses on the priests and prophets.

28:7-8 The priests and prophets were crucial to the spiritual leadership of the nation, but here they had clouded their thought with drink. They had drunk so much alcohol that they were covered with vomit, an unflattering and undignified portrait of people who had such an important task.

28:9-10 These decadent leaders were acting as if they were teaching babies and not adults. The content of their teaching was mocked. What they said was repetitive and meaningless.

28:11-12 Since God's people had been so irresponsible, and had refused to rest contentedly in God, He will speak to His people with stammering speech and in a foreign language—Akkadian, the language of the Assyrians.

28:14-22 The oracle now shifts its focus from the northern kingdom to the southern.

28:14 Mockers were those who did not fear God and who made fun of those who did (Pr 1:22; 9:7-8,12; 13:1).

28:15 The rulers of Judah had entered a dangerous agreement. The agreement is said to be with Death and Sheol. Sheol refers to the grave and in some contexts signifies the underworld. Isaiah probably referred to treaties with foreign nations to try to keep Assyria (the overwhelming scourge) from defeating them.

28:16 But it was not foreign alliances that made Judah strong. It was their relationship with God. He was the One who had built it, cornerstone and foundation. A precise identification of the tested stone is elusive. Goldingay (Isaiah, p. 156) remarks that the stone "has been identified with the law, the temple, the monarchy, the city, the saving work of Yahweh, the people's relationship with Yahweh, the true believing community, Zion itself, the Messiah, faith, the remnant, or the actual promise about the one who trusts." The allusion may be to all of the above.

28:17 God's standards are justice and righteousness—fair treatment of fellow citizens and trusting obedience. Both were lacking in Judah.

28:18 The dark pact with Death (see note at v. 15) is doomed to failure.

28:20 The arrangements that Judah had made to protect itself against Assyria were inadequate, like a bed that was too short.

28:21 At Perazim (described in 2Sm 5:20 as a "bursting flood") God gave David a great victory over the Philistines. At the Valley of Gibeon, God used hailstones to allow Joshua to defeat the southern coalition of Canaanite city-states (Jos 10:11). Though this oracle and many of Isaiah's oracles describe God's violent judgment against the nations, here it is called strange and disturbing. It was not the typical, normal, hoped-for mode of relationship, particularly with His covenant people.

28:22 Though God's judgment against the mocking leaders of Judah is certain, their future behavior will determine whether it becomes even worse (your shackles will become stronger).

28:23-29 In this section Isaiah drew an analogy between a farmer's task and God's treatment of Judah. Good results come from different actions and different methods applied at different times. The passage has the feel of a parable.

28:24-26 The farmer (plowman) does not just keep plowing, he also sows seed. He places the various seeds in their separate places. This order comes from God Himself.

28:27 Each plant has its proper treatment. The analogy may point to the fact that God exercises His judgment against sinners in a way that is appropriate to their specific situation.

28:28-29 But the crushing and threshing, images of judgment, are not endless activities. It comes to an end. Threshing and the cessation of threshing produce good bread, so judgment and its aftermath produce good results as well. The order of the farmer's task as well as God's "strange work" (v. 21) are a result of God's great wisdom.

29:1 Ariel stands for Jerusalem. What the word means is difficult to discern. It could mean "lion of God," but more likely it refers to "altar hearth," its meaning in Ezk 43:15 in reference to the hearth of the sanctuary. This chapter is a woe oracle (see note at 1:4) against Jerusalem. This is the second woe presented in chapters 28-33 (28:1; 29:15; 30:1; 31:1; 33:1).

29:2 God will turn Jerusalem into an Ariel—an altar hearth. The meaning seems to be that He will destroy it by fire.

29:3 Though on a literal level it will be Assyria that will set up a siege around Jerusalem, the prophet knew that it would do so only as an agent of the Lord.

29:4 God speaks to Jerusalem in the second person (you . . . your) and thus personifies the city. He will kill Jerusalem, and it will be like a buried body (speak from the ground).

29:5-8 Suddenly the oracle shifts from judgment against Jerusalem to the restoration of the city. It imagines a situation like Sennacherib's campaign against Judah. His initial successes fizzled out at the siege of Jerusalem (chap. 37).

29:6 When God comes as warrior, He often takes the form of storm . . . earthquake, and fire.

29:8 Those armies that move against Jerusalem will ultimately be unsuccessful. Their early successes will give way to failure, so that their first actions will seem like a dream.

29:9-10 The oracle shifts again to the spiritual hardness and punishment of the people of God. They will blind themselves, but God will shut their eyes. They will get drunk, but God will give them an overwhelming urge to sleep. The oracle recognizes the people's sinful actions and God's sovereign control.

29:11-12 God has laid it all out for the people (the entire vision), but they were spiritually dull and could not make sense of it. They will not heed God's warnings and will suffer the consequences. In ancient Israel documents were written on papyrus or vellum scrolls. After being rolled into a tube, they were sealed with wax or clay, then stamped with an impression that identified the sender.

29:13 The worship of the people was empty and meaningless. They were just going through the motions.

29:15 A new woe oracle (see note at 1:4) begins with this verse and extends to the end of the chapter. This is the third woe presented in chapters 28-33 (v. 1; 28:1; 30:1; 31:1; 33:1). Those who did evil thought they could hide their actions from God. It may be that these plans included a decision to seek help against Assyria from Egypt. Such presumption would not go unpunished.

29:16 The metaphor of God as a potter is used in a few key places in prophetic literature (45:9; 64:8; Jr 18:1-12; see also Rm 9:21). It evokes the description of the creation of Adam from the dust of the ground (Gn 2:7). The prophets pointed out how crazy it was for God's creature, the pot made from clay, to challenge or question their Maker, the Potter.

29:17-24 As with the previous woe oracle, there is a shift in this oracle from judgment to hope (see note at vv. 5-8).

29:17 Lebanon was known for its cedar forests, but it will be transformed into an orchard—a place for fruit-bearing trees. The cedar is often used in the Bible as a symbol of power and arrogance, so perhaps the transformation has to do with a change from pride to humble service.

29:18 The coming transformation is also pictured as the deaf hearing and the blind seeing. The document probably is an allusion to v erses 11-12. In those verses the document could not be understood, but here it could.

29:21 The gate of a walled city was where public hearings and judicial proceedings were held. The mediator was the person who heard a case. His removal would lead to injustice.

29:22 The oracle invokes the election of Abraham (Gn 12:1-3), the father of God's people. Jacob is another name for the nation of Israel.

29:23-24 God will fulfill His promise to Abraham and Jacob by transforming His people.

30:1 On woe, see note at 1:4. This is the fourth woe in chapters 28-33 (28:1; 29:1,15; 31:1; 33:1). The rebellious children were God's people who sought help from a foreign nation rather than from God Himself.

30:2 The plan was to form an alliance with Egypt to counter the Assyrian threat. Shelter . . . protection, and shadow imply the relationship with Egypt would not be as equal partners; God's people would be the junior partner. This arrangement involved the payment of annual tribute as well as the forfeiture of an independent foreign policy. The description of Egypt in this oracle fits with the time of King Hezekiah of Judah and may indicate the threat of an invasion by Sennacherib in 701 B.C.

30:3 The purpose of the foreign alliance was to protect Israel against an Assyrian invasion, but rather than preserving Israel's glory, it would lead to shame because Egypt was an unreliable ally.

30:4 Zoan was an important city (also known as Tanis), formerly a capital of Egypt, mentioned in this verse because it was the residence of Pharaoh's wisest advisers (see note at 19:11). This is the only mention of Hanes in the Bible. According to extrabiblical sources, it "was an important regional capital" identified with Heracleopolis Magna (Walton, p. 621).

30:6 The Negev was the wilderness region south of the southern Israelite city of Beersheba. It was on the way to Egypt. Nomadic peoples and various animals such as those listed in the first part of this verse populated this area. The people who carried their wealth on the backs of donkeys describe those who took tribute to Egypt to buy protection against the Assyrian threat. Isaiah saw this as a waste of money.

30:7 In the book of Job, Rahab is a monster representing chaos, which is parallel to Leviathan (Jb 26:12-13), but the name is used here and elsewhere to refer to Egypt (Ps 87:4).

30:8 A record of the prophecy of destruction would demonstrate to future generations that it had been predicted.

30:9 On rebellious people, see note at verse 1. They did not obey God's instruction, which refers to His law and perhaps to His prohibition against entering into alliances with other nations.

30:10-11 People want to hear pleasant things, not the hard things that prophets like Isaiah told them. True prophets warned them of coming judgment and urged them to restore their relationship with God, but they responded by declaring they wanted nothing to do with this God. The Holy One of Israel is one of Isaiah's favorite titles for God, appearing more than 25 times in his book. It emphasizes God's distaste for sin (see note at 1:4).

30:12-14 The people rejected the prophet's admonition to trust in God alone, and instead trusted in oppression and deceit by seeking the protection of Egypt. As a result, God will cause them to collapse. They thought that Egypt would be a high wall of protection against the Assyrians, but the wall had a huge crack. It would eventually be obliterated.

30:15-17 The healthy alternative was to relax and trust in God, but such an easy course was too hard for God's people to accept. The result of their refusal to listen to God is that they would flee from the threat of just a few of the enemy (Dt 32:30).

30:18-26 After the judgment described in this oracle, God would restore His people to His favor.

30:18 God was waiting for the people to repent before turning His judgment into compassion and restoration.

30:19 The cry of the people refers to their repentance, an acknowledgment of their sin, and a turn to God for help. As a result, He would respond with His favor. They will live on Zion in Jerusalem near the presence of God. The beginning of the fulfillment of this promise occurred after the Jews began returning from Babylonian exile in 539 B.C.

30:20 The word oppression refers to the future exile and political oppression by foreign nations (Assyria, followed by Babylon, followed by Persia) that happened because of their sin. The Teacher of the people of God is a reference to God Himself who would show them the right way to behave.

30:21 Walking in the way is reminiscent of the language of Psalm 1 and Proverbs. There are two ways—a crooked path that represents an evil life heading toward death and the straight path of godliness that leads to life.

30:22 The spiritual transformation of the people of God involves moving toward the true God and away from false gods. Menstrual cloths were especially impure because a woman was considered unclean during her menstrual period (Lv 15:19-24).

30:23-24 Based on the lists of covenant blessings found in places like Deuteronomy 28, God will grant agricultural prosperity to His restored people. While they had nothing but bread and water (Is 30:20) during their oppression, they would have large quantities of food in the future. Even the oxen and donkeys would have plenty of good food.

30:25 Israel's prosperity was normally tenuous because of limited water supplies. Here the picture is of overflowing waters. The reference to the great slaughter and the fall of towers is probably a reference to the downfall of their oppressors.

30:26 Not only will there be abundant food and water, but light as well. Light represents what is good and godly.

30:27-33 The oracle in these verses describes God's appearance as a judging warrior. The object of His wrath is not revealed until verse 31 where Assyria, the oppressor of God's people, is named.

30:27-28 God's anger is described in human terms as if He had lips . . . tongue . . . breath, and neck. He is hot with anger. He will take the wayward nations and bridle them as if they were a donkey or horse. Then He will guide them in the way He wants them to go.

30:29 The scene shifts to the people of God who will celebrate this act of God. The judgment of their enemies is a cause for rejoicing. They will praise God as if it were a holy festival like Passover or the Festival of Booths. The mountain of the LORD refers to Zion where God (their Rock, a title that signifies shelter and protection) will make His presence known.

30:30 God often uses weather as His weapons against the objects of His anger (see 28:21).

30:31 The voice of the LORD is powerful (Ps 29). Assyria, the region's superpower, will be punished.

30:32 The blows of weapons are compared to the beating of tambourines. Babylon was the appointed staff of God to bring down Assyria in the late seventh century B.C.

30:33 Topheth was located in the Valley of Ben Hinnom (Jr 7:30-34). This valley was immediately south and west of Jerusalem. At times, it functioned as a garbage heap for the city. In Greek, this valley was known as Gehenna, which became associated with hell. We do not know for certain what the word "Topheth" means or where it came from, but we do know that King Josiah had desecrated this place earlier during his religious reforms (2Kg 23:10-11). It had been a place where the foreign god Molech was worshiped. Jeremiah said it epitomized the sin and guilt of the people (Jr 7:30-32; 19:6-13). God explicitly had forbidden human sacrifice as well as the worship of Molech (Lv 18:21; Dt 12:31; 18:10; see also Is 57:5,9; Jr 19:5; 32:35; Ezk 16:20-21; 20:25-26,31; 23:37,39). Here though it is being used for a good purpose—the burning of the body of the king of Assyria after his defeat.

31:1 On woe, see note at 1:4. This is the fifth woe in chapters 28-33 (28:1; 29:1,15; 30:1; 33:1). The issue again is that God's people were trusting foreign nations (in this case Egypt) rather than God for help against their enemies (30:1-17). The "holy war" theme of the OT makes it clear that Israel's safety depended on God, not on the size of their army. Examples include the battle of Jericho (Jos 7), Gideon's victory over the Midianites (Jdg 7-8) and countless other accounts (Ps 20:7).

31:2-3 Israel's attempt to get help from Egypt will backfire because God will cause both helper (Egypt) and helped (God's people) to be destroyed.

31:4-5 God is the only One who can protect His people. In these verses, Isaiah uses two images to describe God's protection. He is a fearless lion on behalf of Israel against the foreign armies (represented by the shepherds who try to fend Him off). He is also hovering over His people like birds hover over their prey. The point is that God will see to the deliverance of His people.

31:6-7 The restoration of God's people has two sides: returning to Him, which implies repentance, and rejecting false gods in the form of silver and gold idols.

31:8 God is the real reason Assyria will fall. He will use Babylon for this task, but God is the One who will give Babylon the victory.

31:9 Though the reference is unusual, the rock is probably a reference to the Assyrian king. A rock is something that provides shelter and protection, but in this case the rock will fail to provide defense. The signal flag is a reference to a battle standard used to rally troops. Zion's fire and Jerusalem's furnace may be a reference to the altar fire (see the explanation of Ariel in note at 29:1), but in the context of judgment it may point to the fire that will come out of Jerusalem to destroy the attacking enemy.

32:1 Scholars are divided over whether the king who will reign righteously is a direct reference to the Messiah or whether it describes a historical king like Hezekiah or Josiah. Of course, the Messiah is the ideal king, and Hezekiah and Josiah were pale anticipations of the Messiah. The point is that the future will bring just leadership.

32:2 The benefits the people will experience because of their righteous leaders are described metaphorically. They are protection and provision in difficult circumstances.

32:3 Righteous rule will result in greater discernment among the subjects of the just king.

32:4-5 The Teacher in Ecclesiastes (Ec 10:16-17) pointed out how dangerous it is when a fool becomes a ruler; the world turns upside down. Here there may be a wordplay on fool (Hb nabal) and noble (Hb nadiv).

32:6 The book of Proverbs makes it clear that a fool is someone who rejects God and has a detrimental effect on the community. Here Isaiah claims that folly among the leadership leads to hunger and thirst.

32:9 The prophetic oracle now addresses the women in the community of the people of God. They also show pride in human resources rather than in the Lord. They are complacent and overconfident. For an earlier oracle against women, see note at 3:16-4:1.

32:10 It appears that the security of these women is in the abundant produce of the land, but Isaiah pointed out that this prosperity is temporary. In the next year wine (vintage) and crop production (harvest) will fail.

32:11-12 Tearing and removing one's clothes (strip yourselves bare) and replacing them with sackcloth along with beating one's breast were mourning customs. The oracle suggests the people should move directly into ritual mourning in anticipation of future judgment.

32:13 The land will produce thorns and briers, useless plants, instead of grains and vines. The idea is similar to the curse against Adam in Gn 3:18.

32:14 Not only will the fields be desolate and unproductive, but so will the city of Jerusalem. It will be turned into the haunt of wild animals.

32:15 However, because of God (the Spirit from heaven) a miraculous transformation will take place in the future. What has been unproductive will produce fruit-bearing trees.

33:1 This is the sixth and final woe in chapters 28-33 (28:1; 29:1,15; 30:1; 31:1). The woe pronounces the destruction of a betrayer. Many interpreters believe the reference is to Sennacherib, whom King Hezekiah of Judah paid to back off from the siege of Jerusalem (chaps. 36-37). But others believe it is a general reference to the deception of the nations. They will receive their due.

33:2 Since the nations have let them down, God's people have no recourse but to wait for God to save them.

33:3-4 God will be victorious over Israel's enemies. Locusts are often symbols of a large destroying army (Jl 1; Nah 3:15-16).

33:6 Zion's treasure is not gold, silver, or weapons. Its treasure is the fear of the LORD. A relationship of dependence and trust leads to action by a warring God on behalf of His people (Pr 1:7).

33:7-13 This passage describes a future attack (perhaps Sennacherib's attack on Jerusalem in 701 B.C.; v. 1) as if it were happening in the present.

33:7 Diplomacy has broken down. The diplomats weep as warriors control the streets.

33:8 The broken . . . agreement may be a direct reference to the agreement that Sennacherib made to withdraw from Jerusalem after being paid tribute—a promise he did not honor. Since the army is on the brink of attack, all travel has ceased.

33:9 Lebanon was north of Israel. Sharon, the western foothills famous for its wild flowers, as well as Bashan and Carmel were known as lush regions. But because of conflict these areas are described as bare wilderness.

33:10 At this moment of tension, a time when Israel's abilities are insufficient, God will rise up. This shows He is about to make an appearance as a warrior. A number of psalms call on God to "rise up" to fight on behalf of the psalmist and his people (Pss 7; 17).

33:11-12 In spite of the efforts of the enemy army to win a victory, they will achieve nothing productive. They conceive and give birth, not to life but to death, here represented by dead vegetation that is good for nothing (chaff and stubble).

33:13 God's warring activity will be a testimony to the whole world, both near and far off, of His strength.

33:14 The anticipation of such a powerful, judging God frightens sinners and causes everyone to ask, Who . . . can dwell with such a God? The question and the answer in the following verses are similar to Psalms 15 and 24, thought to be liturgies used by those entering the sacred space of the sanctuary.

33:15 Righteousness is described in this verse in relational terms. God will dwell with those who refrain from acts that exploit other people. The righteous person will avoid extortion, bribery, and murder.

33:16 The righteous will be protected and sustained by God.

33:17 The King is none other than God Himself (cp. v. 22; "the LORD is our King"). The picture of the King in His beauty looks to the future after the judgment and the destruction of the enemy when God's people will be restored.

33:18 In this glorious future, no longer will there be emissaries from the oppressive enemy to take the resources of the people of God (accountant and tribute collector) or those who try to prepare for battle against them (the one who spied out our defenses).

33:19 The barbarians at the end of the eighth century were the Assyrians, who spoke a language (Akkadian) that the people of God could not understand. They destroyed the northern kingdom and subjected the south to vassalage and threatened their existence.

33:20-21 Describing Jerusalem as a tent may be a way of emphasizing the fragility of the city. A tent is easy to pull down or destroy. However, since God will be for them, this tent will not move. To describe Zion as a place of rivers and broad streams is to paint a picture of future blessing since Jerusalem had nothing of the kind. The prevention of shipping in these rivers may refer to war vessels.

33:22 God is Judge . . . lawgiver, and King, offices that provide internal and external stability and security.

33:23 It appears that the oracle changes the addressee. Your must refer to the enemy who tries to capture the people of God. The ship imagery (ropes . . . base of the mast) may point to those ships (v. 21) that try to assail Zion. But rather than taking plunder away, even the lame among the people of God will receive a portion.

33:24 The change from judgment to salvation for the people of God takes place for one reason: they will be forgiven their iniquity.

34:1 God is not just the God of Israel. He is the God of the whole world, so He calls on all the nations to hear Him when He speaks.

34:2-3 God's anger is directed toward the armies of the nations. While He used some of them for His own purposes, they were only thinking of their desires for empire. Not only will they be defeated and killed, but they will suffer indignities such as lack of burial.

34:4 God's warring activity has cosmic implications. The nations thought of the stars as representing their gods. This language points to the fact that their gods, who are not gods at all, will suffer defeat at the hands of the true God.

34:5 Victory over heavenly forces (v. 4) is followed by a description of one representative nation, Edom. This nation was south of Moab in the region southeast of the Dead Sea. Set apart for destruction translates a single Hebrew verb (cherem) that is used frequently in Joshua to indicate that every man, woman, and child would be killed. It also describes the death of the enemy as a type of sacrifice to God.

34:6-7 The language of sacrifice is explicit in these verses. Bozrah was the capital of ancient Edom.

34:8 Edom had a reputation for taking advantage of Israel whenever Israel was weak (Ps 137:7; Lm 4:22; Ezk 35:15; Ob 10-14).

34:9-10 God would punish Edom with the same type of punishment (pitch . . . sulfur . . . burning pitch) that He had brought against Sodom and Gomorrah (Gn 19:24-28), though those cities are not explicitly mentioned. Earlier Isaiah had described the punishment on God's people as devastating but not as bad as that on Sodom (Is 1:9). In the oracle against Babylon, though, its punishment is said to be equivalent (13:19). Interestingly, Jeremiah used similar language in his oracle against Edom (Jr 49:7-22), linking its destruction to those infamous cities (Jr 49:18).

34:11 This verse describes animals that lived in ruins and desolate places. The owl was considered unclean (Lv 11:15-16). For similar use of the word in contexts of judgment, see Is 34:13; Jr 50:38; Mc 1:8. God's judgment will be premeditated and extensive. While the measuring line and the plumb line were normally used in construction, God will use them to plan for the destruction of Edom.

34:12 Edom's kingship was ancient, preceding that of Israel (Gn 36:31-43), but God will bring that institution to an end since He is bringing the nation itself to a close.

34:13-15 The theme of this verse is that of a city becoming a wilderness. Not only will the public buildings of the nation be overgrown out of neglect, but wild animals—a number of which were considered unclean (Lv 15)—will make their homes among the ruins.

34:16-17 The meaning of the scroll of the LORD is unknown. It may be a reference to a heavenly scroll, but if so, it is hard to know how the hearer could refer to this document. The appeal to the scroll could be a rhetorical device to emphasize the certainty of Edom's destruction and its transformation into a haunt for wild animals.

35:1-10 This chapter is a mirror image of chapter 34 where God announced that He would turn the nations into a wilderness. In chapter 35, He proclaimed that He would transform the people of God from a wilderness into a garden. The principle of both chapters is that God's people should trust Him, not the nations.

35:2 Lebanon . . . Carmel, and Sharon were regions especially lush in vegetation (33:9).

35:3-4 God will save His people from the godless nations that oppress them. God's retribution refers to the punishment due the wicked and the reward due the righteous. For this reason, the latter can be strong and not fearful.

35:5-7 God's work transforms those who are blind . . . deaf . . . lame, and mute. Elsewhere in Isaiah these physical disabilities are metaphors for spiritual shortcomings (29:18; 42:18-19; 43:8). They have been physically dead to godliness, but in the future they will come alive. Not only will the lame walk, but they will leap like a deer. Not only will the mute speak, but they will sing for joy. A similar transformation is described with the language of nature. The parched ground will flow with water. Land that was only suitable for wilderness animals like jackals will be verdant.

35:8 Israel, with its deep wadis and mountainous terrain, was a hard land to cross, but Isaiah foresaw a road. This road will be the Holy Way, a name indicating that it would provide access to God. While the unclean would not travel on it since it led to the presence of a holy God, even the fool would not get lost if he seeks to walk this path.

35:9-10 The road described in verse 8 will be a safe road, and it will lead to Zion, where God makes His presence known to His people.

36:1 The year was 701 B.C. The Assyrians had defeated the northern kingdom of Israel in 722 B.C. and put Judah in a position where they had to pay annual tribute to keep the Assyrians from attacking them. In 703 B.C. Sennacherib succeeded his father Sargon on the throne of Assyria. Many nations, including Judah, seized upon this succession in leadership as an opportunity to rebel against Assyria. After taking care of rebellions in other parts of his empire, Sennacherib turned his attention to Judah in 701 B.C. He easily took many of the smaller fortified cities on the way to Jerusalem. For accounts of this confrontation, see 2Kg 18-19 and 2Ch 32.

Sennacherib's Campaign Against Judah 36:2 Lachish was an important garrison city about 30 miles west of Jerusalem. Along with other cities, it guarded the road that led to Jerusalem. The king of Assyria, along with his armies, was still at Lachish when he sent one of his chief officials, the Rabshakeh (perhaps a Hebrew representation of an Akkadian title "chief cupbearer"), to present an ultimatum to Jerusalem. The Rabshakeh stood at the same place where Isaiah had confronted Ahaz at an earlier time (7:3). This reminds the reader that the earlier Judean king was told not to trust the Assyrians, but Ahaz did not heed this advice, and this led to the present situation.

36:3 Eliakim . . . Shebna, and Joah were high-ranking Judean officials who negotiated on behalf of King Hezekiah. On Shebna and Eliakim, see note at 22:15-25.

36:4-5 The purpose of the Rabshakeh's speech was to try to get Hezekiah to surrender. He questioned the basis of Hezekiah's refusal by trying to undermine the foundations of his confidence. He first questioned whether the people of Judah were militarily prepared to counter the Assyrian threat.

36:6 The Rabshakeh then undermined any confidence the nation of Judah might have in Egypt as an ally. He used the metaphor of a splintered reed of a staff. A staff was something a person leaned on for support. However, this staff was made out of a reed that could not support a person's weight. Indeed, God through Isaiah had been making the same point. Egypt was not an ally that could be trusted.

36:7 Finally, the Rabshakeh questioned whether God would provide protection to Hezekiah. His argument shows that he did not understand the religion of Judah. Indeed, the removal of all altars except the one on Mount Zion was in conformity with the law of centralization in Deuteronomy 12. However, the Rabshakeh had a pagan mind-set that assumed a god would be pleased with multiple altars, and conversely displeased if the number of altars were constricted.

36:8-9 The Rabshakeh then taunted Judah by offering them 2,000 horses, suggesting that they could not find riders for them.

36:10 Here the Rabshakeh's statement reflects ancient Near Eastern pagan theology. The Assyrians believed that the God of Israel was a real deity, though perhaps not a strong one. The Rabshakeh claimed that Judah's God had ordered the nation's destruction. God did use foreign nations on occasion to punish His own people, but in this case the Rabshakeh was wrong, as further developments of the confrontation between Assyria and Israel would indicate.

36:11 The Assyrians spoke a dialect of Akkadian, and the Judeans spoke Hebrew at this time. The Rabshakeh probably had been speaking Hebrew to the Judean delegation. The leaders of Judah did not want the people to be frightened by the Rabshakeh's speech. Perhaps because they did not know how to speak Akkadian, they requested that the conversation take place in Aramaic. This language was closely related to Hebrew. It was known more broadly throughout the ancient Near East, but not by the people who were listening to this conversation.

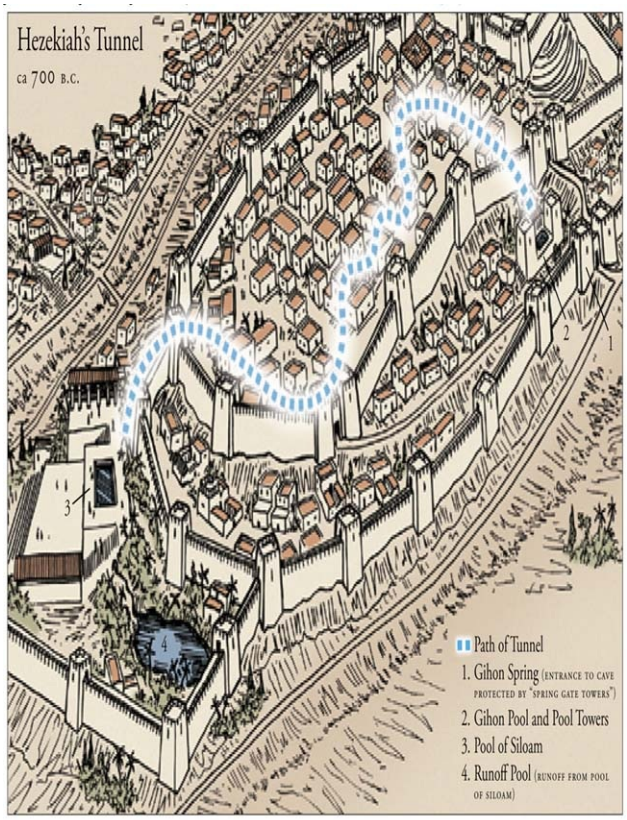
36:12 However, it served the Rabshakeh's propagandistic purpose to have the people hear and be frightened by the coming Assyrian army, so he refused this request. He reminded them of the consequences of a long siege. They would run out of water and have to drink their urine; they would run out of food and have to eat their excrement.

36:15 The Rabshakeh mocked the idea of trusting in God to rescue Judah from Assyria. But as the previous chapters have asserted many times, trusting God is precisely what the people of Judah should do in this situation.

36:16-17 Assyria's imperialistic policy called for the deportation of a subjugated people. The Rabshakeh presented his ultimatum for surrender. For the time being, the Judeans would stay in their own land, but after a while, they would be deported to another land. Such a policy was put into place in 722 B.C. when the Assyrians conquered the northern kingdom and deported the vast majority of the native population and then brought in foreigners to live there. This policy was intended to break the connection between a people and the god of their land.

36:18-20 The Rabshakeh argued that the God of Judah, Yahweh, could not save Judah any more than the gods of other nations and cities that had been defeated by Assyria. He specifically mentioned the defeat of three cities whose gods were unable to rescue their inhabitants. Arpad and Hamath were cities in northern Syria known to have been defeated by Assyria at an earlier time. The exact identification of Sepharvaim is unknown.

36:21-22 Hezekiah did not give his officials authority to negotiate with Assyria. They simply reported the proceedings to the king. Their clothes that were torn were a customary sign of mourning, showing their deep distress.



In 711 B.C. Sargon II of Assyria captured Ashdod. Hezekiah foresaw a time when the Assyrian army might besiege Jerusalem. He fortified Jerusalem and organized an army. Knowing that a source of water was crucial within the city walls, Hezekiah constructed a 1,750-foot tunnel through solid rock from the spring of Gihon to the Siloam pool. On the east wall of the tunnel conduit, about 20 feet from the Pool of Siloam, an inscription was found that represents one of the oldest Hebrew inscriptions of significant length. Although the inscription was broken in an attempt to steal it, the fragments are now in the Istanbul Archaeology Museum.

37:1 The report from Hezekiah's officials (36:22) led the king to assume a posture of mourning, indicated by the customary tearing of his clothes and putting on sackcloth, a rough and uncomfortable material. He then went to the temple, demonstrating the proper response to such a crisis. He did not turn to a foreign nation like Egypt for help, but he turned to God.

37:2-4 Hezekiah then sent two of his officials, Eliakim and Shebna, along with senior priests, to elicit prayers on behalf of the nation from the prophet Isaiah. One of the main roles of a prophet was to provide intercessory prayer. The first mention of a prophet in the Bible links the office with prayer (Gn 20:7). Most of the prophets, beginning with Moses (Ex 33) and Samuel (1Sm 12:23), demonstrated the important role of prayer in their work.

37:5-6 Isaiah assured King Hezekiah through his men that God would remedy the threat presented by the Assyrian army. God took the Assyrian challenge personally. The king had shown trust in the Lord by approaching Isaiah, His servant, to pray.

37:7 God would send a spirit of deception to the Assyrian king so he would hear and believe a falsehood that would cause him to retreat. The fact that God would send such a spirit evokes memory of the "evil spirit" God sent to torment Saul (1Sm 16:14) and the "lying spirit" God used to deceive King Ahab (1Kg 22:22).

37:8 When the Rabshakeh had traveled to Jerusalem, the Assyrian king and his army was at Lachish (36:2), but when the Rabshakeh returned, the king was at Libnah, a town about eight miles northeast of Lachish. Sennacherib had completed the capture of Lachish and had moved on to the next city on what seemed to be an unstoppable march toward Jerusalem.

37:9 Tirhakah king of Cush at this point in history (701 B.C.) may have been crown prince of Egypt. He became pharaoh of all Egypt in 690 B.C. and ruled until 664 B.C.

37:10 The rumor of Tirhakah's advance on his rear flank caused Sennacherib to retreat from his advance on Jerusalem, but before he left he sent a message in the form of a "letter" (v. 14) to warn Hezekiah that his departure was only temporary.

37:11-13 Sennacherib again told Hezekiah (see the Rabshakeh's speech in 36:18-20) that he should not trust Yahweh. After all, the gods of other nations and cities conquered by Assyria in the past had been unable to help them. Most of the sites listed here were in what is today eastern Turkey (Haran, the city where Abraham and his family stayed for a while before descending into the promised land; see Gn 11:31-32) or northern Syria (Gozan . . . Rezeph and Eden). One site, Telassar, has been associated with a location (Til-Ashshuri) in what is today Iraq near the Diyala River. On Hamath . . . Arpad, and Sepharvaim, see note at 36:18-20. The locations of Hena and Ivvah are unknown.

37:16 Hezekiah addressed his prayer to God whom he described as enthroned above the cherubim. The cherubim were among the most powerful of God's heavenly creatures and are often represented at places close to the divine presence. In particular, this refers to the statues of two cherubim whose wings covered the ark of the covenant as it rested in the holy of holies in the tabernacle and temple. Their wings touched and their heads were bowed so they were not overwhelmed by God's glorious presence since He was said to be enthroned above their wings with the ark as His footstool (Ex 25:18-22; 1Kg 8:6-7). Hezekiah appealed to God as the One who made the heavens and the earth—the One who is sovereign over all kingdoms, not just Judah—since Sennacherib had mocked God as a mere local deity.

37:18-20 Sennacherib had dared to compare the true God to mere idols and suggested that he would defeat Yahweh's people as easily as he had defeated the gods of the other countries. Hezekiah appealed to God based on His glory. If Judah should be defeated, then the nations, and in particular Assyria, would believe that Yahweh was just like the false gods of all the other nations.

37:21 God responded to Hezekiah through His divinely chosen spokesman, the prophet Isaiah. As Isaiah spoke, he spoke in the name of God.

37:22 Daughter Zion is a personification of Zion, the most holy location in Judah. This reminds the reader of the intimate relationship God enjoyed with His people. The response was addressed to none other than Sennacherib, so the use of this title for God's people shows from the start how important they were to Yahweh.

37:23 God was enraged by Sennacherib's mocking condescension toward Him, treating Him as a local and powerless deity. He was the Holy One of Israel, one of Isaiah's favorite titles for God, emphasizing His separateness, moral perfection, and uniqueness.

37:24 Lebanon's cedar forests were well known throughout the ancient Near East, and glory was attached to anyone who could go there and take its precious wood.

37:25 It was always the dream of Mesopotamian kings to defeat Egypt. Sennacherib had boasted that he was able to travel to Egypt.

37:26-27 Now God revealed to Sennacherib the true nature of things. Sennacherib had boasted of his achievements, but God announced that he had done nothing without divine design. His victories had come about only because God had willed it.

37:28 In language reminiscent of Psalm 139, God asserted His extensive knowledge of the Assyrian king. Yahweh was in control.

37:29 It was Assyrian practice, as illustrated in the bas-reliefs that adorned their palaces, to put a hook in the nose or the mouth of captives as they carried them into exile. God told Sennacherib that he would be subjected to this brutal and degrading treatment.

37:30-32 God directed these words to Hezekiah, king of Judah, to show him that the future would see a turn for the better for God's people.

37:30 Because of the siege by Assyria, the Judeans were penned up behind the walls of Jerusalem and had not been able to plant their crops. Thus, they would eat what grew on its own, an unreliable volunteer crop. After Assyria lifted the siege, they would be able to plant, but not until the third year would agriculture get back to normal.

37:31-32 Now the oracle speaks of a metaphorical harvest—of the surviving remnant of the people of God. The future will see the remnant become productive.

37:33-35 God directed His attention back to the king of Assyria. He announced that Sennacherib would fail at his attempt to take the city. He would not even begin the assault but would return to Assyria. God would do this for His own glory and because of the promise He had made to David. God promised David that "your house and kingdom will endure before Me forever, and your throne will be established forever" (2Sm 7:16).

37:36-37 God sent His angel to kill the Assyrians without a battle. No proximate cause is given for the death of the enemy soldiers, though it is likely that God used disease to accomplish His goal.

37:38 Nisroch was an unknown Assyrian god or, more likely, the name given by the Hebrews to a god known by another name. Ararat was a region located around Lake Van north of Assyria. It was known in antiquity as Urartu and was a long-standing foe of Assyria, thus a likely place for the murderous sons of Sennacherib to escape. While Adrammelech and Sharezer are not known by name, Esar-haddon is known to have succeeded his father Sennacherib after the king's death in 683 B.C. Since these events happened in 683 B.C., it appears that almost 20 years passed from the time Sennacherib withdrew from Jerusalem in 701 B.C. to the time when he died at the hands of his sons.

38:5 God heard the prayer of Hezekiah and increased his lifespan by 15 years. Interestingly, God is described as the LORD God of your ancestor David. Hezekiah was the descendant of David, who had been promised a son on the throne in Jerusalem forever. Hezekiah may not have had an heir at this time (his heir, Manasseh, was 12 years old when Hezekiah died; 2Kg 21:1). This meant that if he died prior to the fifteen-year extension, the Davidic dynasty would come to an end.

38:6 The reference to the deliverance of the city from the king of Assyria may indicate that this episode took place during the Assyrian threat described in chapters 36-37.

38:7 Hezekiah's sign brings to mind the sign offered to his father Ahaz in chapter 7. While Ahaz was not interested in receiving a sign, probably because he had other plans in mind, Hezekiah did not try to refuse the sign. Their contrasting responses reveal the difference between Ahaz, who trusted in other nations, and Hezekiah, who trusted in God.

38:8 The return of the sun's shadow on the stairway indicated a lengthening of the day that would be comparable to God's lengthening of the life of Hezekiah. The parallel account in 2Kg 20:9-11 indicates that Hezekiah was allowed to choose whether the shadow would go ahead or go back 10 steps. Hezekiah chose the latter since he considered that the more difficult feat.

38:9 The introduction to Hezekiah's poem states that it was written after he had been sick and had recovered. In this respect, the poem is like the thanksgiving songs in Psalms. In the first part of this poem, Hezekiah spoke as if he were going to die, but from the second half of the poem it is clear that it was written after he was healed.

38:10 Sheol refers to the grave and in some contexts signifies the ancient concept of an underworld.

38:11 The land of the living refers to this world and leaves open the question about Hezekiah's belief in the afterlife.

38:12 Hezekiah used multiple metaphors to describe the fragility and brevity of life.

38:13 On God as a lion, see Lm 3:10; Hs 5:14; Am 3:8.

38:14 The groans of Hezekiah's lamentation sound like the chirping of a bird.

38:15-16 God had spoken, and King Hezekiah had been delivered from a premature death.

38:17 Hezekiah's bitterness (see also v. 15) refers to his mournful reaction to news of his impending death. This bitterness is what led him to seek God in prayer and ultimately to God's relenting from His death sentence. The king referred to the grave (and the afterworld) as a Pit of destruction. After all, in the grave the body rots and turns to dust.

38:18 Sheol (see note at v. 10) and Death are personified. The implication, as made clear by the phrase those who go down to the Pit, is that the dead can no longer praise God.

38:19 God benefits from keeping His saints alive. The living can praise God and they can share that praise with the following generations.

38:21-22 These verses are an appendix that fills in some facts from earlier in the story.

39:1 Merodach-baladan was king of Babylon, at this time a province of the Assyrian Empire, during two different times—721-710 B.C. and 705-703 B.C. In 703 B.C. Sennacherib, to whom Merodach-baladan had been a constant irritant looking for opportunities to revolt, removed him. Even after his removal from Babylon, Merodach-baladan went to Elam and continued to plot against Assyria until his death. The letters and a gift that he sent to Hezekiah were part of a strategy to get Hezekiah to join with him in a rebellious alliance.

39:2 Hezekiah responded positively to Merodach-baladan, showing him the wealth of his kingdom as well as the strength of his armaments.

39:5-7 God through the prophet Isaiah expressed his great displeasure with Hezekiah. The king's actions demonstrated that he was trusting foreign nations like Babylon for his protection rather than God. The Lord's punishment would take away the wealth that Hezekiah had been showing off to Merodach-baladan. Another part of the punishment was that some of the king's descendants would be taken away and would become eunuchs in Babylon. Babylonian records indicate that a number of the Babylonian king's advisers were eunuchs. Some have speculated that Daniel and his three friends (described as "from the royal family and from the nobility") were also made eunuchs since Ashpenaz's title is literally rendered "chief of the eunuchs" (Dn 1:3).

39:8 The implication of the announced punishment was that it would happen in a future generation. Hezekiah's selfish relief does not speak well for him. The reference is likely to the turbulent end of the Davidic dynasty in Judah and specifically to the events surrounding the exile and removal of the last king, Zedekiah.

40:1 Though the hearer of God's words are not here specified, it is best to see these words as being directed to the prophet Isaiah, who was commanded to bring words of comfort rather than judgment to God's people. The words address the prophet as if he were living in the time of the future exile of Judah to Babylon. God anticipated the questions that His people would have as they experienced His judgment.

40:2 The time of forced labor refers to the future Babylonian exile (586-539 B.C.). That the people had received double punishment is a way of saying that their sentence was fully satisfied before God.

40:3-4 A herald rallied his hearers to prepare a road that would make quick and easy access for God to return to the promised land in order to restore His people. The wilderness was difficult to cross because it had deep wadis and high mountains, but in preparation for the return this rough terrain would become like a plain, easy to travel. The fulfillment most immediately in view is the return of Jewish people after the end of the exile, but the ultimate fulfillment of these verses is in the work of Jesus Christ as signaled by the quotation of verse 3 along with Mal 3:1 in Mk 1:2-3 and the identification of the voice as that of John the Baptist.

40:5 Sin had broken the fellowship between God and His people, but Isaiah looked beyond their punishment to the return of the glory of the LORD.

40:6-8 Another herald compared humanity to grass and the flower of the field, both of which have short-lived and fragile beauty. The contrast is with the word of God that endures. Perhaps the contrast implies that the Babylonians, though seemingly powerful, would fade, but God's word that had promised His people restoration would not fail.

40:11 In the Bible and throughout the ancient Near East, the shepherd was a familiar image for a ruler. Judah had been subject to weak and evil shepherds or kings (Ezk 34), but the nation would once again have a strong and compassionate shepherd—God Himself (Ps 23).

40:12-26 The series of rhetorical questions that appear in these verses have one intention—to demonstrate the uniqueness of the one true God. This assured God's people that God not only wanted to deliver them, but He was able to do so.

40:12 God is in control and knows everything about His creation, both heavens and earth. Unlike the gods of the surrounding nations that were identified with aspects of nature (Baal was the god of storm, thunder, and lightning), Judah's God created the world and measured it.

40:13-14 God does not need a teacher. He is inherently wise and gives advice to others (Jb 38:1-42:5).

40:15-17 Babylon must have seemed invulnerable once Judah suffered defeat by the Babylonians and her leaders were carted off into exile, but no human power, not even Babylon, could compare with God. They were like a drop in a bucket. Lebanon was famous for its massive forests and its abundant wildlife, but they were not sufficient to produce a burnt offering before God. The message is that God could and would deliver Judah from Babylonian captivity. On islands, see note at 41:1.

40:18-20 God is nothing like the gods of the nations. Many thought otherwise, believing that Babylon was able to defeat Judah because the Babylonian gods were stronger than Yahweh, but the Babylonian gods were nothing but wood and metal—the creation of human craftsmen (41:6-7; 42:17; 44:9-20; 46:5-7; 48:5).

40:21-24 God is not only superior to the gods of the nations; He is far above the rulers of the nations as well (princes . . . judges). He is the ultimate ruler. His throne is not on earth, but above the circle of the earth. Like grass (vv. 6-8), they are fragile and short-lived and as easily disposed of as stubble carried away by a whirlwind. They are no match for God.

40:25-26 Nothing compares to God—not even the starry host. The religions of the ancient Near East believed the stars were gods. Judah's religion asserted that God created the stars. The fact that He knew them by name indicates that they were His creation and they were protected (not one of them is missing) by His power.

40:27 When Judah experienced God's punishment, Isaiah anticipated that the people would ask why God had abandoned them. The following verses summarize the answer given in the first part of the chapter. God wanted to deliver His people, and He was fully able to do so.

40:28 God had the power and wisdom to bring about Judah's deliverance.

40:29-31 God not only had strength, but He distributed that strength to His people. The criterion for receiving God's strength was not youth but trust. Those who trusted God would have an unlimited source of strength.

41:1 The islands refer to far-off lands and thus represent all the nations of the world. The prophets often used the language of the courtroom. Here God will try the nations and their idols. The nations were to be quiet as God presented evidence in support of His case.

41:2 The one from the east who subdues kings is a reference to Cyrus, king of Persia (45:1), whom God used to defeat Babylon in 539 B.C. This brought the exile of Judah to an end.

41:3 The conquests of Cyrus were quick, and he remained safe until he had extended Babylon's boundaries.

41:4 Though Cyrus was the human agent behind these predicted events, God took credit because Cyrus succeeded under His sovereign control.

41:5-7 On islands, see note at verse 1. The craftsman and the metalworker were those who created the idols in whom the nations trusted.

41:8 While the nations felt the wrath of God at the hands of His agent Cyrus, God again would make Israel His friend. By calling Israel the descendant of Abraham, God called to mind the promise to the patriarch that his descendants would be a "great nation" (Gn 12:2). On the basis of this ancient covenantal promise, God acted to restore His people Israel.

41:9 God's punishment of Judah led to exile in 586 B.C. when many of its leading citizens were taken to Babylon and from there scattered throughout the empire. Restoration involved bringing them back from the ends of the earth.

41:10 God's statement I am with you is a concise way of describing the covenant relationship between Him and His people. God's right hand is often associated with His military might, thus His ability to protect His people.

41:11-12 God assured His people that their enemies would not have the ability or the power to harm them.

41:13-14 The inability of the nations to contend with Israel was because of divine protection and intimacy (I . . . hold your right hand). Israel did not have the strength or ability to protect itself, but God would sustain them.

41:15 The threshing board was a heavy wooden sledge with many stone or iron teeth on its underside. It was dragged across sheaves to separate the grain from the chaff in the winnowing process. The metaphor emphasizes how thoroughly and violently Israel would defeat the nations.

41:16 Winnowing involved throwing grain in the air so the wind caught the chaff, or waste matter, and blew it away.

41:17-18 The phrase the poor and the needy here refers to God's own down-and-out people whom He has punished. But God will restore them, turning their dry land into a watery paradise.

41:19-20 The desert has become an orchard, an act that only God could perform—the word translated created (Hb bara') is the same as in Gn 1:1.

41:21 Again (see note at v. 1) God used legal language as He challenged the nations and their idols. Jacob's King is none other than God Himself.

41:22-24 The idols were ignorant of the future, demonstrating that they were not gods. Indeed, they were nothing.

41:25 King Cyrus of Persia is in mind here. He is said to be from the east (see note at v. 2) because his homeland was geographically east of Israel. On the other hand, he could at the same time be from the north because that was the direction from which he attacked Babylon.

41:26-27 While the idols were ignorant because they did not really exist, God knew the future. Indeed He knew about this from the beginning. The coming of Cyrus was good news to Jerusalem because his defeat of Babylon would mean that the exiles could come home.

41:28-29 The false gods of the nations were nonexistent, thus they could not give advice.

42:1-9 A number of songs in the latter half of Isaiah focus on the Servant of the Lord (49:1-6; 50:4-6; 52:13-53:12). The identity of the Servant is much debated, and most modern commentaries give full lists of options. The context of these verses points in the first instance to Israel or Judah filling the role of the Servant. After all, 41:8-9 addresses the nation as the Servant. In answer to the objection that this song's description of the Servant is much too positive to refer to the nation as a whole, it can be conceded that Isaiah spoke of the remnant that would emerge from the purifying fires of judgment. However, even the postexilic survivors did not live up to the hope expressed in these verses. Accordingly, Christian readers recognize that the NT writers (Mt 12:15-21) applied the description of the Servant, both here and in the three other songs, to Jesus Christ (so the HCSB appropriately capitalizes Servant).

42:1 God will choose and anoint His Servant with the Spirit. Such anointing in the OT granted the recipient the ability to perform a divinely given task, in this case to bring justice to the nations. God commissioned Israel with this task beginning with the promises to Abraham that included their being a blessing to the nations (cp. Gn 12:1-3), but it is Jesus who will perform His Father's will perfectly in this regard. Jesus' work of justice included bringing judgment on sinners (Mt 12:15-21; Rv 19:11).

42:2 The Servant will not be loud or obnoxious in carrying out His task. He will not cry out in pain. This assumes suffering as part of the Servant's future

(chap. 53). At Gethsemane Jesus went quietly when arrested (Mt 26:47ff). Later He quietly bore the crossbeam of His cross a portion of the way as He walked the streets toward His execution site: Golgotha (Jn 19:17).

42:3 The Servant's work of bringing justice to the world is also characterized by compassion. Like God who would not destroy Sodom and Gomorrah if just 10 righteous people could be found there, so the Servant will not crush anyone, provided there is even a glimmer of hope in them (a bruised reed . . . a smoldering wick).

42:4 The word islands refers to the distant nations, so it is a way of referring to all the nations. The whole earth will heed God's instruction, bringing justice to the world. In 2:2-4 the same idea is presented in the form of a picture of the nations streaming to Zion to receive the law.

42:5 God is not a part of creation, He is its Creator. He is also not a human being, but the One who created human beings. He gave them breath, starting with Adam (Gn 2:7).

42:6 God had entered into a covenant with Abraham on behalf not only of future Israel, but also of the nations (Gn 12:1-3). But history shows Israel's miserable failure. Again, God's purposes were fulfilled in the good news of Jesus Christ whose death and resurrection brought hope (light) to the Gentiles. He was the One who established the new covenant anticipated by Jeremiah (Jr 31:31-34; Lk 22:20).

42:7 The Servant brought those who were in spiritual and physical darkness into the light of God's grace.

42:8-9 God is superior to the idols that are really nothing at all. After all, they can neither interpret the significance of past events nor announce what will happen in the future (cp. 41:22).

42:10-17 This song celebrating God's making all things new through His judgment follows the first Servant Song.

42:10 The expression new song occurs only in Isaiah, Psalms (Ps 33:3; 40:3; 98:1; 149:1), and Revelation (Rv 5:9; 14:3). With only minor exceptions, "new song" is associated, as here, with the image of God as a warrior. It is the warrior who causes all things to become new through His refining warfare (see note at Ps 149:1). All the nations are urged to join in the praise. On islands, see note at 41:1.

42:11 The litany of the far-flung participants in the song of praise of God continues. Kedar refers to a desert-dwelling Arabic tribe, while Sela was a major city in Edom, a mountainous region. The two sites thus represent isolated desert and mountain regions.

42:12 On islands, see note at 41:1.

42:13 The first explicit mention of God as a warrior comes at the time of the crossing of the Red Sea (Ex 15:4) when He rescued His helpless people and destroyed Egypt's elite chariot troops. Earlier anticipations extend back to the stationing of cherubim at the entrance to the garden of Eden (Gn 3:24). When God appears as a warrior, there is no uncertainty about the outcome.

42:14 God has been silent. He has not made an appearance as a warrior for a long time, but that is about to change. He is about to give birth to His righteous anger toward the enemy of His people.

42:15 God's appearance as a warrior is often described as having catastrophic results for the physical creation. Fertility stops for a time, and water sources go dry (24:4-13; Nah 1:4-6).

42:16-17 God will rescue His people (the blind) and will make their way smooth. Those who trust in idols will not be helped but will experience shame.

42:18-25 The chapter ends with an oracle that explains why God's people will experience judgment before they receive the deliverance described in the previous hymn (vv. 10-17).

42:18-20 God describes His servant Israel as blind and deaf. These physical disabilities represent spiritual disabilities; they don't perceive God's guidance.

42:21 The people's inability to see and hear God's instruction was not a failure on God's part. He magnified His instruction and made it glorious. Only the most spiritually insensitive could miss it. God had even sent the prophets—men like Isaiah and later Jeremiah and Ezekiel—to make His instruction clearer, but still they did not obey.

42:22 God's people have become plunder, a reference to the judgment He will bring on them, specifically the exile. No one will help them. The reference to holes is to makeshift prisons, similar to the cistern in which Jeremiah was held (Jr 38).

42:24-25 God is the One who has allowed Israel to be the plunder of the nations as punishment for not following His law.

43:1 Calling a person by his name indicates a high level of familiarity. The phrase might even hint at the fact that God gave them their names, an act to indicate superiority and perhaps even ownership. God gave Israel its name when He changed the name of the patriarch Jacob to Israel (Gn 32:28). The intention of this oracle is expressed clearly at the start (Do not fear; see also Is 43:5). God informed His people about their coming deliverance to keep them from caving in to fear.

43:2 The waters can be naturally dangerous just like the fire mentioned in the second half of the verse. However, the waters in particular can stand for the forces of chaos and evil (Dn 7:1-9) or some kind of personal duress (Ps 69:1-3).

The background for this symbolic use of water comes from ancient Near Eastern creation stories where there was a conflict between the creator god and the god or goddess of water. The promise that God will be with His people is a covenant formula that indicates the close relationship between God and His people.

43:3-4 God's people are so precious that He is willing to save them at the price (ransom) of Egypt . . . Cush, and Seba. The land of Cush was south of Egypt, on the upper (southern) portion of the Nile River, roughly identical to modern Ethiopia. Seba's location is unknown. Some scholars take this as a reference to the fact that while King Cyrus of Persia decreed the restoration of Judah, his successors went on to attack Egypt and Cush. Indeed, God is willing to give much more than these three countries in place of His people.

43:5-6 God will gather His people from all over the world, east and west . . . north and south. The reference is to the restoration from the exile. The returns under Sheshbazzar and Zerubbabel as well as the later returns under Ezra and Nehemiah show that the Lord kept His promise.

43:7 The exile will not result in the eradication of God's special people. After all, He created them. They will preserve their distinct identity and not be merged into foreign populations.

43:8 Israel, God's servant, is a people who were blind and deaf (see note at 42:18-20). Since they had functioning eyes and ears, the reference is to spiritual insensitivity.

43:9 The challenge to find someone among the nations who could tell the significance of past events is another sarcastic comment on the mute, powerless idols of the nations (41:22; 42:9).

43:10-12 God called to the assembled nations (v. 9) to be a witness. He also called on His people, whom He identified as His servant, to be His witnesses. The calling of witnesses associates this passage with the courtroom. Not only is God better than the foreign gods, those gods do not exist at all. The nations were silent when asked to witness to their gods' work in their lives. God's people functioned as God's witness to the fact that He had saved them in the past.

43:14 God will turn the Babylonians into fugitives, suggesting that their cities will be defeated and they will wander from place to place. Chaldeans were an Aramaic-speaking tribe of Babylon that rose up in the seventh century B.C. to lead the charge against Assyria, thus establishing the Neo-Babylonian Empire. The Chaldean tribe's home base was at the point where the Tigris and Euphrates rivers emptied into what is today called the Persian Gulf. Thus shipping was very important to them.

43:16-17 God called on His people to remember their great deliverance from the Egyptians at the Red Sea (Ex 14).

43:18-19 The exodus poetically described in verses 16-17 is described as past events, the things of old. But God turns the hearers' attention to something new, a new exodus. This time God will create not "a way in the sea" (v. 16), but a way in the wilderness. This future deliverance is pictured as a reversal of nature, with rivers in the desert.

43:20-21 Because of the new provision of water in the wilderness, the animals that live there will be pleased. In the same way, God's people who have been oppressed by the Babylonians will find new freedom.

43:22-24 Whether Israel literally stopped offering sacrifices or whether they simply offered them hypocritically is not important; proper sacrifices were not being offered. The passage revolves around the word "weary." The people were weary of God so they did not offer requisite sacrifice. But it was not God's fault —the purpose of the sacrificial laws was not to weary them but to free them from their sins. Since the people refused to see this, God was instead wearied by the sins of His people.

43:25 The people sinned, but God forgave. The idea of removal of sin is communicated by the action of sweeping as well as the mental act of forgetting. To remember something is to act on it, and to forget is to hold back from acting.

43:26-28 Once again a court setting is introduced. God challenged His people to argue their case against Him. The reference to Israel's first father is likely Jacob, whose name was changed to Israel. Jacob was well known for his foolish and sinful ways (Hs 12:1-6).

44:1 Again, Jacob or Israel is explicitly identified as God's servant (v. 21; 41:8-9; 42:19; 43:1). God had chosen Israel from among the nations to be His special people (Dt 7:7-11). In this way, He created Israel.

44:2-3 The phrase formed you from the womb evokes the metaphor of God as the mother who gave birth to Israel. Jeshurun is used as a name for Israel (Dt 32:15; 33:5,26) in contexts that indicate it is a term of endearment. It is obscure in meaning but may be related to the Hebrew word yashar, which means "virtuous." The theme of turning dry land into fertile land is an image of physical and/or spiritual transformation. The results are growth, in this case among the descendants of the people of God.

44:5 Writing on one's hand signified intimacy, though some (Walton, pp. 628-29) believe it refers to a slave mark showing ownership. In either case, the idea is that people will want to identify and align themselves with the Lord.

44:6 A long argument against idols begins with an assertion of the uniqueness of God.

44:7 Only God can reveal the future, something that He does through His prophets (cp. 41:22; 42:9).

44:8 The invocation of witnesses places this passage in a courtroom setting. These witnesses will bear testimony to the fact that only Yahweh is a Rock—a place of protection and stability—not the false gods of the nations.

44:12-20 These verses describe the construction and worship of an idol. Ancient texts describing the making and care of idols confirm such a process. Pagan Near Eastern religious leaders probably did not believe that an idol was the actual god, but they did believe that the god made its power and presence known in the physical object. Thus the idol was seen as a potent representation of the deity. Laypeople, on the other hand, likely made a stronger association between idols and the deities, taking the graven wood or metal to be true deity. In any case, Isaiah's argument was one that reduced all idolatry to its absurd foundation.

44:12-13 Some ancient idols were made from metal and others from wood. The description of their manufacture emphasizes that these were human creations.

44:14 Isaiah went back in this verse to the beginning of the process of constructing an idol—the planting and cultivation of a tree.

44:15-19 These verses express the ultimate absurdity of idolatry. The same wood used to construct an idol was also used to kindle a fire to keep warm and to cook food. Isaiah was aware that ancient Near Eastern people utilized rituals that intended to turn the wooden idol into an object of worship. In Mesopotamia these were called "opening of the mouth" rituals. Via this ritual, the presence of the god was thought to enter the piece of wood. Jeremiah 10:1-5 expresses a similar idea.

44:20 The lie in a person's right hand is a reference to an idol that represented a false god and was really nothing at all.

44:21 Israel will benefit from remembering the lesson about the absurdity of idolatry since that will keep God's people from practicing false worship. God formed His people; they did not form their god like the idolaters did. Israel was the servant of God (v. 1; 41:8-9; 42:19; 43:1).

44:23 In idolatry, a bit of nature, a piece of wood, was worshiped. Here God's creation—especially the forest, and every tree in it—worships God.

44:24-28 In these verses God's sovereignty over His creation and the future is asserted. God affirmed His prophets over against those prophets who deceived.

44:24 On the image of God stretching out the heavens and spreading the earth, see note at 42:5. This description demonstrates God's control over the cosmos. He puts it up like a Bedouin erects a tent.

44:25 The sovereign God confuses and destroys those who claim to reveal the future. Such people are condemned and contrasted with true prophets in Dt 18:9-

22. The type of “prophets” this verse has in mind were diviners, not those who received revelation from God. Diviners manipulated or observed such things as sheep livers, cloud formations, and the stars to determine the future.

44:26 In contrast to the false prophets are God’s messengers with the message that Jerusalem will be rebuilt and reinhabited.

44:27 God’s ability to restore Jerusalem is affirmed by reference to His control of nature, specifically that He can make bodies of water go dry. Since water is often a symbol of the forces of chaos, perhaps the meaning of this verse is that God will subdue those chaotic forces that held Judah captive.

44:28 God announced the agent of His rescue of exiled Judah—Cyrus the Great. Thus Isaiah, whose ministry spanned four kings whose reigns stretched from 742 to 686 B.C., named a ruler who was not yet born. The prophetic reference is to Persia’s defeat of Babylon under the leadership of Cyrus in 539 B.C., an event that led to permission for the Jews to return to their homeland and rebuild Jerusalem. Cyrus is called a shepherd, a common metaphor for a royal figure. The rebuilding of Jerusalem is associated with the rebuilding of the temple, a hope that became reality in 515 B.C.

45:1-8 In this section, written at least 140 years before it was fulfilled, God speaks to Cyrus and announces how He intends to use Him as His agent. The passage divinely commissions Cyrus. There is no reason to believe that Cyrus was conscious of His role as God’s agent of redemption any more than Assyria or Babylon were conscious that they were used as the tool of God’s anger. Indeed, the final lines of verses 4 and 5 state as much.

45:1 God called Cyrus His anointed. The Hebrew word can be rendered “Messiah” in English. Here the use is metaphorical of God’s invisible commissioning of this earthly king to function as a royal deliverer of His people. In the ancient Near East, when a god grasped the right hand of someone, it indicated special favor, commissioning, guidance, and divine endowment with skill.

45:2 God will cause the strong defenses of enemy cities to fall before Cyrus. He will level the uneven places (cp. 40:3-6) to speed his attack.

45:3 As Cyrus defeated nations (including Medes, Lydians, and Babylonians), their wealth would come into his possession. These treasures were hidden away from the world and thus are associated with darkness and considered secret.

45:4 God’s actions toward Cyrus have nothing to do with God’s love for Cyrus or the Persians. He will use them on behalf of His people whom He calls His servant (see note at 44:1). The fact that God named Cyrus and called him shows that the Persian king was under His control. The fact that God could forename Cyrus through Isaiah also shows God’s ability to read the future.

45:5-7 No one should ascribe these great acts of redemption to any other god than Yahweh, the only true God. His lordship is not just over Israel but the entire world (from the rising of the sun to its setting). He is in control not only of the good things but also of the difficult things that occur in history.

45:8 This verse describes more than literal fruitfulness; it talks about how, on God's command, the future will see the earth morally replenished.

45:9-13 The woe oracle in these verses responds to those who would argue with God for using a pagan king like Cyrus to accomplish His purposes.

45:9 On woe oracles, see notes at 1:4 and 5:8-30. Human beings are the pot and God is the potter. This image reminds humans of their proper place in relationship to God. There may be an allusion here to Gn 2:7 where God took the dust of the ground and formed Adam. The ancient Near Eastern myths of Atrahasis and Enuma Elish describe human beings as the product of clay. Where the biblical and ancient Near Eastern accounts differ profoundly is in the second element that forms humans. In the Bible God used his own breath, indicating a high view of humanity. In Mesopotamian accounts the second element was the blood of a demon god, expressing a lower view of human life.

45:10 The second metaphor of God as parent (father and mother) and His human creation as the child also expresses an unbalanced power relationship. A baby does not question his birth any more than a pot questions its creation. So why should Israel question God's plan?

45:11 On Holy One of Israel, see note at 1:4.

45:12 On stretched out the heavens, see note at 42:5.

45:14 Egypt and Cush (Ethiopia; see note at 18:1-7) were nations associated with the Nile Valley. The Sabeans were an Arabian tribe. This verse anticipates a time when these foreign nations will recognize that the God of the Israelites is the one true God.

45:15 On God hiding Himself, see note at verse 19.

45:16 Shame comes on those who trust in idols because their confidence is misplaced.

45:18 The claim that God did not create the world to be uninhabited (empty) may be a polemic against an ancient Near Eastern myth, according to which human beings were created only after the minor gods went on strike from digging irrigation canals and thus needed a workforce.

45:19 While God hid Himself in the sense that He is far above creation (v. 15), He pursues relationship and makes Himself known to His creatures.

45:20 The description of the nations as fugitives may imply a previous judgment against them.

45:21 The challenge to speak up and present your case indicates that this passage has a legal background. The issue involves the gods' ability to reveal the future.

46:1-4 A contrast is drawn in these verses between the idols that had to be carried and God who carried the burdens of His people.

46:1 Bel means "lord" and is likely a reference to Marduk, the chief god of Babylon. Nebo is the Hebrew name for Nabu, Marduk's son and an important deity in his own right. Nabu was the god of wisdom, the god of the scribes. These gods, or more precisely the idols that represented them (see note at 44:12-20), had to be carried on carts to move from one place to another. They were a heavy burden for the draft animals that carried them.

46:2 When one ancient Near Eastern power defeated another, they would carry off the idols of the vanquished nation. The Gilgamesh epic contains a description of the gods cowering in the presence of the powerful force of the flood.

46:3-4 The remnant were those Israelites who would survive the coming judgment. God had carried (sustained) His people from their birth.

46:5-7 The gods of the surrounding nations were divinized portions of the creation. Thus Enlil was the god of war, Inanna the goddess of love, Ea the god of wisdom, etc. But God was not exactly like anything on earth. It is true that the great metaphors of the Bible taught about God's nature and actions through comparing Him to a king, a warrior, a rock, light, a storm, and so forth, but these metaphors throw light on who God is without identifying Him with these objects or elements of creation. The idols, on the other hand, were associated with and even identified with the creation. There was nothing transcendent about them. They were human-made objects, a point that Isaiah had already made (see note at 44:12-13).

46:8-9 To remember means to draw strength by contemplating God's past acts of power.

46:11 Cyrus—the king of Persia (45:1), a country east of Israel—was the bird of prey.

47:1 To sit in the dust, just like sitting on the ground, was a sign of subservience and humiliation. Babylon, the mighty nation that achieved special status among the other nations of the world (pampered and spoiled), will be put in a position of shame. Up to this point in the book, only God's people have been called daughter by the Lord (1:8; 3:16; 37:22). In this passage not only is Babylon given this title of intimacy, but it is qualified by virgin, indicating purity as well as dependence on the father, or God. However, here "virgin" is sarcastic. Chaldea refers to the Aramaic-speaking tribe of the southern marsh region of Babylon that came to dominate the entire nation during the Neo-

Babylonian period (626-586 B.C.).

47:2-3 Babylon, personified as a young woman, will do her lowly chores—in contrast to her former exalted status—and then will strip to cross a stream. As she does so, her shame (her promiscuity that contradicted her apparent virginity) will be exposed.

47:4 On Holy One of Israel, see notes at 1:4 and 30:10-11.

47:5 On Daughter Chaldea, see note at verse 1. Under leaders like Nabopolassar (626-605 B.C.) and his better-known son Nebuchadnezzar (605-562 B.C.), Babylon had achieved dominance among the nations of the world, but its former glory will be turned to oblivion.

47:6-7 God has used Babylon as the tool of His anger against Judah. Babylon's yoke is an image of their political domination over Judah (see note at 10:27). But Babylon overplayed its hand and sought its own glory, not realizing that its pride would lead to retribution.

47:8-9 Babylon is personified as a woman consistently in this chapter. Before she was the Virgin Daughter, but in these verses she is a woman who is blessed with marriage and children. The future judgment of Babylon is compared to a woman who will lose husband and children in one day. A woman without husband and children had no meaning and no protection in ancient times. This disaster will befall Babylon even though she was a sorceress (see Nah 3:4 for a similar description of Assyria).

47:10-11 Wisdom includes the ability to navigate life in a way that avoids pitfalls and also includes the skill to get out of jams if hardship should fall. However, in this case wisdom is useless and unable to ward off disaster. In other words, Babylonian wisdom is actually foolishness. This affirmation is not far from the NT idea that the wisdom of the world is folly (1Co 1-2). Babylon will fall because it was "wise in its own eyes" rather than trustful in the one true God (Pr 3:5-8).

47:12-13 Babylonian culture was known for its infatuation with sorceries and spells, which represented a way to manipulate the gods. In particular, Babylon was known for attempts to determine the future by consulting the stars. Indeed, even after Babylon disappeared as an empire, the term "Chaldean" was used to designate astrologers.

48:1 Isaiah addressed those connected to God by their genealogical descent from the patriarchs. Though part of Israel, they did not have a true relationship because of their disobedience (vv. 4,8).

48:3 The past events refers to the judgment of God on His people. He announced what would happen to sinful Judah through Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and other prophets. He proclaimed what He would do and then acted on His words.

48:4 Nothing can get through a bronze forehead. An iron . . . neck is stiff and cannot turn around. This imagery shows the refusal of God's people to hear Him or to repent.

48:6 Up to this point God has been announcing judgment, but now He will announce new things—a message of grace after the judgment. Why had God kept the news of eventual restoration hidden? According to Childs, "God chose to keep the entrance of the new hidden until the very last moment because he knew that Israel would abuse its foreknowledge" (Isaiah, p. 375). The new things include God's use of Cyrus to deliver His people (vv. 14-15).

48:8 God's people had closed their ears to God's commands for a long time, thus the call for them to listen in this chapter (vv. 1,12,14,16). To hear means more than just listening; it implies acting on what is heard.

48:9 God will not completely destroy His people. A remnant will survive the judgment.

48:10 Pure silver is made by subjecting it to high temperatures and removing the impurities. The image of refining is often used in the Bible to refer to removing sin from a person or a community (1:22), in this case, through affliction.

48:13 On the image of God spreading and stretching out the heavens and the earth, see note at 42:5. Since God is the Creator, His people should pay attention to Him.

48:14-15 The one whom the Lord loves is Cyrus (44:24-45:8)—the pagan king of Persia whom the Lord will use to deliver his people from the Babylonians. On Chaldeans, see note at 13:19.

48:16 Isaiah concluded this section by affirming that God was the One who had brought him to the people.

48:17-18 On Holy One of Israel, see note at 1:4. Israel's past judgment was the result of their refusal to follow God.

48:19 Isaiah had earlier announced that Israel's population would be reduced to a remnant (see note at 10:22). The allusion to sand goes back to the patriarchal promise that Abraham would have numerous descendants (Gn 22:17; 32:12; 41:49). It was Israel's sin that led to a reduction of the population.

48:20-22 The chapter ends with a divine directive to leave Babylon, the nation that was the source of Judah's oppression. The assumption is that the people should do this after the work of God's messiah, Cyrus (see note at 45:1).

48:20 On Chaldeans, see note at 13:19.

48:21 The prophet alluded to the wilderness wandering when God brought His people out of Egypt and into the promised land. Isaiah had earlier used what might be called the “second exodus” theme (4:5; 11:15-16; 40:3-5; 43:18-19). He saw a parallel between God bringing His people out of a place of bondage (first Egypt, then Babylon). The specific reference is to the times when God provided water to Israel in the wilderness (Ex 17:1-7; Nm 20:1-13).

48:22 Though God will bring salvation to His people, He will not back down from His judgment on the wicked.

49:1 Coastlands is the same word translated “islands” in 41:1. It refers to the distant places of the earth. The Servant (49:3) spoke here and addressed all the peoples of the earth. He began by recounting his calling that began even before he was born. The language is reminiscent of the description of the prophet Jeremiah’s call (Jr 1:5).

49:2 The Servant was made to be a weapon in the arsenal of God the warrior to wage war against the chaos of the world. The language reminds the reader of the description of a son’s relationship to his father in Psalm 127.

49:3 The Servant is identified as Israel. As in 42:1-9 (see note there, as well as note at 42:1), the more precise identification is the purified remnant within Israel (an alternative idea views the Servant as Isaiah himself). However, as with all the Servant Songs, the NT authors recognized a second and deeper identification of the Servant as they associated these texts with Jesus Christ (Mt 8:17; 12:17-21; Jn 12:38; Ac 8:30-35).

49:4 The experience of the exile will lead the Servant Israel to express its frustration before acknowledging that God brings meaning through His act of vindication—release from bondage.

49:5 In verse 3 the Servant identified himself as Israel; here the Servant speaks as if He is the agent of Israel’s restoration. This seeming inconsistency is resolved once it is realized that it is the remnant, and ultimately the remnant of one—Jesus—who functions in this way (see note at 42:1).

49:6 The Servant will do more than restore Israel to its former glory. He will serve as an agent of salvation to the nations, thus fulfilling the divine promise to Abraham that through his descendants God would be a blessing to “all the peoples on earth” (Gn 12:3).

49:7 The lowly state of the Servant is a characteristic more fully developed in the final Servant Song in 52:13-53:12. A reversal will take place when kings pay homage to the despised Servant.

49:8 As in 42:6 the Servant has entered into a covenant for the people, and as there the reference is to the Abrahamic covenant. However, while the emphasis in chapter 42 is on the promise that the nations will be blessed through Abraham, here the emphasis is on the promise of the land. God will restore His people to the land He gave them and which they forfeited.

49:9-10 The people of God have been in desperate straits, but God will deliver them.

49:11-12 The oracle again uses language drawn from the exodus and wilderness wandering traditions (see note at 48:21). Sinim is typically associated with modern Aswan, postexilic Elephantine in Egypt.

49:13 Isaiah began with an oracle calling on heavens and earth to serve as witnesses to testify that God's people deserved their punishment (1:2); now they rejoice in their restoration.

49:14 Zion, personified as a woman, represents Jerusalem. She complained or lamented that God had abandoned her. The verses that follow suggest that what she missed was her "children," or the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Their absence in exile led her to suggest that God had forgotten her.

49:15 God responded by reflecting on the persistent memory of a mother. Indeed, verse 18 may imply that God addressed Zion as a husband addresses a wife. He understood what she was going through and would soon address her complaints.

49:16 To inscribe something on one's hands (tattooing perhaps) placed the writing on a bodily location that would be readily seen. In particular the defensive walls of Jerusalem were a concern of the Lord.

49:18 Zion's children, the people of God, will soon gather as they return to Jerusalem. The picture of Zion wearing her children like wedding jewelry suggests that the passage understood God to be her husband. The returned children were a wedding gift.

49:19-20 The passage envisions a return so large that Jerusalem will not be big enough to hold all its inhabitants.

49:21 Mother Zion will be amazed and will wonder who has fathered all these children. The implied answer is none other than God Himself.

49:22-23 The deportation that began the exile saw the people of God dragged off in chains by foreign armies. The picture of the return views the nations carrying them back to their land and showing subservience.

49:24-26 The people of God will doubt that it is possible for them to be delivered from their bondage and oppression, but God will make it clear that He is able not only to rescue them but also to subject their captors to the punishment they deserved.

50:1 Zion continues to be described as the mother of God's people. God is the father of His people. He put away Zion but did not divorce her (there is no divorce certificate; Dt 24:1-4). God sold His children, but not to settle a debt (so there are no creditors). Why did He do it? Because of their sins.

50:2 God expressed wonder, though, that the children, God's people, did not expect redemption. He did not divorce Zion and He did not sell His people to a creditor, so He could get them back. Further, God is certainly powerful enough to save them. The act of drying up the waters (sea . . . rivers) reflects an ancient Near Eastern understanding that the waters stood for the forces of chaos. God controlled them and could decimate them at will. His control of the waters and the reference to His redeeming hand recall the exodus.

50:3 Sackcloth was a very rough material, irritating to the skin, worn as part of mourning rites. The heavens mourned because of God's acts of judgment.

50:4 The first-person speaker (Me) is the Servant (v. 10). For this reason, the HCSB capitalizes the pronoun since the Servant ultimately is identified with Christ, though the original audience probably identified the Servant as purified Israel (see note at 42:1-9). Alternatively, a number of scholars identify the Servant in this poem as Isaiah. The speaker is a student of God, trained to provide encouragement to those who are weary. Each morning God awakens Him with new insight.

50:6-7 Anticipating a fuller development in 52:13-53:12, the Servant is one who suffers, though God will keep Him from shame.

50:10 A human fears the LORD when he understands that God is far superior and that man is a mere creature. Such fear does not lead to flight but to a trust that can depend on God for protection. The person who fears the Lord listens to what the Servant of the Lord says.

50:11 Opposite of the one who fears the Lord and leans on Him is the self-reliant person who tries to create light by his own hand. He kindles his own fire to produce light. Such people will experience torment from God.

51:1-2 The prophet called to the righteous among God's people and reminded them of their heritage. Abraham was the rock from which the people of God were cut and Sarah the quarry from which they were dug. From the one man Abraham came many descendants according to the promise of the Abrahamic covenant (Gn 12:1-3).

51:3 On the foundation of the ancient promises to Abraham, God will transform Zion's suffering and devastation (her wilderness . . . her desert) to joy and prosperity (Eden . . . garden of the LORD).

51:4-5 According to the Abrahamic promise, his descendants were to be a blessing to the nations. The coastlands represent the distant nations (49:1). Invoking them implies that all the nations of the world will put their hope in the Lord.

51:6 From a human perspective the heavens and the earth look permanent. People die but the heavens and earth endure. But God's salvation and righteousness make even the heavens and the earth appear temporary.

51:7-8 If the heavens and the earth are temporary, so are even shorter-lived human beings. Why then should anyone fear another? The only One who is the proper recipient of our fear is the Lord Himself.

51:9-10 God is encouraged to wake up from slumber and go about His redemptive work (Ps 44:23; 78:65). Past victories are then recounted in the form of the defeat of Rahab, a sea monster. The sea and its monsters represent the forces of chaos that are against God and His creation. Rahab in other texts clearly stands for Egypt. Here we have a poetic allusion to God's victory over the Egyptians at the time of the exodus. God, after all, dried up the sea-bed and made it a road at the Red Sea (Ex 14-15). God's past deliverance of His people from Egyptian bondage bodes well for their future deliverance from Babylonian captivity.

51:12 It is folly to fear humans who die rather than the Lord who endures forever.

51:13 God constructed the heavens and the earth like a person would build a tent (stretched out) or a house (laid the foundations).

51:14 The word prisoner refers to those who were exiled by the Babylonians. Some high-ranking officials were literally thrown into prisons (2Kg 25:27), but others were in a metaphorical prison by being removed from their land and forced to live in Babylon. The Israelites thought of the grave and the underworld as a large Pit.

51:15 God is in charge of the mighty waters. This shows metaphorically His ability to control the forces of evil.

51:17-23 In this section Isaiah called on God's people to wake up. They were slumbering under the influence of drinking God's cup of wrath, an image already cited (see note at 19:14).

51:18 In the ancient Near East, it was the duty of the children to care for a drunk parent. Noah's son Ham acted in a reprehensible manner when his father was drunk (Gn 9:18-29). Here Jerusalem's children, God's people, did not take hold of her hand when she was drunk after drinking the cup of God's fury.

51:21-23 Once Jerusalem has experienced the full force of God's judgment, once they have drunk of the cup of His fury, He will take it away and give it to their tormentors. Among the latter, Babylon is particularly in mind.

52:1 For the third time in this section, the call to wake up occurs (51:9,17; see also 50:4). This time it is addressed to Zion, again personified as a woman (49:14-50:4). The description is of a renewed, refreshed, and restored Jerusalem, no longer contaminated by the uncircumcised and the unclean.

52:2 In an obvious allusion to the exile, Zion is pictured as freed from bondage. She will rise from the dust to take her seat, perhaps implying a transition from dusty captive to dignified queen.

52:3 God was so anxious to get rid of sinful Zion that He sold her for nothing. Since He sold her for nothing, He can now redeem her for nothing.

52:4 The prophecy speaks from a prophetic perspective as if Isaiah were living at the time of the Babylonian captivity. From that time in the future, he looks back on two previous traumatic periods in Israelite history—the exodus from Egypt in the second millennium B.C. and the Assyrian invasion of the northern kingdom during Isaiah's lifetime (722 B.C.). The Babylonian captivity dates to 586-539 B.C.

52:5-6 God's people come to know Him through this process of punishment and restoration.

52:7 In the ancient world, news was carried by a herald. In this verse the herald announces the end of hostilities and the fact that God reigns as King over His people. A variation of this verse occurs in Nah 1:15.

52:8 Watchmen were posted on city walls to keep an eye out for attack, or in this case to be the first to witness the return of the Lord to His Holy City, Jerusalem.

52:10 The salvation referred to here is the conspicuous restoration of Jerusalem after it had been reduced to ruins by the Babylonians.

52:11 The priests (who carry the vessels of the LORD) are now encouraged to leave, presumably from Babylonian captivity (48:20-22). Ezekiel 1:5-11 recounts the return of the temple vessels under the leadership of Sheshbazzar. This oracle exhorts the priests not to defile themselves ritually because they are going back to a Zion that is not stained by impurity (v. 1).

52:13-53:12 See the note at 42:1-9 for the view that the Servant in this passage represents the purified remnant of Israel and ultimately the Messiah. The NT authors recognized that the description of a Suffering Servant, who "bore the sins of many," fit Jesus Christ, who died on the cross for the sins of His people. This chapter's description is the most individualistic of all the Servant Songs in the book of Isaiah, and thus most clearly points to application beyond Israel.

52:13 The poem begins with the end point—the exaltation of the Servant (53:11-12). Gl ory will be the end result of His suffering.

52:14 The suffering of the Servant will so disfigure Him that He will not appear human.

52:15 Much debate surrounds the meaning of the Servant sprinkling many nations. The main problem is that the verse does not specify what the Servant will use to sprinkle them. The best guess is that it refers to a ritual act like the sprinkling of blood (Lv 4:6,17; 16:14-15,19; Nm 19:4) or oil (Lv 8:11). The effect of this sprinkling is either to purify or to dedicate to a holy status.

53:1 The speakers of these verses (we) are likely the prophet and the community that he represents. The arm of the LORD refers to His victorious power, ironically revealed through a Suffering Servant.

53:2-3 A young plant growing up in dry ground would be withered, thus providing an appropriate image of the man of suffering. Just like a withered plant is uprooted and thrown away, so the Suffering Servant was rejected by men.

53:4-6 For the first time the reader learns that the Servant suffered on behalf of others. Even so, people did not recognize it, and He was rejected as One struck down by God for His own supposed sins.

53:7 Though not suffering for His own sins, the Servant suffered silently and willingly. Philip used this passage to tell the Ethiopian eunuch the good news about Jesus, who silently bore His crucifixion (Ac 8:31-35; 1Pt 2:23).

53:8 For the first time the passage reveals that the Servant's suffering culminated in death.

53:9 The Servant died unjustly and was buried as if He were an evil man. The pairing of the wicked with the rich man implies that the wealthy man got his riches by deceit. This may be confirmed by the final statement of the verse that the servant had not spoken deceitfully. Jesus was literally buried with a rich man when He was placed in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea (Lk 23:50-56).

53:10-11 That God was pleased to crush the Servant sounds mean-spirited, but His pleasure is explained by the fact that the Servant's suffering will justify many. What seems harsh will turn out to be gracious. The Servant's pain, suffering, and death will function like a restitution offering (Lv 5:14-6:7; 7:1-10)—a sacrifice offered when there was a "transgression against the sacred things of the Lord" (Longman, Immanuel in Our Place, p. 99). The sin of God's people was such a transgression.

53:12 Returning to the theme at the beginning of the poem (52:13), the suffering of the Servant will give way to His exaltation. Jesus' suffering culminated in the crucifixion but gave way to the resurrection.

54:1 A childless woman was often scorned in the ancient Near East and sometimes replaced by a secondary wife. With no sons to care for her in her old age, she was particularly vulnerable. Thus, barrenness is a frequent image of loneliness and helplessness. In this verse Jerusalem is a barren woman who will have a child (like Sarah, Rachel, or Hannah). Indeed she will have many children. Thus her sadness will turn to joy (Ps 113:9).

54:2-3 An enlarged family must have a larger place to live. Restored Jerusalem will teem with inhabitants, stretching its boundaries.

54:4-5 A worse fate than childlessness was being a widow. Such a woman had no husband to protect her and care for her. The oracle tells the widow Israel not to be afraid because God has married her. She has gone from nothing to everything, as the list of divine names makes clear.

54:6-8 The metaphor changes in this verse. Israel is no longer a widow; she is a divorcee. God, her husband, has abandoned her, but now He will take her back. The relationship between God and Israel as described here is like the relationship between Hosea and Gomer (Hs 1; 3) that typifies Israel's relationship with God. He rejected Israel because of her sin (in a surge of anger), but now He takes her back with everlasting covenant love.

54:9-10 After the flood, God promised, "Water will never again become a flood to destroy every creature" (Gn 9:15). God declares in these verses that though Israel may sin, He will not completely eradicate His people. He may make the hills shake, but He will not completely destroy them. Thus, God is compassionate in not treating Israel as they deserve because of their transgressions. The covenant of peace may be an allusion to the covenant with Noah, symbolized by the rainbow.

54:11-12 Jerusalem is now personified as a storm-tossed city that God will restore to unprecedented splendor, made of precious stones and metals, which anticipates new Jerusalem in Rv 21:15-21.

54:13 The children of Jerusalem are its inhabitants who will be taught by the Lord. The new covenant of Jr 31:31-34 anticipated a time when God's people would no longer need a teacher, "for they will all know Me."

54:15 Those who attacked Jerusalem (the Assyrians in 701 B.C. and the Babylonians in 605, 597, and 586 B.C.) did so with God's permission, but after the restoration, their enemies will not be Godsent and will fall for that reason.

54:16-17 Using both military (weapon) and legal (accusation) metaphors, God proclaims that His people will withstand all attacks because of His protection.

55:1-13 This chapter consists of an invitation to God's people to experience His forgiveness.

55:1 God will not only freely give water, but also the more substantial drinks of milk and wine. These drinks represent spiritual as well as physical nourishment.

55:2 God's people had not been accepting the free offer of salvation represented by water for the thirsty. They had been spending their resources on things that did not bring soul satisfaction.

55:3 The promises to David are found in 2 Samuel 7. They include the affirmation that David's dynasty would be established forever (2Sm 7:16). During the Babylonian captivity, though, the Davidic line of kings ruling in Jerusalem came to an end with Zedekiah. The NT understood the unconditional promise to be fulfilled in Jesus Christ, a descendant of David.

55:4-5 The promises to David are extended beyond God's people to include the nations. In fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant (Gn 12:3), it envisions a time when the nations will come to God's people.

55:6 The call to repent has a tone of urgency. A person must repent before God withdraws His presence and begins His work of judgment.

55:8-9 God is far above humanity in thought and deed. God's people are called to turn from their sinful thoughts and deeds (v. 7) to God's exalted thoughts and deeds.

55:10-11 Precipitation falls from sky to earth but then returns, but in the process it replenishes the earth and produces fertility. The same is true of God's word. It returns to Him but in the process causes spiritual growth in humanity.

55:12-13 Because of the redemption of God, His people and the rest of creation will break out in joyful singing, and wilderness terrain will turn into lush forests.

56:1 Salvation here is equivalent to victory or rescue since it envisions release from Babylonian bondage. This verse does not call for obedience that earns salvation. Obedience is a response to the promise of God's coming deliverance, not a way to earn His favor.

56:2 God pronounces happy (see Ps 1) those who are obedient and who avoid evil. The Sabbath commandment (Ex 20:8-11; Dt 5:12-15) is singled out because it was considered the epitome (the "sign") of the Mosaic covenant (Ex 31:13).

56:3 God reminds His people that foreigners who convert to the Lord are not excluded from worship. Isaiah is not at odds with Ezekiel (Ezk 44:6-9) or Ezra (Ezr 4:1-3), because they addressed the issue of foreigners who had not converted. Indeed, Ex 12:43 states in regard to the Passover meal that "no foreigner may eat it," but Ex 12:48-49 then makes it clear that if a foreigner converted and was circumcised, then he could partake of the Passover.

56:4 Eunuchs were typically excluded from worship, according to Dt 23:1: "No man whose testicles have been crushed or whose penis has been cut off may enter the LORD 's assembly." That law pointed out that gender and sex were divine gifts that should not be intentionally altered. However, this verse describes an obedient eunuch and thus one who had become a eunuch accidentally or who had converted to worship of God after becoming a eunuch. Such devout eunuchs were invited to join in the worship of God.

56:5 Eunuchs could not have children and thus lacked progeny who would perpetuate their name. God proclaims that He will provide a memorial for them.

56:7 God will not turn away anyone who desires to worship Him, even foreigners and eunuchs. His house, the temple, will be a place where everyone can come to pray.

56:8 The dispersed of Israel refers to those Israelites who were removed from the land of Israel as a result of foreign invasions (Assyrian and Babylonian) that God sent as punishment against His people.

56:9-10 Watchmen were supposed to keep wild animals away from the crops, but these watchmen—Israel's leaders—were ineffective, silent (mute dogs), and asleep.

56:11 In verse 10 the watchmen were called "mute dogs." This verse picks up on that image to describe their voracious appetites. The verse also compares the leaders to shepherds, but corrupt shepherds, exploiting their followers.

56:12 The leaders were totally self-indulgent. They were in it for themselves.

57:1-2 Retribution does not always happen in this life. Good things happen to bad people and, as these verses point out, bad things happen to good people. Even so, verse 2 hints at future resolution of this problem when it talks about death for the righteous as an entering into peace.

57:3-13 In this section God blasts those who practice idolatry and warns them of coming judgment. In the last half of the final verse of the section, He affirms the righteous.

57:3 God addresses those of His people who cannot be counted among the "righteous" (v. 1) and speaks of them in the harshest possible terms.

57:5 In ancient Israel illegitimate worship took place under trees, perhaps suggesting a fertility religion and sexual rites (Dt 12:2; Jr 2:20; 3:6,13). At times during the OT period, gruesome acts like child sacrifice were also included among the false religious practices of Israel (2Kg 23:10).

57:6-10 These verses describe idolatrous rituals, many features of which are obscure (e.g., the smooth stones of the wadi). Even so, the sexual nature of these practices comes through clearly at points (see references to bed and genitals), suggesting a connection with the fertility religion of ancient Canaan from which the Israelites were supposed to separate themselves.

57:11-12 Such idolatrous behavior was a result of a lack of fear of God, perhaps encouraged by His silence. He would be silent no more as He exposed His people's righteousness, which was no righteousness at all.

57:13 God warned His people that if they worshiped idols, they would have to depend on those idols in times of trouble. But the idols were not substantial, so the wind would blow them away. They will be of no help. On the other hand, God Himself is a refuge in trouble. The section ends with the promise that the truly righteous will possess God's holy mountain, Zion, in Jerusalem. This contrasts with the first part of this section that describes those who performed sexual rituals “on a high and lofty mountain” (v. 7).

57:14-21 Reversing the proportions of the previous oracle (vv. 3-13), this section has a long statement about God’s good intentions toward the righteous, with a brief statement about the fate of the wicked at the end (vv. 20-21).

57:14-15 Again, Isaiah used the theme of removing obstacles between God and His people in order to describe a restoration of intimate relationship (see note at 40:3-4). In this instance the road leads to God who lives in a high and holy place, so the road is one that goes up (build it up). God may live in a high place, but the lowly of spirit, not the exalted, are with Him.

57:16-18 God’s punishment of His people’s sins has a limit. He will not completely destroy them, but will punish them in a disciplinary way. He removed His presence from them, but still they continued to sin. Psalm 30 describes a person who grew presumptuous in his success and forgot about God. God turned His face from him, and he came running back. Here God’s people do not break their sin pattern, but God in His grace still promises to heal them.

57:19-21 There is a distinction between those to whom God grants peace and those who remain wicked. The wicked will have no peace but will be like the turbulent sea. The sea is commonly a symbol of chaos and wickedness in ancient Near Eastern literature, including the Bible.

58:1 God spoke to Isaiah and told him to proclaim loudly and publicly (like a trumpet) the sin of His people. They had tried to put on a show of piety, so it was necessary to expose them for what they were—rebellious.

58:2-3 a God acknowledged that His people appeared pious on the surface. They made pretense that they wanted to know and follow God’s will for their lives as expressed in the commands. They had even fasted, expecting God to do something for them. They claimed to have denied themselves before God, but God had not responded. They challenged God’s silence. Fasts occur elsewhere in Scripture, but they are commanded by human rulers rather than God. Thus, the people of God complained about getting no divine response from their self-initiated fast, while they failed to observe the Sabbath, one of the OT’s most important commands (vv. 13-14).

58:3b-5 God responded to His people’s challenge. He did not respond to their fasting because it was superficial and inauthentic. It led to divisions in the community and exploitative behavior toward underlings, as well as self-absorption. God’s idea of fasting extended far beyond public expressions of mourning.

58:6 After condemning the people’s idea of fasting, God defined what He understood to be legitimate and effective fasting. The emphasis is on social justice. Fasting must be connected to behavior that helps the exploited find freedom. The yoke is often an image of exploitation and bondage.

58:7 Proper fasting is also connected to care for those in need, including the hungry and those who needed shelter and clothing (cp. Mc 6:6-8). Flesh and blood is a reference to fellow Israelites.

58:8-9 The people began by complaining that God did not respond to their fasting (v. 3). Fasting seems self-denying, but God recognized that the fasting of His people had been manipulative. True self-denial means helping others, and behavior that is other-centered rather than self-directed will be rewarded. On yoke, see note at verse 6.

58:10 Light and darkness stand for prosperity and need. True obedience and a turning from evil will transform darkness into light.

58:11-12 The oracle looks forward to the restoration when God's people will leave their captivity and return to the land, but the land and its cities, especially Jerusalem, will be in ruins. Obedience will lead to prosperity and fertility. The parched land will turn into a watered garden. Obedience and true piety will also lead to the strength needed to rebuild the city of Jerusalem and its defenses.

58:13-14 While God's people kept fasts not commanded in the Bible, they flouted Sabbath observance, which was one of the central commands of the OT. It was the fourth commandment, considered the sign of the Mosaic covenant (see note at 56:2). To observe the Sabbath meant turning away from self-absorbed behavior (see note at 58:8-9).

59:1 This oracle begins with an affirmation that God can hear and act, characteristics that contrast with the powerless idols that tempted Israel (44:6-23).

59:3-4 A selection of the sins that separated God from His people is listed. The list begins with acts of violence and moves on to deceit and injustice. They were guilty in thought and action (they conceive trouble and give birth to iniquity).

59:5-6 These sinners produced viper's eggs. Eggs promise life, but these eggs produced death. Thus, the works of God's people may look promising, but they kill. In a similar vein, God's people produce spider's webs. They may look beautiful in their intricacy, but they have no practical value.

59:7 Again (v. 4), the oracle emphasizes that the people are sinful in thought and deed. Indeed, they do not merely walk in "the advice of the wicked" (Ps 1:1), they show their eagerness when they run after evil.

59:8 Isaiah used the words path and roads to refer to the course of a person's life. Proverbs 1-9 talks about two paths, a straight path that leads to God and life, and a crooked path that leads to death. Isaiah described God's people as choosing the latter and thus they were headed toward death (they will not know peace).

59:9 Note the transition from third person plural speech ("they") to first person (we) that begins in this verse and continues until verse 15a. The prophet included himself along with the people. Since the content of these verses acknowledges the people's sinfulness, it may be that the righteous are among those who are speaking here.

59:10 Chapter 58 has already described the way to light in obedience to God (see note at 58:10), but they appear incapable of getting there on their own.

59:11 Bears growl out of anger, and doves make a sound like the groans to a suffering person. These metaphors suggest that God's people were angry and sad about their present state.

59:12-15a The people had no one but themselves to blame for their lamentable situation, and they knew it. They had sinned against God by perverting justice in their society (in the public square).

59:15b-21 The chapter concludes with a description of God's reaction to the sin and helplessness of His people. He will intercede and rescue His people in spite of their sin and helplessness.

59:15b-16 The section begins with a statement of God's recognition of human injustice and the offense that He takes at it. It also goes on to describe His amazement that no human was interceding on behalf of the people. Perhaps the intercession of Moses (Ex 33) or the other prophets is what is in mind here. In any case, God proclaims that in the absence of such a human intercessor, He Himself will step into the gap between His people and Himself. Indeed, God's hand is not "too short" (Is 59:1). His arm reaches out to save His people.

59:17 To save His people, God assumed the guise of a warrior. However, His armor and His weapons are not physical but spiritual. The description of God's armor and weapons remind believers of Paul's description of the spiritual weapons available to Christians as they wage battle against "the spiritual forces of evil in the heavens" (Eph 6:12).

59:18-19 God's enemies do not get off without punishment. The mention of the coastlands indicates that the far-flung nations, indeed the whole world (west and east), are in mind here. The whole world will fear the name of Yahweh after His work of retribution.

59:20-21 The climax of this oracle announces the future arrival of God the Redeemer at Zion, God's holy mountain in Jerusalem. He had abandoned Zion in anticipation of its destruction at the Babylonian captivity (Ezk 11-19), but His war against sin will result in His return. It is specifically to the repentant that He will come. He will reestablish His covenant with them. God's Spirit will be given to His people to cleanse their mouths (reminiscent of Isaiah's cleansing at his prophetic commission; chap. 6) so they will proclaim the glory of God to future generations.

60:1-2 In 59:9 the righteous among God's people expressed their desire for light, though they lived in darkness. Now God announces the arrival of the light, whose source is the glory of God. Darkness still covers the earth (a reference to pervasive sin), but God's hovering glory will illuminate the way for His people. How has light penetrated the darkness? Through the action of the divine warrior described in 59:17-21.

60:3 Though the light comes to God's people, the nations will share in it by coming to the light. The idea that the nations will respond favorably to God is a fulfillment of the promise to Abraham that he would be a blessing to the nations (Gn 12:3).

60:4 Among the arriving nations will be the dispersed of Israel (your sons . . . your daughters), who will also return to Zion.

60:5-6 As they return to their homeland, the people will bring the wealth of the nations, just as their father Abraham returned from his sojourn in Egypt with increased wealth (Gn 12:10-20). Camels carried freight on the caravan trails of the ancient Near East. Here they are described as carrying precious items like gold and frankincense. The camels will come from Midian, a nomadic Arabic tribe. Ephah was associated with Midian by way of genealogy (Gn 25:4; 1Ch 1:33), but not much else is known about it. Sheba was also an Arabian kingdom. It was famous because of the queen of Sheba, whose wealth flowed to Israel because of her admiration for Solomon's wisdom (1Kg 10:1-10).

60:7 The theme of the "wealth of the nations" streaming to Zion continues. Sacrificial animals that will be offered at the temple (My beautiful house) are described. On Kedar, see note at 21:13-17 Nebaioth is elsewhere in the Bible a personal name, the son of Kedar, showing a relationship between these two nomadic tribes (Gn 25:13; 36:3; 1Ch 1:29).

60:8 A cloud travels through the sky unobstructed by mountains or ravines. Doves fly above such obstacles to their homes. The rhetorical question has "God's people" as the implied answer. The oracle looks forward to the time when the scattered peoples of Israel will come back to the promised land.

60:9 The islands refer to distant lands and thus represent all the nations of the world. The ships of Tarshish, thought to be what is today Spain (Tartessus), were particularly impressive since they traveled so far between Tyre and Iberia. Again, the passage refers to the return of God's people to their land and not just any return, since they will be wealthy, bringing silver and gold with them.

60:10 In the past, foreign nations and their kings had exploited Israel, but the future will see them serve God's people. One thinks of Nehemiah, who received the permission of the Persian king Artaxerxes to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. This reversal of fortunes is due to God, who had expressed His anger toward His people by allowing foreign nations to defeat and oppress them, but now in His favor He will allow them to rebuild.

60:11 Open gates indicated that a city felt secure. When an enemy threatened, all the people in the surrounding villages sought refuge behind the city walls, and the gates were locked down. But the gates will also be open because the wealth of the nations is flowing into Jerusalem.

60:13 The trees (glory) of Lebanon were renowned for their beauty and quality. The oracle envisions their use in the temple of the Lord.

60:14 As part of the reversal from humiliation to glory, the sons of those who had previously oppressed God's people will show their subservience and indicate their acknowledgment of the sacred character of Jerusalem.

60:15 Throughout the OT period, Jerusalem was not a major city of the ancient Near East. At best it was a provincial capital. In the future its status will exceed those of other major cities because of the presence of God.

60:16 Rather than oppressed Israel providing sustenance to the nations through forced labor, the resources of the nations (their milk) will succor Israel.

60:17 God will increase the quality of the provision that comes to His people. But the good things coming to Jerusalem will far exceed mere wealth. Peace and righteousness will abound, indicating a new quality of spirituality in the city.

60:19-20 The oracle returns to the theme with which it began: God's people will experience light, not darkness. This is a supernatural light provided by God, not the sun. God will be perpetually present with His people.

60:21 God had promised Abraham that his descendants would inherit the land. God's judgment had removed His people from the land for a time, but now they will return to possess it again. They are the branch that God labored to plant.

60:22 Because of God's grace, His chosen people will multiply rapidly.

61:1-3 Much debate surrounds the identity of the first-person speaker of the first three verses of this chapter. He identified Himself as having the Spirit. This reference provides a connection to the Servant on whom God had placed His Spirit (see note at 42:1-9). Isaiah 11:2 states of the Messiah that "the Spirit of the LORD will rest on Him." It is significant that 61:1-3 uses the language of anointing from which the word Messiah ("anointed one") comes. Thus, it is best to consider the first-person speaker in this oracle to be none other than the Messiah-Servant. Jesus identified Himself as the embodiment of this passage when He read these verses in a synagogue, to the amazement of all who heard Him (Lk 4:16-30).

61:1 The description of this future day as one in which prisoners will be freed and the poor will receive good news associates this time with the Jubilee, where slaves were freed and land reverted to the original owners (Lv 25).

61:2 The same act can be designated as displaying the LORD's favor as well as God's vengeance, depending on whether a person is on God's side or not.

61:3 This verse emphasizes the reversal of fortune (from suffering to restoration) expressed in chapter 60. The reference to God's people as righteous trees is reminiscent of Psalm 1 and the opposite of what is said of them in Isaiah 1:30-31.

61:4 The Babylonians devastated Jerusalem and its surrounding towns and villages in 587 B.C. The oracle looks to the future when the cities will be restored and rebuilt.

61:5-6 Like chapter 60, this oracle repeats the themes of foreigners serving rather than oppressing the people of God as well as the wealth of the nations flowing to Jerusalem. The idea that all of God's people will function as priests toward the nations points back to Ex 19:6 where God told Moses that the Israelites would be "My kingdom of priests and My holy nation." Because of their failure to function in this way, God had brought judgment against His people.

61:8 According to 24:5, God's devastating judgment had come on Israel because it had broken the everlasting covenant, but now God will establish it anew with His restored people.

61:9 In the Abrahamic covenant, God promised that Abraham's descendants would enjoy great blessing, which pointed to happiness and prosperity.

61:10 Isaiah broke out in a hymn of praise in response to the oracle he had just delivered. He used the theme of clothing to describe his taking on God's salvation and righteousness. These were not just any clothes but the clothes of a bride. This image implies the metaphor of God as husband of His people.

62:1-12 The theme of the transformation of God's people continues in this chapter. From shame, they will rise up in glory—thanks to their God.

62:1 The first-person speaker here is either the Servant-Messiah of 61:1-3 or the prophet Isaiah. He will speak until Jerusalem's spiritual transformation is complete. Light is an important theme describing God's work among His people (58:10; 60:1-13). It is also connected with the Messiah (10:17; 42:6).

62:2 Names and their meaning often were connected with a person's character or reputation. Name changes were not uncommon. For instance, Naomi ("pleasant") changed her name to Mara ("bitter") when her fortunes turned bad (Ru 1:20). Israel's new divinely given name indicates a change of condition for the people of God (vv. 4,12).

62:3 Israel's future elevated status is compared to a crown.

62:4-5 Israel's names are changed from ones that indicated her loneliness (Deserted and Desolate) to those that show intimate relationship (My Delight is in Her and Married). The metaphor of God married to His people as a husband is to his bride communicates the intimacy and exclusivity of the relationship (see note at 61:10). As a bride can have only one husband, so Israel can have only one God.

62:6-7 The watchmen on the walls (see note at 52:8) were those who kept an eye out to alert the inhabitants of the city about news or danger. The leaders of God's people are compared to watchmen whose responsibilities included the encouragement of the people's relationship with God. Isaiah urged them to keep after God to maintain His efforts at restoring Jerusalem until it was truly "the joy of the whole earth" (Ps 48:1).

62:8-9 Attacking armies would steal the crops of people they conquered. God had allowed a succession of foreign powers to invade His people because of their sin (Assyria and Babylon most notably), but their plundering will be brought to an end.

62:10 A highway is a frequent image in Isaiah for the removal of barriers between God and His people (11:16; 19:23; 33:8; 35:8; 40:3; 49:11). A banner marked a gathering place for the regathered remnant (see note at 11:10) and a rallying point for an army (see note at 13:2).

62:12 Again (vv. 2,4), God speaks of Israel's new name. These names indicate the restored status of God's people as well as the care that God displays toward them.

63:1-6 This passage is similar to 59:15b-20. Both passages describe God as a warrior going to battle to defeat the forces of evil.

63:1 The verse opens with a question from the watchman, and God responds. The warrior God has waged war and is returning blood stained and victorious. Perhaps Edom, with its capital city of Bozrah, is representative of all the nations that had exploited God's people through the years (which may also explain its role in 34:5-17).

63:3 God responded to the watchman's second question by describing His work of anger against the foes (identified as "the nations" in v. 6). He described His killing work as trampling the enemy underfoot like a winemaker tramples on grapes. This image is picked up by the book of Revelation to describe Jesus as warrior at the final battle in Rv 19:13.

63:6 Finally, the object of God's warring anger is explicitly identified as the nations. The description of the nations as drunk with God's wrath invokes the metaphor of the cup of God's anger (see note at 19:14).

63:7-9 Isaiah looked to the distant past of Israel's history and remembered

God's grace and compassion. These verses speak in general terms of God's praiseworthy acts and Israel's suffering. The later focus on the crossing of the sea (vv. 11-13) leads to the conclusion that even here the prophet alluded to Israel's bondage in Egypt and God's rescue. The Angel of His Presence alludes to the Angel's role at the time of the Red Sea crossing (Ex 14:19).

63:11-14 God's grace was not eradicated, in spite of Israel's sin. These verses contemplate a second exodus where God again will deliver His people from their oppressors (cp. 4:5; 11:15-16; 40:3-5; 43:18-19; 48:21).

63:15 Isaiah began a lament that continues to 64:12. It bemoaned the fact that God had not yet enacted His exodus mercies (63:11-14). God seemed to be up in His heavenly home, distant from His people.

63:16 The appeal is made to God as a son makes an appeal to his father. God's fatherhood supersedes even that of father Abraham as well as his son Jacob/Israel, who gave his name to his descendants.

64:1-2 Isaiah continued to pray and moved on to his request. God seemed to be up in heaven (see note at 63:15), and Isaiah asked that He come down to help them in their need. When God appears as a warrior, mountains . . . quake (see Nah 1:5) and nations . . . tremble.

64:3-4 The prophet's request was based on God's actions in the past. God had made the mountains quake in the past. Indeed, Isaiah's God is the only God who had acted for His people. The implication is that the rest of the gods are fakes. But God only acts on behalf of the one who waits for Him. Confidence in God is a prerequisite for experiencing His saving power.

64:5-7 Isaiah also confessed sin on behalf of the community, thus justifying God's judgment against them. Though they were like a polluted garment, they will now obey and experience God's salvation. "Polluted garment" means clothes stained by menstrual blood and thus rendered ritually unclean (Lv 15:19-33).

64:8 Isaiah appealed to God as their Father (see note at 63:16). Only rarely and in extreme cases will a human father disown a delinquent child. The prophet also appealed to God as their Creator, using the image of the potter and his clay (see notes at 29:16; 45:9).

64:10-12 Isaiah foresaw the time when the Babylonians would destroy the city of Jerusalem and burn the temple in 586 B.C. Isaiah appealed to God to turn things around and restore the city and its temple.

65:1-2 In these and the following verses, God responded to the people's prayer uttered by Isaiah. God first described His total openness and accessibility to the people. Even more, He sought them out, though they should be the ones who were seeking Him out. God would spread out His hands in welcome to people who had passed Him by.

65:3 The rebellion of the people is enumerated in terms of their false worship. False worship modeled on the pattern of Canaanite religion was carried on in garden areas. Canaanite worship was part of fertility worship, often featuring sacred gardens and trees. Such false religion was condemned in Dt 12:2; Jr 3:9; and Hs 4:13. Incense offerings are often associated with the worship of a god like Baal or a goddess like Asherah (17:8; 27:9; Ezk 6:6; Hs 11:2).

65:4 God's description of false religion continues with a mention of those who sat among the graves. The worship of departed ancestors was a feature of Canaanite religion. Eating the meat of pigs was particularly sinful because pork was considered an unclean food (Lv 11:7).

65:5 Ironically, these sinful people claimed to be holy, which God considered extremely irritating.

65:7 God accused His people of reproaching Him on the mountains and hills. False worship on "high places" was condemned (Dt 12:2; 2Kg 17:10; Jr 2:20-21; Ezk 6:13; 20:28; Hs 4:13).

65:8 Using the analogy of a bunch of grapes, God announced that He would not destroy the good grapes out of the bunch but would use them to make new wine. The analogy presents the idea that God will preserve a faithful remnant of His people after the judgment.

65:10 Sharon was the name of the foothills west of Jerusalem, famous for wildflowers. In 33:9 Sharon was described as a desert as a result of God's judgment (35:2). The Valley of Achor (lit "Valley of Trouble") received its name in the early days of the conquest of Canaan (Jos 7:16-26) when Achan stole some of the plunder from the city of Jericho. Because of his theft, Israel was defeated at the city of Ai. In Isaiah's vision of a restored remnant, Achor was a peaceful and prosperous place. See Hs 2:15 for a similar use of the name "Achor" in a positive prophetic context. Since the Valley of Achor was located in the east (near Jericho) and Sharon was in the west, the two together signified that all of Israel would be prosperous.

65:11-12 Fortune (Hb gad) and Destiny (Hb meni) are personified as objects of false worship. Gad is thought to be a minor Canaanite god, while Meni is more obscure but "thought to be venerated by the Arabs in the pre-Islamic period" (Childs, Isaiah, p. 536). While God had good things in store for the faithful remnant, those among His people who continued to worship false deities would meet a horrible end.

65:13-16 In this section God continued the distinction between those who followed Him and were His servants and those who rejected Him. The former will enjoy life; the latter will suffer.

65:15 Because of their sin, the wicked have a bad reputation (name). What they do to create that reputation becomes a curse for God's people. On the other hand, God's people will get a new name (see note at 62:2), a new start after the judgment.

65:16 Blessing, a pleasant and prosperous life, comes only through God, not through false gods like Fortune and Destiny (see note at vv. 11-12).

65:17 Just as God will give His people a "new name" after His judgment and restoration (see notes at v. 15 and 62:2), so He will create a new heaven and a new earth. The past events are acts of sin by the people that resulted in God's judgment.

65:18-19 God's original intention for Jerusalem will be fulfilled (see Ps 48:1 where it is called "the joy of the whole earth"). Its sin and God's judgment had reduced it to the point where it was "a horror to all the earth's kingdoms" (Jr 34:17), but now it will be a joy.

65:20-21 The future blessing of Jerusalem includes long life for its inhabitants. Infant mortality rates will disappear and old people will survive even longer. If someone dies at age 100, it will be considered tragic because he was just a youth compared to others. Further blessing will come in the form of shelter and agricultural abundance.

65:23 In the past the labor of God's people had been enjoyed by others as He allowed foreign nations to take them over. Their children had been born to disaster since the enemy would either kill them or deport them. But this will change in God's "new heaven" and "new earth" (see note at v. 17). The blessing of work and of childbearing was first troubled at the time of the fall into sin (Gn 3:16-19). The language of this verse suggests a reversal of these curses.

65:25 The oracle uses language that suggests a restoration of Eden-like conditions. Wolves would normally eat lambs, but they will eat peacefully together. The lion, another predator, will eat straw rather than other animals. The serpent will eat dust, reminiscent of the serpent's role in Genesis 3. The similar language in Is 11:6-9 suggests a connection with the theme of the Messiah expressed in those verses.

66:1 One of the presumptions of the preexilic people of God was that the temple literally was the place where God lived (Jr 7:3-4). This attitude had no justification, especially in light of the speech King Solomon gave when he dedicated the temple (1Kg 8:27). Thus, God began the final oracle in the book of Isaiah by reminding His people that His presence fills heaven (My throne) and earth (My footstool).

66:2 God made everything. This means that people should honor and fear God, which will result in humility, submissiveness to God, and total obedience to His commands.

66:3 This verse links four legitimate ritual acts with four perverse acts. The people did both, rendering even the legitimate ritual acts detestable practices.

66:5-6 Trembling at God's word (v. 2) indicates the kind of submission to God that leads to obedience. The brothers (fellow Israelites) mocked the faithful by saying Let the LORD be glorified because they did not think that would happen. God will see that the mockers get what they deserve.

66:7-8 Zion or Jerusalem has been described as Israel's mother before (see notes at 49:14 and 50:1). Here the return to Judah after the exile is described as Zion giving birth painlessly (again reversing a punishment of the fall; see note at Gn 3:16) to many sons.

66:9 In previous passages (see note at 50:1) God is imagined to be the husband of Zion. That idea might also be operative here, but He is definitely pictured as the doctor who delivered Zion's babies.

66:11 Zion, the mother of the returned exiles, will not only give them birth but will succor them and give them life.

66:12 Zion (Jerusalem) will be a place of abundant (like a river) peace and overflowing (like a flood) wealth (on the wealth of nations, see 60:1-61:11). Zion, the mother, will care for and play with her children, the returned inhabitants of Jerusalem.

66:13 God, who is typically featured as the Father, speaks in the first person as the mother (a role typically played by Zion).

66:14-16 God will save His people and punish those who disobey Him. While God blesses and punishes in historical time, the ultimate expression of God's salvation and judgment will take place at the final judgment (pictured most graphically in the book of Revelation).

66:17 The wicked who receive the punishment described in verses 14-16 are those who entered illegitimate worship sites (groves; see note at 65:4). They ate the most unclean food, defiantly rejecting God's law for Israel.

66:18 God was never interested in Israel alone. His promise to Abraham extended to the nations (Gn 12:3). Isaiah looked forward to the day when the nations would recognize God's glory.

66:19 The survivors, the remnant of God's people who survive the judgment, will go out to the nations to speak of God's glory. Among the representative nations named are those at great distance. Tarshish is modern day Spain (likely Tartessus); Put (ancient Punt) is equivalent to modern Somaliland (though some think a part of Libya; Nah 3:9 lists Libya along with Put); Tubal is an area near the Black Sea; Javan is modern Greece. The islands refer to distant lands and thus represent all the nations of the world.

66:21 The most natural antecedent to them is the nations. Thus, Isaiah presented a remarkable picture of the nations producing people set apart for service to the Lord like priests and Levites.

66:22 On new heavens and new earth, see note at 65:17.

66:23 In this future day, no one will neglect the regular worship of the Lord. The New Moon festival was a monthly sacred observance (1:13; Nm 29:6; 2Kg 4:23; Ezr 3:5; Ps 81:3).

66:24 Isaiah ended his book with one last description of the fate of the wicked. If his intention was to describe a departure from Jerusalem, then perhaps he referred to the Hinnom Valley—a place where garbage was burned and bodies were left to rot. The purpose of this graphic image was to move people toward God and redemption.

Uses in the OT 105
Focus Passage Isaiah 7:9

'Aman, related to 'emeth (truth) and 'emunah (faithfulness), might reflect one or two roots. Participles denote nurses (2Sm 4:4), guardians (2Kg 10:1), and foster fathers (Is 49:23) who take care of people (Ru 4:16). The passive participle is reared (Lm 4:5). The passive-reflexive indicates being carried (Is 60:4). Perhaps as another root, passive-reflexives mean endure (2Sm 7:16) and be faithful (Nm 12:7), reliable (Ps 93:5), or confirmed (Gn 42:20). Promises come true (2Ch 1:9). Participles imply faithful, trustworthy (Is 8:2), trusted, assured (Is 33:16), certain (Hs 5:9), confirmed (1Sm 3:20), or firm (Is 22:25). They connote chronic, lasting (Dt 28:59), and enduring (Ps 89:28). Causative verbs signify believe (Gn 15:6), trust (Nm 14:11), rely (Mc 7:5), have confidence (Jr 12:6) or assurance (Jb 24:22), and be certain (Ps 27:13).

za'am Hebrew Pronunciation [ZA am] HCSB Translation indignation, wrath Uses in Isaiah 5
Uses in the OT 22
Focus Passage Isaiah 13:5

Za'am indicates God's wrath (Is 10:5) seven times. It refers to God in all but two instances: God fills Jeremiah with indignation (Jr 15:17), and the tongues of ungodly leaders produce cursing (Hs 7:16). Za'am appears 10 times as indignation, sometimes with other words for God's "wrath": qetseph, which stresses rage (Ps 102:10); chemah, which emphasizes heat (Nah 1:6); and 'aph, which implies anger (Hab 3:12). Further words for "wrath" include charon (Ps 2:5), which connotes burning (Ex 15:7), and 'ebrah, which involves outbursts (Jb 21:30). Za'am suggests fury (Is 30:27), rage (Jr 10:10), and fierceness (Lm 2:6). The verb za'am (12x) means show wrath (Is 66:14), be angry (Zch 1:12), and rage (Dn 11:30). It can involve executing justice (Ps 7:11). When the angry expression is verbal, za'am denotes denounce (Nm 23:7) and curse (Mal 1:4). Passive forms describe angry looks (Pr 25:23) and an accursed short measure (Mc 6:10).

bagad Hebrew Pronunciation [bah GAD]

This root in south Arabic means "deceive." Bagad means be treacherous (Is 48:8) or act treacherously (Ex 21:8). It denotes be unfaithful (1Sm 14:33), treat deceitfully (Jdg 9:23), or betray (Is 33:1). Wine betrays (Hab 2:5). Deal treacherously (Is 24:16) is bagad with beged (2x), treachery. The participle (23x) denotes the treacherous (Pr 2:22). It is those who are unfaithful (Pr 23:28), the disloyal (Ps 119:158), an unreliable person (Pr 25:19), or a traitor (Is 33:1). Family members (Jr 12:6) and friends (Jb 6:14-15) may be treacherous. Bagad, associated with rebellion (Is 48:8) and covenant violation (Hs 6:7), describes political treachery (Is 21:2). Bagad indicates adultery (Jr 9:2), marital disloyalty, and infidelity to God (Mal 2:11,14). Israel betrayed God as women betray lovers (Jr 3:20). The opposite of treachery is uprightness (Pr 11:3,6). Bagod means treacherous (Jr 3:7,10), and the noun bogedoth appears as treacherous (Zph 3:4).

navel Hebrew Pronunciation [nah VALE]
HCSB Translation wither, lose heart Uses in Isaiah 11
Uses in the OT 20
Focus Passage Isaiah 28:1,4

The fundamental idea of navel is wither (Is 1:30), but its earliest use was metaphorical. Moses will wear out if he tries to judge the people alone (Ex 18:18). Soldiers lose heart and surrender (2Sm 22:46). Mountains crumble (Jb 14:18), and the world itself withers and wastes away (Is 24:4). Eleven times navel refers to plants withering or flowers fading (Is 28:1), but usually in comparison with people or objects. Sinners wither (Is 64:6); the word of God does not (Is 40:8). The concept of decay is associated with withering, and the related noun nevelah (48x) signifies the carcass of an animal (Lv 5:2) or corpse of a person (Dt 21:23). It refers to dead bodies (Is 26:19). Sometimes nevelah signifies an animal that dies naturally (Lv 7:24). Once it conveys the lifelessness of idols (Jr 16:18).

yatsar Hebrew Pronunciation [yah TSAR]
HCSB Translation form Uses in Isaiah 27
Uses in the OT 63
Focus Passage Isaiah 43:1,7,10,21

This common Semitic verb means form (Gn 2:7), especially regarding pottery. The participle denotes potter (Is 29:16) or craftsman (Hab 2:18); pottery is sometimes literally "article of a potter" (Ps 2:9). Yatsar signifies make (Is 44:9), craft (Ps 33:15), plan (Is 46:11), or shape (Ps 33:15). Men create trouble (Ps 94:20). The participle describes God as Creator or Maker (Is 27:11; 45:9). So comparing God to a potter is natural (Jr 18:2-6). God forms mountains (Am 4:13), locust swarms (Am 7:1), and man's spirit (Zch 12:1). Yatsar occurs alongside bara' ("create"; 5x; Is 45:18) and 'asah ("make"; 21x; Jr 33:2). Twice yatsar accompanies related yetser (9x), where the noun means shape (Hab 2:18) or what is formed (Is 29:16). Yetser also indicates intention (1Ch 28:9), scheme (Gn 6:5), inclination (Gn 8:21), mind (Is 26:3), desire (1Ch 29:18), and what someone is made of (Ps 103:14).

bara'
Hebrew Pronunciation [bah RAH]
HCSB Translation create Uses in Isaiah 21
Uses in the OT 48
Focus Passage Isaiah 45:7-8,12,18

Bara', occurring in the active and passive, is theological in that it has no clear subject other than God. Bara' always connotes create, though occasionally it is better translated be done (Ex 34:10) or bring about (Nm 16:30). It suggests creating something new (Jr 31:22). The participle refers to God as Creator (Is 40:28). He not only created the whole universe (Gn 1:1) but such particulars as sea creatures (Gn 1:21), heavenly bodies (Is 40:26), and wind (Am 4:13). Bara' most frequently describes the creation of human beings (Is 45:12), both peoples and individuals (Ezk 21:30; 28:15). Bara' applies to providential acts such as new generations (Ps 102:18). God creates disaster as well as words of praise (Is 45:7; 57:19). Spiritually, He creates clean hearts (Ps 51:10) and will create Jerusalem to be a joy (Is 65:18). The related noun beriy'ah, translated something unprecedented, indicates circumstances that God would create (Nm 16:30).

tiph'ereth Hebrew Pronunciation [tif EH ret]
HCSB Translation beauty, glory Uses in Isaiah 17

Uses in the OT 49
Focus Passage Isaiah 60:7,19

Tiph'ereth is beauty (Ex 28:2), glory (Dt 26:19), honor (Jdg 4:9), splendor (Is 28:1), or finery (Is 3:18). It is one's pride (Jr 13:20), boast (Is 20:5), or virtue (Pr 19:11). It suggests rejoicing (Pr 28:12). Adjectivally it implies glorious (Is 62:3), beautiful (Is 44:13), or magnificent (Ps 89:17) and especially modifies objects like jewelry and crowns (Ezk 23:26,42). Tiph'ereth derives from the verb pe'ar (13x), which reflexively indicates glorify (Is 44:23) or exalt (Is 10:15) oneself. Pe'ar means brag (Jdg 7:2) and can take a passive sense of be glorified (Is 49:3). Intensive verbs denote glorify (Is 60:7) or adorn (Ps 149:4). Tiph'ereth and pe'ar together describe God glorifying His beautiful house (Is 60:7). The noun pe'er (7x) is crown of beauty (Is 61:3), turban (Is 61:10), headdress (Is 3:20), or headband (Ex 39:28). Tiph'arah indicates a glorious staff (Jr 48:17) or crown of splendor (Is 28:5) Essays Significance of the Dead Sea Scrolls Peter W. Flint

The Dead Sea Scrolls are ancient manuscripts that were found at several sites near the western shore of the Dead Sea. The most important site was near Qumran, where eleven caves containing scrolls or artifacts were discovered from 1946 to 1956. Also notable are discoveries at Murabba'at (1951), Nahal Hever (1951 or 1952), Wadi Seiyal (1951 or 1952), and Masada (1963-65). Professor W. F. Albright, America's foremost archaeologist, described the scrolls as "the greatest archaeological find of modern times."

At least 941 scrolls were discovered in the Qumran caves (715 in Cave 4 alone). They are dated on paleographic and radiocarbon grounds to between ca 250 B.C. and A.D. 68, when the site was destroyed by the Romans. The Qumran library is divided into two basic categories: 240 biblical scrolls and 701 nonbiblical scrolls. The nonbiblical scrolls are further divided into: Apocryphal scrolls (such as Tobit), Sectarian scrolls (such as the Rule of the Community), and Pseudepigraphic scrolls (such as the Prayer of Nabonidus).

Most scholars agree that the Sectarian scrolls were produced by a group of Essenes who had a settlement at Qumran. Proposals to the contrary may be discounted due to lack of firm evidence.

Five Reasons Why the Dead Sea Scrolls Are Significant The scrolls were discovered and copied in Palestine (Israel). In fact, they are virtually the only manuscripts that survive from the Second Temple period (which ended in A.D. 70). It is even possible—though not likely—that Jesus or some of His followers handled some of these manuscripts before they were brought to Qumran.

The scrolls were written in the three languages of Scripture. Of the 240 biblical scrolls from Qumran, 235 are written in Hebrew and 5 in Greek, and of the 701 nonbiblical scrolls, 548 are written in Hebrew, 137 in Aramaic, and 5 in Greek. This means that at least some Jews could speak Greek in late Second Temple Palestine, and reinforces the idea that Jesus and His followers knew Greek.

The biblical scrolls both affirm and enhance the Hebrew Bible used by scholars. Prior to their discovery, the oldest complete Hebrew Bible was the Leningrad Codex (A.D. 1008), on which most scholarly editions are based. Even older medieval manuscripts are the Aleppo Codex (early tenth century), part of which is missing, and some fragments from the Cairo Genizeh (ninth century onwards). In contrast, the oldest Bible scroll found at Qumran (4QExod-Lev f) is dated from about 250 B.C., and the latest ones to A.D. 68. This puts scholars much closer to the time of the texts' origins. Two of the most prominent and best-preserved Bible scrolls are the Great Isaiah Scroll (1QIsa a, about 125 B.C.) and the Great Psalms Scroll (11QPs a, A.D. 30-50).

Scrolls with sufficient writing for an assessment to be made fall into four textual groups: Proto-Masoretic (i.e., the consonantal text behind the Masoretic Text, represented by about 40% of the scrolls), Proto-Samaritan (about 15%), Pre-Septuagint (about 5%), and mixed or nonaligned (about 40%). The Proto-Masoretic scrolls in particular affirm the accuracy and great age of the Hebrew text found in modern Bible editions.

On the other hand, many scrolls (in all four groups) preserve original or preferable readings that are convincing enough to have been adopted by modern English OT translations. One example is at Isaiah 19:18, where the Masoretic Text reads "City of Destruction," but two scrolls (1QIsa a, 4QIsa b) and even a few Masoretic manuscripts read "City of the Sun," which makes better sense. The reading found in the scrolls has also been adopted by many modern Bibles, including the HCSB, RSV, and NRSV. A second example is the missing verse in the acrostic Psalm 145. This verse is present in 11QPs a and the LXX, and hence it is now included as verse 13b in the HCSB, RSV, NRSV, NIV, and so forth. At least 100 such examples have gotten modern Bible translators closer to the original text, and the majority of these discoveries have been adopted by the Holman Christian Standard Bible.

Most of the nonbiblical scrolls throw light on Judaism in the late Second Temple period. Certain scrolls illuminate our understanding of Jewish sects, namely the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes. Sectarian documents such as the Community Rule and the Damascus Document reveal the doctrines and teachings of the Essenes: for example, their expectation of two separate Messiahs (of Aaron and of David) and their ascetic lifestyle. One fascinating text named Some of the Works of the Law (4QMMT) is a manifesto which details how the Essene interpretation of some 25 laws from the Pentateuch differed from those of the Pharisees.

Some scrolls illuminate our understanding of Jesus and the early Christians. None of the Qumran scrolls was written by or for Christians, but several are relevant for understanding the historical context of Christian origins. The three books most commonly found at Qumran are Psalms (36 scrolls), Deuteronomy (30), and Isaiah (21). These are also the books quoted most often in the New Testament (Psalms 79x, Isaiah 66x, and Deuteronomy 54x). This is hardly a coincidence, but speaks to similar messianic expectations and covenantal themes among the Qumranites and the early Christians.

Key nonbiblical scrolls are just as pertinent. For example, the Messianic Apocaplyse (4Q521) describes the works and wonders that will accompany the Messiah's coming in language that is very close to Jesus' words in Luke 4:18-19 (will bring good news to the poor, set the captives free, open the eyes of the blind, and lift up the oppressed) and in Matthew 11:4-5 and Luke 7:21-22 (will open the eyes of the blind, make the dead live, and bring good news to the poor). This scroll helps Bible readers see that Jesus is claiming to be a prophetic Messiah in the Gospel passages just mentioned. Another striking example is Some of the Works of the Law (4QMMT), since the term "works of the Law" occurs nowhere else except in Romans (e.g., 3:20, 28) and Galatians (e.g., 3:2,5,10). In this light we now know that Paul is using a term identified with the Essenes, and so is criticizing Essene Jews or Christians who have been influenced by Essene doctrines concerning works of the Law. A final example is the sectarian New Jerusalem Text, which is found in several scrolls (1Q32, 2Q24, 4Q544-55, 5Q15, 11Q18), and describes the coming New Jerusalem with language that would be developed further in the Book of Revelation (21:9-27).

In conclusion, the Dead Sea Scrolls help scholars get closer to the original OT texts where variants have entered the tradition, plus they help set the historical and cultural context for the Intertestamental and New Testament eras.

JEREMIAH

1 The words of Jeremiah, [a] the son of Hilkiah, one of the priests living in Anathoth [b] in the territory of Benjamin. 2 The word of the LORD came to him in the thirteenth year of the reign of Josiah [c] son of Amon, king of Judah. 3 It also came throughout the days of Jehoiakim [d] son of Josiah, king of Judah, until the fifth month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah [e] son of Josiah, king of Judah, when the people of Jerusalem went into exile.

The Call of Jeremiah

4 The word of the LORD came to me:

5 I chose you before I formed you in the womb;
I set you apart before you were born. [f]
I appointed you a prophet to the nations. [g]

6 But I protested, “Oh no, Lord, GOD! Look, I don’t know how to speak [h] since I am only a youth.” [i]

7 Then the LORD said to me:
Do not say, “I am only a youth,” [j] for you will go to everyone I send you to and speak whatever I tell you. [k]

8 Do not be afraid of anyone, [l]
for I will be with you to deliver you. [m]

9 Then the LORD reached out His hand, This is the LORD’s declaration. touched my mouth, [n] and told me:

I have now filled your mouth with My words. [o]

10 See, I have appointed you today over nations and kingdoms to uproot and tear down,
to destroy and demolish, [p]
to build and plant. [q]

Two Visions

11 Then the word of the LORD came to me, asking, “What do you see, Jeremiah? ” [r]

I replied, “I see a branch of an almond tree.”

12 The LORD said to me, “You have seen correctly, for I watch over My word to accomplish it.” [s] 13 Again the word of the LORD came to me inquiring, “What do you see? ”

And I replied, “I see a boiling pot, [t] its lip tilted from the north to the south.”

14 Then the LORD said to me, “Disaster will be poured out [u] from the north on all who live in the land. 15 Indeed, I am about to summon all the clans and kingdoms of the north.” [v]
This is the LORD’s declaration.

They will come, and each king will set up his throne
at the entrance to Jerusalem’s gates.
They will attack all her surrounding walls and all the other cities of Judah.

16 “I will pronounce My judgments against them for all the evil they did when they abandoned Me to burn incense to other gods and to worship the works of their own hands. [w]

17 “Now, get ready. Stand up and tell them everything that I command you. Do not be intimidated by them [x] or I will cause you to cower before them. 18 Today, I am the One who has made you a fortified city, [y] an iron pillar, and bronze walls [z] against the whole land — against the kings of Judah, its officials, its priests, and the population. 19 They will fight against you but never prevail over you, [a] since I am with you to rescue you.” [b]
This is the LORD’s declaration.

Israel Accused of Apostasy

2 The word of the LORD came to me: 2 “Go and announce directly to Jerusalem that this is what the LORD says:
I remember the loyalty of your youth, [a]
your love as a bride —
how you followed Me in the wilderness,
in a land not sown.
3 Israel was holy to the LORD, [b]
the •firstfruits of His harvest. [c] All who ate of it found themselves •guilty ; [d] disaster came on them.”
This is the LORD’s declaration.
4 Hear the word of the LORD, house of Jacob and all families of the house of Israel.
5 This is what the LORD says:
What fault did your fathers find in Me [e]
that they went so far from Me, followed worthless idols, [f]
and became worthless themselves? [g] 6 They stopped asking, “Where is the LORD [h] who brought us from the land of Egypt, who led us through the wilderness, [i] through a land of deserts and ravines, through a land of drought and darkness, [A] a land no one traveled through and where no one lived? ”
7 I brought you to a fertile land [j]
to eat its fruit and bounty, but after you entered, you defiled My land; [k]
you made My inheritance [l] detestable.
8 The priests quit asking, “Where is the LORD? ”
The experts in the law no longer knew Me, [m] and the rulers [n] rebelled against Me.
The prophets prophesied by [o] •Baal [p]
and followed useless idols. [q]
9 Therefore, I will bring a case against you again.
I will bring a case against your children’sThis is the LORD’s declaration.
children. [r]

10 Cross over to Cyprus [B,] [s] and take a look.
Send someone to Kedar [t] and consider carefully;
see if there has ever been anything like this:
11 Has a nation ever exchanged its gods? [u]
(But they were not gods! [v])
Yet My people have exchanged their [w] Glory for useless idols. [x] 12 Be horrified at this, heavens; [y]
be shocked and utterly appalled.
This is the LORD's declaration.
13 For My people have committed a double evil:
They have abandoned Me, [z]
the fountain of living water, [a]
and dug cisterns for themselves, cracked cisterns that cannot hold water. [b]

Consequences of Apostasy

14 Is Israel a slave?
Was he born into slavery? C
Why else has he become a prey?
15 The young lions have roared at him; c
they have roared loudly.
They have laid waste his land. d
His cities are in ruins, without inhabitants.
16 The men of Memphis and Tahpanhes e have also broken your skull.
17 Have you not brought this on yourself f
by abandoning the LORD your God while He was leading you along the way?
18 Now what will you gain by traveling along the way to Egypt g to drink the waters of the Nile? D
What will you gain
by traveling along the way to Assyria h to drink the waters of the Euphrates? i 19 Your own evil will discipline you; j your own apostasies will reprimand you.
Think it over and see how evil and bitter k it is for you to abandon the LORD your God and to have no •fear of Me.
of the Lord GOD of •Hosts .This is the declaration 20 For long ago I l broke your yoke; m
I n tore off your chains.
You insisted, “I will not serve! ”
On every high hill
and under every green tree o
you lie down like a prostitute. p

21 I planted you, a choice vine q from the very best seed.
How then could you turn into a degenerate, foreign vine? r

22 Even if you wash with lye and use a great amount of soap, [s]
the stain of your sin is still in front of Me. [t] 23 How can you protest, “I am not defiled; This is the Lord GOD’s declaration.
I have not followed the Baals”? [u]
Look at your behavior in the valley;
acknowledge what you have done. [v]
You are a swift young camel twisting and turning on her way, 24 a wild donkey [w] at home [E] in the wilderness.
She sniffs the wind in the heat of her desire.
Who can control her passion?
All who look for her will not become tired;
they will find her in her mating season. [F] 25 Keep your feet from going bare and your throat from thirst.
But you say, “It’s hopeless; [x]
I love strangers, [y]
and I will continue to follow them.”

26 Like the shame of a thief when he is caught, so the house of Israel has been put to shame. [z]
They, their kings, their officials, their priests, and their prophets [a] 27 say to a tree, “You are my father,” and to a stone, “You gave birth to me.”
For they have turned their back to Me
and not their face,
yet in their time of disaster [b] they beg, “Rise up and save us! ”
28 But where are your gods you made for yourself?
Let them rise up and save you [c]
in your time of disaster if they can,
for your gods are as numerous as your cities, Judah.

Judgment Deserved

29 Why do you bring a case against Me? [d]
All of you have rebelled against Me.
30 I have struck down your children in vain; This is the LORD's declaration.
they would not accept discipline. [e]
Your own sword has devoured your prophets [f]
like a ravaging lion.
31 Evil generation,
pay attention to the word of the LORD!
Have I been a wilderness to Israel or a land of dense darkness?
Why do My people claim,
"We will go where we want; [G]
we will no longer come to You"?
32 Can a young woman forget her jewelry [g]
or a bride her wedding sash?
Yet My people have forgotten Me [h]
for countless days.
33 How skillfully you pursue love;
you also teach evil women your ways.
34 Moreover, your skirts are stained with the blood of the innocent poor. [i]
You did not catch them breaking and entering. [j]
But in spite of all these things
35 you claim, "I am innocent. [k]
His anger is sure to turn away from me."
But I will certainly judge you because you have said, "I have not sinned." [l] 36 How unstable you are, [m] constantly changing your ways!
You will be put to shame by Egypt [n]
just as you were put to shame by Assyria.
37 Moreover, you will be led out from here with your hands on your head [o]
since the LORD has rejected those you trust; [p]
you will not succeed even with their help. [H]

Wages of Apostasy

3 If [a] a man divorces his wife and she leaves him to marry another, can he ever return to her? [b]
Wouldn't such a land [c] become totally defiled?
But you!
You have played the prostitute with many partners [d] —
can you return to Me? [e]
2 Look to the barren heights [f] and see. This is the LORD's declaration.
Where have you not been immoral?
You sat waiting for them beside the highways [g]
like a nomad in the desert.
You have defiled the land
with your prostitution and wickedness. [h] 3 This is why the showers haven't come [i] — why there has been no spring rain.
You have the brazen look [j] of a prostitute [A]
and refuse to be ashamed.
4 Have you not lately called to Me, "My Father. [k]
You were my friend in my youth. [l]
5 Will He bear a grudge forever? [m]
Will He be endlessly infuriated? "
This is what you have said, but you have done the evil things
you are capable of.

Unfaithful Israel, Treacherous Judah 6 In the days of King Josiah the LORD asked me, "Have you seen what unfaithful Israel has done? She has ascended every high hill and gone under every green tree to prostitute herself there. [n] 7 I thought: After she has done all these things, she will return to Me. [o] But she didn't return, and her treacherous sister Judah [p] saw it. 8 I [q] observed that it was because unfaithful Israel had committed adultery that I had sent her away and had given her a certificate of divorce. [r] Nevertheless, her treacherous sister Judah was not afraid but also went and prostituted herself. [s] 9 Indifferent to [B] her prostitution, she defiled the land and committed adultery with stones [t] and trees. [u] 10 Yet in spite of all this, her treacherous sister Judah didn't return to Me with all her heart [v] — only in pretense."
This is the LORD's declaration.

11 The LORD announced to me, “Unfaithful Israel has shown herself more righteous than treacherous Judah. [w] 12 Go, proclaim these words to the north, and say:

Return, unfaithful Israel. [x]
I will not look on you with anger, [C] This is the LORD’s declaration.
for I am unfailing in My love. [y]
I will not be angry forever. [z] This is the LORD’s declaration.
13 Only acknowledge your •guilt [a] — you have rebelled against the LORD your God.
You have scattered your favors to strangers
under every green tree [b] and have not obeyed My voice.

14 “Return, you faithless children” [c] — this This is the LORD’s declaration. is the LORD’s declaration — “for I am your master, [d] and I will take you, [e] one from a city and two from a family, and I will bring you to •Zion . 15 I will give you shepherds who are loyal to Me, [D,] [f] and they will shepherd you with knowledge and skill. 16 When you multiply and increase in the land, [g] in those days” — the LORD’s declaration — “no one will say any longer, ‘The ark of the LORD’s covenant.’ [h] It will never come to mind, and no one will remember or miss it. It will never again be made. 17 At that time Jerusalem will be called, •Yahweh ’s Throne, [i] and all the nations will be gathered to it, [j] to the name of Yahweh in Jerusalem. [k] They will cease to follow the stubbornness of their evil hearts. 18 In those days the house of Judah will join with the house of Israel, [l] and they will come together from the land of the north to the land I have given your ancestors to inherit.” [m]

True Repentance

19 I thought: How I long to make you My sons and give you a desirable land,
the most beautiful inheritance [n] of all the nations.
I thought: You will call Me, my Father,
and never turn away from Me.
20 However, as a woman may betray her lover, [E]
so you have betrayed [o] Me, house of Israel.
This is the LORD's declaration.
21 A sound is heard on the barren heights,
the children of Israel weeping and begging for mercy,
for they have perverted their way;
they have forgotten the LORD their God. [p]
22 Return, you faithless children.
I will heal your unfaithfulness. [q]
"Here we are, coming to You,
for You are the LORD our God.
23 Surely, falsehood comes from the hills, commotion from the mountains, [r]
but the salvation of Israel is only in the LORD our God. [s] 24 From the time of our youth the shameful one [t] has consumed what our fathers have worked for — their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.
25 Let us lie down in our shame;
let our disgrace cover us. [u]
We have sinned against the LORD our God,
both we and our fathers,
from the time of our youth even to this day. [v]
We have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God."

Blessing or Curse

4 If you return, [A] Israel — you will return to Me, [a] this is the LORD's declaration — if you remove your detestable idols [b] from My presence
and do not waver,
2 then you can swear, "As the LORD lives," [c]
in truth, [d] in justice, and in righteousness, [e]
then the nations will be blessed [B] by Him and will pride themselves in Him. [f]

3 For this is what the LORD says to the men of Judah and Jerusalem:
Break up the unplowed ground; [g]
do not sow among the thorns. [h]
4 Circumcise yourselves to the LORD;
remove the foreskin of your hearts, [i]
men of Judah and residents of Jerusalem.
Otherwise, My wrath will break out like fire and burn with no one to extinguish it [j] because of your evil deeds.

Judgment from the North

5 Declare in Judah, proclaim in Jerusalem, and say:
Blow the ram's horn throughout the land. [k]
Cry out loudly and say:
Assemble yourselves,
and let's flee to the fortified cities.
6 Lift up a signal flag toward •Zion . [l]
Run for cover! Don't stand still!
For I am bringing disaster from the north —
a great destruction. [m]
7 A lion has gone up from his thicket; [n] a destroyer of nations has set out.
He has left his lair
to make your land a waste.
Your cities will be reduced to uninhabited ruins. [o]
8 Because of this, put on •sackcloth ; mourn and wail, [p]
for the LORD's burning anger [q]
has not turned away from us.

9 "On that day" — this is the LORD's declaration — "the king and the officials will lose their courage. The priests will tremble in fear, and the prophets will be scared speechless."

10 I said, "Oh no, Lord GOD, You have certainly deceived [r] this people and Jerusalem, by announcing, 'You will have peace,' [s] while a sword is at [C] our throats."

11 "At that time it will be said to this people and to Jerusalem, 'A searing wind [t] blows from the barren heights in the wilderness on the way to My dear [D] people. It comes not to winnow or to sift; 12 a wind too strong for this comes at My call. [E] Now I will also pronounce judgments against them.' " [u]

13 Look, he advances like clouds; [v]
his chariots are like a storm. [w]
His horses are swifter than eagles. [x]
Woe to us, for we are ruined!
14 Wash the evil from your heart, [y] Jerusalem,
so that you will be delivered.
How long will you harbor malicious thoughts within you? [z] 15 For a voice announces from Dan, proclaiming malice from Mount Ephraim.

16 Warn the nations: Look!
Proclaim to Jerusalem:
Those who besiege are coming from a distant land; [a] they raise their voices against the cities of Judah.
17 They have her surrounded [b]
like those who guard a field,
because she has rebelled against Me. [c] 18 Your way of life and your actions have brought this on you. [d]
This is your punishment. It is very bitter, because it has reached your heart!

This is the LORD's declaration.

Jeremiah's Lament

19 My anguish, my anguish! [F] I writhe in agony!
Oh, the pain in [G] my heart! [e]
My heart pounds;
I cannot be silent.
For you, my soul,
have heard the sound of the ram's horn —
the shout of battle.
20 Disaster after disaster [f] is reported because the whole land is destroyed.
Suddenly my tents are destroyed,
my tent curtains, in a moment.
21 How long must I see the signal flag and hear the sound of the ram's horn?

22 "For My people are fools;
they do not know Me.
They are foolish children,
without understanding. [g]
They are skilled in doing what is evil, but they do not know how to do what is good." [h]

23 I looked at the earth, and it was formless and empty. [i]
I looked to the heavens,
and their light was gone. [j] 24 I looked at the mountains, and they were quaking; [k]
all the hills shook.
25 I looked, and no man was left;
all the birds of the sky had fled. [l]
26 I looked, and the fertile field [m] was a wilderness. [n]
All its cities were torn down
because of the LORD
and His burning anger. [o]

27 For this is what the LORD says:
The whole land will be a desolation, [p]
but I will not finish it off. [q] 28 Because of this, the earth will mourn; [r]
the skies above will grow dark. [s]
I have spoken; I have planned, and I will not relent or turn back from it. [t]

29 Every city flees [u]
at the sound of the horseman and the archer.
They enter the thickets and climb among the rocks. [v]
Every city is abandoned;
no inhabitant is left.
30 And you, devastated one, what are you doing [w] that you dress yourself in scarlet,
that you adorn yourself with gold jewelry,
that you enlarge your eyes with paint?
You beautify yourself for nothing.
Your lovers reject you;
they want to take your life. [x]
31 I hear a cry like a woman in labor, [y]
a cry of anguish like one bearing her first child.
The cry of Daughter Zion gasping for breath, stretching out her hands: [z]

Woe is me, for my life is weary because of the murderers!

The Depravity of Jerusalem

5 Roam [a] through the streets of Jerusalem.
Look and take note;
search in her squares.
If you find one person, [b]
any who acts justly,
who seeks to be faithful,
then I will forgive her. [c] 2 When they say, “As the Lord lives,” [d]
they are swearing falsely. [e]
3 Lord, don’t Your eyes look for faithfulness? [f]
You have struck them, but they felt no pain. [g]
You finished them off,
but they refused to accept discipline. [h]
They made their faces harder than rock, [i]
and they refused to return.

4 Then I thought:

They are just the poor;
they have played the fool.
For they don’t understand the way of the Lord, [j]
the justice of their God. [k]
5 I will go to the powerful and speak to them.
Surely they know the way of the Lord,
the justice of their God. [l]
However, these also had broken the yoke and torn off the chains. [m]
6 Therefore, a lion from the forest will strike them down. [n]
A wolf from an arid plain will ravage them.
A leopard [o] keeps watch over their cities.
Anyone who leaves them will be torn to pieces because their rebellious acts are many, [p] their unfaithful deeds numerous.

7 Why should I forgive you?
Your children have abandoned Me and sworn by those who are not gods. [q]

I satisfied their needs, yet they committed adultery;
they gashed themselves [r] at the [A] prostitute's house.
8 They are well-fed, [B] eager [C] stallions, [s]
each neighing [t] after someone else's wife. [u]
9 Should I not punish them for these things? [v]
Should I not avenge Myself [w] This is the LORD's declaration.
on such a nation as this?

10 Go up among her vineyard terraces and destroy them, [x]
but do not finish them off. [y]
Prune away her shoots,
for they do not belong to the LORD. [z]
11 They, the house of Israel and the house of Judah, have dealt very treacherously with Me. [a] 12 They have contradicted the LORD This is the LORD's declaration. and insisted, "It won't happen. [D, b] Harm won't come to us;
we won't see sword or famine."
13 The prophets become only wind,
for the LORD's word is not in them.
This will in fact happen to them.

Coming Judgment

14 Therefore, this is what the Lord GOD of •Hosts says:

Because you have spoken this word,
I am going to make My words become fire in your mouth. [c]
These people are the wood,
and the fire will consume them. [d] 15 I am about to bring a nation from far away against you, house of Israel.
It is an established nation, This is the LORD's declaration.
an ancient nation,
a nation whose language you do not know
and whose speech you do not understand. [e] 16 Their quiver is like an open grave; [f]
they are all mighty warriors.
17 They will consume your harvest and your food. [g]
They will consume your sons and your daughters.
They will consume your flocks and your herds.
They will consume your vines and your fig trees.
They will destroy with the sword your fortified cities [h] in which you trust.

18 "But even in those days" — this is the LORD's declaration — "I will not finish you off. [i] 19 When people ask, 'For what offense has the LORD our God done all these things to us? ' You will respond to them: Just as you abandoned Me [j] and served foreign gods in your land, so will you serve strangers in a land that is not yours. [k]

20 "Declare this in the house of Jacob; proclaim it in Judah, saying:

21 Hear this,
you foolish and senseless [E] people. [l]
They have eyes, but they don't see.
They have ears, but they don't hear. [m]
22 Do you not •fear Me?
Do you not tremble before Me, This is the LORD's declaration.
the One who set the sand as the boundary of the sea,
an enduring barrier that it cannot cross? [n]

The waves surge, but they cannot prevail.
They roar but cannot pass over it.
23 But these people have stubborn and rebellious hearts. [o]
They have turned aside and have gone away.
24 They have not said to themselves,
'Let's fear the LORD our God, [p] who gives the rain, [q] both early and late, [r] in its season, [s] who guarantees to us the fixed weeks of the harvest.'
25 Your •guilty acts have diverted these things from you.
Your sins have withheld My bounty from you, [t]
26 for wicked men live among My people.
They watch like fowlers lying in wait. [F, u]
They set a trap; [v]
they catch men.
27 Like a cage full of birds,
so their houses are full of deceit.
Therefore they have grown powerful and rich.
28 They have become fat [w] and sleek.
They have also excelled in evil matters.
They have not taken up cases,
such as the case of the fatherless, so they might prosper, and they have not defended the rights of the needy. [x]
29 Should I not punish them for these things?
Should I not avenge Myself [y] This is the LORD's declaration.
on such a nation as this?

30 A horrible, terrible thing has taken place in the land. [z] 31 The prophets prophesy falsely, [a]
and the priests rule by their own authority.
My people love it like this.
But what will you do at the end of it? [b]

Threatened Siege of Jerusalem

6 “Run for cover, [a] Benjaminites, out of Jerusalem!
Sound the ram’s horn in Tekoa; [b] raise a smoke signal [c] over Beth-haccherem, [d] for disaster threatens from the north,
even great destruction.
2 Though she is beautiful and delicate,
I will destroy [A] Daughter •Zion .
3 Shepherds and their flocks will come against her;
they will pitch their tents all around her. [e]
Each will pasture his own portion.
4 Set them apart for war [f] against her;
rise up, let’s attack at noon.
Woe to us, for the day is passing;
the evening shadows grow long.
5 Rise up, let’s attack by night.
Let us destroy her fortresses.”

6 For this is what the LORD of •Hosts says:

Cut down the trees; [g]
raise a siege ramp against Jerusalem.
This city must be punished.
There is nothing but oppression within her.
7 As a well gushes out its water,
so she pours out her evil. [B]
Violence and destruction [h] resound in her.
Sickness and wounds keep coming to My attention.
8 Be warned, Jerusalem, or I will turn away from you; [i]
I will make you a desolation,
a land without inhabitants.

Wrath on Israel

9 This is what the LORD of Hosts says:
Glean the remnant of Israel
as thoroughly as a vine.
Pass your hand once more like a grape gatherer
over the branches.

10 Who can I speak to and give such a warning [C] that they will listen?
Look, their ear is uncircumcised, [j, k]
so they cannot pay attention.
See, the word of the LORD has become contemptible to them —
they find no pleasure in it.
11 But I am full of the LORD's wrath;
I am tired of holding it back. [l]
Pour it out on the children in the street, [m] on the gang of young men as well.
For both husband and wife will be captured,
the old with the very old. [D]
12 Their houses will be turned over to others, [n] their fields and wives as well,
for I will stretch out My hand against the inhabitants of the land.
This is the LORD's declaration.
13 For from the least to the greatest of them, everyone is making profit dishonestly. [o]
From prophet to priest,
everyone deals falsely.
14 They have treated My people's brokenness superficially, claiming, "Peace, peace,"
when there is no peace.
15 Were they ashamed when they acted so abhorrently?
They weren't at all ashamed.
They can no longer feel humiliation.
Therefore, they will fall among the fallen.
When I punish them, they will collapse, [p]
says the LORD.

Disaster because of Disobedience

16 This is what the LORD says:
Stand by the roadways and look.
Ask about the ancient paths:
Which is the way to what is good?
Then take it
and find rest for yourselves. [q]
But they protested, “We won’t!”
17 I appointed watchmen over you [r] and said: Listen for the sound of the ram’s horn.
But they protested, “We won’t listen!”

18 Therefore listen, you nations and you witnesses,
learn what the charge is against them.
19 Listen, earth!
I am about to bring disaster on these people,
the fruit of their own plotting, [s]
for they have paid no attention to My word.
They have rejected My instruction.
20 What use to Me is frankincense from Sheba or sweet cane [t] from a distant land?
Your •burnt offerings are not acceptable;
your sacrifices do not please Me. [u]
21 Therefore, this is what the LORD says:
I am going to place stumbling blocks before these people;
fathers and sons together will stumble over them; [v]
friends and neighbors will also perish.

A Cruel Nation from the North

22 This is what the LORD says:
Look, an army is coming from a northern land;
a great nation will be awakened
from the remote regions of the earth. [w] 23 They grasp bow and javelin.
They are cruel and show no mercy.
Their voice roars like the sea, [x]
and they ride on horses, lined up like men in battle formation against you, Daughter Zion.

24 We have heard about it, and we are discouraged. E Distress has seized us — pain like a woman in labor. y 25 Don’t go out to the fields;
don’t walk on the road.
For the enemy has a sword;
terror is on every side. z

26 My dear F people, dress yourselves in •sackcloth and roll in the dust. a Mourn as you would for an only son, b a bitter lament,
for suddenly the destroyer will come on us.

Jeremiah Appointed as an Examiner

27 I have appointed you to be an assayer among My people — a refiner [c] —
so you may know and assay their way of life. [d] 28 All are stubborn rebels spreading slander. [e]
They are bronze and iron;
all of them are corrupt. [f] 29 The bellows blow, blasting the lead with fire.
The refining is completely in vain;
the evil ones are not separated out.
30 They are called rejected silver,
for the LORD has rejected them. [g]

False Trust in the Temple

7 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 "Stand in the gate of the house of the LORD [a] and there call out this word: Hear the word of the LORD, all you people of Judah who enter through these gates to worship the LORD.

3 "This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: Correct your ways and your deeds, [b] and I will allow you to live in this place. 4 Do not trust deceitful words, chanting: This is the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD, the temple of the LORD. 5 Instead, if you really change your ways and your actions, if you act justly toward one another, [A, c] 6 if you no longer oppress the foreigner, the fatherless, and the widow [d] and no longer shed innocent blood in this place or follow other gods, bringing harm on yourselves, 7 I will allow you to live in this place, the land I gave to your ancestors [e] long ago and forever.
8 But look, you keep trusting in deceitful words that cannot help.

9 "Do you steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsely, burn incense to •Baal
, and follow other gods that you have not known? [f] 10 Then do you come and stand before Me in this house [g] called by My name and say, 'We are delivered, so we can continue doing all these detestable acts'? 11 Has this house, which is called by My name, become a den of robbers [h] in your view? Yes, I too have seen it." [i]
This is the LORD's declaration.

Shiloh As a Warning

12 “But return to My place that was at Shiloh, where I made My name dwell at first. [j] See what I did to it because of the evil of My people Israel. 13 Now, because you have done all these things” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and because I have spoken to you time and time again [B] but you wouldn’t listen, [k] and I have called to you, but you wouldn’t answer, [l] 14 what I did to Shiloh I will do to the house that is called by My name [m] — the house in which you trust — the place that I gave you and your ancestors. 15 I will drive you from My presence, just as I drove out all of your brothers, all the descendants of Ephraim.
[n]

Do Not Pray for Judah

16 “As for you, do not pray for these people. [o] Do not offer a cry or a prayer on their behalf, and do not beg Me, [p] for I will not listen to you. 17 Don’t you see how they behave in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? 18 The sons gather wood, the fathers light the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the queen of heaven, [q, r] and they pour out •drink offerings to other gods so that they provoke Me to anger. 19 But are they really provoking Me? ” [s] This is the LORD’s declaration. “Isn’t it they themselves being provoked to disgrace? ”

20 Therefore, this is what the Lord GOD says: “Look, My anger — My burning wrath — is about to be poured out on this place, [t] on man and beast, on the tree of the field, and on the produce of the land. My wrath will burn and not be quenched.”

*Obedience Over Sacrifice 21 This is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: “Add your •burnt offerings to your other sacrifices, and eat the meat yourselves, [u] 22 for when I brought your ancestors out of the land of Egypt, I did not speak with them [v] or command them concerning burnt offering and sacrifice.
23 However, I did give them this command: Obey Me, and then I will be your God, and you will be My people. You must follow every way I command you so that it may go well with you. [w] 24 Yet they didn’t listen or pay attention [x] but followed their own advice and according to their own stubborn, evil heart. They went backward and not forward. [y] 25 Since the day your ancestors came out of the land of Egypt until this day, I have sent all My servants the prophets to you time and time again. [C, z] 26 However, they wouldn’t listen to Me or pay attention but became obstinate; [D, a] they did more evil than their ancestors.*

*A Lament for Disobedient Judah 27 “When you speak all these things to them, they will not listen to you. When you call to them, they will not answer you.
28 You must therefore declare to them: This is the nation that would not listen to the voice of the LORD their God and would not accept discipline. Truth [E] has perished — it has disappeared from their mouths. 29 Cut off the hair of your sacred vow [F, b] and throw it away. Raise up a dirge on the barren heights, [c] for the LORD has rejected and abandoned the generation under His wrath.*

30 “For the Judeans have done what is evil in My sight.” This is the LORD’s declaration. “They have set up their detestable things [d] in the house that is called by My name and defiled it. 31 They have built the •high places of •Topheth [G, e] in the Valley of Hinnom [f, g] in order to burn their sons and daughters in the fire, a thing I did not command; I never entertained the thought. [H]

32 “Therefore, take note! Days are coming” — the LORD’s declaration — “when this place will no longer be called Topheth and the Valley of Hinnom, but the Valley of Slaughter. [h] Topheth will become a cemetery, [I] because there will be no other burial place. 33 The corpses of these people will become food for the birds of the sky and for the wild animals of the land, with no one to scare them away. [i] 34 I will remove from the cities of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem the sound of joy and gladness and the voices of the groom and the bride, [j] for the land will become a desolate waste.

Death over Life

8 “At that time” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “the bones of the kings of Judah, the bones of her officials, the bones of the priests, the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the residents of Jerusalem will be brought out of their graves. 2 They will be exposed [a] to the sun, the moon, and the whole heavenly •host , [b] which they have loved, served, followed, consulted, and worshiped.
Their bones will not be collected and buried but will become like manure on the surface of the soil. [c] 3 Death will be chosen over life [d] by all the survivors of this evil family, those who remain wherever I have banished them.” This is the declaration of the LORD of Hosts.

4 “You are to say to them: This is what the LORD says:
Do people fall and not get up again? [e]
If they turn away, do they not return?
5 Why have these people turned away?
Why is Jerusalem always turning away?
They take hold of deceit; [f]
they refuse to return. [g]
6 I have paid careful attention.
They do not speak what is right.
No one regrets his evil,
asking, ‘What have I done?’
Everyone has stayed his course
like a horse rushing into battle. [h] 7 Even the stork in the sky knows her seasons.
The turtledove, swallow, and crane [A] are aware of their migration,
but My people do not know
the requirements of the LORD. [i]

Punishment for Judah’s Leaders

8 “How can you claim, ‘We are wise;
the law of the LORD is with us’?
In fact, the lying pen of scribes [j]
has produced falsehood.
9 The wise will be put to shame;
they will be dismayed and snared.
They have rejected the word of the LORD,
so what wisdom do they really have?

10 Therefore, I will give [k] their wives to other men, their fields to new occupants,
for from the least to the greatest,
everyone is making profit dishonestly.
From prophet to priest,
everyone deals falsely.
11 They have treated superficially the brokenness of My dear [B] people,
claiming, 'Peace, peace,'
when there is no peace.
12 Were they ashamed when they acted so abhorrently?
They weren't at all ashamed.
They can no longer feel humiliation.
Therefore, they will fall among the fallen.
When I punish them, they will collapse," [l]
says the LORD.

13 I will gather them and bring them to an end. [C, m]
There will be no grapes on the vine, This is the LORD's declaration.
no figs on the fig tree,
and even the leaf will wither.
Whatever I have given them will be lost to them.

God's People Unrepentant

14 Why are we just sitting here?
Gather together; let us enter the fortified cities and perish there, [D]
for the LORD our God has destroyed [E] us.
He has given us poisoned water to drink, [n]
because we have sinned against the LORD.
15 We hoped for peace, but there was nothing good;
for a time of healing, but there was only terror. [o]

16 From Dan the snorting of horses is heard.
At the sound of the neighing of mighty steeds, [p]
the whole land quakes.
They come to devour the land and everything in it,

the city and all its residents.
17 Indeed, I am about to send snakes among you, poisonous vipers [q] that cannot be charmed. [r]
They will bite you.
This is the LORD's declaration.

Lament over Judah

18 My joy has flown away;
grief has settled on me.
My heart is sick. [s]
19 Listen — the cry of my dear [F] people from a far away land,
"Is the LORD no longer in •Zion , [t] her King not within her? "
Why have they provoked me to anger with their carved images,
with their worthless foreign idols? [u] 20 Harvest has passed, summer has ended,
but we have not been saved.
21 I am broken by the brokenness of my dear [G] people. [v]
I mourn; horror has taken hold of me.
22 Is there no balm in Gilead? [w]
Is there no physician there?
So why has the healing of my dear [H] people not come about?

Chapter 9

a [1] If my head were a spring of water,
my eyes a fountain of tears,
I would weep day and night [b]
over the slain of my dear [A] people.
[2] [c] If only I had a traveler's lodging place
in the wilderness,
I would abandon my people
and depart from them,
for they are all adulterers, [d]
a solemn assembly of treacherous people. [e]

[3] They bent their tongues like their bows;
lies and not faithfulness prevail in the land,
for they proceed from one evil to another,
and they do not take Me into account. [f]

This is the LORD's declaration.

Imminent Ruin and Exile

4 Everyone has to be on guard against his friend.
Don't trust any brother,
for every brother will certainly deceive,
and every friend spread slander. [g] 5 Each one betrays his friend;
no one tells the truth.
They have taught their tongues to speak lies;
they wear themselves out doing wrong.
6 You live in a world of deception. [h]
In their deception they refuse to know Me. [i]
This is the LORD's declaration.
7 Therefore, this is what the LORD of •Hosts says:

I am about to refine them and test them, [j]
for what else can I do because of My dear [B] people? [k] 8 Their tongues are deadly arrows —
they speak deception. [l]
With his mouth
a man speaks peaceably with his friend,
but inwardly he sets up an ambush.
9 Should I not punish them for these things?
Should I not avenge Myself [m]
on such a nation as this?
This is the LORD's declaration.

10 I will raise weeping and a lament
over the mountains,
a dirge over the wilderness grazing land,
for they have been so scorched that no one passes through.
The sound of cattle is no longer heard.
From the birds of the sky to the animals, [n]
everything has fled — they have gone away.
11 I will make Jerusalem a heap of rubble, [o]
a jackals' den. [p]
I will make the cities of Judah a desolation, an uninhabited place.

12 Who is the man wise enough to understand this? [q] Who has the LORD spoken to, that he may explain it? Why is the land destroyed and scorched like a wilderness, so no one can pass through?
13 The LORD said, “It is because they abandoned My instruction [r] that I set in front of them and did not obey My voice or walk according to it. 14 Instead, they followed the stubbornness of their hearts [s] and followed after the •Baals as their fathers taught them.” [t] 15 Therefore, this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: “I am about to feed this people •wormwood [u] and give them poisonous water to drink. [v] 16 I will scatter them among the nations [w] that they and their fathers have not known. I will send a sword after them until I have finished them off.”

Mourning over Judah

17 This is what the LORD of Hosts says:
Consider, and summon the women who mourn; [x]
send for the skillful women.
18 Let them come quickly to raise a lament over us
so that our eyes may overflow with tears,
our eyelids soaked with weeping.
19 For a sound of lamentation is heard from •Zion :
How devastated we are.
We are greatly ashamed, [y]
for we have abandoned the land;
our dwellings have been torn down.

20 Now hear the word of the LORD, you women.
Pay attention to [C] the word of His mouth.
Teach your daughters a lament
and one another a dirge, 21 for Death [z] has climbed through our windows;
it has entered our fortresses,
cutting off children from the streets,
young men from the squares.

22 Speak as follows:
This is what the LORD says:
Human corpses will fall
like manure on the surface of the field, like newly cut grain [a] after the reaper
with no one to gather it.

Boast in the LORD 23 This is what the LORD says:
The wise man must not boast in his wisdom;
the strong man must not boast in his strength;
the wealthy man must not boast in his wealth.
24 But the one who boasts should boast in this,
that he understands and knows Me [b] —
that I am •Yahweh , showing faithful love, justice, and righteousness on the earth,
for I delight in these things.

25 “The days are coming” — the LORD’s*This is the LORD’s declaration.*
declaration — “when I will punish all the circumcised yet uncircumcised: c 26
Egypt, Judah, Edom, the Ammonites, Moab, and all the inhabitants of the desert who clip the hair on their temples. D All these nations are uncircumcised, and the whole house of Israel is uncircumcised in heart.” d

False Gods Contrasted with the Creator

10 Hear the word that the LORD has spoken to [A] you, house of Israel. [2] This is what the LORD says:

Do not learn the way of the nations [a] or be terrified by signs in the heavens,
although the nations are terrified by them,
[3] for the customs of the peoples are worthless.
Someone cuts down a tree from the forest;
it is worked by the hands of a craftsman with a chisel.
[4] He decorates it with silver and gold. [b]
It is fastened with hammer and nails, [c]
so it won't totter.
[5] Like scarecrows in a cucumber patch,
their idols cannot speak. [d]
They must be carried [e] because they cannot walk.
Do not fear them for they can do no harm [f] —
and they cannot do any good. [g]

[6] •Yahweh , there is no one like You. [h]
You are great;
Your name is great in power. [i]
[7] Who should not •fear You,
King of the nations? [j]
It is what You deserve.
For among all the wise people of the nations and among all their kingdoms,
there is no one like You.
[8] They are both stupid and foolish, instructed by worthless idols
made of wood!
[9] Beaten silver is brought from Tarshish, [k]
and gold from Uphaz [B, l]
from the hands of a goldsmith,
the work of a craftsman.
Their clothing is blue and purple,
all the work of skilled artisans.
[10] But Yahweh is the true God; [m]
He is the living God [n] and eternal King. [o]

The earth quakes at His wrath, [p]
and the nations cannot endure His rage.

11 You are to say this to them, “The gods that did not make the heavens [q] and the earth will perish from the earth [r] and from under these heavens.” [s]

12 He made the earth by His power, established the world [t] by His wisdom, [u]
and spread out the heavens by His understanding. [v] 13 When He thunders, [C]
the waters in the heavens are in turmoil, [w]
and He causes the clouds to rise from the ends of the earth.
He makes lightning for the rain
and brings the wind from His storehouses. [x]

14 Everyone is stupid and ignorant.
Every goldsmith is put to shame
by his carved image, [y]
for his cast images are a lie; [z]
there is no breath in them. [a] 15 They are worthless, a work to be mocked.
At the time of their punishment
they will be destroyed. [b] 16 Jacob’s Portion [c] is not like these because He is the One who formed all things. [d]
Israel is the tribe of His inheritance; [e]
Yahweh of •Hosts is His name. [f]

Exile After the Siege

17 Gather up your belongings [D] from the ground, [g]
you who live under siege.

18 For this is what the LORD says:
Look, I am slinging out [h]
the land's residents at this time and bringing them such distress that they will feel it.

Jeremiah Grieves

19 Woe to me because of my brokenness —
I am severely wounded! [i]
I exclaimed, “This is my intense suffering, but I must bear it.”
20 My tent is destroyed; [j]
all my tent cords are snapped.
My sons have departed from me and are no more.
I have no one to pitch my tent again
or to hang up my curtains.
21 For the shepherds are stupid:
they don’t seek the Lord. [k]
Therefore they have not prospered, and their whole flock is scattered.
22 Listen! A noise — it is coming — a great commotion [l] from the land to the north.
The cities of Judah will be made desolate, a jackals’ den. [m]

23 I know, Lord,
that a man’s way of life is not his own;
no one who walks determines his own steps. [n] 24 Discipline me, Lord, but with justice — not in Your anger, [o]
or You will reduce me to nothing.
25 Pour out Your wrath on the nations that don’t recognize You and on the families that don’t call on Your name, for they have consumed Jacob;
they have consumed him and finished him off and made his homeland desolate. [p]

Reminder of the Covenant

11 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 “Listen to the words of this covenant [a] and tell them to the men of Judah and the residents of Jerusalem. 3 You must tell them: This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: ‘Let a curse be on the man who does not obey the words of this covenant, [b] 4 which I commanded your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, [c] out of the iron furnace.’ [d] I declared: ‘Obey Me, and do everything that I command you, and you will be My people, and I will be your God,’ [e] 5 in order to establish the oath I swore to your ancestors, [f] to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is today.”

I answered, “•Amen , LORD.” [g]

6 The LORD said to me, “Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem: Obey the words of this covenant and carry them out. 7
For I strongly warned your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt until today, warning them time and time again, [A] [h] ‘Obey My voice.’
8 Yet they would not obey or pay attention; each one followed the stubbornness of his evil heart. [i] So I brought on them all the curses of this covenant, because they had not done what I commanded them to do.”

9 The LORD said to me, “A conspiracy has been discovered among the men of Judah [j] and the residents of Jerusalem. 10 They have returned to the sins of their ancestors [k] who refused to obey My words and have followed other gods to worship them. [l] The house of Israel and the house of Judah broke My covenant I made with their ancestors.

11 “Therefore, this is what the LORD says: I am about to bring on them disaster that they cannot escape. [m] They will cry out to Me, but I will not hear them.
12 Then the cities of Judah and the residents of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods they have been burning incense to, but they certainly will not save them in their time of disaster. [n] 13 Your gods are indeed as numerous as your cities, Judah, [o] and the altars you have set up to Shame [p] [q] — altars to burn incense to •Baal — as numerous as the streets of Jerusalem.

14 “As for you, do not pray for these people. Do not raise up a cry or a prayer on their behalf, [r] for I will not be listening when they call out to Me at the time of their disaster.

15 What right does My beloved have to be in My house, [s] having carried out so many evil schemes?
Can holy meat [t] [u] prevent your disaster [v]

so you can rejoice?
16 The LORD named you
a flourishing olive tree, [w]
beautiful with well-formed fruit.
He has set fire to it,
and its branches are consumed [x, y]
with a great roaring sound. [z]

17 "The LORD of •Hosts who planted you [a] has decreed disaster against you, because of the harm the house of Israel and the house of Judah brought on themselves, provoking Me to anger by burning incense to Baal."

18 The LORD informed me, so I knew.
Then You helped me to see their deeds,
19 for I was like a docile [B] lamb led to slaughter. [b]
I didn't know that they had devised plots against me:
"Let's destroy the tree with its fruit; [C] let's cut him off from the land of the living [c]
so that his name will no longer be remembered."
20 But, LORD of Hosts, who judges righteously, who tests [d] heart [D] and mind, [e]
let me see Your vengeance on them,
for I have presented my case to You. [f]

21 Therefore, here is what the LORD says concerning the people of Anathoth [g] who want to take your life. They warn, "You must not prophesy in the name of •Yahweh , or you will certainly die at our hand." 22 Therefore, this is what the LORD of Hosts says: "I am about to punish them. The young men will die by the sword; their sons and daughters will die by famine. [h] 23 They will have no remnant, for I will bring disaster on the people of Anathoth [i] in the year of their punishment."

Jeremiah's Complaint

12 You will be righteous, LORD, [a] even if I bring a case against You.
Yet, I wish to contend with You: [b]
Why does the way of the wicked prosper? [c]
Why do all the treacherous live at ease?
2 You planted them, [d] and they have taken root.
They have grown and produced fruit.
You are ever on their lips, [A] but far from their conscience. [B, e]
3 As for You, LORD, You know me; You see me. [f]
You test whether my heart is with You. [g]
Drag the wicked away like sheep to slaughter [h] and set them apart for the day of killing.
4 How long will the land mourn [i]
and the grass of every field wither?
Because of the evil of its residents, animals and birds have been swept away,
for the people have said,
"He cannot see what our end will be." [j, k]

The LORD's Response

5 If you have raced with runners and they have worn you out,
how can you compete with horses?
If you stumble [C] in a peaceful land,
what will you do in the thickets of the Jordan? [l] 6 Even your brothers — your own father's household — even they were treacherous to you; [m]
even they have cried out loudly after you. [n]
Do not have confidence in them,
though they speak well of you.

7 I have abandoned My house; [o]
I have deserted My inheritance.
I have given the love of My life into the hands of her enemies.
8 My inheritance has acted toward Me like a lion in the forest.

She has roared against Me.
Therefore, I hate her. [p]
9 Is My inheritance like a hyena [D] to Me?
Are birds of prey circling her?
Go, gather all the wild animals; [q]
bring them to devour her.
10 Many shepherds have destroyed My vineyard;
they have trampled My plot of land. [r]
They have turned My desirable plot into a desolate wasteland.
11 They have made it a desolation.
It mourns, desolate, before Me.
All the land is desolate,
but no one takes it to heart. [s] 12 Over all the barren heights in the wilderness
the destroyers have come,
for the LORD has a sword that devours from one end of the earth to the other.
No one has peace. [t]
13 They have sown wheat but harvested thorns. [u]
They have exhausted themselves but have no profit. [v]
Be put to shame by your harvests
because of the LORD's burning anger. [w]

14 This is what the LORD says: "Concerning all My evil neighbors who attack the inheritance that I bequeathed to My people, Israel, I am about to uproot them [x] from their land, and I will uproot the house of Judah from them. 15 After I have uprooted them, I will once again have compassion [y] on them and return each one to his inheritance and to his land. 16 If they will diligently learn the ways of My people [z] — to swear by My name, 'As •Yahweh lives,' just as they taught My people to swear by •Baal — they will be built up among My people. 17 However, if they will not obey, then I will uproot and destroy that nation." [a] This is the LORD's declaration.

Linen Underwear

13 This is what the LORD said to me: “Go and buy yourself a linen undergarment [a] and put it on, [A] but do not put it in water.” 2 So I bought underwear as the LORD instructed me and put it on.
3 Then the word of the LORD came to me a second time: 4 “Take the underwear that you bought and are wearing, [B] and go at once to the Euphrates [b] and hide it in a rocky crevice.” [c] 5 So I went and hid it by the Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.
6 A long time later the LORD said to me, “Go at once to the Euphrates and get the underwear that I commanded you to hide there.” 7 So I went to the Euphrates and dug up the underwear and got it from the place where I had hidden it, but it was ruined — of no use at all.
8 Then the word of the LORD came to me: 9 “This is what the LORD says: Just like this I will ruin the great pride of both Judah and Jerusalem. [d] 10 These evil people, who refuse to listen to Me, who follow the stubbornness of their own hearts, [e] and who have followed other gods to serve and worship — they will be like this underwear, of no use at all. 11 Just as underwear clings to one’s waist, so I fastened the whole house of Israel and of Judah to Me” [f] — this is the LORD’s declaration — “so that they might be My people for My fame, praise, and glory, [g] but they would not obey.

The Wine Jars

12 “Say this to them: This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: Every jar should be filled with wine. Then they will respond to you, ‘Don’t we know that every jar should be filled with wine?’ 13 And you will say to them: This is what the LORD says: I am about to fill all who live in this land — the kings who reign for David on his throne, the priests, the prophets and all the residents of Jerusalem — with drunkenness. 14 I will smash them against each other, fathers and sons alike” — this is the LORD’s declaration. “I will allow no mercy, pity, or compassion to keep Me from destroying them.” [h]

The LORD’s Warning

15 Listen and pay attention. Do not be proud,
for the LORD has spoken.
16 Give glory to the LORD your God [i] before He brings darkness, before your feet stumble
on the mountains at dusk.
You wait for light,
but He brings darkest gloom [C]
and makes thick darkness.
17 But if you will not listen,
my innermost being will weep in secret
because of your pride.
My eyes will overflow with tears,
for the LORD’s flock [j] has been taken captive.

18 Say to the king and the queen mother: [k]
Take a humble seat,
for your glorious crowns
have fallen from your heads.
19 The cities of the •Negev are under siege;
no one can help them.
All of Judah has been taken into exile,
taken completely into exile.
20 Look up and see those coming from the north. [l]
Where is the flock entrusted to you,
the sheep that were your pride?

The Destiny of Jerusalem

21 What will you say when He appoints close friends as leaders over you, ones you yourself trained?
Won't labor pains seize you, [m]
as they do a woman in labor?
22 And when you ask yourself,
"Why have these things happened to me? "
It is because of your great •guilt [n] that your skirts have been stripped off, [o]
your body exposed. [D] 23 Can the •Cushite change his skin, or a leopard his spots?
If so, you might be able to do what is good, [p]
you who are instructed in evil.
24 I will scatter you [E] like drifting chaff [q]
before the desert wind.
25 This is your lot,
what I have decreed for you — because you have forgotten Me this is the LORD's declaration — and trusted in Falsehood. [r, s] 26 I will pull your skirts up over your face so that your shame might be seen. [t] 27 Your adulteries and your lustful neighing, [u] your heinous prostitution
on the hills, in the fields —
I have seen your detestable acts.
Woe to you, Jerusalem!
You are •unclean —
for how long yet? [v]

The Drought

14 The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning the drought: [a]

2 Judah mourns;
her gates languish. [b]
Her people are on the ground in mourning;
Jerusalem's cry rises up. [c]
3 Their nobles send their servants [A] for water.
They go to the cisterns;
they find no water;
their containers return empty.
They are ashamed and humiliated;
they cover their heads. [d] 4 The ground is cracked
since no rain has fallen on the land.
The farmers are ashamed; [e]
they cover their heads.
5 Even the doe in the field gives birth and abandons her fawn since there is no grass.
6 Wild donkeys stand on the barren heights [f] panting for air like jackals.
Their eyes fail
because there are no green plants.
7 Though our •guilt testifies against us,
•Yahweh , act for Your name's sake.
Indeed, our rebellions [g] are many;
we have sinned against You.
8 Hope of Israel, [h] its Savior in time of distress,
why are You like a foreigner in the land,
like a traveler stopping only for the night?
9 Why are You like a helpless man, like a warrior unable to save? [i] Yet You are among us, Yahweh, [j] and we are called by Your name.
Don't leave us!

10 This is what the LORD says concerning these people:

Truly they love to wander; [k]
they never rest their feet.
So the LORD does not accept them.
Now He will remember their guilt and punish their sins. [l]

False Prophets to be Punished

11 Then the LORD said to me, “Do not pray for the well-being of these people.
m 12 If they fast, I will not hear their cry of despair. If they offer •burnt offering and •grain offering, I will not accept them. Rather, I will finish them off by sword, famine, and plague.” n

13 And I replied, “Oh no, Lord GOD! The prophets are telling them, ‘You won’t see sword or suffer famine. I will certainly give you true peace in this place.’ ” o

14 But the LORD said to me, “These prophets are prophesying a lie in My name. I did not send them, nor did I command them or speak to them. They are prophesying to you a false vision, worthless •divination , the deceit p of their own minds.

15 “Therefore, this is what the LORD says concerning the prophets who prophesy in My name, though I did not send them, and who say, ‘There will never be sword or famine in this land.’ By sword and famine these prophets will meet their end. 16 The people they are prophesying to will be thrown into the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword. There will be no one to bury them q — they, their wives, their sons, and their daughters. I will pour out their own evil on them.”

Jeremiah’s Request

17 You are to speak this word to them:
Let my eyes overflow with tears;
day and night may they not stop, r
for the virgin daughter of my people has been destroyed by a great disaster, s an extremely severe wound. t 18 If I go out to the field, look — those slain by the sword!
If I enter the city,
look — those ill u from famine!
For both prophet and priest travel to a land they do not know.

19 Have You completely rejected Judah?
Do You detest v •Zion ?
Why do You strike us

with no hope of healing for us?
We hoped for peace,
but there was nothing good;
for a time of healing,
but there was only terror. [w] 20 We acknowledge our wickedness, LORD, the guilt of our fathers; [x]
indeed, we have sinned against You.
21 Because of Your name, don't despise us.
Don't disdain Your glorious throne. [y]
Remember Your covenant [z] with us;
do not break it.
22 Can any of the worthless idols of the nations [a] bring rain?
Or can the skies alone give showers?
Are You not the LORD our God?
We therefore put our hope in You, [b]
for You have done all these things.

The LORD's Negative Response

15 Then the LORD said to me: “Even if [a] Moses and [b] Samuel should [c] stand before Me, [d] My compassions would not reach out to these people. Send them from My presence, and let them go. 2 If they ask you, ‘Where will we go?’
you must tell them: This is what the LORD says:

Those destined for death, [e] to death;
those destined for the sword, to the sword.
Those destined for famine, to famine;
those destined for captivity, to captivity.

3 “I will ordain four kinds [A] of judgment for them” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “the sword to kill, the dogs to drag away, [f] and the birds of the sky and the wild animals of the land [g] to devour and destroy. 4 I will make them a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of Manasseh [h] son of Hezekiah, the king of Judah, for what he did in Jerusalem.

5 Who will have pity on you, Jerusalem? [i]
Who will show sympathy toward you? [j]
Who will turn aside
to ask about your welfare?
6 You have left Me.
You have turned your back, This is the LORD’s declaration.
so I have stretched out My hand against you and destroyed you.
I am tired of showing compassion.
7 I scattered them with a winnowing fork
at the gates of the land.
I made them childless; I destroyed My people.
They would not turn from their ways. [k]
8 I made their widows more numerous than the sand of the seas. [l]
I brought a destroyer at noon against the mother of young men.
I suddenly released on her agitation and terrors.
9 The mother of seven grew faint; [m]
she breathed her last breath.
Her sun set while it was still day;
she was ashamed and humiliated.

The rest of them I will give over to the sword in the presence of their enemies.”

This is the LORD’s declaration.

Jeremiah’s Complaint

10 Woe is me, my mother,
that you gave birth to me, [n]
a man who incites dispute and conflict in all the land.
I did not lend or borrow,
yet everyone curses me. [o]

The LORD’s Response 11 The LORD said:
I will certainly set you free and care for you. [B]
I will certainly intercede for you in a time of trouble,
in your time of distress, with the enemy.
12 Can anyone smash iron,
iron from the north, or bronze?
13 I will give up your wealth
and your treasures as plunder, without cost, [p] for all your sins
in all your borders.
14 Then I will make you serve your enemies [q]
in a land you do not know,
for My anger will kindle a fire that will burn against you. [r]

Jeremiah’s Prayer for Vengeance
15 You know, [s] LORD;
remember me and take note of me.
Avenge me against my persecutors. [t]
In Your patience, [C] don’t take me away.
Know that I suffer disgrace for Your honor. [u]
16 Your words were found, and I ate them. [v]
Your words became a delight to me
and the joy of my heart,
for I am called by Your name, [w] •Yahweh God of •Hosts .

17 I never sat with the band of revelers,
and I did not celebrate with them.
Because Your hand was on me, I sat alone, [x]
for You filled me with indignation.
18 Why has my pain become unending,
my wound incurable, [y]
refusing to be healed?
You truly have become like a mirage to me —
water that is not reliable.

Jeremiah Told to Repent

19 Therefore, this is what the LORD says:
If you return, I will restore you;
you will stand in My presence.
And if you speak noble words,
rather than worthless ones,
you will be My spokesman. [z]
It is they who must return to you;
you must not return to them.
20 Then I will make you a fortified wall of bronze to this people.
They will fight against you
but will not overcome you,
for I am with you
to save you and deliver you. [a] 21 I will deliver you from the power of evil This is the LORD's declaration.
people
and redeem you from the control of the ruthless.

No Marriage for Jeremiah

16 The word of the LORD came to me: 2 “You must not marry or have sons or daughters in this place. 3 For this is what the LORD says concerning sons and daughters born in this place as well as concerning the mothers who bear them and the fathers who father them in this land: 4 They will die from deadly diseases. They will not be mourned or buried but will be like manure on the face of the earth. a They will be finished off by sword and famine. Their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and for the wild animals of the land. b

5 “For this is what the LORD says: Don’t enter a house where a mourning feast is taking place. A Don’t go to lament or sympathize with them, for I have removed My peace from these people” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “as well as My faithful love and compassion. c 6 Both great and small will die in this land without burial. No lament will be made for them, nor will anyone cut himself or d shave his head for them. e 7 Food won’t be provided for the mourner f to comfort him because of the dead. A cup of consolation won’t be given him because of the loss of his father or mother. 8 You must not enter the house where feasting is taking place to sit with them to eat and drink. 9 For this is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: I am about to eliminate from this place, before your very eyes and in your time, the sound of joy and gladness, the voice of the groom and the bride. g

Abandoning the LORD and His Law 10 “When you tell these people all these things, they will say to you, ‘Why has the LORD declared all this great disaster against us? h What is our •guilt ? What is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God? ’ 11 Then you will answer them: Because your fathers abandoned Me” i — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and followed other gods, served them, and worshiped them. j Indeed, they abandoned Me and did not keep My instruction. 12 You did more evil than your fathers. k Look, each one of you was following the stubbornness of his evil heart, not obeying Me. 13 So I will hurl you from this land into a land that you and your fathers are not familiar with. l There you will worship other gods m both day and night, for I will not grant you grace. B

14 “However, take note! The days are coming” — the LORD’s declaration — “when it will no longer be said, ‘As the LORD lives who brought the Israelites from the land of Egypt,’ n 15 but rather, ‘As the LORD lives who brought the Israelites from the land of the north o and from all the other lands where He had banished them.’ For I will return them to their land that I gave to their ancestors. p

Punishment of Exile

16 “I am about to send for many fishermen” [q] — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and they will fish for them. Then I will send for many hunters, and they will hunt them down on every mountain and hill and out of the clefts of the rocks, 17 for My gaze takes in all their ways. [r] They are not concealed from Me, and their guilt is not hidden from My sight. 18 I will first repay them double for their guilt [s] and sin because they have polluted My land. They have filled My inheritance with the lifelessness of their detestable and abhorrent idols.”

19 LORD, my strength and my stronghold, my refuge in a time of distress, [t]
the nations will come to You from the ends of the earth, and they will say, “Our fathers inherited only lies, worthless idols [u] of no benefit at all.”
20 Can one make gods for himself?
But they are not gods. [v]
21 “Therefore, I am about to inform them, and this time I will make them know
My power and My might;
then they will know that My name is •Yahweh .” [w]

The Persistent Sin of Judah

17 The sin of Judah is written with an iron stylus. [a]
With a diamond point
it is engraved on the tablet of their hearts [b] and on the horns of their [c] altars, 2 while their children remember their altars and their •Asherah poles, by the green trees on the high hills —
3 My mountains in the countryside.
I will give up your wealth
and all your treasures as plunder because of the sin of your •high places [A]
in all your borders. [d] 4 You will, on your own, relinquish your inheritance that I gave you.
I will make you serve your enemies in a land you do not know, [e] for you have set My anger on fire; [f] it will burn forever.

Curse and Blessing

5 This is what the LORD says:
The man who trusts in mankind, [g]
who makes human flesh his strength [h] and turns his heart from the LORD is cursed.
6 He will be like a juniper in the •Arabah ; [i] he cannot see when good comes but dwells in the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land where no one lives. [j]
7 The man who trusts in the LORD, whose confidence indeed is the LORD, is blessed. [k] 8 He will be like a tree planted by water: [l] it sends its roots out toward a stream, it doesn't fear when heat comes,
and its foliage remains green.
It will not worry in a year of drought or cease producing fruit.

The Deceitful Heart

9 The heart is more deceitful than anything else, and incurable — who can understand it? [m] 10 I, •Yahweh , examine the mind,
I test the heart [B, n]
to give to each according to his way, according to what his actions deserve. [o] 11 He who makes a fortune unjustly is like a partridge that hatches eggs it didn't lay.
In the middle of his days
his riches will abandon him, so in the end he will be a fool. [p]

12 A throne of glory [q]
on high [r] from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary. [s] 13 LORD, the hope of Israel, [t] all who abandon You will be put to shame.
All who turn away from Me
will be written in the dirt, for they have abandoned
the LORD, the fountain of living water. [u]

Jeremiah's Plea

14 Heal me, LORD, and I will be healed;
save me, and I will be saved,
for You are my praise. [v]
15 Hear how they keep challenging me, [w]
"Where is the word of the LORD?
Let it come! "
16 But I have not run away from being Your shepherd, and I have not longed for the fatal day.
You know my words were spoken in Your presence.
17 Don't become a terror to me.
You are my refuge [x] in the day of disaster.

18 Let my persecutors be put to shame, [y]
but don’t let me be put to shame.
Let them be terrified, but don’t let me be terrified.
Bring on them the day of disaster; [z]
shatter them with total [C] destruction.

Observing the Sabbath

19 This is what the LORD said to me, “Go and stand at the People’s Gate, through which the kings of Judah enter and leave, as well as at all the gates of Jerusalem. 20 Announce to them: Hear the word of the LORD, kings of Judah, all Judah, and all the residents of Jerusalem who enter through these gates. 21 This is what the LORD says: Watch yourselves; do not pick up a load and bring it in through the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. [a] 22 You must not carry a load out of your houses on the Sabbath day or do any work, [b] but you must consecrate the Sabbath day, just as I commanded your ancestors. [c] 23 They wouldn’t listen or pay attention but became obstinate, [d] not listening or accepting discipline.

24 “However, if you listen to Me, says the LORD, and do not bring loads through the gates of this city on the Sabbath day and consecrate the Sabbath day and do no work on it, 25 kings and princes will enter through the gates of this city. They will sit on the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses [e] with their officials, the men of Judah, and the residents of Jerusalem. This city will be inhabited forever. 26 Then people will come from the cities of Judah and from the area around Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin and from the Judean foothills, from the hill country and from the •Negev [f] bringing •burnt offerings and sacrifice, •grain offerings and frankincense, and thank offerings to the house of the LORD. 27 If you do not listen to Me to consecrate the Sabbath day by not carrying a load while entering the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath day, I will set fire to its gates, [g] and it will consume the citadels [h] of Jerusalem [i] and not be extinguished.” [j]

Parable of the Potter

18 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 2 “Go down at once to the potter’s house; [a] there I will reveal My words to you.” 3 So I went down to the potter’s house, and there he was, working away at the wheel. [A] 4
But the jar that he was making from the clay became flawed in the potter’s hand, so he made it into another jar, as it seemed right for him to do. [b] 5 The word of the LORD came to me: 6 “House of Israel, can I not treat you as this potter treats his clay? ” — this is the LORD’s declaration. “Just like clay in the potter’s hand, so are you in My hand, house of Israel. [c] 7 At one moment I might announce concerning a nation or a kingdom that I will uproot, tear down, and destroy it. [d] 8 However, if that nation I have made an announcement about turns from its evil, I will relent concerning the disaster I had planned to do to it.
[e] 9 At another time I announce that I will build and plant a nation or a kingdom. [f]
10 However, if it does what is evil in My sight by not listening to My voice, I will relent concerning the good I had said I would do to it. [g] 11 So now, say to the men of Judah and to the residents of Jerusalem: This is what the LORD says: I am about to bring harm to you and make plans against you. Turn now, each from your evil way, and correct your ways and your deeds. [h] 12 But they will say, ‘It’s hopeless. [i] We will continue to follow our plans, and each of us will continue to act according to the stubbornness of his evil heart.’ ”

Deluded Israel

13 Therefore, this is what the LORD says:
Ask among the nations,
Who has heard things like these?
Virgin Israel has done a most terrible thing. [j]
14 Does the snow of Lebanon ever leave the highland crags?
Or does cold water flowing from a distance ever fail?
15 Yet My people have forgotten Me. [k]
They burn incense to false idols that make them stumble in their ways on the ancient roads [l] and walk on new paths, not the highway.
16 They have made their land a horror, [m] a perpetual object of scorn; [B, n] everyone who passes by it will be horrified [o]
and shake his head. [p]
17 I will scatter them before the enemy like the east wind. [q]
I will show them [r] My back and not My face on the day of their calamity.

Plot against Jeremiah

18 Then certain ones said, “Come, let’s make plans against Jeremiah, [s] for instruction will never be lost from the priest, [t] or counsel from the wise, or an •oracle from the prophet. [u] Come, let’s denounce him [C] and pay no attention to all his words.”

19 Pay attention to me, LORD.
Hear what my opponents are saying! [v]
20 Should good be repaid with evil?
Yet they have dug a pit for me. [w]
Remember how I stood before You to speak good on their behalf,
to turn Your anger from them.
21 Therefore, hand their children over to famine, [x]
and pour the sword’s power on them.
Let their wives become childless and widowed,
their husbands slain by deadly disease, [D]
their young men struck down by the sword in battle.
22 Let a cry be heard from their houses
when You suddenly bring raiders against them, for they have dug a pit to capture me
and have hidden snares for my feet. [y]
23 But You, LORD, know
all their deadly plots against me.
Do not wipe out their •guilt ; [z]
do not blot out their sin before You.
Let them be forced to stumble before You;
deal with them in the time of Your anger.

The Clay Jar

19 This is what the LORD says: “Go, buy a potter’s clay [a] jar. Take [b] some of the elders of the people and some of the leading priests [c] 2 and go out to the Valley of Hinnom [d] near the entrance of the Potsherd Gate. Proclaim there the words I speak to you. 3 Say: Hear the word of the LORD, kings of Judah and residents of Jerusalem. [e] This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: I am going to bring such disaster on this place that everyone who hears about it will shudder [A, f] 4 because they have abandoned Me and made this a foreign place. They have burned incense in it to other gods that they, their fathers, and the kings of Judah have never known. They have filled this place with the blood of the innocent. [g] 5 They have built •high places to •Baal on which to burn their children in the fire as burnt offerings to Baal, something I have never commanded or mentioned; I never entertained the thought. [B, h]

6 “Therefore, take note! The days are coming” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “when this place will no longer be called Topheth and the Valley of Hinnom, but the Valley of Slaughter. [i] 7 I will spoil the plans of Judah and Jerusalem in this place. I will make them fall by the sword before their enemies, by the hand of those who want to take their life. I will provide their corpses as food for the birds of the sky and for the wild animals of the land. [j] 8 I will make this city desolate, an object of scorn. Everyone who passes by it will be horrified and scoff because of all its wounds. [k] 9 I will make them eat the flesh of their sons and their daughters, and they will eat each other’s flesh in the siege and distress that their enemies, those who want to take their life, inflict on them. [l]

10 “Then you are to shatter the jar in the presence of the people traveling with you, 11 and you are to proclaim to them: This is what the LORD of Hosts says: I will shatter these people and this city, like one shatters a potter’s jar that can never again be mended. They will bury the dead in Topheth because there is no other place for burials. [m] 12 I will do so to this place” — this is the declaration of the LORD — “and to its residents, making this city like Topheth. 13 The houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kings of Judah will become impure like that place Topheth — all the houses on whose rooftops they have burned incense to the whole heavenly host [n] and poured out •drink offerings to other gods.”

14 Jeremiah came back from Topheth, where the LORD had sent him to prophesy, stood in the courtyard of the LORD’s temple, [o] and proclaimed to all the people, 15 “This is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: ‘I am about to bring on this city — and on all its dependent villages — all the disaster that I spoke against it, for they have become obstinate, not obeying My words.’ ” [p]

Jeremiah Beaten by Pashhur

20 Pashhur the priest, the son of Immer [a] and chief official in the temple of the LORD, heard Jeremiah prophesying these things. 2 So Pashhur had Jeremiah the prophet beaten and put him in the stocks at the Upper Benjamin Gate in the LORD's temple. 3 The next day, when Pashhur released Jeremiah from the stocks, Jeremiah said to him, "The LORD does not call you Pashhur, but Magor-missabib, [b] 4 for this is what the LORD says, 'I am about to make you a terror to both yourself and those you love. [c] They will fall by the sword of their enemies before your very eyes. I will hand Judah over to the king of Babylon, and he will deport them to Babylon and put them to the sword. 5 I will give away all the wealth of this city, all its products [d] and valuables. Indeed, I will hand all the treasures of the kings of Judah over to their enemies. They will plunder them, seize them, and carry them off to Babylon. 6 As for you, Pashhur, and all who live in your house, you will go into captivity. You will go to Babylon. There you will die, and there you will be buried, you and all your friends that you prophesied falsely [e] to.' "

Jeremiah Compelled to Preach

7 You deceived me, LORD, and I was deceived.
You seized me and prevailed.
I am a laughingstock all the time; [f]
everyone ridicules me.
8 For whenever I speak, I cry out,
I proclaim, “Violence and destruction! ” [g]
because the word of the LORD has become for me constant disgrace and derision.
9 If I say, “I won’t mention Him or speak any longer in His name,”
His message becomes a fire burning in my heart, [h] shut up in my bones.
I become tired of holding it in,
and I cannot prevail.
10 For I have heard the gossip of many people, “Terror is on every side! [A, i] Report him; let’s report him! ”
Everyone I trusted [B] watches for my fall. [j] “Perhaps he will be deceived so that we might prevail against him and take our vengeance on him.”
11 But the LORD is with me like a violent warrior. [k]
Therefore, my persecutors will stumble and not prevail.
Since they have not succeeded, they will be utterly shamed,
an everlasting humiliation that will never be forgotten.
12 LORD of •Hosts , testing the righteous and seeing the heart [C] and mind,
let me see Your vengeance on them,
for I have presented my case to You. [l]
13 Sing to the LORD!
Praise the LORD,
for He rescues the life of the needy from the hand of evil people.

Jeremiah’s Lament

14 May the day I was born be cursed. [m]
May the day my mother bore me never be blessed.
15 May the man be cursed who brought the news to my father, saying, “A male child is born to you,”
bringing him great joy.
16 Let that man be like the cities
the LORD demolished without compassion. [n]
Let him hear an outcry in the morning [o]
and a war cry at noontime 17 because he didn’t kill me in the womb [p]
so that my mother might have been my grave, her womb eternally pregnant.
18 Why did I come out of the womb to see only struggle and sorrow, [q]
to end my life in shame?

Zedekiah's Request Denied

21 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD when King Zedekiah sent Pashhur [a] son of Malchijah and the priest Zephaniah [b] son of Maaseiah to Jeremiah, asking, 2 “Ask the LORD on our behalf, since Nebuchadnezzar [A,] [c] king of Babylon is making war against us. Perhaps the LORD will perform for us something like all His past wonderful works so that Nebuchadnezzar will withdraw from us.”
3 But Jeremiah answered, “This is what you are to say to Zedekiah: 4 ‘This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: I will repel the weapons of war in your hands, [d] those you are using to fight the king of Babylon and the Chaldeans [e] who are besieging you outside the wall, and I will bring them into the center of this city. [f] 5 I will fight against you [g] with an outstretched hand and a mighty arm, [h] with anger, rage, and great wrath. 6 I will strike the residents of this city, both man and beast. They will die in a great plague. 7 Afterward’ ” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “ ‘King Zedekiah of Judah, his officers, and the people — those in this city who survive the plague, the sword, and the famine — I will hand over to King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, [i] to their enemies, yes, to those who want to take their lives. He will put them to the sword; he won’t spare them or show pity or compassion.’ [j]

A Warning for the People

8 “But you must say to this people, ‘This is what the Lord says: Look, I am presenting to you the way of life and the way of death. [k] 9 Whoever stays in this city will die by the sword, famine, and plague, but whoever goes out and surrenders to the Chaldeans who are besieging you will live and will retain his life like the spoils of war. [l] 10 For I have turned [B] against this city to bring disaster [m] and not good’ ” — this is the Lord’s declaration. “ ‘It will be handed over to the king of Babylon, who will burn it down.’ [n]

11 “And to the house of the king of Judah say this: ‘Hear the word of the Lord! 12 House of David, this is what the Lord says:

Administer justice every morning,
and rescue the victim of robbery
from the hand of his oppressor, [o] or My anger will flare up like fire and burn unquenchably
because of their evil deeds.
13 Beware! I am against you, [p] you who sit above the valley, you atop the rocky plateau — you who say, “Who can come down this is the Lord’s declaration — against us? [q]
Who can enter our hiding places? ”
14 I will punish you according to what you have done [r] —
I will kindle a fire in its forest [s] this is the Lord’s declaration.
that will consume everything around it.’ ” [t]

Judgment against Sinful Kings

22 This is what the LORD says: “Go down to the palace of the king of Judah and announce this word there. 2 You are to say: Hear the word of the LORD, king of Judah, you who sit on the throne of David — you, your officers, and your people who enter these gates. 3 This is what the LORD says: Administer justice and righteousness. [a] Rescue the victim of robbery from the hand of his oppressor. [b] Don’t exploit or brutalize the foreigner, the fatherless, or the widow. Don’t shed innocent blood in this place. 4 For if you conscientiously carry out this word, then kings sitting on David’s throne will enter through the gates of this palace [c] riding on chariots and horses — they, their officers, and their people. 5 But if you do not obey these words, then I swear by Myself” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “that this house will become a ruin.” [d]

6 For this is what the LORD says concerning the house of the king of Judah:
You are like Gilead to Me,
or the summit of Lebanon,
but I will certainly turn you into a wilderness,
uninhabited cities.
7 I will appoint destroyers against you,
each with his weapons.
They will cut down the choicest of your cedars and throw them into the fire.
8 “Many nations will pass by this city and ask one another, ‘Why did the LORD do such a thing to this great city? ’ 9 They will answer, ‘Because they abandoned the covenant [e] of •Yahweh their God and worshiped and served other gods.’ ” [f]

A Message Concerning Shallum

10 Do not weep for the dead;
do not mourn for him.
Weep bitterly for the one [g] who has gone away,
for he will never return again
and see his native land.

11 For this is what the LORD says concerning Shallum [h] son of Josiah, king of Judah, who became king in place of his father Josiah: "He has left this place — he will never return here again, 12 but he will die in the place where they deported him, never seeing this land again."

A Message concerning Jehoiakim

13 Woe for the one who builds his palace through unrighteousness, [i] his upper rooms through injustice, who makes his fellow man serve without pay and will not give him his wages, [j] 14 who says, "I will build myself a massive palace, with spacious upper rooms."
He will cut windows [A] in it, and it will be paneled with cedar and painted with vermilion.
15 Are you a king because you excel in cedar?
Didn't your father eat and drink and administer justice and righteousness? [k]
Then it went well with him.
16 He took up the case of the poor and needy,
then it went well.
Is this not what it means to know Me?
17 But you have eyes and a heart for nothing This is the LORD's declaration.
except your own dishonest profit, shedding innocent blood
and committing extortion and oppression.

18 Therefore, this is what the LORD says concerning Jehoiakim [l] son of Josiah, king of Judah:

They will not mourn for him, saying,

“Woe, my brother! ” or “Woe, my sister! ”
They will not mourn for him, saying,
“Woe, lord! Woe, his majesty! ”
19 He will be buried like a donkey, [m] dragged off and thrown outside the gates of Jerusalem.
20 Go up to Lebanon and cry out;
raise your voice in Bashan;
cry out from Abarim, [n]
for all your lovers [B] have been crushed. [o]
21 I spoke to you when you were secure.
You said, “I will not listen.”
This has been your way since youth; [p] indeed, you have never listened to Me.
22 The wind will take charge of [C] all your shepherds, and your lovers [D] will go into captivity.
Then you will be ashamed and humiliated [q]
because of all your evil.
23 You residents of Lebanon,
nestled among the cedars,
how you will groan [r] when labor pains come on you,
agony like a woman in labor. [s]

A Message concerning Coniah

24 “As I live,” says the LORD, “though you, Coniah [t,] [u] son of Jehoiakim, the king of Judah, were a signet ring [v] on My right hand, I would tear you from it.
25 In fact, I will hand you over to those you dread, [w] who want to take your life, to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and the Chaldeans. 26 I will hurl you and the mother who gave birth [x] to you into another land, [y] where neither of you were born, and there you will both die. 27 They will never return to the land they long to return to.”

28 Is this man Coniah a despised, shattered pot, [z]
a jar no one wants?
Why are he and his descendants hurled out and cast into a land they have not known?
29 Earth, earth, earth,
hear the word of the LORD!

30 This is what the LORD says:
Record this man as childless, [a]
a man who will not be successful in his lifetime.
None of his descendants will succeed in sitting on the throne of David [b] or ruling again in Judah.

The LORD and His Sheep

23 “Woe to the shepherds who destroy and scatter the sheep of My pasture! ” [a] This is the LORD*’s declaration.* 2 “Therefore, this is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says about the shepherds who shepherd My people: You have scattered My flock, banished them, and have not attended to them. [b] I will attend to you because of your evil acts” — this is the LORD*’s declaration.* 3 “I will gather the remnant of My flock from all the lands where I have banished them, and I will return them to their grazing land. They will become fruitful and numerous. [c] 4 I will raise up shepherds over them who will shepherd them. [d]
They will no longer be afraid or dismayed, nor will any be missing.” This is the LORD’s declaration.

The Righteous Branch of David

5 “The days are coming” [e] — this is the LORD’s declaration —
“when I will raise up a Righteous Branch of David. [f]
He will reign wisely as king and administer justice and righteousness in the land. [g] 6 In His days Judah will be saved, and Israel will dwell securely. [h]
This is what He will be named:
•Yahweh Our Righteousness. [i]

7 “The days are coming” — the LORD’s declaration — “when it will no longer be said, ‘As the LORD lives who brought the Israelites from the land of Egypt,’ [j] 8 but, ‘As the LORD lives, who brought and led the descendants of the house of Israel from the land of the north and from all the other countries where I [k] had banished them.’ They will dwell once more in their own land.” [l]

False Prophets Condemned

9 Concerning the prophets:

My heart is broken within me, [m]
and all my bones tremble.
I have become like a drunkard,
like a man overcome by wine,
because of the LORD,
because of His holy words.
10 For the land is full of adulterers; [n]
the land mourns because of the curse,
and the grazing lands in the wilderness have dried up.
Their way of life [A] has become evil,
and their power is not rightly used 11 because both prophet and priest are ungodly, [o]
even in My house I have found their evil.
12 Therefore, their way will be to them like slippery paths in the gloom. [p]
They will be driven away and fall down there, for I will bring disaster on them,
the year of their punishment.
This is the LORD's declaration.

13 Among the prophets of Samaria
I saw something disgusting:
They prophesied by [q] •Baal
and led My people Israel astray. [r] 14 Among the prophets of Jerusalem also
I saw a horrible thing:
They commit adultery and walk in lies.
They strengthen the hands of evildoers,
and none turns his back on evil.
They are all like Sodom [s] to Me;
Jerusalem's residents are like Gomorrah.
This is the LORD's declaration.

15 Therefore, this is what the LORD of •Hosts says concerning the prophets:

I am about to feed them •wormwood and give them poisoned water to drink, [t] for from the prophets of Jerusalem

ungodliness [B] has spread throughout the land.

16 This is what the LORD of Hosts says: “Do not listen to the words of the prophets who prophesy to you. They are making you worthless. They speak visions from their own minds, not from the LORD’s mouth. 17 They keep on saying to those who despise Me, ‘The LORD has said: You will have peace.’ [u]
They have said to everyone who follows the stubbornness of his heart, ‘No harm will come to you.’ ”

18 For who has stood in the council [v] of the LORD to see and hear His word?
Who has paid attention to His word and obeyed?
19 Look, a storm from the LORD! [w] Wrath has gone out,
a whirling storm.
It will whirl about the heads of the wicked.
20 The LORD’s anger will not turn back until He has completely fulfilled the purposes of His heart.
In time to come you will understand it clearly. [x]

21 I did not send these prophets, [y]
yet they ran with a message.
I did not speak to them,
yet they prophesied.
22 If they had really stood in My council,
they would have enabled My people to hear My words and would have turned them back from their evil ways and their evil deeds.

23 “Am I a God who is only near” [z] — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and not a God who is far away? 24 Can a man hide himself in secret places where I cannot see him? ” [a] — the LORD’s declaration. “Do I not fill the heavens and the earth? ” [b] — the LORD’s declaration.
25 “I have heard what the prophets who prophesy a lie in My name have said, ‘I had a dream! I had a dream!’ 26 How long will this continue in the minds of the prophets prophesying lies, prophets of the deceit of their own minds?
27 Through their dreams that they tell one another, they plan to cause My people to forget My name as their fathers forgot My name through Baal worship. [c] 28 The prophet who has only a dream should recount the dream, but the one who has My word should speak My word truthfully, for what is straw compared to grain? ” — this is the LORD’s declaration. 29 “Is not My word like fire” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and like a hammer that pulverizes rock? 30 Therefore, take note! I am against the prophets” [d] — the LORD’s declaration — “who steal My words from each other. 31 I am against the prophets” — the LORD’s declaration — “who use their own tongues to make a declaration. 32 I am against those who prophesy false dreams” [e] — the LORD’s declaration — “telling them and leading My people astray with their falsehoods and their boasting. It was not I who sent or commanded them, and they are of no benefit at all [f] to these people” — this is the LORD’s declaration.

The Burden of the LORD 33 “Now when these people or a prophet or a priest asks you, ‘What is the burden of the LORD? ’ you will respond to them: What is the burden? I will throw you away” — this is the LORD’s declaration. 34 “As for the prophet, priest, or people who say, ‘The burden of the LORD,’ I will punish that man and his household. 35 This is what each man is to say to his friend and to his brother, ‘What has the LORD answered?’ or ‘What has the LORD spoken?’ 36 But no longer refer to [C] the burden of the LORD, for each man’s word becomes his burden and you pervert the words of the living God, the LORD of Hosts, our God. 37 You must say to the prophet: What has the LORD answered you? and What has the LORD spoken? 38 But if you say, ‘The burden of the LORD,’ then this is what the LORD says: Because you have said, ‘The burden of the LORD,’ and I specifically told you not to say, ‘The burden of the LORD,’ 39 I will surely forget you [g] and throw away from My presence both you and the city that I gave you and your fathers. 40 I will bring on you everlasting shame and humiliation [h] that will never be forgotten.”

The Good and the Bad Figs

24 After Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had deported Jeconiah [a] son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, the officials of Judah, and the craftsmen and metalsmiths [b] from Jerusalem and had brought them to Babylon, the LORD showed me two baskets of figs [c] placed before the temple of the LORD. 2 One basket contained very good figs, like early figs, [d] but the other basket contained very bad figs, so bad they were inedible. 3 The LORD said to me, "What do you see, Jeremiah? " I said, "Figs! The good figs are very good, but the bad figs are extremely bad, so bad they are inedible."

4 The word of the LORD came to me: 5 "This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: Like these good figs, so I regard as good the exiles from Judah I sent away from this place to the land of the Chaldeans. 6 I will keep My eyes on them for their good and will return them to this land. I will build them up and not demolish them; I will plant them and not uproot them. [e] 7 I will give them a heart to know Me, [f] that I am •Yahweh . They will be My people, and I will be their God because they will return to Me with all their heart. [g]

8 "But as for the bad figs, so bad they are inedible, [h] this is what the LORD says: in this way I will deal with king Zedekiah of Judah, his officials, and the remnant of Jerusalem — those remaining in this land and those living in the land of Egypt. [i] 9 I will make them an object of horror [j] and disaster to all the kingdoms of the earth, a disgrace, an object of scorn, ridicule, [k] and cursing, wherever I have banished them. 10 I will send the sword, famine, and plague [l] against them until they have perished from the land I gave to them and their ancestors."

The Seventy-Year Exile

25 This is the word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim [a] son of Josiah, king of Judah (which was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon). 2 The prophet Jeremiah spoke concerning all the people of Judah and all the residents of Jerusalem as follows: 3 "From the thirteenth year of Josiah son of Amon, [b] king of Judah, until this very day — 23 years — the word of the LORD has come to me, and I have spoken to you time and time again, [A, c] but you have not obeyed. 4 The LORD sent all His servants the prophets to you time and time again, [B] but you have not obeyed or even paid attention. [C, d] 5 He announced, 'Turn, each of you, from your [D] evil way of life and from your evil deeds. [e] Live in the land the LORD gave to you and your ancestors long ago and forever. 6 Do not follow other gods to serve them and to worship them, [f] and do not provoke Me to anger by the work of your hands. [g] Then I will do you no harm.

7 " 'But you would not obey Me' — this is the LORD's declaration — 'in order that you might provoke Me to anger by the work of your hands and bring disaster on yourselves.'

8 "Therefore, this is what the LORD of •Hosts says: 'Because you have not obeyed My words, 9 I am going to send for all the families of the north' [h]
— this is the LORD's declaration — 'and send for My servant [i] Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and I will bring them against this land, against its residents, and against all these surrounding nations, and I will •completely destroy them and make them a desolation, [j] a derision, and ruins forever. 10 I will eliminate the sound of joy and gladness from them — the voice of the groom and the bride, [k]
the sound of the millstones and the light of the lamp. 11 This whole land will become a desolate ruin, and these nations will serve the king of Babylon for 70 years. [l] 12 When the 70 years are completed, I will punish the king of Babylon and that nation' — this is the LORD's declaration — 'the land of the Chaldeans, for their •guilt , and I will make it a ruin forever. [m] 13 I will bring on that land all My words I have spoken against it, all that is written in this book that Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations. 14 For many nations and great kings will enslave them, and I will repay them according to their deeds [n] and the work of their hands.' "

The Cup of God's Wrath

15 This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, said to me: "Take this cup of the wine of wrath from My hand and make all the nations I am sending you to, drink from it. [o] 16 They will drink, stagger, [E] and go out of their minds because of the sword I am sending among them.”

17 So I took the cup from the Lord’s hand and made all the nations drink from it, everyone the Lord sent me to. 18 These included:

Jerusalem and the other cities of Judah, its kings and its officials, to make them a desolate ruin, an object of scorn and cursing — as it is today;
19 Pharaoh king of Egypt, his officers, his leaders, all his people, 20 and all the mixed peoples;
all the kings of the land of Uz;
all the kings of the land of the Philistines — Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod;
21 Edom, Moab, and the Ammonites;
22 all the kings of Tyre,
all the kings of Sidon,
and the kings of the coastlands across the sea;
23 Dedan, Tema, Buz, and all those who shave their temples; F, p
24 all the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the mixed peoples who have settled in the desert;
25 all the kings of Zimri,
all the kings of Elam,
and all the kings of Media;
26 all the kings of the north, both near and far from one another;
that is, all the kingdoms of the world which are on the face of the earth.
Finally, the king of Sheshach q will drink after them.

27 “Then you are to say to them: This is what the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: Drink, r get drunk, and vomit. Fall down and never get up again, as a result of the sword I am sending among you. 28 If G they refuse to take the cup from you and drink, you are to say to them: This is what the Lord of Hosts says:
You must drink! 29 For I am already bringing disaster on the city that bears My name, s so how could you possibly go unpunished? You will not go unpunished, for I am summoning a sword against all the inhabitants of the earth” — this is the declaration of the Lord of Hosts. t

Judgment on the Whole World

30 “As for you, you are to prophesy all these things to them, and say to them:
The LORD roars from heaven;
He raises His voice from His holy dwelling. [u]
He roars loudly over His grazing land;
He calls out with a shout, like those who tread grapes,
against all the inhabitants of the earth.
31 The tumult reaches to the ends of the earth
because the LORD brings a case against [v] the nations.
He enters into judgment with all flesh.
As for the wicked, He hands them over to the sword —
32 “This is what the LORD of Hosts says: this is the LORD’s declaration.
Pay attention! Disaster spreads from nation to nation.
A great storm is stirred up from the ends of the earth.” [w]
33 Those slain by the LORD [x] on that day will be spread from one end of the earth to the other. They will not be mourned, [y] gathered, or buried. They will be like manure on the surface of the ground.

34 Wail, you shepherds, and cry out.
Roll in the dust, [z, a] you leaders of the flock.
Because the days of your slaughter have come,
you will fall and become shattered like a precious vase.
35 Flight will be impossible for the shepherds,
and escape, for the leaders of the flock.
36 Hear the sound of the shepherds’ cry,
the wail of the leaders of the flock,
for the LORD is destroying their pasture.
37 Peaceful grazing land will become lifeless because of the LORD’s burning anger. [b] 38 He has left His den like a lion, for their land has become a desolation because of the sword [c] of the oppressor, [d]
because of His burning anger.

Jeremiah's Speech in the Temple

26 At the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim [a] son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came from the LORD: 2 “This is what the LORD says: Stand in the courtyard of the LORD’s temple and speak all the words I have commanded you to speak to all Judah’s cities that are coming to worship there. Do not hold back a word. [b] 3 Perhaps they will listen and return — each from his evil way of life — so that I might relent [c] concerning the disaster that I plan to do to them because of the evil of their deeds. 4 You are to say to them: This is what the LORD says: If you do not listen to Me by living according to My instruction that I set before you [d] 5 and by listening to the words of My servants the prophets [e] I have been sending you time and time again, [A] though you did not listen, 6 I will make this temple like Shiloh. [f] I will make this city an object of cursing for all the nations of the earth.”

Jeremiah Seized

7 The priests, the prophets, and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the temple of the LORD. 8 He finished the address the LORD had commanded him to deliver to all the people. Then the priests, the prophets, and all the people took hold of him, yelling, “You must surely die! 9 How dare you prophesy in the name of •Yahweh , ‘This temple will become like Shiloh and this city will become an uninhabited ruin’! ” Then all the people assembled against Jeremiah at the LORD’s temple.

10 When the officials of Judah heard these things, they went from the king’s palace to the LORD’s temple and sat at the entrance of the New Gate. g, h 11 Then the priests and prophets said to the officials and all the people, “This man deserves the death sentence because he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your own ears.” i

Jeremiah’s Defense

12 Then Jeremiah said to all the officials and the people, “The LORD sent me to prophesy all the words that you have heard against this temple and city. 13 So now, correct your ways and deeds j and obey the voice of the LORD your God so that He might relent concerning the disaster that He warned about. 14 As for me, here I am in your hands; do to me what you think is good and right. 15 But know for certain that if you put me to death, you will bring innocent blood k on yourselves, on this city, and on its residents, for it is certain the LORD has sent me to speak all these things directly to you.”

Jeremiah Released

16 Then the officials and all the people told the priests and prophets, “This man doesn’t deserve the death sentence, for he has spoken to us in the name of Yahweh our God! ”

17 Some of the elders of the land stood up [l] and said to all the assembled people, 18 “Micah the Moreshite [m] prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah [n] and said to all the people of Judah, ‘This is what the LORD of •Hosts says:

•Zion will be plowed like a field,
Jerusalem will become ruins,
and the temple mount a forested hill.’ [o]

19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all the people of Judah put him to death? Did he not •fear the LORD and plead for the LORD’s favor, [B, p] and did not the LORD relent concerning the disaster He had pronounced against them? [q] We are about to bring great harm on ourselves! ”

The Prophet Uriah

20 Another man was also prophesying in the name of Yahweh — Uriah son of Shemaiah from Kiriath-jearim. [r] He prophesied against this city and against this land in words like all those of Jeremiah. 21 King Jehoiakim, all his warriors, and all the officials heard his words, and the king tried to put him to death. When Uriah heard, he fled in fear and went to Egypt. 22 But King Jehoiakim sent men to Egypt: Elnathan son of Achbor [s] and certain other men with him went to Egypt. 23 They brought Uriah out of Egypt and took him to King Jehoiakim, who executed him with the sword and threw his corpse into the burial place of the common people. C

24 But Ahikam [t] son of Shaphan supported Jeremiah, so he was not handed over to the people to be put to death.

The Yoke of Babylon

27 At the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah [a] son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD: [b] 2 "This is what the LORD said to me: Make chains and yoke bars [c] for yourself and put them on your neck. 3 Send word to the king of Edom, the king of Moab, the king of the Ammonites, the king of Tyre, and the king of Sidon [d] through messengers who are coming to Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem. 4 Command them to go to their masters, saying: This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: This is what you must say to your masters: 5 By My great strength and outstretched arm, [e] I made the earth, [f] and the people, and animals on the face of the earth. I give it to anyone I please. [A, g] 6 So now I have placed all these lands under the authority of My servant [h] Nebuchadnezzar, [i] king of Babylon. I have even given him the wild animals to serve him. 7 All nations will serve him, his son, and his grandson until the time for his own land comes, and then many nations and great kings will enslave him. [j]

8 "As for the nation or kingdom that does not serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and does not place its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation I will punish by sword, famine, and plague" — this is the LORD's declaration — "until through him I have destroyed it. 9 But as for you, do not listen to your prophets, diviners, [k] dreamers, fortune-tellers, [l] or sorcerers [m] who say to you, 'Don't serve the king of Babylon! ' 10 for they prophesy a lie to you so that you will be removed from your land. I will banish you, and you will perish. 11 But as for the nation that will put its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him, I will leave it in its own land, and that nation will cultivate [B] it and reside in it." This is the LORD's declaration.

Warning to Zedekiah

12 I spoke to Zedekiah king of Judah [n] in the same way: “Put your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, serve him and his people, and live!
13 Why should you and your people die [o] by the sword, famine, or plague as the LORD has threatened against any nation that does not serve the king of Babylon?
14 Do not listen to the words of the prophets who are telling you, ‘You must not serve the king of Babylon,’ for they are prophesying a lie to you. [p] 15 ‘I have not sent them’ — this is the LORD’s declaration — ‘and they are prophesying falsely in My name; therefore, I will banish you, and you will perish — you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.’ ”

16 Then I spoke to the priests and all these people, saying, “This is what the LORD says: ‘Do not listen to the words of your prophets. They are prophesying to you, claiming, “Look, very soon now the articles of the LORD’s temple will be brought back from Babylon.” [q] They are prophesying a lie to you. 17 Do not listen to them. Serve the king of Babylon and live! Why should this city become a ruin? [r] 18 If they are indeed prophets and if the word of the LORD is with them, let them intercede with the LORD of Hosts not to let the articles that remain in the LORD’s temple, in the palace of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem go to Babylon.’ 19 For this is what the LORD of Hosts says about the pillars, the sea, the water carts, [s] and the rest of the articles that still remain in this city, 20 those Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon did not take when he deported Jeconiah [t] son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, from Jerusalem to Babylon along with all the nobles of Judah [u] and Jerusalem. 21 Yes, this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says about the articles that remain in the temple of the LORD, in the palace of the king of Judah, and in Jerusalem: 22 ‘They will be brought to Babylon and will remain there until I attend to them again.’ [v] This is the LORD’s declaration. ‘Then I will bring them up and restore them to this place.’ ” [w]

Hananiah's False Prophecy

28 In that same year, at the beginning of the reign of King Zedekiah of Judah, [a] in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Hananiah son of Azzur from Gibeon [b] said to me in the temple of the LORD in the presence of the priests and all the people, [2] "This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: 'I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. [c] [3] Within two years I will restore to this place all the articles of the LORD*'s temple* [d] that King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon took from here and transported to Babylon. [4] And I will restore to this place Jeconiah [e] son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and all the exiles from Judah [f] who went to Babylon' — this is the LORD*'s* declaration — 'for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.' "

Jeremiah's Response to Hananiah [5] The prophet Jeremiah replied to the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests and all the people who were standing in the temple of the LORD. [6] The prophet Jeremiah said, "•Amen ! May the LORD [g] do so. May the LORD make the words you have prophesied come true and may He restore the articles of the LORD*'s temple and all the exiles from Babylon to this* place! [7] Only listen to this message I am speaking in your hearing and in the hearing of all the people. [8] The prophets who preceded you and me from ancient times prophesied war, disaster, [h] and plague against many lands and great kingdoms. [9] As for the prophet who prophesies peace — only when the word of the prophet comes true will the prophet be recognized as one the LORD has truly sent." [i]

Hananiah Breaks Jeremiah's Yoke [10] The prophet Hananiah then took the yoke bar from the neck of Jeremiah the prophet and broke it. [j] [11] In the presence of all the people Hananiah proclaimed, "This is what the LORD says: 'In this way, within two years I will break the yoke of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon from the neck of all the nations.' " Jeremiah the prophet then went on his way.

The LORD*'s Word against Hananiah* [12] The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah after Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke bar from the neck of Jeremiah the prophet: [13] "Go say to Hananiah: This is what the LORD says, 'You broke a wooden yoke bar, but in its place you will make an iron yoke bar.' [14] For this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says, 'I have put an iron yoke on the neck of all these nations that they might serve King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, [k] and they will serve him. [l] I have also put the wild animals under him.' " [m]

15 The prophet Jeremiah said to the prophet Hananiah, "Listen, Hananiah! The LORD did not send you, but you have led these people to trust in a lie. [n] 16 Therefore, this is what the LORD says: ‘I am about to send you off the face of the earth. You will die this year because you have spoken rebellion against the LORD.’ ” [o] 17 And the prophet Hananiah died that year in the seventh month.

Jeremiah's Letter to the Exiles

29 This is the text of the letter [a] that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem to the rest of the elders of the exiles, the priests, the prophets, and all the people Nebuchadnezzar [b] had deported from Jerusalem to Babylon. 2
This was after King Jeconiah, [c,] [d] the queen mother, the court officials, the officials of Judah and Jerusalem, the craftsmen, and the metalsmiths had left Jerusalem. 3 The letter was sent by Elasah son of Shaphan and Gemariah son of Hilkiah [e] whom Zedekiah king of Judah had sent to Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. The letter stated:

4 This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says to all the exiles I deported from Jerusalem to Babylon: 5 "Build houses and live in them. [f] Plant gardens and eat their produce. 6 Take wives and have sons and daughters.
Take wives for your sons and give your daughters to men in marriage so that they may bear sons and daughters. Multiply there; do not decrease. 7 Seek the welfare of the city I have deported you to. Pray to the LORD on its behalf, [g] for when it has prosperity, you will prosper."

8 For this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: "Don't let your prophets who are among you [h] and your diviners deceive you, [i] and don't listen to the dreams you elicit from them, 9 for they are prophesying falsely to you in My name. I have not sent them." [j] This is the LORD's declaration.

10 For this is what the LORD says: "When 70 years for Babylon are complete, [k] I will attend to you and will confirm My promise concerning you to restore you to this place. 11 For I know the plans I have for you" [l] — this is the LORD's declaration — "plans for your welfare, not for disaster, to give you a future and a hope. 12 You will call to Me and come and pray to Me, and I will listen to you. [m] 13 You will seek Me [n] and find Me when you search for Me with all your heart. 14 I will be found by you" — this is the LORD's declaration — "and I will restore your fortunes [A,] [o] and gather you from all the nations and places where I banished you" — this is the LORD's declaration. "I will restore you to the place I deported you from." [p]

15 You have said, "The LORD has raised up prophets for us in Babylon! " 16 But this is what the LORD says concerning the king sitting on David's throne and concerning all the people living in this city — that is, concerning your brothers who did not go with you into exile. 17 This is what the LORD of Hosts says: “I am about to send against them sword, famine, and plague [q] and will make them like rotten figs that are inedible because they are so bad. 18 I will pursue them with sword, famine, and plague. I will make them a horror to all the kingdoms of the earth — a curse and a desolation, an object of scorn and a disgrace among all the nations where I have banished them. [r] 19 I will do this because they have not listened to My words” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “that I sent to them with My servants the prophets time and time again. [B, s] And you too have not listened.” This is the LORD’s declaration.

20 Hear the word of the LORD, all you exiles I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon. [t] 21 This is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says to Ahab son of Kolaiah and to Zedekiah son of Maaseiah, the ones prophesying a lie to you in My name: [u] “I am about to hand them over to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and he will kill them before your very eyes. 22 Based on what happens to them, all the exiles of Judah who are in Babylon will create a curse [v] that says, ‘May the LORD make you like Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire! ’ [w] 23 because they have committed an outrage [x] in Israel by committing adultery with their neighbors’ wives and have spoken a lie in My name, which I did not command them. I am He who knows, and I am a witness.” This is the LORD’s declaration.

24 To Shemaiah the Nehelamite you are to say, 25 “This is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: You [C] in your own name have sent out letters to all the people of Jerusalem, to the priest Zephaniah [y] son of Maaseiah, and to all the priests, saying: 26 ‘The LORD has appointed you priest in place of Jehoiada the priest to be the chief officer [z] in the temple of the LORD, responsible for every madman [a] who acts like a prophet. You must confine him in the stocks [b] and an iron collar. 27 So now, why have you not rebuked Jeremiah of Anathoth who has been acting like a prophet among you? [c] 28 For he has sent word to us in Babylon, claiming, “The exile will be long. Build houses and settle down. Plant gardens and eat their produce.” ’ ” [d]

29 Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the hearing of Jeremiah the prophet.

A Message about Shemaiah

30 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 31 “Send a message to all the exiles, saying: This is what the LORD says concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite.
Because Shemaiah prophesied to you, though I did not send him, and made you trust a lie, [e] 32 this is what the LORD says: I am about to punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite and his descendants. There will not be even one of his descendants living among these people, [f] nor will any ever see the good that I will bring to My people” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “for he has preached rebellion against the LORD.” [g]

Restoration from Captivity

30 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD. 2 This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: “Write down on a scroll all the words that I have spoken to you, [a] 3 for the days are certainly coming” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “when I will restore the fortunes [A] of My people Israel and Judah” [b] — the LORD’s declaration. “I will restore them to the land I gave to their ancestors and they will possess it.”

4 These are the words the LORD spoke to Israel and Judah. 5 Yes, this is what
the LORD says:

We have heard a cry of terror,
of dread — there is no peace.
6 Ask and see
whether a male can give birth.
Why then do I see every man with his hands on his stomach like a woman in labor and every face turned pale?
7 How awful that day will be! [c]
There will be none like it! [d]
It will be a time of trouble for Jacob, but he will be delivered out of it.

8 “On that day” — this is the declaration of the LORD of •Hosts — “I will break his yoke from your neck [e] and tear off your chains [f] so strangers will never again enslave him. [g] 9 They will serve the LORD their God and I will raise up David their king for them.” [h]

10 As for you, My servant Jacob, [i] do not be afraid —
and do not be dismayed, Israel, this is the LORD’s declaration — for without fail I will save you from far away, your descendants, from the land of their captivity!
Jacob will return and have calm and quiet with no one to frighten him. [j] 11 For I will be with you — to save you! [k] this is the LORD’s declaration —
I will bring destruction on all the nations where I have scattered you;
however, I will not bring destruction on you.
I will discipline you justly,
and I will by no means leave you unpunished. [l]

Healing Zion's Wounds

12 For this is what the LORD says:
Your injury is incurable;
your wound most severe. [m]
13 No one takes up the case for your sores. [n]
There is no healing for you.
14 All your lovers have forgotten you;
they no longer look for you,
for I have struck you as an enemy would,
with the discipline [o] of someone cruel, [p]
because of your enormous •guilt
and your innumerable sins.
15 Why do you cry out about your injury?
Your pain has no cure!
I have done these things to you
because of your enormous guilt
and your innumerable sins.
16 Nevertheless, all who devoured you will be devoured, [q] and all your adversaries — all of them — will go off into exile.
Those who plunder you will be plundered,
and all who raid you will be raided.
17 But I will bring you health [r] and will heal you of your wounds — for they call you Outcast, this is the LORD's declaration — •Zion whom no one cares about.

Restoration of the Land

18 This is what the LORD says:
I will certainly restore the fortunes [B] of Jacob's tents [s] and show compassion on his dwellings.
Every city will be rebuilt on its mound;
every citadel will stand on its proper site.
19 Thanksgiving will come out of them,
a sound of celebration.
I will multiply them, and they will not decrease; [t]
I will honor them, and they will not be insignificant.
20 His children will be as in past days;
his congregation will be established in My presence.
I will punish all his oppressors. [u] 21 Jacob's leader will be one of them;
his ruler will issue from him.
I will invite him to Me, and he will approach Me, [v]
for who would otherwise risk his life to approach Me?
22 You will be My people, This is the LORD's declaration.
and I will be your God. [w]

The Wrath of God

23 Look, a storm from the LORD! [x]
Wrath has gone out,
a churning storm.
It will whirl about the heads of the wicked.
24 The LORD's burning anger will not turn back
until He has completely fulfilled the purposes of His heart.
In time to come you will understand it. [y]

God's Relationship with His People

31 “At that time” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “I will be the God of all the families of Israel, [a] and they will be My people.”
2 This is what the LORD says:
They found favor in the wilderness [b] —
the people who survived the sword.
When Israel went to find rest,
3 the LORD appeared to him [c] from far away.
I have loved you with an everlasting love;
therefore, I have continued to extend faithful love to you. [d] 4 Again I will build you so that you will be rebuilt, Virgin Israel.
You will take up your tambourines again [e]
and go out in joyful dancing.
5 You will plant vineyards again on the mountains of Samaria;
the planters will plant and will enjoy the fruit. [f] 6 For there will be a day when watchmen will call out in the hill country of Ephraim, “Get up, let’s go up to •Zion , [g] to •Yahweh our God! ”

God’s People Brought Home

7 For this is what the LORD says:
Sing with joy for Jacob;
shout for the chief of the nations!
Proclaim, praise, and say,
“LORD, save Your people, [h]
the remnant of Israel! ”
8 Watch! I am going to bring them from the northern land.
I will gather them from remote regions of the earth [i] —
the blind and the lame will be with them, along with those who are pregnant and those about to give birth.
They will return here as a great assembly! [j] 9 They will come weeping,
but I will bring them back with consolation. [k, l]
I will lead them to •wadis filled with water by a smooth way where they will not stumble, [m]

for I am Israel’s Father, and Ephraim is My firstborn.
10 Nations, hear the word of the Lord,
and tell it among the far off coastlands! [n]
Say: The One who scattered Israel will gather him.
He will watch over him as a shepherd guards his flock, 11 for the Lord has ransomed Jacob and redeemed him from the power of one stronger than he. [o] 12 They will come and shout for joy on the heights of Zion;
they will be radiant with joy [p]
because of [q] the Lord’s goodness, because of the grain, the new wine, the fresh oil, [r]
and because of the young of the flocks and herds.
Their life will be like an irrigated garden,
and they will no longer grow weak from hunger.
13 Then the young woman will rejoice with dancing,
while young and old men rejoice together.
I will turn their mourning into joy, [s]
give them consolation,
and bring happiness out of grief.
14 I will refresh the priests with an abundance, [A, t]
and My people will be satisfied with My goodness.
This is the Lord’s declaration.

Lament Turned to Joy

15 This is what the LORD says:
A voice was heard in Ramah,
a lament with bitter weeping —
Rachel weeping for her children, refusing to be comforted for her children because they are no more. [u]

16 This is what the LORD says:
Keep your voice from weeping and your eyes from tears,
for the reward for your work will come — and your children will return from the this is the LORD's declaration — enemy's land.

17 There is hope for your future [v] — and your children will return to their own this is the LORD's declaration — territory.

18 I have heard Ephraim moaning,
"You disciplined me, and I have been disciplined like an untrained calf.
Restore me, and I will return,
for you, LORD, are my God. [w]

19 After I returned, I repented;
After I was instructed, I struck my thigh in grief. [x]
I was ashamed and humiliated because I bore the disgrace of my youth."

20 Isn't Ephraim a precious son to Me, a delightful child?
Whenever I speak against him,
I certainly still think about him.
Therefore, My inner being yearns for him;
I will truly have compassion on him.
This is the LORD's declaration.

Repentance and Restoration

21 Set up road markers [y] for yourself; establish signposts!
Keep the highway in mind,
the way you have traveled.
Return, Virgin Israel!
Return to these cities of yours.
22 How long will you turn here and there, faithless daughter? [z]
For the LORD creates something new in the land [B] — a female [C] will shelter [D] a man.

23 This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: "When I restore their fortunes, [E] they will once again speak this word in the land of Judah and in its cities, 'May the LORD bless you, righteous settlement, [a] holy mountain.' [b]
24 Judah and all its cities will live in it together — also farmers and those who move [c] with the flocks — 25 for I satisfy the thirsty person and feed all those who are weak."
26 At this I awoke and looked around. My sleep had been most pleasant to me.
27 "The days are coming" — this is the LORD's declaration — "when I will sow the house of Israel [d] and the house of Judah with the seed of man and the seed of beast. 28 Just as I watched over them to uproot and to tear them down, to demolish and to destroy, and to cause disaster, so will I be attentive to build and to plant them," [e] says the LORD. 29 "In those days, it will never again be said:

The fathers have eaten sour grapes,
and the children's teeth are set on edge. [f]

30 Rather, each will die for his own wrongdoing. [g] Anyone who eats sour grapes — his own teeth will be set on edge.

The New Covenant

31 “Look, the days are coming” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “when I will make a new covenant [h] with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. 32 This one will not be like the covenant I made with their ancestors when I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt — a covenant they broke even though I had married them” [i] — the LORD’s declaration. 33 “Instead, this is the covenant I will make with the house of Israel after those days” — the LORD’s declaration. “I will put My teaching within them and write it on their hearts. I will be their God, and they will be My people. 34 No longer will one teach his neighbor or his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ [j] for they will all know Me, from the least to the greatest of them” — this is the LORD’s declaration. “For I will forgive their wrongdoing [k] and never again remember their sin.” [l]

35 This is what the LORD says:
The One who gives the sun for light by day,
the fixed order of moon and stars for light by night,
who stirs up the sea and makes its waves roar [m] —
Yahweh of Hosts is His name:
36 If this fixed order departs from My presence — then also Israel’s descendants will cease this is the LORD’s declaration — to be a nation before Me forever. [n]
37 This is what the LORD says:
If the heavens above can be measured and the foundations of the earth below explored,
I will reject all of Israel’s descendants
because of all they have done —

38 “Look, the days are coming” — the LORD’s this is the LORD’s declaration. declaration — “when the city [o] from the Tower of Hananel [p] to the Corner Gate [q] will be rebuilt for the LORD. 39 A measuring line will once again stretch out straight to the hill of Gareb [r] and then turn toward Goah. 40 The whole valley — the corpses, the ashes, and all the fields as far as the Kidron Valley [s] to the corner of the Horse Gate [t] to the east — will be holy to the LORD. It will never be uprooted or demolished again.”

Jeremiah's Land Purchase

32 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the tenth year of Zedekiah [a] king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar. [b] [2] At that time, the army of the king of Babylon was besieging
Jerusalem, and Jeremiah the prophet was imprisoned in the guard's courtyard [c] in the palace of the king of Judah. [3] Zedekiah king of Judah had imprisoned him, saying: "Why are you prophesying, 'This is what the LORD says: Look, I am about to hand this city over to Babylon's king, and he will capture it. [4] Zedekiah king of Judah will not escape from the Chaldeans; indeed, he will certainly be handed over to Babylon's king. They will speak face to face [A] and meet eye to eye. [d] [5] He will take Zedekiah to Babylon where he will stay until I attend to him' — this is the LORD*'s declaration. 'You will fight the Chaldeans, but you will* not succeed'? " [e]

[6] Jeremiah replied, "The word of the LORD came to me: [7] Watch! Hanamel, the son of your uncle Shallum, is coming to you to say, 'Buy my field in Anathoth [f] for yourself, for you own the right of redemption [g] to buy it.'

[8] "Then my cousin Hanamel came to the guard's courtyard as the LORD had said and urged me, 'Please buy my field in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, for you own the right of inheritance and redemption. Buy it for yourself.' Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD. [9] So I bought the field in Anathoth from my cousin Hanamel, and I weighed out to him the money [h] — 17 •shekels [i] of silver. [10] I recorded it on a scroll, [j] sealed it, called in witnesses, and weighed out the silver in the scales. [11] I took the purchase agreement — the sealed copy with its terms and conditions and the open copy — [12] and gave the purchase agreement to Baruch [k] son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah. I did this in the sight of my cousin [l] Hanamel, the witnesses who were signing the purchase agreement, and all the Judeans sitting in the guard's courtyard.

[13] "I instructed Baruch in their sight, [14] 'This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: Take these scrolls — this purchase agreement with the sealed copy and this open copy — and put them in an earthen storage jar so they will last a long time. [15] For this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: Houses, fields, and vineyards will again be bought in this land.' [m]

[16] "After I had given the purchase agreement to Baruch, son of Neriah, I prayed to the LORD: [17] Oh, Lord GOD! You Yourself made the heavens and earth [n] by Your great power [o] and with Your outstretched arm. Nothing is too difficult for You! [18] You show faithful love to thousands but lay the fathers' sins on their sons' laps after them, [p] great and mighty God [q] whose name is •Yahweh of Hosts, 19 the One great in counsel and mighty in deed, whose eyes are on all the ways of the sons of men in order to give to each person according to his ways and the result of his deeds. [r] 20 You performed signs and wonders in the land of Egypt [s] and do so to this very day both in Israel and among mankind.

You made a name [t] for Yourself, as is the case today. 21 You brought Your people Israel out of Egypt with signs and wonders, with a strong hand and an outstretched arm, and with great terror. [u] 22 You gave them this land You swore to give to their ancestors, a land flowing with milk and honey. [v] 23 They entered and possessed it, but they did not obey Your voice or live according to Your instructions. [w] They failed to perform all You commanded them to do, [x] and so You have brought all this disaster on them. 24 Look! Siege ramps [y] have come against the city to capture it, and the city, as a result of the sword, famine, and plague, has been handed over to the Chaldeans who are fighting against it. What You have spoken has happened. Look, You can see it! 25 Yet You, Lord GOD, have said to me: Buy the field with silver and call in witnesses — even though the city has been handed over to the Chaldeans! ”

26 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 27 “Look, I am Yahweh, the God of all flesh. [z] Is anything too difficult for Me? 28 Therefore, this is what the LORD says: I am about to hand this city over to the Chaldeans, [a] to Babylon’s king Nebuchadnezzar, and he will capture it. 29 The Chaldeans who are going to fight against this city will come, set this city on fire, and burn it along with the houses where incense has been burned to •Baal on their rooftops and where •drink offerings have been poured out to other gods to provoke Me to anger. [b]
30 From their youth, the Israelites and Judeans have done nothing but what is evil in My sight! They have done nothing but provoke Me to anger by the work of their hands” [c] — this is the LORD’s declaration — 31 “for this city has caused My wrath and fury from the day it was built until now. I will therefore remove it from My presence, [d] 32 because of all the evil the Israelites and Judeans have done to provoke Me to anger — they, their kings, [e] their officials, their priests, and their prophets, the men of Judah, and the residents of Jerusalem. 33 They have turned their backs to Me and not their faces. Though I taught them time and time again, [B,] [f] they do not listen and receive discipline. 34 They have placed their detestable things [g] in the house that is called by My name and have defiled
it. 35 They have built the •high places of Baal in the Valley of Hinnom to make their sons and daughters pass through the fire to •Molech [h] — something I had not commanded them. I had never entertained the thought [C] that they do this detestable act causing Judah to sin!

36 “Now therefore, this is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says to this city about which you said, ‘It has been handed over to Babylon’s king through sword, famine, and plague’: 37 I am about to gather them from all the lands where I have banished them in My anger, rage and great wrath, and I will return them to this place and make them live in safety. [i] 38 They will be My people, and I will be their God. 39 I will give them one heart [j] and one way so that for their good and for the good of their descendants after them, they will •fear Me always.
40 “I will make an everlasting covenant with them: [k] I will never turn away from doing good to them, and I will put fear of Me in their hearts so they will never again turn away from Me. 41 I will take delight in them to do what is good for them, and with all My heart and mind I will faithfully plant them in this land. [l]
42 “For this is what the LORD says: Just as I have brought all this great disaster on these people, [m] so am I about to bring on them all the good I am promising them. 43 Fields will be bought in this land about which you are saying, [n] ‘It’s a desolation [o] without man or beast; it has been handed over to the Chaldeans! ’ 44 Fields will be purchased with silver, the transaction written on a scroll and sealed, [p] and witnesses will be called on in the land of Benjamin, [q] in the areas surrounding Jerusalem, and in Judah’s cities — the cities of the hill country, the cities of the Judean foothills, and the cities of the •Negev — because I will restore their fortunes.” [D]
This is the LORD’s declaration.

Israel's Restoration

33 While he was still confined in the guard's courtyard, [a] the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah a second time: 2 "The LORD who made the earth, [b] the LORD who forms it to establish it, •Yahweh is His name, [c] says this: 3 Call to Me and I will answer you [d] and tell you great and incomprehensible things you do not know. [e] 4 For this is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says concerning the houses of this city and the palaces of Judah's kings, the ones torn down for defense against the siege ramps and the sword: [f] 5 The people coming to fight the Chaldeans will fill the houses with the corpses of their own men that I strike down in My wrath and rage. I have hidden My face [g] from this city because of all their evil. 6 Yet I will certainly bring health [h] and healing to it and will indeed heal them. I will let them experience the abundance [A] of peace and truth.
[i] 7 I will restore the fortunes [B] of Judah and of Israel and will rebuild them as in former times. [j] 8 I will purify them from all the wrongs they have committed against Me, [k] and I will forgive all the wrongs they have committed against Me, rebelling against Me. 9 This city will bear on My behalf a name of joy, praise, and glory [l] before all the nations of the earth, who will hear of all the good I will do for them. They will tremble with awe because of all the good and all the peace [m] I will bring about for them.

10 "This is what the LORD says: In this place, which you say is a ruin, [n] without man or beast — that is, in Judah's cities and Jerusalem's streets that are a desolation without man, without inhabitant, and without beast — there will be heard again 11 a sound of joy and gladness, the voice of the groom and the bride, [o] and the voice of those saying,

Praise the LORD of •Hosts ,
for the LORD is good;
His faithful love endures forever as they bring thank offerings to the temple of the LORD. For I will restore the fortunes [C] of the land as in former times, says the LORD.

12 "This is what the LORD of Hosts says: In this desolate place — without man or beast — and in all its cities there will once more be a grazing land where shepherds may rest flocks. [p] 13 The flocks will again pass under the hands of the one who counts them [q] in the cities of the hill country, [r] the cities of the Judean foothills, the cities of the •Negev , the land of Benjamin — the cities surrounding Jerusalem and Judah's cities, says the LORD.

God's Covenant with David

14 “Look, the days are coming” —
this is the LORD’s declaration —
“when I will fulfill the good promises that I have spoken concerning the house of Israel and the house of Judah. [s]
15 In those days and at that time
I will cause a Righteous Branch [t]
to sprout up for David, and He will administer justice and righteousness in the land.
16 In those days Judah will be saved, and Jerusalem will dwell securely, [u]
and this is what she will be named:
Yahweh Our Righteousness.

17 For this is what the LORD says: David will never fail to have a man sitting on the throne of the house of Israel. [v] 18 The Levitical priests will never fail to have a man always before Me to offer •burnt offerings, to burn •grain offerings, and to make sacrifices.” [w]

19 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 20 “This is what the LORD says: If you can break My covenant with the day and My covenant with the night so that day and night cease to come at their regular time, [x] 21 then also My covenant with My servant David [y] may be broken so that he will not have a son reigning on his throne, and the Levitical priests will not be My ministers. [z] 22 The hosts of heaven cannot be counted; the sand of the sea cannot be measured. [a] So, too, I will make the descendants of My servant David and the Levites who minister to Me innumerable.”

23 The word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 24 “Have you not noticed what these people have said? They say, ‘The LORD has rejected the two families He had chosen.’ [b] My people are treated with contempt and no longer regarded as a nation among them. 25 This is what the LORD says: If I do not keep My covenant with the day and with the night and fail to establish the fixed order of heaven and earth, [c] 26 then I might also reject the •seed of Jacob and of My servant David — not taking from his descendants rulers over the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Instead, I will restore their fortunes [D] and have compassion on them.” [d]

Jeremiah's Word to King Zedekiah

34 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD when Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, [a] all his army, all the earthly kingdoms under his control, [b] and all other nations were fighting against Jerusalem and all its surrounding cities: 2 "This is what the LORD*, the God of Israel, says: Go,* speak to Zedekiah, king of Judah, and tell him: This is what the LORD says: I am about to hand this city over to the king of Babylon, [c] and he will burn it down. 3
As for you, you will not escape from his hand but are certain to be captured and handed over to him. You will meet the king of Babylon eye to eye and speak face to face; [A,] [d] you will go to Babylon.

4 "Yet hear the LORD's word, Zedekiah, king of Judah. This is what the LORD says concerning you: You will not die by the sword; 5 you will die peacefully.
There will be a burning ceremony for you just like the burning ceremonies for your fathers, the former kings who preceded you. [e] 'Our king is dead! ' [B] will be the lament for you, for I have spoken this word." This is the LORD's declaration.

6 So Jeremiah the prophet related all these words to Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem 7 while the king of Babylon's army was attacking Jerusalem and all of Judah's remaining cities — against Lachish and Azekah, [f] for they were the only ones left of Judah's fortified cities.

The People and Their Slaves 8 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD after King Zedekiah made a covenant with all the people who were in Jerusalem to proclaim freedom [g] to them, 9 so each man would free his male and female Hebrew slaves and no one would enslave his Judean brother. [h] 10 All the officials and people who entered into covenant to free their male and female slaves — in order not to enslave them any longer — obeyed and freed them. 11 Afterward, however, they changed their minds and took back their male and female slaves they had freed and forced them to become slaves again.

12 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD: 13 "This is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says: I made a covenant [i] with your ancestors when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the place of slavery, saying:
14 At the end of seven years, each of you must free his Hebrew brother who sold himself [C] to you. He may serve you six years, but then you must send him out free from you. [j] But your ancestors did not obey Me or pay any attention. 15 Today you repented and did what pleased Me, each of you proclaiming freedom for his neighbor. You made a covenant before Me [k] at the temple called by My name. [l] 16 But you have changed your minds [m] and profaned My name. [n] Each has taken back his male and female slaves who had been freed to go wherever they wanted, and you have again subjugated them to be your slaves.

17 “Therefore, this is what the LORD says: You have not obeyed Me by proclaiming freedom, each man for his brother and for his neighbor. I hereby proclaim freedom for you” [o] — this is the LORD’s declaration — “to the sword, to plague, and to famine! I will make you a horror to all the earth’s kingdoms. 18 As for those who disobeyed My covenant, [p] not keeping the terms of the covenant they made before Me, I will treat them like the calf they cut in two in order to pass between its pieces. [q] 19 The officials of Judah and Jerusalem, the court officials, the priests, and all the people of the land who passed between the pieces of the calf 20 will be handed over to their enemies, to those who want to take their life. Their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and for the wild animals of the land. [r] 21 I will hand Zedekiah king of Judah and his officials over to their enemies, to those who want to take their lives, to the king of Babylon’s army that is withdrawing. 22 I am about to give the command” — this is the LORD’s declaration — “and I will bring them back to this city. They will fight against it, capture it, and burn it down. [s] I will make Judah’s cities a desolation, [t] without inhabitant.”

The Rechabites' Example

35 This is the word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim [a] son of Josiah, king of Judah: 2 "Go to the house of the Rechabites, speak to them, [b] and bring them to one of the chambers [c] of the temple of the LORD to offer them a drink of wine."
3 So I took Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah, son of Habazziniah, and his brothers and all his sons — the entire house of the Rechabites — 4 and I brought them into the temple of the LORD to a chamber occupied by the sons of Hanan son of Igdaliah, a man of God, [d] who had a chamber near the officials' chamber, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah son of Shallum the doorkeeper. 5 I set jars filled with wine and some cups before the sons of the house of the Rechabites and said to them, "Drink wine! "
6 But they replied, "We do not drink wine, for Jonadab, [e] son of our ancestor Rechab, commanded: 'You and your sons must never drink wine. 7 You must not build a house or sow seed or plant a vineyard. Those things are not for you.
Rather, you must live in tents your whole life, so you may live a long time on the soil where you stay as a temporary resident.' [f] 8 We have obeyed the voice of Jonadab, son of our ancestor Rechab, in all he commanded us. So we haven't drunk wine our whole life — we, our wives, our sons, and our daughters. 9 We also have not built houses to live in and do not have vineyard, field, or seed.
10 But we have lived in tents and have obeyed and done as our ancestor Jonadab commanded us. 11 However, when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon marched into the land, [g] we said: Come, let's go into Jerusalem to get away from the Chaldean and Aramean armies. So we have been living in Jerusalem."
12 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah: 13 "This is what the LORD of •Hosts , the God of Israel, says: Go, say to the men of Judah and the residents of Jerusalem: Will you not accept discipline [h] by listening to My words? " — this is the LORD's declaration. 14 "The words of Jonadab, son of Rechab, have been carried out. He commanded his sons not to drink wine, and they have not drunk to this very day because they have obeyed their ancestor's command. But I have spoken to you time and time again, [A, i] and you have not obeyed Me! 15 Time and time again [B] I have sent you all My servants the prophets, proclaiming: Turn, each one from his evil way of life, [j] and correct your actions. Stop following other gods to serve them. [k] Live in the land that I gave you and your ancestors. But you would not pay attention or obey Me. [l] 16 Yes, the sons of Jonadab son of Rechab carried out their ancestor's command he gave them, but these people have not obeyed Me. 17 Therefore, this is what the LORD, the God of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: I will certainly bring to Judah and to all the residents of Jerusalem all the disaster I have pronounced against them because I have spoken to them, but they have not obeyed, and I have called to them, but they would not answer.”

18 Jeremiah said to the house of the Rechabites: “This is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: ‘Because you have obeyed the command of your ancestor Jonadab and have kept all his commands and have done all that he commanded you, 19 this is what the LORD of Hosts, the God of Israel, says: Jonadab son of Rechab will never fail to have a man to always stand before Me.’ ” m

Jeremiah Dictates a Scroll

36 In the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, [a] king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the LORD*:* 2 “Take a scroll, [b] and write on it all the words I have spoken to you concerning Israel, Judah, and all the nations from the time I first spoke to you during Josiah’s reign until today. 3 Perhaps when the house of Judah hears about all the disaster I am planning to bring on them, each one of them will turn from his evil way. Then I will forgive their wrongdoing [c] and their sin.”

4 So Jeremiah summoned Baruch [d] son of Neriah. At Jeremiah’s dictation, [A] Baruch wrote on a scroll all the words the LORD had spoken to Jeremiah. 5 Then Jeremiah commanded Baruch, “I am restricted; [e] I cannot enter the temple of the LORD, 6 so you must go and read from the scroll — which you wrote at my dictation [B] — the words of the LORD in the hearing of the people at the temple
